

—JOSEPHI MEDI:—

Affurge, quicquid uspiam es docti chori,
Tantóque honores exhibeto nomini;
Cui Musa nostra pangeret carmen lubens,
Sed Medus omni major est præconio.
Verùm beatum te, Josephe, duxerim,
Sortita talem Scripta quòd sint vindicem;
Qui sparsa dudum ceu Sibyllæ folia
Prodire curat debito volumine,
Mendísque preli seculique fordibus
Vix illa toto liberat triennio:
Nunc integer, comptus, nitens, concors tibi
Vigebis infinita ad usque secula.

O te beatam paginam tanto Hospite!
O cui invidere cuncta possint marmora!

G. D.

—JOSEPHI MEDI:—

Affurge, quicquid uspiam es docti chori,
Tantóque honores exhibeto nomini;
Cui Musa nostra pangeret carmen lubens,
Sed Medus omni major est præconio.
Verùm beatum te, Josephe, duxerim,
Sortita talem Scripta quòd sint vindicem;
Qui sparsa dudum ceu Sibyllæ folia
Prodire curat debito volumine,
Mendísque preli seculique fordibus
Vix illa toto liberat triennio:
Nunc integer, comptus, nitens, concors tibi
Vigebis infinita ad usque secula.

O te beatam paginam tanto Hospite!
O cui invidere cuncta possint marmora!

G. D.

THE WORKS
OF

The Pious and Profoundly-Learned

Joseph Mede, B. D.

SOMETIME

Fellow of CHRIST'S Colledge in CAMBRIDGE.

---

Corrected and Enlarged according to the Author's own Manuscripts.

---

Melchior Benjamin.

מצפון רעת האדם בתוך כתביו ונלויה בכחינה

L O N D O N

Printed by Roger Norton, for Richard Royston, Bookseller to His most Sacred Majesty, M DC LXXII.

THE WORKS
OF

Joseph Mede, B. D.

IN FIVE BOOKS.

---

The Third Edition.

---

A

—JOSEPHI MEDI:—

Affurge, quicquid uspiam es docti chori,
Tantóque honores exhibeto nomini;
Cui Musa nostra pangeret carmen lubens,
Sed Medus omni major est præconio.
Verùm beatum te, Josephe, duxerim,
Sortita talem Scripta quòd sint vindicem;
Qui sparsa dudum ceu Sibyllæ folia
Prodire curat debito volumine,
Mendísque preli seculique fordibus
Vix illa toto liberat triennio:
Nunc integer, comptus, nitens, concors tibi
Vigebis infinita ad usque secula.

O te beatam paginam tanto Hospite!
O cui invidere cuncta possint marmora!

G. D.

THE WORKS
OF

The Pious and Profoundly-Learned

Joseph Mede, B. D.

SOMETIME

Fellow of CHRIST'S Colledge in CAMBRIDGE.

---

Corrected and Enlarged according to the Author's own Manuscripts.

---

Althar happenim.

מצפון רעת הארץ בתוך כתביו וגלויה בבחינה

LONDON.

Printed by Roger Norton, for Richard Royston, Bookseller to His most Sacred Majesty, M DC LXXII.

Almæ Matri

ACADEMIÆ
CANTABRIGIENSIS

Augustissimo Literarum Sacrario,

Hæc

Filii Sui,

JOSEPHI MEDL

S. T. B.

Collegii CHRISTI aliquando Socii,

ΚΕΙΜΗΛΙΑ

Auro contra non cara,

Omni æstimo digna,

Sed & omni majora,

In honoris &

Debitæ observantiæ

Testimonium

L. M. Q.

D. D.

Johannes Worthingtonus.

The General PREFACE.

HAT the Reader may have a more particular knowledge of the peculiar Advantages of This Edition, and a clearer view of the great Worth of both the Author and his Writings, as also of those Methods and Helps whereby the Author arrived at such a Perfection even in Literis interioribus, in the more abstruse and recondite parts of Knowledge; it is necessary that he be made acquainted with these following Advertisements.

Advertisements touching This Edition.

1. That the * Works of this Great Author, printed at distant times since his Death, have been with care and attention more than once collated and examined by the Author's own Manuscripts; that so upon a second, and sometimes a third, reading it might appear where the Prints differ'd from the Originals, and that thereby they might be restored to that Lustre and Perfection wherein the Author left them.

* All of them, except some few mentioned at the end of this Preface.

How toilsome such an Employment was, none can so well judge as they that have travell'd in the like labour: But how advantageous it is for others, the judicious Reader will easily discern upon the perusal of this Edition, where he will find the Author's Notions to run more clear and smooth, now that they are freed from any interpolations and imperfections that had crept into any of the former Prints. For that all that care (how wearisome soever) was no less than necessary, may appear from what I can aver with truth and soberness, That in several of these Posthumous pieces I found that (either through the haste or incuria of the Scribe, or through his mistaking the Author's hand, or for what other reason I affect not to enquire) there were too many aberrations from the Original: Sometimes a line or more being left out; elsewhere some words omitted or mistaken, and others substituted in the room thereof, to the impairing at least of the Sense. To instance in one or two Tracts for all: In two of the former Editions of the Paraphrase upon S. Peter's Prophecy there were at least Thirty Mistakes, some of them corrected in the Third, but all in this last Edition according to the Author's Papers: And in that excellent Diatriba upon S. Mark 1. 15. (which in this Edition makes Discourse XXVI.) there were at least Fifty places * wherein the Print did swerve from the Original Copy, and sometimes not without harm done to the sense; as (in pag. 38. l. 6. of the first Edition) it was thus express'd and pointed, [ And so we are now arrived at the main Cardo and hinge of Repentance. The joynt or second part thereof, in which Aversion or Conversion meet and are knit together; ] Whereas in the Author's Papers (and agreeably in * this Edition) it is thus, [ And so now we are arrived at the main Cardo and hinge of Repentance, the Joynt where the two parts thereof, || Aversion and Conversion, meet and are knit together. ]

* None of which were number'd among the Errata.

* Pag. 109. lin. 21.
|| These the Author a little before calls the Two parts of Repentance; Aversion from sin, the first; Conversion to God, the second part.

I may not here forget that there was one Discourse (viz. Disc. 48. not before published) wherein one word was so written, that neither I nor any I advised

The General Preface.

* See p. 280.
lin. ult.

¶ See p. 276,
279, 281.

* Luk. 6.

* Chap. 4. 15.

* Chap. 2.

¶ Rev. 10. 9.

vised with could possibly read it, and therefore I left a void space in the line *. In three other places there was a word wanting in the Author's Manuscript, and what word was plainly fit to be inserted, I have enclosed in a different letter in these two crotchets [ ], and accordingly given notice thereof in the || margins. Which I here intimate as an Instance of that Diligence and Fidelity I thought my self bound to use in the preparing these Papers for the Press; endeavouring all along so to deal herein as I my self would be dealt with in the like circumstances, as being mindful of that Rule of our Saviour Christ; * As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise: A most equitable and obliging Rule, the observance whereof (besides the good effect it would have as to the publick interest of Learning, as in the particular case for which I here remember it) would have a propitious and prevailing influence to the bettering of all the affairs and transactions of humane life. Yea there is that compris'd in this compendious Aphorism (wherein is contracted the Pith and Substance, the very Quintessence and Spirits of all the many Precepts and Practical Maxims in the Doctrine not only of the Law and Prophets, but of Christ and his Apostles, as also of the Institutes, and Pandeets of the Civil Law, containing what was drawn out of 150000 Verses of the old Books of Law) which would not fail to make the whole World happy, but would certainly make a true and real (and more than Poetical) Golden Age, would turn the Wilderness into a Garden of Eden, and make the World one Great Paradise, and particularly Christendom the Joy and Praise of the whole Earth. For this Rule's sake did the Emperour Alexander Severus (as Lampridius relates of him) shew the Christians more than ordinary favours; who was so much in love with it, that in palatio & in publicis operibus he caused this to be written, as a memorial worthy to be regarded by all, Quod tibi fieri non vis alteri ne feceris: the same with that Rule of elder date which Tobias received from his Father, * Quod ab alio oderis fieri tibi, vide ne tu aliquando alteri feceris; So the Vulgar Latin renders what is thus concisely express'd in the Greek, ὁ μισῆς, μηδὲν ποίησῃς.

But to put a stop to this pleasing Digression, and to conclude this First Advertisement, one thing more I would add, which I can affirm with a safe confidence, That if in any passages of these Papers I either did or do yet demurr for the present; (and it need be no wonder if, in so Voluminous a Collection as this, enrich'd with so great a variety of Notions, one should chance sometimes ἐπέχει nor would the Author himself have taken it ill in his life-time, if he had not been thought Infallible, and if every Hypothesis of his were not readily swallowed down: I know no Book, but the divinely-inspired Bible, of which it may be said as it was of the Roll to * Ezekiel, and of that little Book to S. || John, Λάβε & κατέφαγε αὐτό· whereas of any other Writing or Composure of a fallible and uninspired man, it may generally be said as Clement Alexandrinus somewhere in his Στρωματεῖς observes of the Greek Philosophy, Τῆς Ἑλληνικῆς φιλοσοφίας, καθάπερ & τῶν καρύων, ὡς τὸ πᾶν ἐδωδιμον) yet have I in those very Passages express'd as great a diligence and faithfulness as in any other particulars of those Discourses and Treatises wherein I did most fully accord with the Author.

2. As the Prints have been examin'd by the Original Manuscripts, so likewise the Quotations that frequently occur therein (not only those out of the H. Scripture, but) out of the ancient Liturgies, Councils, Fathers, the Hebrew Writers, Historians, Poets, or any other Monuments of Antiquity, have been carefully carefully collated, and also set down more largely where they were but briefly referr'd to sometimes in the Author's Papers. This care ( though not over-easie ) I have found upon trial not to be needless, ( it being ordinary ( and scarce possible to be otherwise ) where there are many Quotations, to mis-write the numbers of some Books or Chapters that are quoted ) and being well assured it would be much for the Reader's Benefit, the desire thereof did animate me to this laborious service, which became yet more laborious in that the Authors were not always mention'd, or if the Authors, yet the Book and Chapter were not always express'd : But in this Edition these are all particularly set down, except some among so great a number of Quotations might possibly escape me ; but if any were pretermitted, I am sure they were only some short ones, or such as rather added some little ornament to the matter in hand than any necessary support and strength to any of his peculiar and principal Notions.

The General Preface.

There is one thing more that is not impertinent to be here advertis'd, That whereas the Author did use, in several of his Chappel-exercises and other Discourses delivered in publick, to quote the Hebrew, Chaldee, Syriack, and sometimes also the Greek; Testimonies ( especially if they were long ) not in those Languages, but in Latine ; as judging it perhaps more fit and useful to quote them in a Language which might be understood by all that heard him, even by the younger Students, than to make an astonishing clatter with many words of a strange sound and of an unknown sense to some in the Auditory : I thought it would be most for the advantage of this Edition, ( now that the forementioned reason of his then quoting in Latine did cease, his Discourses being now expos'd to the publick view ) to set down these Authorities ( all, or part of them ) in their own Language, especially where it is more significant and emphatical. And this is the reason why the Reader will find some passages out of the Hebrew Writers, as also some out of S. Basil, Greg. Nazianzen, his brother Casarius, Epiphanius, Chrysostome, *Theodore*t and other Greek Authors, represented in their Original and proper Language : Which I thought would be a greater satisfaction to the more learned ; and yet, that others might be also gratified, they are done into English.

3. That several passages in the Author's Works ( and such as I think the Author himself would have taken care for, had he revis'd them for the publick use ) I have endeavour'd to make more evident and instructive by Marginal illustrations ; ( not to mention the many places of Scripture added also in the Margins, which were pretermitted in the Original MSs. ) as ( to name some amongst many ) in Book I. Discourse XXXV. pag. 177. where he relates the several opinions of some Hebrew Doctors concerning urim and Thummim, I have set in the margin their very expressions, as also the places ( not mentioned by him ) where their other Notions of the same argument are to be found. And in Discourse L, an elaborate piece of Sacred Geography, as also in Discourse LI, part of which treats of all the kinds of Sacrifices and Offerings under the Law, there is set down in the margins what I thought might give farther light to his Observations ; besides a summary account of the Author's Method in those Discourses set all along in the margins. The like care I thought needful for his Concio ad Clerum, Book II. pag. 398.

As for those Three Pieces published in his life-time, [ viz. His Clavis & Commentationes Apocalyptica, his Tract about Churches, and that about the name Θουιας ηγίας ] there needed nothing of Marginal observation for the explaining
*
of

The General Preface.

of the Author's sense, they were so exactly perused by himself. There are indeed in this Edition of his Commentary upon the Apocalyps some Marginal notes that were not extant in the former; but these are not mine, but were the Author's own Additions, and were transcribed out of the printed Book where he himself had written them in the margins, as he had also corrected some few faults in the print. Only sometimes in the margins of this learned Treatise I thought it might be of use ( besides some marginal references ) to set down where the Greek reading he chose in some few places to follow is confirm'd by the authority of Tecla's, or the Alexandrian, Copy, a Manuscript of most venerable antiquity, and inserted in the Biblia Polyglotta; and to this very purpose ( besides many other advantages ) himself would have made use of that noble Edition, had it been extant in his life-time.

* See a particular account both of the Enlargements and of the Additions at the end of this Preface.

4. That ( besides that some of the formerly-printed Discourses and Tracts are now published with several * Enlargements out of the Author's Manuscripts ) there are * XXXII. Additional Pieces in this Edition, ( no slight nor inconsiderable accession to the Author's Works. Nor do I know of any one Tract, or Fragment of a Tract, that contain'd any Notion worthy of the Author, that is not brought into this Edition in Book V. which consists of Miscellanies, or set somewhere in the Margins of the other Books.

* See Epistle 97. p. 881.

There were indeed among his Papers Three Discourses, one upon Zech. 8. 19. which was deliver'd by him in publick in the year 1611. after he was newly made Master of Arts, and one upon 1 John 3. 9. and another upon Matth. 6. 33. which were made a little after; but these did seem less fit for the publick upon the * same reason that he was unwilling some Latine Dissertations written by him in his younger days should be made publick.

* p. 343. & p. 347. p. 823.

As for two short Discourses of his upon Genes. 28. 16. and upon Exod. 3. 5. found among his Papers, they had been published, but that I found they were both inserted by the Author partly into his Discourse on * Eccles. 5. 1. intituled The Reverence of God's House, and partly into that || Epistolary Tract of his touching The Holiness of Churches: nor is there any thing in them but what is incorporated into those Tracts, except this one Notion in the beginning of that forementioned short discourse upon Genes. 28. 16. Surely the Lord is in this place, and I knew it not; where the Author hath this Observation, [ They are the words of Jacob, when he awoke out of the Vision he saw at Bethel: He dream'd he saw a Ladder reaching from Heaven to Earth, and the Angels of God ascending and descending thereon: Above it stood the Lord himself, saying, I am the Lord, the God of Abraham thy Father, and the God of Isaac; the Land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed. I will multiply thee, and in thy seed shall all the Families of the Earth be blessed. I mean not to expound the Vision unto you, it would be besides my scope; but only will tell you thus much, that the Author of the Book of Wisdom ( Chap. 10. 10. ) calls it a Vision of the Kingdom of God; meaning ( as I suppose ) the Kingdom of Messiah which is here promised; Εδειξεν αὐτῷ βασιλείαν Θεῶ, καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ γινῶσιν ἁγίων, He shewed him ( saith he, relating this history of Jacob ) the Kingdom of God, and gave him knowledge of holy things. Which passage I think so much the more worthy to be observed, because the term of [ Kingdom of God, ] so frequent in the New Testament, is nowhere to be found save in this place only. ] This Observation I thought good to preserve by inserting it here upon this occasion.

There are several Texts of Scripture set down in the beginning of a thin Paper-book in Quarto, which the Author ( it's likely ) intended to discourse upon;

The General Preface.

upon; but whether he perfected his intentions, or only laid in some general materials for such a purpose in some other Papers, (some such thing seems to be intimated) appears not to me from any Papers of his that have come to my hands: Howsoever it may not be amiss, but rather a gratification to some, to set down here those Passages of Scripture which he had made choice of as fit objects for his deep-searching Thoughts to be exercis'd upon. And they are these.

Acts 7. 43. Ye took up the Tabernacle of Moloch, and the Star of your God Remphan, &c.

Gen. 2. 9. ----- The Tree of life in the middle of the Garden.

Jam. 5. 14. Is there any sick among you, let him call for the Presbyters of the Church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: And the prayer of Faith shall save the sick, &c.

Gen. 14. 18. And Melchizedek King of Salem brought forth bread and wine; and he was the Priest of the most high God.

Gen. 20. 7. For he is a Prophet, and he shall pray for thee, and thou shalt live.

Matth. 12. 39. ---- And there shall be no sign given to it, but the sign of the Prophet Jonas.

2 Sam. 21. 1. ----- It is for Saul and his bloody House, because he slew the Gibeonites.

1 Sam. 8. 7. And the Lord said unto Samuel, They have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them.

2 Cor. 3. 6, 7. Who also hath made us able ministers of the New Testament, not of the Letter, but of the Spirit; for the Letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life. But if the ministration of Death written and engraven in stones was glorious ----- How shall not the ministration of the Spirit be rather glorious.

Matth. 2. 18. A voice was heard in Rama, lamentation and weeping ----- Rachel weeping for her children, &c.

1 Cor. 8. 10. For if any man should see thee which hast knowledge sit at meat in the Idol's temple, &c.

Joh. 16. 8. And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment.

Heb. 11. 4. By faith Abel offered unto God  $\omega\lambda\epsilon\acute{\iota}\omicron\nu\alpha \delta\upsilon\sigma\acute{\iota}\alpha\nu$  than Cain.

2 Ep. Joh. v. 1. Ὁ πρεσβύτερος ὁ ἐλεγκτῆς κυρίας.

Jos. 22. 19. If the land of your possession be unclean, then pass ye over unto the land of the possession of the Lord, wherein the Lord's tabernacle dwelleth, &c.

Nehem. 8. 6. And all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with lifting up their hands, &c.

1 Cor. 11. 16. But if any man seem to be contentious, we have no such custome, nor the Churches of God.

These \* Seventeen Texts of Scripture (together with that Title of several Psalms,  $\text{לְמַנְצֵחַ}$ ) I found set down in the beginning of that Paper-book, (the rest is wanting) and these it seems he designed for the matter of his Chappel-exercises: and if any such Diatriba or Discourses, perfected by him upon these Scriptures, be in the possession of any worthy persons, (for the Author was very communicative of his Papers) it is both desired and hoped that they would impart them for the common benefit.

5. That upon the View of all the Author's Writings, it seem'd most accommodate for the Reader's benefit, that they should be digested into Five Books.

* Besides some mentioned in another loose paper, Acts 1. 3. 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11. Acts 3. 22. Rom. 3. 21. Act. 26. 22, 23.

The General Preface.

* Disc. XXIX.
P. 135.

The First Book to contain his Discourses on several Texts of Scripture, and of a different importance: All of which were delivered in publick, (either in the Colledge-Chappel or in some greater Auditory) except that one only Discourse * upon Esay 2. 2, 3. which was dictated by the Author autographis; for the satisfaction of a Friend of his who desired his opinion touching that Prophecy; and (as it was related by the Author's Friend) the original Paper is thus subscribed, More time and more leisure might have afforded you better; but for this you are beholden to your Cousin B. whose pains in writing was more than mine in dictating. Vale. Yours, J. M.

The Second Book to contain such Tracts and Discourses on several Texts of Scripture as were of the like Argument and design: viz. about Churches and the worship of God therein. There are among the first 21 Discourses in the foregoing Book some Diatriba of the like import: but those being published by the direction, or with the liking, of the Author's Executor, I would not break the order in which they are so dispos'd.

The Third Book to contain his Treatises upon Prophetical Scriptures. viz. The Apocalypse. S. Peter's Prophecy concerning The Day of Christ's second Coming. S. Paul's Prophecy touching The Apostasie of the Latter Times. Tobie's Prophecy De duplici Judæorum Captivitate & Statu Novissimo. And Three Treatises upon some obscure Passages in Daniel.

* Epist.
XLVIII.

The Fourth Book to contain his Epistles to several Learned men; whose Letters are also published, otherwise his Answers to them had been less intelligible. There are several large and learned Epistles of his added in this Edition, (besides some elaborate Letters of others, as that of * L. De Dieu, not heretofore published) but there is nothing left out among the Epistles; only some of them are placed in another (but their due) order; as also some other Tracts that were mingled with them are removed to their proper places. There is one only Tract printed among the Epistles in pag. 517. of the former Edition (viz. Specimina Interpretationum Apocalypticarum ad Prophetiam Sigillarem spectantium) which deserved to be left out, it being nothing else but a ruder draught and Specimen of what he afterwards perfected and printed in his Commentary upon the Apocalypse. But as for other Tracts and Discourses, wherein the Author did pursue the same Notions, and sometimes for some lines together in much what the like expressions; (as he might well be bold with his own; and accordingly the Lord Verulam does sometimes in several Tracts of his harp upon the same string, repeating some Notions discoursed of in his other Papers; and of old the same was practis'd by Plutarch, as every one knows that is acquainted with that excellent Author;) yet because where these Notions are repeated by him in other Tracts, they are express'd with some variety, and sometimes with farther advantage and clearness; I thought it safest not to leave out any thing, nor to go about to contract them: For the same Notions being represented with some enlargements or some difference of expression, may haply enlighten and affect some Readers in this form of words, others in another.

The Fifth Book to contain Fragmenta Sacra, or such Miscellanies as could not well come under any of the forementioned General Heads. The Three last Chapters of which Book (containing a Collection of whatsoever was found among his Papers that related to the Apocalypse, and did seem to afford some light to some expressions therein) might have been fitly placed in the Third Book among the Remains upon some passages in the Apocalypse; but they came not

The General Preface.

not soon enough to my hands to be inserted there. There were written in some papers of his some Half-sentences and Memorials ( best understood by himself ) or short Hints of what was afterward at large treated of and made out in several Tracts perfected by him, ( which Hints he usually wrote in Latin : ) These were too imperfect and unfit to be number'd among his Fragmenta Sacra; and to have published them would have been as dishonourable to the Author, as it would be greatly injurious to a famous Artist, after he had with all care imaginable and to the life perfected his designed Picture, to make publick his first strokes and essays, the imperfect rudiments of his Pencil.

One thing more, and I shall conclude this Advertisement; That for the farther accommodation of the Reader, ( besides the dividing the whole into Five Books ) Two of the largest and most elaborate Treatises, ( next to that upon the Apocalyps ) viz. The Christian Sacrifice, and The Apostasy of the Latter Times, are divided into Chapters with Contents briefly, but particularly, representing the chief matters therein discoursed of. This I thought would be much for the Reader's both ease and advantage. The same care is taken for the Remains on the Apocalyps, which being divided into 12. Chapters with Contents is also thereby made more accommodate to the Reader's use, and any part thereof may be the more easily referr'd to. And the like accommodation of the Reader is endeavour'd ( not only as to the forementioned Treatises, but ) as to the rest of his Works, which could not be without great inconvenience divided into Chapters, namely by the Alphabetical Tables of Words and Things, as also by what is set in the top of every Page, which doth summarily import what is contain'd therein.

6. And now after all this, when I could not think there was any thing uncared-for wherein I might be farther instrumental to the Reader's accommodation and the publick good, I was solicited ( and with some continued importunity ) to another trouble. It was desired by some That the Hebrew, Greek and Latin Quotations in these Writings ( especially in the Treatises and Discourses upon any passages of Scripture ) might be render'd into English, for the benefit of those Readers who had not the advantage of such Education as would have enabled them to understand Words in those Tongues, though otherwise of good abilities to understand Things and the best Notions when represented in a Language known to them.

It was easie for me to foresee how tedious such an employment would be, both where any Author's style is entangled and not so properly and clearly expressive as it might have been, or where the Original Greek being lost an old barbarous Latin Translation is all that is to be had, ( as in some parts of Irenaeus ) as also where the Quotations are many, ( as in the Christian Sacrifice, the Tracts about Churches and the name Θουσιανισμους, and in the Apostasy of the Latter Times ) and likewise large, * some whole pages being fill'd with Testimonies of ancient Authors, as pag. 373, &c. 377. to the end of that Tract, and ( to name no more ) pag. 641, 642.

* As in p. 334, to 339. and in many others.

Yet it was less difficult for me to deny my self some ease by undertaking this new labour, than to deny the importunity of others, their desire especially being back'd with this consideration, That it would conduce more to the benefit of all Readers. And therefore in compliance with their request the several Testimonies that occur, especially in his Treatises and discourses upon Scripture are done into English, except where the sense of the Quotation is sufficiently intimated in the either foregoing or the following lines.

As

The General Preface.

As for some Quotations in Book IV, which contains his Epistles they being, most of them, written to Learned men, and several of the Quotations (not to mention such as are here repeated, and were translated in the foregoing three Books) relating to some Criticisms and other points of Learning most proper for Scholars to busy themselves about; I was less solicitous about every thing therein that was in other Languages. And as for some Epistles which are wholly in Latin, I thought good to give a summary account of them in English, either in the Margin or in the Contents.

The Translation keeps close to the letter for the most part; it does not always: for that would be not only Pedantick and servile, but infinitely inconvenient, and would render the Translation sometime as insignificant and unintelligible to some Readers as the Original it self. And therefore in some places I found it absolutely necessary to enlarge the Translations, and so to improve them that they might seem also a little Commentary upon some Quotations out of the Fathers and Councils, particularly such as related to Ecclesiastical Antiquities, which would otherwise have been too obscure and impossible to be understood by every Reader: a Specimen whereof (to omit other places) the Readers may observe in Pag. 383. and in Pag. 331. where the Author speaks of the 5 degrees of Penitents in the ancient Church. And for the better clearing the sense of some Authors in such places as seem'd most intricate, I neglected not to consult either Ecclesiastical Antiquaries or those that had commented upon the Fathers, such as I could meet with in private or publick Libraries; (though oftentimes my consulting such proved but a fruitless, though toilsom, labour; it being the fashion of many Commentators to write a deal of Notes upon what is easie and needs them not, but to give the Go-by to places more difficult.) The most serviceable in all my search was the industrious and learned Rigaltius, agreeably to whose judgment and the sense of the most diligent Writers, as also to the scope of the place, (not neglecting also sometimes to consult the living, and the better, Libraries) I have render'd some Passages, which haply at first sight may seem to others to import otherwise.

There is this yet farther to be advertis'd, That where the Testimonies out of Greek Authors are sometimes quoted in Latin, (as in those 2 Tracts about Churches and the name Θυσιαστήριον) I have in the translating attended not always to the Latin, but rather to the Original Greek, where it seem'd more expressive, which I have therefore set down in the Margin, either part of it, as in Pag. 336. and elsewhere, or the whole, as in another Treatise, Pag. 642. that large Quotation out of Theodoret is more free from ambiguity in the Greek than (as it was formerly quoted) in the Latin.

And thus much for the First Head of Advertisements. I proceed to the next.

II. Advertisements touching the Author and his Writings.

I. As for the Author, I shall not need to expatiate in a large and particular recounting of the several Perfections (whether Intellectual Accomplishments or Moral Endowments) which were eminently conspicuous in him, there being drawn a true and lively Picture of him in the following History of his Life and Death, (written by some of great acquaintance with him, and that always

The General Preface.

always had a just esteem for him) and in that compendious Epitaph annexed thereunto, (which, together with the Verses set in the beginning of this Volume, was sent out of the Countrey from a Reverend person sometime of Cambridge) as likewise in the adjoining Appendix to the Author's Life, (sent from another Doctor anciently of the same University, one who frequently resorted to Mr. Mede, and thought himself richly rewarded by his discourse for every journey he made to his Chamber.) In these Three there is an endeavour to represent the Author's Picture at large and in his full proportions. Howsoever it may not be impertinent to superadde here ἐξ ἐπιμέτρῃ some few Memorials; as Pictures of Great persons are wont to be express'd not only in their just proportions, but also in little Tables and Medals.

In short then, His Intellectual accomplishments must needs be eminent and advanced above the ordinary pitch, they being the Effects of excellent Natural parts accompanied with an early and unwearied Industry, as also (which is a more rare conjunction) with a great Judgment and a great Memory. He began his search after Wisdom betimes, and continued it unto the last; it might truly be said of him (to borrow the words of * Siracides) that ἐξ ἁρθῆς ἕως περὶ ἀκμῆς * Eccles. 51. 15 εἰς ἀφύλλῃς, from the flower till the grape was ripe, (from the budding ingenuities of his youth till the more concocted and mature thoughts of his riper years) he delighted in Wisdom, he sought her from his youth up, * and had his heart joyned with her from the beginning. * Verf. 20. And for a proof of that success which attended this his early enquiry after Knowledge, it may not be here impertinent to observe, That some of those peculiar Notions of his which occur in his latter Writings (as in that of the Reverence of God's House) were his eldest thoughts and studies, as he himself calls them somewhere in his Epistles. What he hath observ'd in his Christian Sacrifice, about the Oblation of Praise and Prayer at the celebration of the Eucharist, he had an early apprehension of; as appears by that (not till now published) * Discourse of his upon Psal. 50. 14. which was composed by him in his younger daies. * See Book I. Disc. LI. What he hath at large illustrated in his learned Discourse upon 1 Tim. 4. 1. concerning Demon-worship and the Apocalypse of the Latter Times, he had a glimpse of many years before, as is evident from his * Discourse upon 2 Pet. 2. 1. And as for that short, but elaborate, * See Disc. XLII. Tract De Numeris Danielis, or Revelatio Antichristi, perfected by him toward the latter end of his Life, he call'd it * an old Notion long laid aside by him, but * See Book IV. pag. 24. now upon an apprehension of its Usefulness thought fit by him to be resum'd and perfected: Ita ut canoplaceret quod juveni complacebat, as Walsingham (though an adversary) reports of Wiclf. By which Instances (to name no other) it may appear what a quick Sagacity he had in his younger years, and how his early studies were blest with the discoveries of such Theories as lay deep and were not obvious to every eye.

His skill in History and Geography appear'd betimes; a fair Specimen whereof the Reader may observe in those two * Discourses of his upon Gen. 10. 5. where he treats of the Original Habitations and First Seat of Japhet's Sons and their Colonies after the great dispersion from the Tower of Babel; (a Subject that the learned Bochartus in his Phaleg has copiously discours'd of.) And for the happiness of Mr. Mede's Conjectures in an argument so difficult and so little traced by any Writers before him, I refer the judicious Readers to those above-mention'd Discourses, where they will find several Conjectures of his more easie and less unforced than in some Authors that have written either before or after him, not excepting Bochartus himself. And herein we have another proof of his early Sagacity. But

The General Preface.

But more particularly for History, his Commentaries upon the *Apocalyp*s and some passages in Daniel speak the eminency of his skill herein, there being no Interpreters before him that have with equal clearness accommodated those Prophecies and Visions to their proper Events. That Methodus legendi Historicorum cum fructu, drawn up by him and sent to Sr. William Boswel (his ancient and inward Friend) for the private use of some studious Gentlemen, would also have testified as much. This Method for the study of History, as likewise his Catalogue of such Authors as were most eminent in the several Arts and Sciences, sent to the same Learned Knight, and (what was sent at a third time to him for the use of some Friends of his) a little Bibliotheca Theologica, or an account of such Authors as had made the best distribution of Theology into its parts, and had written best for the several parts thereof; these his Three Epistolary Discourses (for the which Sr. W. B. does in his Letters return most affectionate thanks to Mr. Mede) would certainly have been most advantageously instructive unto all, could they have been found among Sr. W. Boswel's Papers, and copied out for the publick use: but as yet they cannot be retrived, notwithstanding all imaginable diligence has been used, of which they were well worthy, as containing (not mere lines of Ceremony and Complement, such as usually pass between Friends, nor little matters of News or of private concern, but what is of greater importance) Instructions and Advices about the study of Theology, the Arts and History, and from one who was versatissimus and excellently accomplish'd in them all. And for the attaining a rare perfection in (that which was last named) History, he had a singular advantage from his great Memory, without which all studies of this nature would signify but little. His Memory was so officious and faithful to him, that he relyed much upon it, and made little use of Common-place-Books: Accordingly in the Catalogue of his Manuscripts, written by his worthy Executor the learned Mr. John Alsop, (then Fellow of Christ's College) are set down Two thick Paper-books in folio, prepared by the Author when he was a young Student; but withal this note is there added, That little or nothing was written in them. Yet did he not wholly trust to his Memory; for he had a lesser Paper-book wherein he wrote down (besides what he had briefly observed out of the Ancients and others) some short Notes of his present Conjectures and Thoughts upon either some obscure Text of Scripture or some other difficult argument. That he had some such Repository for his Notions, (and it were well if those that are more knowing and Contemplative would be thus commendably provident,) is intimated in the * Appendix to the Author's Life.

* Sect. 2. at the end.

By other Letters of his (if they could be had) might farther appear his equal skill in the History of Nature and Philosophy; they being written in answer to several Enquiries of Sr. W. Boswel, an excellent Philosopher and Mathematician, some De motu Gravium & Levium, as likewise touching the Equality of Natural Motions, with some reflexions upon the common opinion of their being velociore in fine quam in principio; others about the Nature of Comets, particularly about that Comet in 1618. its figure and Disposition, &c. Besides several other ingenious Quare's mention'd in Sr. W. Boswell's Letters, as (to name two or three) about Shooting or managing the long Bow; as also about the possibility and best methods of teaching the Deaf and Dumb from birth to cast accompts, with other Mathematical calculations, to know moneys and the use thereof, to understand by sight of others writing and express by their own whatsoever may pass for civil life and conversation.

For

The General Preface.

For the Languages, ( particularly the Oriental, ) although his Modesty would not permit him to speak otherwise of himself than in such an humble strain as this, * In Hebraicis modicum forte possim, as he writes in one of his Ep. to L. de Dieu : yet that his knowledge herein was more than mean and ordinary, yea such as shew'd him to be a man of a rare perspicacity in the Genius and Proprieties of the Sacred Language, may be sufficiently evinced from the many useful Criticisms and Observations upon several Words and Phrases of Scripture, scattered throughout his Writings, and particularly ( to omit other Instances ) from his clear and smooth * rendring and explaining that difficult Paragraph in Dan. 11. 36. &c. about Mabuzzim, &c. and from his unexampled accuracy in translating and glossing upon that which is the most important of all the Prophecies in the Old Testament for the interest of Christianity, ( I mean Daniel's LXX Weeks in chap. 9. from vers. 24. to the end ) Concerning which ( not to meddle with his Epocha of the LXX Weeks, wherein perhaps he did not fully satisfy himself, for he was * unwilling his Papers about this subject should be imparted, otherwise the most communicative of his Notions of any man living ) this is to be observed, That those expressions in vers. 26. ער כנף שקויים and משמם ואין לי, and those in vers. 27. ער כנף שקויים and משמם are very intelligible, and there is scarce any tolerable sense made of them in some other Versions ; but in his Translation and Notes the importance of them is very easy and natural, and agreeable to the mind of the Original : whereby is verified what he in a Letter of his to L. de Dieu observes of himself. Eo ingenio sum, (delicatus, an moroso?) ut nisi ubi interpretatio commode & absque salebris eat, nunquam mihi satisfacere soleam.

* In the like strain he somewhere speaks of his skill in Chaldee, as also in the Mathematicks, which yet was great in others esteem, how little soever it was in his own.
* See Book III. p. 666, & 671.

* See Ep. 23. p. 777.

See pag. 559.

And indeed his singular ability for interpreting the δυσωνία and clearing the Obscurities of the Holy Scriptures was out of those Great Accomplishments which were most illustrious in him. His insight into the inmost Recesses of these Sacred Writings was so quick as well as sure, that it was a most true Elogium which Sr. Will. Boswell gives of him in one of his Letters. That Mr. Mede did discern Day before others could open their eyes. Nor might that Cognomen be unfitly applied to this Joseph, which was given to the Patriarch Joseph, I mean that Egyptian name, * Zophnath-paaneah, which is as much as κρυπτῶν εὐρητής, The Revealer or Interpreter of hidden things, according to Philo, Josephus, both the Targumists, Jonathan and Onkelos, several Hebrew Writers, and ( to name only one more, but one whose judgment is the more considerable, because of his peculiar skill in the Coptick language ) Athanas. Kircherus. And from this famous Parallel between the two Josephs ( which lies more open to every ones observation ) I might take occasion to adorn this Preface with several other not less memorable, though less obvious, Resemblances betwixt them : But I must not give way to a Digression that would take up more room than I can well spare, in the Preface ; especially having several other Memorials to bring in that are more useful and proper to the design thereof ; which I shall dispatch with all convenient brevity.

* Gen. 41.

The most Mysterious of all the Books of Scripture is the Apocalyps : and yet, though it be more mysterious and dark than the rest, * εἰς τὴν ἡμετέραν διδασκαλίαν περὶ ἐσχάτων, it was, as well as the rest of Scripture, written for our learning, for our comfort, for the encouragement of our Patience, Faith and Hope ; and therefore written to be understood : Otherwise the * Promise of Blessedness to them that read ( that is, that read with understanding ) and hear and keep the words of this Prophetical Book and the

* This is mentioned both in the beginning and in the end of the Apocalyps, Ch. 1. 3. and Ch. 22. 7.

* *

things

The General Preface.

* For such an impossible condition is the understanding of this Book suppos'd to be according to that Hypothesis.

things written therein, would be but a Mock-promise of a Blessedness promised upon a * condition impossible, after the use of all endeavours, to be perform'd, and withal promised to a blind obedience, or to the keeping and observing they know not what: Which to imagine and affirm were an unworthy reproch and high dishonour done to the Divine Wisdom and Goodness.

In the Interpretation of this Book of Mysteries (as also of Daniel's Visions) how well the Author hath quitted himself, let others judge; such as are of a free and discerning spirit, and not unacquainted with the Schemes of Prophetick style, (for these alone are competent judges in these matters, ἵστας οἱ μεμνημένοι,) let such as these judge between the Author's method and the

* In his way of interpreting 2 Thes. 2. & Dan. 7. he departs also from the sense of the Ancients, and forsakes those common Sentiments and Notions wherein the Fathers generally agree touching the ἄρσενος and the man of Sin; the Fourth Beast and Little Horn, the Son of Man's coming in the clouds, the Stone cut out of the mountain without hands; besides other passages in these ch. & in ch. 11.
 ¶ See Dr. More's Mystery of Godliness, Book 5. ch. 15, 16, 17. and his Synopsis Prophetica, Book 2. ch. 2, 3, 4, &c.

Novel way of interpreting, wherein the Learned * Hugo Grotius is the Choragus and leads the Dance, (a Dance which has made those of the Court of Rome no little sport.) For me here to make a judgment upon these two so distant Methods of Interpretation, (if it were fit, yet) it is needless; both of them being brought into view and impartially compared, and the Author's Method undeniably evinced to be the better, and fully vindicated from the little pretensions of the contrary party; and all this perform'd by || one not only of the same University, but of the same Colledge too; which renders the performance more decorous and graceful, it being as well a becoming testimony of a fair and worthy respect to the Author's memory, as a seasonable service to the Truth it self.

This is a little of the much that might be observ'd touching the Author's Intellectual Accomplishments.

His Moral Endowments did testify his great Piety, as the other his great Parts and Learning. By his Moral Endowments I mean his Humility and Charity, his Moderation, Peaceable-spiritedness, Long-suffering and Patience, his Meekness towards those that oppos'd themselves, his Benignity, Largeness and Openness of Spirit, his Zeal for God and things Holy, Just and Good, his Freedom from Ambition, Envy and Love of the World, his Sympathies and Pious Solitudes for the Breaches in Christendom; and (not to instance in all those Virtues that shined forth in him, and render'd him an Exemplary and Useful Christian) I shall name only one more, (and it's that which is the signal Character of the Best Souls, such as approach nearest to an Heroick state of Goodness, and the greatest resemblance of the Divinity) his Communicativeness and readiness to do good, (and that particularly by a free imparting unto all ingenuous lovers of Knowledge, of his best Treasures) and his Unweariedness herein, an argument that he sensibly knew that Noble pleasure which useth to accompany the exercise of such Beneficence: And (which is the Crown of all) all these were actuated and inspirited by Faith, the Root of every Grace that is truly Christian; and accordingly the necessity of such a Living and Operative Faith the Author has with great seriousness treated in several of his Discourses. And here indeed were a large and pleasant Field to traverse, a rich argument to discourse upon: But there being in the following History of the Author's Life a very particular account of these and other his Endowments which must needs make his Memory precious to all persons of Piety and Learning, I would not by an unnecessary lengthening of this Preface detain the Reader too long from the satisfaction he may there receive.

Thus

The General Preface.

Thus much in brief touching The Author.

2. Concerning his Writings ( besides what has been intimated by the way in the foregoing Advertisements ) these things are fit to be observ'd.

1. That there were Three Treatises of his published in his life-time. The First was his Clavis & Commentationes Apocalypticae; the largest and withal the most elaborate of any of his Writings. This was his First-born, his might and the excellency of his strength, as * Jacob spake of his First-born. It was extorted from him by the loving violence of some great Friends; otherwise he would have deferr'd the publishing of it till he had perfected his Specimina upon the last Chapters of the Apocalyps into a just Commentary, agreeably to that large method of Interpreting wherein he had proceeded to the end of Chap.

* Gen. 49.

14.

The other Two short Tracts ( viz. about the Name Θυσιαστήριον anciently given to the H. Table, and about Churches in the Apostles times ) were not published neither without his modest reluctancy; he was overruled herein by his Superiors, whose Command for the former was accompanied with this high Elogium, ( as some of the Author's friends have related it ) That this little Piece should silence all other Tracts about that argument, there being enough therein ( said they ) to satisfy all reasonable men, and there having been more than enough already published, but to less purpose. The English of the many Quotations in these Two Tracts not translated by the Author, I have set ( not in the body of the line, immediately after any of the Quotations, but ) in another Column. To have done so in the rest of his Works would have swell'd the whole into a greater bulk: But I chose to do thus in these Two Tracts, because they were published in his life-time, and without any Translation immediately following the several Testimonies out of others. And yet I am apt to think that if he had lived to prepare for the publick view some other Tracts or Discourses, he would have render'd them into English; and I the rather think so, because he has done thus in some Discourses perfected by him ( though not published ) not long before his death. These were his Discourse upon Eccles. 5. 1. intitled The Reverence of God's House, and that upon S. Math. 6. 9. about the Sanctification of God's Name: These were revised by him, and seem to have received his last care, besides some other Tracts, as his Paraphrase and Exposition of S. Peter's Prophecy, and that Latin Tract De Numeris Danielis.

2. That his other Discourses and Treatises ( whether formerly printed or now added ) were Opera Posthuma, and yet too good to have been buried in obscurity, and consequently lost to the World; ( for, according to that twice-mentioned sentence in Siracides, ch. 20. & 41. Σοφία κεκρυμμένη, ἢ θησαυρὸς ἀφανής, τίς ωφέλεια ἐν ἀμφοτέροις; ) although had they been revised by the Author in order to printing, they would doubtless have received some polishing lustre and farther enrichments from his last hand. How advantageous such a Revival of them would have been, may appear from those fore-mentioned Discourses of his, the former draughts whereof ( as they were deliver'd in the Colledge-Chappel ) were upon his review and going over them again much enlarged and made more full.

This Advertisement was fit to be here mentioned, and that in justice to the Author's memory: And therefore it is a very reasonable request, to entreat the Reader to peruse them with that Candour and Fairness which is deem'd by all ingenuous persons but a due respect to the Posthumous Works of Worthy men. In the confidence of such a Favor & Civility have the Posthuma of many Learned men been presented to the world; particularly some Posthumous Pieces of the eminently learned Bishop Andrews by the then Bishops of London and Ely, the Three last Books of the Judicious Mr. Hooker's Ecclesiastical Polity by the late Bishop of Worcester, and ( to name but one more of the many that might be mentioned ) the Profound Dr. Jackson's Tenth and Eleventh Books of Commentaries upon the Creed by the unexpressible industry of the Reverend Mr. Oley. Upon the like confidence of a fair respect to be afforded to the Posthuma of this Great Author did the Reverend Mr. John Allop publish the first part of his Diatriba, being Chappel-Exercises and ( most of them ) short Discourses upon Texts of Scripture, which yet the Author could have made more full and perfect, had he design'd them for the publick view.

The General Preface.

Amongst his Posthuma, the largest, and which cost him most study, was his Treatise about The Doctrine of Damons, &c. or The Apostasy of the Latter Times, containing several Discourses upon 1 Tim. 4. 1. Of this there were 3 Copies amongst his Papers. The first was a shorter Draught of his Thoughts upon this Subject, when prepared for the Colledge-auditory. The Second was larger and fuller, being delivered in several Sermons at S. Mary's before the University. Both these were in 8°. A Third in 4°, when formed by him into a larger Treatise, and in several places enrich'd with considerable additions. And according to this Third and last Draught is this Treatise printed in this Edition, wherein also are added some Marginal Annotations of his, others, that were displaced in the former prints, restored to their due and proper places; so that the whole must needs be now more significant, clear and useful to the judicious Readers, as well as render'd more grateful and accommodate for their perusal by being distinguished into Chapters with Contents.

There were some Friends ( to whom he had communicated this Treatise ) that moved him to print it; ( and had it been then published by him in compliance with their desires, it would certainly have brought him in a large Return of Esteem and Honour, for the multifarious Learning and the many Notions therein, not less solid and important than ingenious and uncommon. ) But he being hugely averse from appearing any more in print ( as may appear from what he writes in Ep. 97. ) withstood the importunity of that motion, alledging for his excuse some Deficiencies therein, which his maturer thoughts could correct, and that he could mend the Foundation thereof *: Which expressions of his need not seem strange, nor are they to be interpreted to the lessening the due value of that Treatise, they being the proper language of his Modesty, and usual with him, when he was put upon any such occasion of expressing his sense concerning any of his Compolures. And indeed he was so infinitely curious, and so seriously solicitous that every thing which came from his pen should be exact and accurate, that in a || Letter of his to the L. Primate of Ireland he thus writes of himself, That he should never get through that which is his own, without everlasting mending, blurring, and pausing at every sentence to alter it. Smaller matters to so quick and severe an eye as Mr. Mede had for his own Writings, would be thought to want correcting, and sometimes, it may be, expunging: But this is nothing to the main substantial Notions that influence the whole Treatise; for these the Author professedly owns and insists upon in his Commentary upon the Apocalyps ( which was written after this Treatise, and contains his elder and maturer thoughts. ) As for example, That grand Notion which runs through the whole Discourse upon 1 Tim. 4. 1. viz. of Demon-worship revived amongst an Idolatrous sort of Christians, he makes use of in his Notes
upon

* See Ep. 43.

|| See Ep. 29.

The General Preface.

upon Apocal. 9. 20. and refers to his Treatise about The Doctrine of Demons for the fuller confirmation thereof: as also in his Specimina upon Apocal. 17. he makes use of that Notion discoursed of in the fore-mentioned Treatise, chap. 8. viz. That Idolatry is the main Character of the Church's Apostasy. But without mentioning any more particulars, what in his Apostasie of the Latter Times was consonant to his Clavis & Commentationes Apocalypticae, was avowed by him; and those some things he saith in his Epistles that he could alter, were such especially as were not so * consentaneous to his Apocalyptical Notions. In short, although the Foundation and the whole Structure of this Treatise may seem, as it now is, sufficiently strong and well compact to the eye of others, yet he being σοφὸς ἀρχιτέκτων a wise master-builder says he could have mended it, that is, have added some more strength to it, ( for to mend the Foundation is not to take it quite away, but rather to strengthen it: ) an instance not only of his great Humility, ( when he was forced to pronounce concerning any performance of his own, ) but also of his equal Sagacity and Quick-sightedness in discovering where any the least passage might be mended, which yet to others seem'd not deficient; and withall an argument of his great Sollicitude for the best satisfaction of others.

* See pag. 802.

It is not unlikely but some may have an itching curiosity to know (if it were possible) where he would have either alter'd or added. And for answer to such there is a Paper of his own writing with Memorandums to this purpose. His Addenda for the farther clearing or confirming of some passages in this Treatise were such as these. 1. He would have added a Paraphrastical Exposition upon the last verse of the former Chapter, in short this; God was manifest in the flesh, that is, was incarnate: Justified by the Spirit, that is, * testified and witnessed by the Holy Ghost at his Baptism, &c. Seen of Angels, visited by them at his Fastings in the wilderness and at other times, &c. 2. To what is said in Chap. 2. That Demon-worship or Idolatry is the Apostasie meant in the Text and elsewhere in Scripture, he would have added for a farther proof hereof, That it is so, as being a direct Breach of the Vow in Baptism, according to the Ἀποτάξις in the ancient form of Baptism, * Ἀποτάσσομαι τῷ Σατανᾷ, καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς ἔργοις αὐτοῦ, καὶ τοῖς ἀγγέλοις αὐτοῦ, καὶ πᾶσι τῇ λατρείᾳ αὐτοῦ. And to this he would have added that of S. Augustin, lib. 1. De moribus Catholicae Ecclesiae, c. 34. where he saith, Nolite confectari turbas imperitorum, qui vel in ipsa vera Religione superstitiosi sunt, ut obliti sint quae promiserint Deo. Novi multos esse Sepulchrorum & Pieturarum adoratores. 3. To what he hath observed in the second Part of this Treatise, about Lies of Miracles, he would have shew'd more at large, That Miracles out of the Charnels are properly those specified κατ' ἐνέργειαν τῷ Σατανᾷ, 2 Thess. 2. 9. because Satan ever loved to delude the world in that kind, and it appears not that God useth to work Miracles by such means. Quere (saith he) whether the Charnel-cures are not a-kin to those Magical ointments made of like ingredients. As for the Alterations, he has a Memorandum to consider whether in his explication of the word Ἀποσύνονται somewhat may not be cut off or contracted; and another Memorandum he hath to alter somewhat in the beginning of his explication of Ἐν ὑστερίαις καιροῖς and withal That the * Scriptures of the Singular and Plural number speaking of the Last Time or Times be so fitted, that they may leave Dies Judicii to be a Continued Time; for, according to his * Notion and Description thereof, upon his study of the Apocalyps, Dies Judicii non breve aliquot horarum spatium designat, sed (pro more Hebraeorum, Diem pro tempore usurpantium) continuatum multorum annorum intervallum.

* So the word Πῦρ is used.

* Vid. Clem. Constit. Cyrill. Hieros. Catech.

* See pag. 552.

* See pag. 531. & 772.

These

The General Preface.

These are the Addenda and Corrigenda as they are set down in that Paper ; but not a word about Διδασκαλίας Δαιμονίων, as if any thing therein were to be alter'd : and yet some ( and they not over-captious nor prejudiced persons ) have been apt to demur somewhat upon his explication of those words. The intendment of this Preface is not to write Notes upon any of the Author's Works, yet for the sake of the Ingenuous it may not be impertinent here to observe these few things. 1. That Διδασκαλίας Δαιμονίων ( or, as some Copies read, Δαιμόνων ) may properly enough be rendred Doctrines of, that is, concerning, Demons ; the Genitive case here, as elsewhere in Scripture in the like Forms of speech, being to be taken Passively ; as the Author hath made it clear in Chap. 1. of this Treatise. 2. That Δαιμόνια or Demons are to be taken in Scripture sometimes in a better and indifferent sense, ( according to the sense of the Gentile Philosophers ) for the Souls of men deceased, and need not be taken always in the worst sense, for Devils or Evil Spirits, he hath endeavour'd ( in Chap. 6. ) to make it appear from several places of Scripture, and from an observable passage in Epiphanius ; where he also shews That the worship of these Demons or Souls of the deceased was in reality the Worship of Devils ; those Evil Spirits counterfeiting sometimes the Souls of men deceased, and none but Devils being willing to admit that Honour which does certainly derogate from the Honour of the only true God. 3. That whatsoever the importance of Διδασκαλίας Δαιμονίων or Doctrines of Demons be in this place, yet what is taught and practis'd by an Idolatrous sort of Christians, as to the worshipping of Angels and Saints, adoring of Reliques, Image-worship, &c. is a lively and express resemblance of the Doctrine and Practices of the Gentiles concerning their Δαιμόνια or Demons : as he hath proved at large. 4. That there are only three Chapters in this Treatise ( viz. Chap. 3, 4, 5. ) which treat of Δαιμόνια, the use of the word, and the Gentiles Theology concerning the Nature, the Office, the Original of Demons, the manner and way of worshipping them ; but all the rest of this large Treatise is as valid and concluding as if all in those three Chapters had been omitted, nor does the strength thereof depend upon that Hypothesis pursued in those Chapters, viz. That Δαιμόνια or Dæmons are to be taken here for the Souls of men deceased. 5. That the truth of the former Assertion may be confirmed from a view of these severals. 1. His Arguments ( in Chap. 7, 8, 9. ) to prove Saint-worship and Image-worship to be Idolatry, have no dependence upon his foregoing explication of the word Δαιμόνια, but prove what they are brought for, be the sense of the word that or any other. 2. His Discourse of the Church's Visibility clouded in the prevailing Apostasie under the Reign of Antichrist, is not concerned in his peculiar Notion of the word Δαιμόνια. 3. And as little concerned therein is all that large and considerable part of this Treatise which discourses of the ἔσχατοι καιροί, or the Times of the great Apostasie ; as likewise that which is grounded upon that famous and express Prophecy ( in Dan. 11. 36, &c. ) of the Church's lapsing into Idolatry and the worshipping of Mahuzzims ; the proper meaning of which word, ( not easie for every one to have discovered, ) as also the fitness of this Title to be applied to the worshiped Angels and Saints, with their Images and their Reliques, are there explain'd and confirm'd by him, both by comparing several Places of Scripture, and by pertinent Proofs out of Ancient and Modern Authors. 4. All the Second Part of this Treatise is unconcern'd in the foremention'd Notion of Διδασκαλίας Δαιμονίων. I mean that Part which relates to verse 2, 3. Ἐν ὑποκρίσει ψευδο λόγων, &c. καλωσύνων γαμῶν, &c. and makes it evident by several Proofs ( collected with with great industry and equal judgment out of Ecclesiastical Antiquities) That Invocation of Saints and Image-worship were advanced by Hypocritical Lying, Lies of Miracles, Fabulous Legends, &c. wherein the Professors of Monkery had the chiefhand.

The General Preface.

3. There is one thing more to be added concerning the Authors Writings, (and it is fit to be advertis'd, as being a Right due to his Name and Memory,) That whereas in the former Editions the Discourses, being published at several times and by several persons, could not be so fitly ranked and set in order, as otherwise they might have been, had they been published all at once; but the New and Old were mingled together, without any intimating which were compos'd by him in his younger days and which in his elder: In this Edition care is taken to dispose them otherwise. Know therefore that those Diatriba or Discourses * are set first that were compos'd and deliver'd by him within the last Ten years of his life, (viz. from the year 1628 to 1638,) and the First XXVI Discourses are such: XXI of which were published by the Authors Executor, but for the Order wherein they were set, (except those two which treat upon the Lords Prayer, and were therefore fitly placed first) he seems to have been indifferent; otherwise (if he had thought it expedient) he could have placed them according to the time when they were delivered in publick, either in the Colledge-Chappel, (as most of them were, being Common-places and short Diatriba on several Texts of Scripture) or before the University at S. Mary's, (as the larger Discourses were.) For (as it appears by the Authors Papers) Discourse the 7th was delivered Anno 1637. Disc. 9. An. 1633. and in the same year Disc. 14, 21. Discourse 13, An. 1632. Discourse 19, An. 1635.

The Nine following Discourses (viz. from Disc. 26. to Disc. 35. as also 37.) were preached all of them (except Discourse 30, of which I am not so certain) between the years 1624 and 1628, as I gather from some Memorials in the Manuscripts.

The Twelve next Discourses were between the years 1615 and 1624. some of which are more Notional than others, as Discourse 36. upon Jer. 10. 11. and Disc. 35. upon Urim and Thummim, and those upon Genes. 3. 13, 14, 15. But if these and Disc. 47. be not every way so accurate and exact as those Diatriba that stand in the first rank, whereof it may be said (to use Paterculus his expression) In illis Scriptus plus lima est; it was fit that the Reader should be advertis'd about the distant times wherein these and the other Discourses were compos'd by him.

The Six last Discourses (the || First is added in this Edition) all but the * Second of them, were made by him in his || younger days, and all of them but the Last are elaborate, and argue his great reading and study. The Last, which is plainer than the rest, was added, because the latter part thereof especially is a fit Supplement to Discourse 39. and withal, because the whole is a pregnant proof of his freedom from Vaingloriousness and Affestation, (a Disease to which Young men are most subject) and that he knew (as to discourse learnedly before capable Hearers, and to prepare * strong meat for those of full age, so likewise) to become weak to those that were weak *, in imitation of the Great Apostle of the Gentiles, and, * when he was to speak before a Country-Auditory, to express himself in a very plain and familiar way. Which ability and readiness of condescending to the meanest capacity was a Vertue and Perfection in him worthy of praise and imitation, rather than an unseemly debasement and lessening of himself. The Great

* of this Edition.

|| Disc. XLVIII.
* Disc. XLIX.
|| Disc. L. II.
An. 1613. Disc.
LII, An.
1615. Disc.
LIII, An. 1614.

* Heb. 5.

* 1 Cor. 9.

The General Preface.

Great S. Augustine was pleas'd to humble himself to a yet lower condescension; he would speak sometimes broken and barbarous Latine before some sort of Hearers, so it were better understood by them, as Offum for Os, &c. upon the mentioning of which instance he adds, * Melius est ut nos reprehendant Grammatici, quam ut non intelligent populi.

* Vid. Enarrat. in Psal. 138.

In general, His Style is every where grave and proper and fitly expressive of his sense, (an argument that he was Master of his Notions, and did fully comprehend them.) Nor is it easie to find many Writers that, in treating upon Prophetical and Obscure Scriptures or any other Abstruse arguments, have either illustrated them with that clearness, that easie and punctual accommodation of them to their proper Events, or represented their Notions so handsomely and advantageously, as he hath done. To be short, In his Discourses and Sermons there is nothing that is light, humorous and trifling, no little pieces of Wit or slight Phancy, no high-flown nor affected Modes of expression, no needless Quotations of the meaner and less-significant Sentences out of Authors; with which some (such especially who are less acquainted with the inward sense and relish of Better things) endeavour to make their Discourses look very fine and (as they think) wondrous learned, hoping thereby to gratifie some weak and Childish minds, and by them to be had in admiration, whose Applause yet is in the esteem of Wise men a Disparagement: No, His great care was to make his Discourses rather substantial and solid, fit to entertain such as are of a more Manly and serious spirit, than gawdy and quaint and pleasing only to those that are but Children, and not grown to be Men, in Understanding; as being well assured that to men of judgment (as Petronius hath well observ'd) Nihil esset magnificum quod pueris placeret: His Generous Soul could not stoop so low as to humor these, such a Pedantick δοκνησισοφία and Affectation being in his account a certain sign of a Poorness and Narrowness of spirit, a Littleness of Mind, when it can thus vacare rebus tam exiguis, & his interesse ut suis.

In a word, what is related in the Life of Padre Paolo, (that Oracle of Venice, the famous Author of the History of the Council of Trent, and, for his scarcely-parallel'd Accomplishments, both Intellectual and Moral, the Glory and Wonder of that Age, Il miracolo di questo secolo, as the learned and excellent Vincentius Pinellus of Padua did love to style him,) may with equal truth be said of Mr. Mede and his Writings, viz. That here was an happy conjunction of those Excellencies which rarely meet in one and the same Subject, Scienza & humilita, prudenza e mansuetudine, ritiratezza & officiosita, seriosita e dolcezza, brevità e chiarezza, soavità e sodezza, Knowledge and Humility, Prudence and Meekness, Retiredness and Officiousness, Seriousness and Pleasantness, Brevity and Clearness, Sweetness and Solidity.

I might add a word concerning some other Traets of his, and particularly such as (besides his Clavis Apocalyptica) refer to the Apocalyps, and make the three last Chapters in Book V. But concerning these there is an Advertisement there prefixed: And for the Παραλειπόμενα or * Remains upon the Apocalyps, this in short may suffice to be intimated, That they were only an Additional Supplement to the first Draught of his Synchronisms privately communicated to some Friends, and were not written after, but * before, his Clavis & Commentationes Apocalypticae, which were his Last labours upon that mysterious Book; and by these his Last Thoughts upon the Apocalyps should be farther cleared and rectified whatsoever may seem in those former Papers less perfect and satisfying. Concerning other Traets of his there are particular Advertisements inserted (where there was need) in their proper places.

And * Book III.

pag. 581.

* Except that Traet in Chap.
9. of the Remains be of a later date.

The General Preface.

And thus much concerning the Author and his Writings ; I proceed to the last Head of Advertisements.

III. Advertisements touching the Methods and Helps whereby the Author arrived at such an eminent degree of skill in the more abstruse parts of Knowledge.

And because it is and ever was the General sense of all Wise and Vertuous persons in the World, That the * Divine Presence and Assistance is absolutely necessary, and therefore to be implor'd, in all weighty undertakings; that which deserves first to be numbred amongst those Helps to knowledge is,

I. His humble and fervent Prayer to Almighty God, the Father of lights, to guide him into all Truth, and to give him [ * שכל טוב ] a good understanding in all things. This was S. * James his advice, If any man lack Wisdom, let him ask of God ----- and it shall be given him. This was that memorable counsel that a venerable unknown person gave to Justin Martyr in his Solitude, ( after he had pass'd through the several Philosophies then in being, the Stoick, Peripatetick, Pythagorean and Platonick ) as a preparation to his receiving the best Philosophy, that is, the Christian, That he would study the Writings of the Holy Prophets; and for his better success therein ( saith he * ) "Εὐχεσθε δέ σοι πρὸς πάντων φωτὸς ἀνοίχθῃσι πυλάσι, that he should first and above all things pray unto God that the Gates of light might be opened unto him : and in the following of this counsel this great Philosopher became an eminent Christian, faithful unto death. This was Daniel's practice; Daniel ( whose Prophecy is much-what of the like colour and complexion with S. John's Apocalyps ) he sets himself ( and engages the Three Children, his companions, to do the like ) * to desire mercies of the God of Heaven concerning that Secret of Nebuchadnezzar's Vision of the Four Kingdoms, represented by the * Image of Four differing mettals. And, to mention only one Example more, ( but such a one as is most pertinent on this occasion ) S. John is said to have * wept much that none was found that could open the Apocalyptick Book sealed with Seven Seals : But God heard his Prayers and Tears, and upon the Lambs opening the Book he is bid * Come and see. Thus God made the place of his banishment, Patmos, ( an Island in the Archipelago ) to be to him * a Valley of Vision, another || Peniel and || Gate of Heaven, and, for the Oracles of Divine wisdom he there received, infinitely more illustrious than Delos, ( a neighbouring Island, the middlemost and chief of the Cyclades ) so much famed for the birth and Oracle of Apollo. In this Solitude the holy Angels and Christ Jesus the Sovereign over Men and Angels visited him, and blest this Eagle-eyed Apostle with the discoveries of the particular Fates of the Church till the End of the World and Christs Second coming to Judgment.

Agreeable to such holy Counsels and these great Examples was Mr. Mede's practice, particularly when he entered upon the Apocalyps. Accordingly in a Letter of his to Mr. W. ( his ancient Friend ) he tells him That it was his daily Desire and Prayer to God that he might not be led away with delusions, ( as some unskillful and unstable souls had been in their attempts upon so abstruse a Book as the Apocalyps ) and that therefore his Hope was in God, that he would not suffer

***

* Οὐκ ἐστιν ἄλλος πᾶσι ἀποδοὺν πᾶσι ἐκείν. Plin. in Paneg. Bene & sapienter Ma-jores instrue-runt, ut rectum agendarum in-itium & Precationibus cape-rent.
* Plal. III.
* Chap. 1. 5.

* In Dial. cum Tiphoni.

* Dan. 2. 18.

* Verf. 32, & c.

* Apoc. 1. 5. 4.

* Chap. 6. 1.

* Ifai. 22.

|| Gen. 32.

& 28.

The General Preface.

suffer him to fall, ( as they had wretchedly miscarried ) but be merciful to him a sinner : and withal he earnestly desires that others would pray for him, as he would not cease to pray for them engaged in the like difficult labours. In this humble strain does he express himself in that private Letter, which needed not to be printed, it treating upon what he hath more fully and clearly discoursed of in other Tracts published in this Edition. Besides out of his printed Works upon the Apocalyps the Reader may observe the same: For those two humble Addresses of his to God, in the beginning of both his Clavis and Commentary upon the Apocalyps, [ Tu qui Throno insides ----- and, Christe, Dei Sapientia ----- ] are pregnant proofs how sensible he was of the availableness of continued Prayer for the safe understanding of such Mysteries. So far was he from * leaning to his own Understanding and * glorying in his own Wisdom: just as Joseph the Patriarch speaks of his interpreting Pharaoh's Dream, ( Gen. 41. 16. ) It is not in me, לא מן חוכמתי Non ex sapientia mea, says the Targum.

* Prov. 3.

* Psal. 33.
Praise is comely
for the upright.

II. His Ingenuous Gratitude and Thankfull acknowledgements for any measure of Light received. For Praise ( as it is in it self most * comely, a singular piece of the Beauty of Holiness, the Souls best dress and most graceful deportment, so likewise ) it is an effectual instrument and one of the most compendious means to the obtaining of greater Favours and Blessings. Thus Daniel, out of a due sense of Gods Goodness in revealing to him that Secret and Mystery of Nebuchadnezzar's Vision, repeats and doubles his affectionate Praises, in Chap. 2. 20, 22, 23. And he that was thus becomingly thankful for this First Favour, had many other Mysteries imparted to him, Mysteries of the greatest magnitude and importance: as, that of the LXX Weeks, ( Chap. 9. ) containing ( besides other Secrets of Providence relating to the Jewish State ) the highest Mysteries of the Gospel, the Coming of Messiah into the World, his Death, the Time and the End or Intent thereof, his Anointing. Inauguration, and being instated in his Sovereign Dignity and Regal Power over all; and also that ( in Chap. 7. ) of the Second Coming of Christ in the Clouds of Heaven, together with the Description of the Great Day of Judgement, and the Kingdom of Christ, which should not pass away nor be destroyed as were those Four * Kingdoms represented ( in this Chapter ) by the Four Beasts diverse one from another, verse 3. and ( to name no more ) that Mystery of the Reign of Antichrist, ( for so the Ancients understood it ) both in Chapter 7. 8, 20. and Chapter 11. 36, &c. together with the Time of his Discovery, * Chapter 12. 11, 12.

* 1 The Babylonian,
2 that of the Medes and Persians,
3 The Greek, 4 the Roman.

* Of these Numbers 1290 & 1335, see Mr. Mede's Revelatio Antichristi in pag. 717.

Nor was Mr. Mede's Practice less observable in this than in the foregoing Particular; of which it were easie to produce many Instances: This for one, out of that above mentioned Letter to Mr. W. to whom he had sent the First Draught of his Notions upon part of the Apocalyps, ----- As for me, ( saith he ) I am conscious of my weakness and unworthiness; being, when these kind of thoughts first possess'd me, looking another way with a prejudice incompatible with this ----- But if it be found the least means of farther light, to the Father of Lights be the Glory. His Epistles are full of the like thankful acknowledgements. When some, admiring his rare Sagacity in the Mysteries of the Apocalyps and other Prophecies, wrote to him in a strain full of respect and praise, he was not forward to take Glory to himself, but gave it ( as he ought ) to God; telling them, * if there were any thing in his Meditations worthy of approbation, he must * See Ep. 14. pag. 759.

The General Preface.

must ascribe it to Gods goodness towards him, that had in any sort enabled him to endeavour ought whereby he might not live in the world altogether unprofitably ----- and withal adds concerning his Clavis, If this one thing be my Talent, though but a single one, I have sufficient wherefore continually to thank the Almighty, and to beseech him that my husbanding thereof may be, by his gracious instinct, such as may be some occasion of farther light to others. Agreeable to which expressions is that most Grateful acknowledgment with which he concludes his Clavis Apocal. -----

*Id extremum te volo, Lector, ut si mihi * assidenti quid forte revelatum esse perspexeris, aut tibi ipsi aut aliis ad hæc mysteria profuturum, id totum Dei in me misericordiae acceptum referas; cui & ego ob tantillum Sapientiae ejus radiolum grates persolvere nunquam desinam* -----

* 1 Cor. 14. 30.

The like humble and hearty praises for that portion of knowledge God had given him in these Mysteries, and the Opportunity he had vouchsafed him to make it known to others so far as he had done, ( either of which Favours he professes he deserved not, ) the Reader may observe elsewhere in his * Epistles. And indeed a Soul so Humble and Meek and * See Ep. 41.

Thankful as his was, is in the fittest disposition and has the fairest advantages for Divine light : So true is that of Siracides, * Mysteries are revealed unto the meek. He with whom God * spake face to face, as a man speaketh to his friend, was

* Chap. 3. 22.

* Exod. 33.

the * meekest man upon earth, one whom that rare conjunction and Constellation of * Num. 12.

so great Accomplishments and Excellencies ( as his being * learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians,

* Acts 7.

his being mighty in words and deeds, his * forty days converse with God in the Mount, his Greatness, Power and Dignity, together with the incomparable goodness of his person ) did not swell into an haughty, arrogant and imperious humour; as it would have been apt to have made some the proudest men upon earth.

* Deut. 9.

To conclude; To return all Thankful acknowledgments for such peculiar knowledge of the Mysteries and Prophetick Scriptures, ἀληθινὰς ἀξιώσεως καὶ δόξης,

( to use the words of that Hymn in the Alexandrian Liturgy; ) for the Interpretation of Prophecy is a Grace and Favour as well as Prophecy it self. Accordingly those two persons ( one under the Old Testament, the other in the New ) that were favour'd above all others with the discoveries of the greatest Mysteries, were such as were peculiarly dear to God. Daniel was חמור *, and more fully חמור *, a man of desires or greatly beloved; and John was the * Chap. 9. 23.

Disciple whom Jesus loved, ( so he is styled five times in Scripture ) that leaned on his breast at Supper, and lay in his bosom : and to this his bosom-Disciple did our

* Chap. 10. 11.

Lord impart the deepest Mysteries of Prophecy as also of Evangelical Truth, whence he was worthily styled Θεολόγος The Divine, a Title more fitly applied to him than of old to Orpheus, Linus and Museus, or any the Divinest Writer among either the Philosophers or Poets of the Gentiles.

III. His serious diligence in the use of such means as were most proper and instrumental to the attaining of that Knowledge he prayed for. Where the most seemingly-earnest

Prayer is not attended with as earnest Endeavours, it is but a lazy insignificant wish, and in some a piece of vain Enthusiasm. But our Saviours advice is not barely to * ask, but to seek; and such was that of || Solomon, not only to lift up the voice for Wisdom and Understanding, but to seek her as Silver, and search for her as for hid Treasures. And of these counsels Mr. Mede was a careful observer, who failed not to accompany his Prayers with his best Endeavours. And as he was not slight and sudden in any thing, but proceeded with the greatest care and caution imaginable in any important argument his Thoughts were fixed upon, so was he more especially serious and thoughtful in his endeavours to interpret the Apocalyps and any other Prophetical Scriptures; a work to which he was peculiarly design'd and fitted by God, and moved to it by some interior invitation and gracious Instinct of his Spirit, as the Author himself does somewhere acknowledge in his Epistles, where he also looks upon any abilities he had for interpreting such Scriptures as that particular Talent God had intrusted to him, to improve to the best advantage in his service: and therefore (as became a good and faithful Servant, desirous to approve himself to his Master in Heaven) * whatsoever his hand did find to do herein, he did it with all his might. And that he might wholly give himself to these studies, (according to that of the Apostle, * ταῦτα μελέτα, ὡς τέτοις ἰδί) and attend upon them without distraction, he prudently made choice of his most still and vacant hours wherein he might be most free from the noise and tumult of other cares and distractive, but less pertinent, business; for he would tell his Friends, that he could do nothing in these things but in silence and security of not being distracted by company and business. S. John received his Apocalyps in his Solitude at Patmos; and our Author found those seasons to be the most favourable and advantageous for gaining any abilities to reveal this Apocalyps, when he could be most retired and recollected in his * Cell or Study, where he might gather in and intend all the Powers of his Mind and possess his whole Soul, the Soul never acting so strongly as when its whole force is thus united in such Recollections.

* Matth. 7.

|| Prov. 2. 4.

The General Preface.

One Instance (and a very remarkable one) of his great Diligence and Faithfulness in this Work he mentions in a * Letter of his to Dr. T. where acquainting him with the leisurely and deliberate progress he made in his Exposition of Apocal. chap. 14. he adds, I am by nature cunctabundus in all things, but in this let no man blame me if I take more pause than ordinary; and he gives this Reason for it, Altius enim hoc animo meo insedit, (saith he) That rashly to be the Author of a false interpretation of Scripture is to take Gods name in vain in an high degree: Words worthy to be written (to use * Jeremy's expression) with a pen of iron or with the point of a diamond upon the table of the heart, in the most legible and lasting characters; Words arguing the Authors most serious and pious spirit, full of reverence for the Word of God, and most sadly to be considered by the over-confident and superficial Expositors of the Divine Oracles and Mysteries.

Thus much in general. The particular Means whereby he attain'd so great an insight and skill in the Apocalyps and other abstruse Prophecies of Scripture were such as these.

1. His accurate and judicious comparing of Scripture with Scripture, and observing the proper and genuine use of the like Words and Phrases in several passages of Scripture, as they are either in the Original Languages, or in the ancient Versions thereof, especially the Chaldee, Greek and Syriack. For he found by good experience that some Scriptures do excellently illustrate others where the like Expressions are to be found, and consequently that the Word of God is * a Lamp unto our feet and a Light unto our path, not only as to the guiding of our life and practice, but also as to the directing our progress in the safest and clearest method of interpreting it self; and that such comparing of places is as needful for our conduct in the more solitary and dark passages of Scripture, as that burning Pillar of fire was to the Israelites in their journeying through a vast and desolate Wilderness, which God gave them to be both a guide of the unknown journey, and an harmless Sun by night, as the Author of the Book of Wisdom does elegantly express it in chap. 18. 3. πυρροφλεγὴν ἥλιον, ὁδηγὸν μὴ ἀλγῶσαι ὁδοιπορίας, ἥλιον δ' ἀβλαβὴς, &c.

Particularly

* Eccles. 9. 10.

* 1 Tim. 4.
— Su totus in illis.

* So he calls his Study or Chamber in Ep. 97.

* The rest of it is about News, and therefore was not published in this Edition.

* Chap. 17.

* Psal. 119.

The General Preface.

Particularly he observ'd that the Style of the New Testament doth frequently imitate the Construction and Propriety of the Hebrew in the Old, as also the Greek of the LXX, and that the use of many Words in the New Testament was not Vulgar but Hellenistical, and agreeable to the use and importance of them in the Greek Bible. As for example, οἶνος τῆ θυμῆ τῆς πορνείας, Apocal. 14. 8. Μαμωνᾶ ἀδικίας, Luk. 16. 9. εἰς νίκος, 1 Cor. 15. 54. ὁ σπείρων ἐπ' εὐλογίας, 2 Cor. 9. 6. περσεκύνησαν τὸ θηρόν, Apocal. 13. 4. Χερυβὶμ δόξης, Heb. 9. 5. Several other examples might be mentioned; but it is a Truth so generally acknowledged by those that are but competently acquainted with Sacred Philology, that it would be a needless task to produce the very many Instances which might be brought in confirmation thereof,

2. His exact skill in History and the Customs both of the Jews and other Nations was a singular aid and advantage to him for explaining the obscurer passages in the Apocalyps and Prophets. 'Tis true, Those things that are absolutely necessary to be known and practis'd in order to Salvation, they are plain and evident in the Scripture; more especially to the good and honest heart, to the sincerely-obedient Soul they are as clear as if they were written with a Sun-beam, (its * Tertullian's expression) yea they are (as || S. Chrysostome hath phrased it higher) τῶν ἡλιακῶν ακτίνων φαιερώτερα. In those things* that pertain to life and godliness, which lead to an happy life hereafter, and constitute that Holiness here which is the only way to that Happiness, the Scripture is || clear and intelligible without any Paraphrase or Comment, without any Criticisms or Philological learning; they are not hard to understand, but hard to practise, (nor are they hard in this latter respect but through our own fault, through our unwillingness to implore and use those aids which God is ready to afford to such as diligently seek him:) Yet that * the man of God may be perfect and thoroughly furnished to every good work, and particularly to that good work which most properly becomes the man of God, the understanding and explaining of many other considerable parts of H. Scripture, it is requisite that he should be well read in Histories and Antiquities, both Jewish, Christian and Ethnick, and withal be indued with an happy ἀγχινοια and Sagacity for the better discovering what Events recorded in History do particularly answer the Scripture-Prophecies. And that Mr. Mede was excellently accomplish'd for such purposes, is manifest to all judicious Readers of his Works; in particular, his Commentary upon the Apocalyps is an illustrious proof of the great and successful use he made of his acquaintance with the best Historians that treat of the successive Changes and States of the Roman Empire, together with the Degrees of its Ruine (represented in the || Vision of the Seven Seals and Trumpets) as also of the Saracens, (those * Locusts that came out of the smoky and darkening Seduction of Mahomet) together with their Successors the Turks, (those || Horsemen from Euphrates) and likewise of the Christian Church, whether in its primitive Purity (chap. 11. & 12.) or in its Degeneracy and Apostasy (ch. 13. 14, &c.)

His acquaintance with the Jewish Antiquities enabled him to discover what was meant by that Glorious Session of the Divine Majesty upon a Throne, (as it is described in Apocal. 4.) and by those * Four Animalia (the Ensigns of the Four Standards of the Israelitish Camp in the Wilderness) that were placed about the Tabernacle or Throne of God. From the same Antiquities he explain'd the Two Courts of the Temple (mention'd Apocal. 11.) the Inner Court for the Priests, the Outer for the Israelites, between which and the Atrium Gentium was a Wall of stone about three cubits high, with an Inscription upon it forbidding * De Resurr. carn.

|| Hom. 2 in Jo.

* 2 Pet. 1. τὰ

ἀγαθὰ ζώην καὶ εὐσέβειαν.

|| ὁ δὲ εἰς Κλη-μείνεται ἐν λό-γῳ. Clem.

Alex. in Pro-

trept.

* 2 Tim. 3.

|| Apocal. ch.

6. & 8.

* Chap. 9. 2. 3.

|| Ver. 14. &c.

* A Lion, a

Bullock, a Man, and an Eagle.

The General Preface.

forbidding any alien or uncircumcised Gentile to come within the Sacred limits; and that the μεσότοιχον τῆ φραγμῆ (Ephes. 2. 14.) Middle wall of partition between the Jews and Gentiles does plainly allude hereunto. But not to mention any more Observations of this nature, there are several Phrases also in the Scripture illustrated by him out of the same Monuments of Antiquity; as the * Vid. p. 913. Σεβέρμοι, Οἰκὸν μὲν μέλλουσα, Δεύτερος θάνατος * the second Death, (an expression four times used in the Apocalyps) and (that which occurs thrice in the same Book) || the being arrayed or walking in white garments. Other Instances might be added, but these may suffice for a Specimen.

¶ Vid. p. 447, & pag. 909.

His acquaintance with the Ethnick Antiquities enabled him to explain the Δέκατον τῆς πόλεως or Tenth part of the City, (Apocal. 11. 13.) the two Eagle's wings, (chap. 12. 14.) the receiving the Beast's mark in their right hands or in their foreheads, (chap. 13. 16.) as there is mention also of the Virgin-Company having the Lamb's and his Father's name in their foreheads, (chap. 14. 1.) with sundry other Passages in that Book of the like import.

But besides these and the foregoing Instances, I might here mention several other Passages in Scripture which the Author had not occasion to touch upon in his Discourses, whether Words and Phrases, or whole Paragraphs, (if not almost whole Chapters sometimes) not to be illustrated without skill in History and Antiquities: as (to name only some few) ἡμᾶς ἐσχάτως ἀπέδειξεν ὡς ὁμοθανατίους, ὅτι θείαρον ἐγενήθημεν, &c. 1 Cor. 4. 9. and the white Stone, with a new name written therein, given to him that overcometh, Apocal. 2. 17. as also that in Acts 19. 2. where the Christians at Ephesus tell S. Paul, We have not so much as heard εἰ Πνεῦμα ἅγιον ἔστι whether there be an Holy Ghost, or (as the Hebrew Masters phrase it) רוח הקודש. And for that Paragraph in S. John 7. from vers. 37. to vers. 40. containing what was spoken by our Saviour in the last day, that great day, of the Feast of Tabernacles, the elegancy and fitness, as well as the genuine importance, of those expressions is most clear to such only as apprehend the reference they have to the Customs and practices of the Jews on that day, recorded in their ancient Authors. Nor can that in 1 Cor. 9. from vers. 23. to the end be illustrated without skill in the Ethnick Antiquities, the whole Paragraph alluding to the Customs of those Exercises and Games kept at Corinth, (as they were also in 3 other places of Greece) and call'd Isthmia certamina from that Isthmus on which that great and wealthy City of Corinth was situate, and where those Sports were celebrated every fifth year: Upon the knowledge of which Customs it would appear that the Apostles expressions in this Paragraph are most pertinent and Emphatical. Much of S. Matth. chap. 24. relating to the Destruction of Jerusalem, (together with the Signs and Fore-runners thereof) is to be explain'd out of Jewish and Ethnick Historians, and very particularly and clearly too out of those Authors who yet knew nothing of our Saviour's Predictions therein, nor of that ancient Prediction in Micah, ch. 3. 12. (quoted also by the Prophet || Jeremy) Zion shall be plowed as a field; which was also most punctually fulfilled, as were the other. I will name but one Book of Scripture more, and it shall be that of Daniel, where the Interpretation of both the 8th and 11th Chapters do wholly depend upon History; as also what in Ch. 7. is said of the Four Monarchies, and particularly the fitness of representing the Third Monarchy (that of the Greeks) by the Leopard with four wings, vers. 6. and in chap. 8. by the * He-goat, and the || first King thereof by * See Comment.

Apoc. p. 473.

¶ Alexander did affect to be call'd, and worshipp'd as, the Son of Jupiter Hammon, the upper part of whose Image was a Goat: and in his Pictures and Coins he would be represented κατὰ τὸν ὅμοιον.

that

The General Preface.

that קרן חזון or notable Horn ( vers. 5, & 21. ) together with the Four Horns that came up after it was broken ( vers. 8. ) as likewise the fitness of representing the Second Monarchy ( that of the Medes and Persians ) by the Ram with two Horns ( vers. 3. ) of which the Author has a short hint in his Com. Apoc. P. 474. to which might be added that Moris erat apud Persas aureum caput arietinum pro diademate gestare, as appears from Ammian. Marcellinus l. 19. The clear understanding of these and many other particulars in those Chapters depends altogether upon History.

By all which it is manifest how necessary it is for the full understanding of several parts of Scripture to be acquainted ( as the Author was ) with the Original Languages, ancient Versions, the Genius and Idioms of the Scripture-style, and also with History, and the ancient Customs both of the Jews and others: without which it would be a fruitless attempt, even for such as otherwise are of good abilities, to undertake to give a pertinent and satisfying account of the forementioned ( and other the like ) passages of Scripture. And as for those who, though they are * ψυχικοί, πνεῦμα μὴ ἔχοντες, and bring not * Jud. 19. forth the || Fruits of the Spirit, would engross the Spirit wholly to themselves, || Gal 5. 22. ( as the Jews did the Messias to their Nation, to the excluding of the Gentiles, ) and ignorantly despise all humane Learning and means of Knowledge; what has been said may abundantly check their vain confidence; such Scriptures as I have instanced in ( and others of the like nature ) being not to be explain'd without skill in the learned Languages, History and Antiquity, which is not to be had but by a studious converse with the best Authors: except they will say that such skill and knowledge is infused, and that the particular Events and Res gesta, at large treated of in Books, are made known to them by extraordinary Revelation; which yet they are so wary as not to pretend to, as they are also so wise as not to pretend to the Gifts of Tongues or Interpretation of Tongues, those Gifts of the Spirit not unusual in the Apostles Age.

3. His diligent enquiry and happy insight into the Oriental Figurative Expressions and Prophetick Schemes throughout the Scripture. For he observ'd that there were, especially in the Writings of the Prophets, certain Symbols, Emblems and Hieroglyphical representations, which were no less familiar to those Eastern Nations than our Poetical Schemes and Pictures are to us: and that the true meaning of these Symbols was to be found out by some such means as these; as 1. By comparing those several places of Scripture where they occur, and observing what they use to stand for, or what their uniform signification and notion is in such places, which may be farther cleared ( as by considering the fitness and analogy between those Symbols and the Things represented by them, so likewise ) by attending to some Plainer expressions in the Context, which are a certain Key to the understanding of those that are Figurative and Emblematical. Thus what in Jer. 4. 23. is figuratively describ'd, The Earth is without Form and void [ תהו ובהו, the words used, Gen. 1. 2. of the old Chaos ] and the Heavens have no light, is the same with what is plainly express'd in the Context, The whole Land is spoiled, The whole Land shall be desolate. And that in Haggai 2. 6, & 21. I will shake the Heavens and the Earth, is explain'd by the words immediately following. Thus in Zech. 11. 2. The Cedar is fallen, the fenced Forest is come down, is no other than that which is plainly set down in the same verse, The mighty ( or the Nobles, ארירים ) are spoiled. But in Dan. chap. 7. and ch. 8. and in Apoc. 17. much of the Visions is there explain'd, and the Symbols therein are render'd out of the Prophetical style afterwards into more easie and

The General Preface.

See a particular account of such Prophetic Symbols as these in the Authors Comment. Apoc. p. 448, 449, 459, 466. and a yet more particular account in Dr. More's Prophetic Alphabet in his forementioned Synopsis Propheticæ, Book I. Ch. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9.

and familiar sense. 2. By observing how these Oriental Symbols are interpreted and render'd into plainer expressions by the Chaldee Paraphrasts, who may justly be presum'd to know best what was meant thereby in those Countries : as ( for example ) when the Prophets frequently speak of the Sun's being darkned in its going forth, the Moon not giving her light, and elsewhere of the Stars falling from Heaven upon the Earth ( a phrase not to be understood Literally ) the Targum renders these and the like Prophetic strains in words that signify the diminution of the Glory and Felicity of the State, and the Downfal of the Grandees and Chiefs therein; Sun, Moon and Stars being put according to the Prophetic style for the Higher Powers, Princes and Peers, those Great Lights shining in the Firmament of the Political World. Thus also when the Prophets denounce God's Judgments to come upon all the Cedars and Oaks, (Esay 2. ) and when the Firre-trees and Oaks are bid to howl (Zech. 11. ) the Targum in stead of mentioning these tall and goodly Trees has מלכי עממיה and מדינותה Princes of the People and Rulers of Provinces. 3. By consulting such Authors as had collected any Fragments and Remains of the ancient Onirocriticks, as Apomasar or Achmetes the Arabian ( published by the learned Rigaltius ) had of the Onirocriticks of the Indians, Persians and Egyptians; concerning which I need not enlarge, the Author having inserted some pertinent Extracts thereof ( together with his judgment of their fitness to illustrate the meaning of the Prophetical Representations ) in his Commentary upon the Apocalyps, p. 451. and elsewhere. By which Onirocriticks it may appear what the Eastern nations did commonly suppose to be signified by such Symbols.

4. His observing things in distant places of the Apocalypse to Synchronize and belong to the same time : whence he was well assured That it was a false Hypothesis and a fundamental Error in any Commentators to think That all the Prophecies and Visions in this Mysterious Book are placed in such an order as is agreeable to the order of time wherein they were fulfill'd, or That the Events succeeded one another in the same Series and order as the Visions do; and consequently for them to frame their Interpretation of the Visions according to that deceitful Hypothesis, and not according to that safe guidance and light which the Synchronisms afford, must needs expose them to manifold mistakes from first to last, and encumber the whole work with such Difficulties, Inconsistencies and Incongruities in applying the Prophecies to History and Events, as cannot possibly be excus'd and remov'd by all their wit, were it greater than it is. Of such consequence it is for all that would interpret the Apocalyptrick Visions to take heed to the Apocalyptrick Synchronisms ως ἀντὶ φωτὸς φαίνονται ἐν ἀνυχμῶν τόπῳ, ( to use *S. * Peter's* expression ) as unto a light that shineth in a dark place : Otherwise their whole Fabrick of Annotations will be but as a Building without a sure Ground-work and Foundation, an House built upon the Sand, which is but a fluid and uncertain bottom; a Pile of private Fancies, slight Conceits and weak Conjectures : And though there may be some things therein which may have a shew of Learning and a seeming Concinnity to the injudicious and unskilful in the Prophetic Style; yet the main of their performance ( for want of attending to this and the other means of knowledge mention'd in the foregoing particulars ) will be little better than a more pompous, solemn and plausible Impertinency, and upon the whole matter their Enterprise no other than magnū conatu nugas agere, with a great deal a-do to do nothing.

* 2 Ep. 1.

The General Preface.

The glory of the First discovering these Synchronisms is peculiarly due to Mr. Mede, and upon this score shall the present and succeeding Ages owe a great respect and veneration to his Memory: For of these Synchronisms he might justly affirm what Aristotle doth of his Syllogisms, ( the invention of which method of reasoning he challengeth to himself ) * Ταύτης δὲ τῆς πραγμάτειας ἔδεν πάντελως ὑπῆρχε, and again, περὶ τῆς συλλογίζεσθαι πάντελως ἔδεν ἔχοντι πρῶτον λέγειν ἄλλο· ἀλλὰ τριβὴ ζητῶντες, πολὺν χρόνον ἐπονύμην. This was Mr. Mede's noble εὕρημα, as well useful and serviceable as new and curious: and it was an argument of his great judgment, as to discern the proper Events and Times to which these Visions are to be applied, so likewise to discover those Passages in the Apocalyps which, though dispersed here and there, are Synchronal and Homogeneous; there being certain Characters and Intimations secretly couched in this Book of Mysteries, whereby ( as also by considering the nature of the things themselves that are Contemporary ) the Synchronisms of the Visions may be found out.

* De Sophist. Elench. l. 2. c. ult.

I shall not need to shew how necessary it is for those that go down to this Prophetick Sea to steer by the guidance of these Synchronisms, ( that lightsome Pharos, and indeed the only Cynosura to direct those that are upon this great Deep, ) the Author himself having fully and undeniably done this all along in his Clavis Apocalyptica, and summarily in the * two last pages thereof: Nor will the excellency and advantages of this Discovery be doubted of by any that shall with patience and attention peruse what he hath written in a close and concise way ( agreeably to his Mathematical Genius ) of the Apocalypick Synchronisms in that Clavis.

* See pag. 431, 432. See also pag. 581.

Thus much for the Third General Means of Knowledge. I must be shorter in what follows.

IV. A Fourth means whereby he arrived at so great a measure of Knowledge was, His Freedom from Partiality, Prejudice and Prepossession, Pride, Passion and Self-love, Self-seeking, Flattery and covetous Ambition.

1. How free he was from all Partiality, there are many pregnant Proofs in his Writings. It is a common, yet a most true, observation, That with many men Maxima pars studiorum est studium partium; but with him it was otherwise. In some of his * Epistles he complains that it was Partiality that undoes all, and that Studium partium together with Prejudice is an invincible mischief, while it leaves no place for admission of Truth that brings any disadvantage to the Side or party; that being the Rule which they examine all by. And therefore being sensible and aware of this evil, he professeth ( in Ep. 96. ) that he endeavour'd as much as possibly he could to subdue himself to such a Free temper of Mind as not to desire to find for this side rather than that, And his Endeavours herein being hearty and serious, they were consequently ( through God's blessing ) successful, insomuch that he judged himself highly obliged upon this account to return this grateful acknowledgment to Almighty God, ( in Ep. 56. ) I thank God ( saith he ) I never made any thing hitherto the caster of my resolution but Reason and Evidence, on what side soever the advantage or disadvantage fell. The singular avail-

* See the last lines in his Epistles p. 983.

* * * *

ableness

The General Preface.

ableness of such free and unbiassed affections in the pursuit of Knowledge he hath excellently express'd in that clear profession of his (in Ep. 96.) If I have hit upon any Truth, it is wholly to be attributed to my indifferency in such searches, to embrace whatsoever I should find, without any regard whether it were for the advantage of one side or other. This and the forementioned passages are excellent words, the genuine language of a Son of Wisdom, the lively picture and true character of his and every generous Soul, every way becoming a right Virtuoso and member of the Philalethean Academy. From this Free-spiritedness (together with the ingenuous effects thereof) were the * Be-ræans styled εὐγενέστεροι a more noble sort of Christians. They that are short of this Excellency and Largeness of spirit, seldom attain * δοκιμάζειν τὰ δια-φερόντα to prove things that differ, or to approve things that are excellent, seldom rise to what is above mean and vulgar, slight and superficial, but are condemn'd to what is servile and Pedantick, and judge themselves unworthy of the noblest Truths, and withal are expos'd to the same Fallhood and Mistakes that the Person or Party whom * they have in admiration because of advantage, or the Vulgar in any rank of men (being of the same illiberal and contracted spirit with themselves) are liable to: For it is a Maxime equally true and generous, Suum est cuique Ordini vulgus, & optima semper paucissimis placere. To which I may fitly adjoyn that pertinent Observation of Seneca, * Non tam bene cum rebus humanis agitur, ut meliora pluribus placeant.

* Acts 17. 11.

* Phil. 1. 10.

* Jude 16.

* De vita beata.

2. Nor was he less free from all Prejudice and Prepossession, with the attendants thereof, Pride, Passion and Self-love.

Men come to be prejudic'd against Truth, either by their disgust and disaffection to the person that represents it: an argument this is of their little Judgement but great Passion: but from this he was secured by his Charity enlarged to all men, and by the cool and calm temper of his spirit; he could patiently endure the contradiction of others, and reply without passion; witness his sober and pacate Answer to Lamenus his hot * Strictures.

* Pag. 550.

Or else they are prejudic'd by their scornful disesteem of others: an effect this is of their high Self-conceit and surely Pride: and from this he was secured by his great Humility and Modesty, whereof there are many clear Proofs in his Writings. Accordingly when he had to do with Mr. Hayns about some Tenets of his in reference to several passages in Daniel and the Apocalyps, he plainly tells him, * I profess to you, I condemn not your discourses, but do diligently and apud conscientiam meam weigh your arguments, howsoever it comes to pass I am not persuaded by them: and farther, so far he was from slighting what was done by those that were eager for the same Tenets, that he assures him * he had read the most that had or could be said for those Opinions either by the chief Patrons thereof or their followers, and so had used all that Diligence that was due in the search of Truth. And herein he was Exemplary to every ingenuous lover of Knowledge, and contrary to the proud and passionate man that is conceited and resolv'd upon his Opinion, (Οἷος πέπνυται, τοὶ δὲ σχιαὶ αἰόρουσι) and is therefore impatient to hear or consider any thing that opposes it. But Humility affords a very considerable advantage for the clearer discerning what is True and Right, while it prepares men to receive * Ep. 20. p. 748.

* Ep. 3. p. 742.

The General Preface.

receive any better information from others. This effect it had in Mr. Mede, and upon this score how heartily does he thank Lud. de Dieu for suggesting to him an easier explication of * [ἐν μέσῳ τῶ θεοῦ καὶ ἀγγέλῳ τῶ * || Pag. 567. & 569. θεοῦ, Apocal. 4. 6.] and for acquainting him with his || notion about כְּרוּב Cherub signifying an Oxe, from the Chaldee כְּרַב * Cherab, which is * Hence also כְּרַבָּא is Aravit, whereby his observation upon the 4 Animalia in Apocal. 4. 7. was Aggr. at anim. confirmed? And with the like affection he acknowledges Mr. Haydock's || ingenious conjecture about the form of the Seven-sealed Book, (Apocal. 5.) as also his being better informed about the Number of the Beast [666] * See pag. 790. &c. by Mr. Potter's Discourse concerning it, with which Discovery he was so highly pleas'd, that (not without some πείσμα.) he affirm'd it * to be one * Pag. 877. of the happiest Tracts that had come into the world, and such as could not be read without much admiration. In short, He did not take himself to be Infallible, and therefore was not Unalterable, where the change was for the better, (and the change is ever such, where we part with a plausible Mistake or with a specious Probability for solid Truth and clear Demonstration) but he was always ready to hear another's Reason, and to yield himself a willing Captive to the Evidence of Truth. For to be overcome by Truth and Reason, makes the conquered a gainer, and puts him into a better state than he was in before; nor will he fail (if he know his own happiness) to make one in that joyous acclamation, || Great is Truth, and mighty above all things: She is the Strength, Power and Majesty of all ages. Blessed be the God of Truth. || Efr. 4.

Or else men come to be prejudic'd by an undue affection to their Idola specus, (as the L. Verulam calls them) their peculiar Conceits, some Notions and Speculations of their own, by which they either are or would be known; being fondly persuaded that things are so as they imagine them, or vehemently desirous that they should be so: and therefore it is no wonder if, being thus prepossess'd, they have lost their taste, and wrong'd their κατάνοια, that they cannot readily discern between Good and Evil, but (as the Prophet Esay speaks) put bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter, and are easily brought to fancy that to be True and Right which they passionately will to be such, in order to some corrupt design and interest eagerly pursued by them, or to the gratifying of those several Lusts wherewith they are led away, (as the Apostle speaks) and are therefore unable to come to the knowledge of the Truth. And if they that are thus affected do sometimes for a pretence consult the Holy Scriptures, they come so fully possess'd that this or that Opinion and Practice of theirs is True and Right, or so strongly resolv'd to find it so, that even the Divine Oracles seem to them to return such an Answer as they promised themselves they should receive and most impetuously lusted after. And so it fares with them herein as in another case it did with the Romans, who having taken Veii, (a famous City in Hetruria) went into Juno's Temple, and there with great ceremony and affectionateness asking Juno, Velleme cum illis Romam ire? to some the Image seem'd annuere, to others etiam id ipsum affirmare. Upon which story in * Livy there is this observation of Machiavel in his * 1.4. Discurs. de Repub. — Cum tanta veneratione interrogassent, visum est ipsis tale responsum audivisse quale se audituros prius pollicebantur, The application is obvious.

The General Preface.

* Luke 8.

חמסו תורה
Ezek. 22. 25.
Ze. h. 3. 4.

But against this other Instance of Pride expressing itself in an over-dear regard that such men have to their own Sentiments, and oftentimes for some self-ends and undue advantage to themselves, against this, I say, Mr. Mede was secured by that Universal Alexipharum, his truly-Christian Humility, as also by that Generosum honestum which dwelt and ruled in him, the noble Integrity of his Spirit, that which the Scripture calls * the Good and Honest Heart, a Principle not less (yea more) necessary to the right discerning of Divine Truth than the Subtile Head: And from this Principle he thus expresseth himself in some of his Diatriba, That we should be more willing to take a Sense from Scripture than bring one to it. Agreeable to which is that Maxime of his, worthy to be written in letters of Gold, (it was mentioned once before, but cannot be too often inculcated) that Maxime which (he said) was deeply impress'd upon his own Soul, That rashly to be the Author of a false Interpretation of Scripture, is to take Gods name in vain in an high degree. How then shall they escape, and where shall they appear, who, being resolved to walk after their own lusts, pervert and distort the Scriptures (as of old the * Prophets complain'd of some that did violence to the Law) and wrest them to their own destruction, which were designed by God to make men wise unto Salvation?

* 2 Ep. 3.
* 1 Kings 4.
Pal. 51.

There are others that are prejudic'd through a servile regard to those Idola fori, as the forenamed Lord styles Popular Opinions and Vulgar Perswasions, the Opinions of the Many, or of such a Party among the Many whose Persons first, and consequently their Perswasions, they have in admiration; (for generally these two go together, They that do θαυμάζον πρόσωπα (in S. Jude's language,) go on also θαυμάζον δόγματα, the respecting of Persons introducing also the respecting of Opinions:) And herein they shew themselves a kind of Servum pecus, receiving for Doctrines the Traditions or Customary Notions of such men without any serious consideration; (which yet is no other than a blind, implicit, stupid and irrational respect to persons and Opinions, as not being founded upon Knowledge and Judgment:) But withall they do hereby oftentimes design to serve their own ends by this προσωποληψία, all this being done (as S. Jude observes) ωφελείας χάριν for advantage sake. And against such Prejudices as these what could better secure the Author than his εὐλαχυνὲς διάνοια, (to use S. * Peter's expression) his clear and sincere Mind, his רחב לב * and רוח נריכה ||, his Largeness of Heart, his Vast Understanding, his Free and Ingenuous Spirit, those Intellectual and Moral Endowments of his, whereof I have already given a brief account in the Second Head of Advertisements?

3. As free he was from all Self-seeking, Flattery and covetous Ambition, as from Partiality and Prejudice: each of which has a very inauspicious influence upon any growth in Knowledge and Understanding. Accordingly he does more than once observe in his Epistles, That Mundus amat decipi magis quam doceri: and that by constant observation he had found, That no man loved, any Speculations but such as he thought would advance his profitable Ends, or advantage his Side and Faction. But for his own part, he thus opens his heart in one of his Epistles to a Friend, and plainly professeth, That

The General Preface.

That he had not made the Bent of the Times the Rule of his Opinion. For, being free from any aspiring after Applause, Wealth and Honour, and from * seeking Great things for himself, he was consequently secured from Flattery and Temporizing, the usual artifice of the || οἱ βυλόμενοι πλεῖν, those that will be rich, that are resolved to make it their chief design and business to be great and wealthy in the world, their heart is wholly upon it, they are dead to the World to come, and relish not the things above, and are alive only to this present world, being as eagerly intent and active about earthly things, as if their portion were to be only in this life. * Jer. 45.
|| 1 Tim. 6. 9.

But such was the excellency of his spirit, that he could not but abhor all Servile obsequiousness whatsoever; as accounting it a certain argument of a Poorness of spirit either to flatter, or to invite and receive Flatteries; and withal considering that if those of Power and high degree were men of inward worth and excellent spirits, they would shew themselves such in their valuing him not the less, but rather more, for his not applying himself to those ignoble arts and course policies proper to Parasites and ambitious men, who speak not their own words nor seem to think their own thoughts, but wholly enslave themselves to the thoughts and words, the lusts and humors of those by whom ( for this pretended doing honour to them ) they seek to be advantaged. Besides, he might well think that he should rather undervalue and lessen them, if he suppos'd they would regard him the more for those or the like Instances of an officious flattery: as if they were not able to discern that Frankness and Openness of Spirit and Conversation, Singleness of Heart and a Cordial readiness to serve others in love * out of a pure heart, is truly Christian, Generous and Manly; and, on the contrary, that Flattery and Fawning is Dog-like, Base and Mercenary, and lasts not long: for though Parasites pretend to serve their Masters with great devotion, ( a devotion so great, as if they thought themselves rather their Creatures than God's ) yet in truth || δουλεύουσιν τῇ ἑαυτῶν κοιλίᾳ, they rather serve their own belly; and when their Masters cease to be in a capacity of serving them, these men also cease to regard them, and value them no more than an useless Tool, ( or to use the Prophet's expression ) a broken Vessel, wherein there is no pleasure. * 1 Pet. 1. 22.
καθαρὴς καρδίας ἀγαπᾶ-τε ἑαυτοὺς.
|| Rom. 16.

Other particulars might be added, but these may suffice to shew how Free he was from that which is apt to tempt men to judge amiss: For it appears from the nature of the things themselves, that Partiality, Prejudice, Pride and Passion, Self-love, Love of the World, Flattery and Covetous Ambition do importunately sollicit men to make a false judgment, corrupt their Affections, wrong their Understandings, enfeeble their Faculties, unhappily dwarf their growth in useful Learning, and keep them back from such an excellent improvement in Knowledge, especially Divine Knowledge, as otherwise they might attain. And therefore had not Mr. Mede been free from the power of these Lusts, he could never have perform'd so well as he hath done in any of his Tracts or Discourses, especially upon the more abstruse and mysterious passages of H. Scripture. Those therefore that are not of such a free and enlarged spirit, but are fondly addicted either to themselves or Parties, and are enslaved to Honour, Wealth and particular narrow Interests, and are under the power of Pride & Passion, serving divers Lusts and Pleasures, they must needs be less excellent, less improved in their studies,

The General Preface.

• Psal. 51. less successful in their Intellectual adventures than otherwise they might have been, had they been * established with a Free spirit. Nor had some Authors of great reading and fame for Learning ever fallen into such mistakes, but their Writings had been freer from imperfections, and a greater respect they had secured to their Memories, had they been less Passionate, less Envious, Proud and Self-conceited, more Free and unbiassed, more Humble and Modest, as also more faithful to that excellent Rule of S. Paul, * Μὴ ὑπερφρονεῖν παρ' ὃ δέει φρονεῖν, ἀλλὰ φρονεῖν εἰς τὸ σωφρονεῖν.

• Rom. 12. 3.

This is somewhat of that great deal more which might be observed of the Author's Largeness and Freedom of spirit; which yet in him was not accompanied with any unbecoming reflexions upon others, (as if he design'd to lessen the due esteem of what was laudable in their performances) much less with any irreverence and opposition to the established Articles of Religion, and prejudice to the Peace of the Church or State; but on the contrary was an innocent, ingenuous, peaceable Freedom of enquiring into such Theories only as do not at all clash with the Doctrine established, and was ever attended with a sweet Modesty, a singular Sedateness and Sobriety of spirit, and a due regard to Authority. And whosoever would read the Author with most profit and judgment, must read him also with a free, unpassionate and unprejudiced spirit: That Saying, Omnis Liber eo spiritu legi debet, quo scriptus est, is true as well of every useful Book as of the Divinely-inspired Books of Holy Scripture.

Thus much of the Fourth Help or Instrument of Knowledge. I shall mention but one particular more, but it is a very weighty and important one, of singular use and absolute necessity for the gaining the Best Knowledge; wherein I might be as large as in the foregoing, but because I would hasten to conclude the Preface, I shall dispatch it in fewer lines.

V. The Fifth and Last Means whereby the Author arrived at such an Eminency of Knowledge was, His faithful endeavour after such a Purity of Soul as is requisite to fit it for the fuller and clearer discerning of Divine Mysteries.

The necessity of such a Purity of Heart and Life in order to this End appears by several express places of Scripture: as where it is said, The Secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, Psalm 25. The Fear of the Lord is the beginning of Wisdom, and יראת ה' רעת קדש the knowledge of the holy ones is Understanding, Prov. 9. (their way of knowing is Knowledge and Understanding indeed) and again, The pure in heart shall see God, (Matth. 5.) But none of the wicked shall understand, (says the Angel to Daniel concerning the Mysteries mentioned in Chap. 12.) And agreeable to these and many such passages of H. Scripture is that in the Book of Wisdom, chap. 1. Into a malicious Soul Wisdom shall not enter, nor dwell in the Body that is subject unto sin.

The same Truth is plainly acknowledged by the Best and more Divine Philosophers; and accordingly they frequently discourse of their Ἀρεταὶ καθαρτικαὶ Purgative Vertues as necessary to prepare the Soul for the knowledge of the most Excellent and Highest Truths, (as the Mystical or Contemplative Divines vines speaking of the way to Divine knowledge place the Via Purgativa before the Via Illuminativa : ) and it is a known Maxime of Plato in his Phædo, Μὴ καθαροὶ καθαροὶ ἐφάπτεσθαι μὴ ὁ δευτέρου, implying that Impure Souls are not admitted to any inward converse with God most Pure and Holy. That Wickedness is destructive of Principles, is also Aristotle's observation, Ἡ κακία φθαρτικὴ ἀρχὴν. Immorality or a Vicious life unfits men for the noblest Speculations, so that they can neither know Divine nor Moral Truths * καθὼς δεῖ γινώσκειν as they ought to know, * 1 Cor. 8. and as they might have known, had they had a true resentment of Morality, and an inward esteem of the * ὅσα δίκαια, ὅσα ἀγνά, ὅσα περὶ φιλή, ὅσα εὐφημα, * Phil. 4. the things that are just, pure, and lovely, and of good report. And though such men may sometimes hit upon some Philosophical Notions; yet even in the discovering the Mysteries of Nature they had done far better, and had excell'd themselves, had they been more purged from brutish Sensuality and all filthiness of flesh and spirit. I will only add this, That for a most clear and undeniable proof of this Assertion, [ That Morality and a Good life affords the greatest advantages to a more excellent knowledge of not only Divine, but Philosophical Truths ] we have in this Age the unparallel'd Works of some eminently-learned and nobly-accomplish'd Writers, who really are Virtuosi according to the ancient Latine importance of the word, and not merely in the Italian sense, which applies it only to the Wits and such as are any way Ingenious, be they or be they not morally Vertuous.

The General Preface.

But that which I chiefly intended under this last Particular was, to acquaint the Reader how deeply sensible Mr. Mede was of the indispensable necessity of a Purified Mind and Holy Life in order to the fuller and clearer discerning of Divine Mysteries. This was his firm belief, and it obliged him to endeavours worthy of it. To which purpose I shall here produce a very observable passage out of a Letter of his to an ancient Friend in Lincolnshire, who having received, and with great satisfaction read, some Papers from Mr. Mede containing his first Essays upon part of the Apocalyps, and thereupon writing to him with all serious importunity, That he would earnestly pray for and endeavour after a great measure of Holiness, to the mortification of Sin more and more, that thereby he might be prepared to receive a greater measure of Divine Illumination, and be as a Vessel of honour chosen by God to bear and convey his Truth to others, with much more of the like import, concluding with this request, You see how bold I am with you, but let love bury that Exorbitancy, &c. To this his Christian advice Mr. Mede return'd this excellent Answer.

Sir, I thank you heartily for your good Admonitions, and am so far from interpreting your Love Exorbitancy, that I confess my self to have much need of this and more; and therefore desire you to second this your Love with Prayer to God for me, that he would vouchsafe me that his Sanctifying Spirit, and that measure of Grace which may make me capable of such things as he shall be pleased to reveal, and hath in some sort (praised be his Name) already revealed unto me; in the contemplation whereof I find more true Contentment than the greatest Dignities, which Ambition so hunteth after, could ever have afforded me. I have considered what S. Paul saith*, The Natural and Carnal man is altogether * 1 Cor. 2. incapable of the things of God's Spirit, neither can he know them, &c. and what our Saviour saith*, If any man will do his Father's will, he shall (then) know of the doctrine whether it be of God: and I give thanks to Almighty God, * Jo. 7. who

The General Preface.

who hath made the Light of these his wonderful Mysteries to kindle that Warmth in my Heart, which I felt not till I began to see them, and which have made me that which they found me not -----

* The rest of the Letter did not need to be published, it treating either of private business, or of what he has in other Letters or Tracts more fully spoken of.

This passage out of Mr. Mede's * original Letter I thought very worthy to be made publick and inserted here upon so fit an occasion, both for that excellent and genuine relish of an humble and serious Piety in every line thereof, as also because it is an illustrious Attestation to the forementioned Truth, That an Holy Heart and Life is a necessary Qualification to the right discerning of Divine Mysteries; agreeable whereunto is that in the Greek Version of Prov. 1. 7. (which yet is rather a Paraphrase than a bare Translation, there being more in the Greek than in the Original Hebrew) Εὐσέβεια εἰς Θεὸν ἀρχὴ αἰδότησεω.

* Matth. 13.

AND now I have passed over the Three long Stages of this Preface. In the last Head of Advertisements I have acquainted the Reader by what Methods and Helps the Author arrived at so great a measure of skill in the Scripture, particularly in the more abstruse and mysterious parts thereof. And thus may others also attain to a considerable Knowledge, and purchase this goodly Pearl, this Treasure hid in the field of Prophetical Scriptures, if they are willing to be at the same cost and bid to the worth of it, and not ignorantly nor sordidly undervalue it: For Wisdom, and particularly this kind of Wisdom and Knowledge, is not to be had at a cheaper rate; it is * πολύτιμον μαργαρίτης a Pearl of great price, and worthy of all that we have to bestow, to purchase it. They that look as little into the Apocalyps as some do into the Apocrypha, and mind the Book of Daniel no more than they do the Apocryphal Story of Bell and the Dragon, and therefore exercise not their good parts nor bestow that serious diligence about the δυσανόητα in Scripture as they use to do about other kind of difficulties, whether in Philosophy or other parts of Learning, it's no wonder they complain the Jewel is too dear, when they have no mind to give the full price for it; and that all Labour after such knowledge is either excessively hard or useless, whenas yet through their delicateness and love of their own ease, or for some other reason, they never made any due trial. But in other things Difficulty is no argument, it rather whets and animates * Δυσανόητα ἔργα.

* Hof. 8. 12.

men of brave spirits: and that all * Excellent things are hard, is so confess'd a Truth, that it has pass'd into a vulgar Proverb. The first and least therefore that is to be done by such as are of another spirit, and are minded to search these as well as the other Scriptures, is by a frequent attentive reading of the Prophetical Visions to fix the main passages thereof in their minds: (otherwise both the style and matter, the great things of the Prophets (as Hosea speaks of the רבי תורה * the great things of the Law) will be always counted as a strange thing.) This being done, they must (if they would succeed in their search) apply themselves to those Five Means and Instruments of Knowledge, as Mr. Mede did, and prosper'd, and by his Writings hath lessen'd the difficulty of these Studies, and made the way plainer for others than he found it for himself. And as the study of the Prophetick Scriptures would by an heedful attending to those Five Directions and Helps prove a succesful labour, and therefore far from being excessively hard or incumbered with invincible difficulties; so would it likewise be far from vain and useless: for these Scriptures, as well as the other, being

The General Preface.

ing written for our learning and use, ( as I have briefly and ( I think ) clearly proved in this Preface under the Second Head of Advertisements, ) there would accrue to us this peculiar Advantage, ( besides many others ) That by a right understanding of the genuine meaning of these Prophetick Visions, we should be the better enabled to vindicate the Prophecies from those corrupt Glosses which unlearned and unstable Souls ( ill-willers also to the stability and peace of Christian States and Kingdoms ) would force upon them, perverting these Scriptures for their own Self-ends to the favouring of their unquiet humors and unpeaceable practices, which being rightly understood are the grand Interest and Concernment of Christendome, and certainly make for the Support and Encouragement of the Reformed part thereof, of which through God's mercy we are Members.

In the Second sort of Advertisements I have observed some few things of the Author and his Writings, and shall not need here to superadd any thing to court the Reader to a due esteem of them; His own works will praise him ( I say not, in the Gates, as the phrase is Prov. 31. ult. but ) in the private Closets and quiet Retirements of the studious enquirers after Truth, if read there with serious attention ( which is most necessary in the perusing of his Labours upon the Prophetical Scriptures ) and with a mind as free from prejudice as from distractions. It is not to be doubted but that some parts of these Writings may generally please and ( as the Author of the Book of * Wisdom observes of Manna ) * Chap. 16. agree to every taste; nor is it unlikely but that some other parts, though highly pleasing to some, may be less grateful to others of a different persuasion, as Manna itself was loathsome to some murmuring Israelites. But for the better disposing of them to what is fair and ingenuous, this may be fit to be added, That the Author in his life-time did not affect any * dominion over the faith of * 2 Cor. 1. others, ( as if he were Infallible ) nor was he ambitious after his death to be Idoliz'd; but this was clearly his disposition, ( as he expresseth himself in a * Letter * See Epist. 51. to Dr. T. ) not to be affected how much or how little others differ'd from him; and this disposition ( he said ) did so much the more increase in him as he took the liberty to examine either his own or other mens persuasions: so desirous he was that the Apostle's Rule should in this case prevail, Try all things, hold fast that which is good. And therefore such men would shew themselves very ill-natur'd and ill-bred as well as indiscreet, and unmindful of the Fallibility of Humane nature, as also unacquainted with ingenuous Learning, ( of which the old Verse is most true, if they should unwisely disvalue and peevishly reject the whole for some passages not agreeing to their particular Sentiments; or prove so rigid and tenacious, as not to afford that Candor and Charity which is but a just respect, as well easie, as fit to be paid to the Labours of Worthy men highly meriting de Republica literaria. And their Rudeness and Incivility would be the greater, because Mr. Mede doth propound his sense not with any either magisterial or provoking language, but with such modesty, calmness and sobriety, as may deserve rather a fair reception than any churlish and unkind usage in the world.

Emollit mores, nec finit esse feros )

In

---

The General Preface.

---

In the First Head of Advertisements I have given the Reader ( for his fuller satisfaction ) some account of those long and toilsome labours which I could not think too hard and grievous to undergo both for the honour of the Author's memory and the Reader's greater benefit ; chusing ( though at an humble distance ) to follow that great Labourer in God's Vineyard, Blessed S. Paul, who was * ἐν κόπῳ καὶ μόχθῳ, ἐν ψύχει, ἐν ἀγρυπνίαις πολλάκις, ἐν νηθείαις πολλάκις, rather than * to do this work of the Lord negligently. May the Reader with ease and delight, with profit and advantage peruse these Writings thus prepared for him with a diligence and industry not very ordinary nor over-easie, and therefore not over-hasty, and yet not more leisurely or slow than the labour and weightiness of the undertaking ( together with the urgency of other intercurrent cares ) did exact.

* Isa. 40. HE who is the Father of mercies and the God of all grace, that * giveth power to the faint, and reneweth their strength who wait upon him, who worketh both to will and to do, and to continue patiently in so doing unto the end ; to his Name alone ( not unto me, not unto me ) be the Glory and Praise for his Mercy and for his Power sake ----- The same Father of lights, who * *commanded the light to shine out of darkness, shine into our Hearts, * unveil our Eyes, that we may behold wondrous things out of his Law ;* purifie our Souls from Prejudice and Passion, from every false Principle and corrupt Affection, that we may * receive the love of the Truth, and know the Mysteries of the Kingdom of God ; that being * *filled with all wisdom and spiritual understanding, we may walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing : To whom be * Blessing and Glory, and Wisdom, and Thanksgiving, and Honour and Power, for ever and ever. Amen.*

* 2 Cor. 4.
* Psal. 119.
* 2 Thess. 2.
* Col. 1.
* Apocal. 7.

J. W.

---

The

---

---

The Additional Pieces First published by the Reverend and Learned Dr. WORTHINGTON.

---

IN Book I. Discourse 49, 50, 51, 53.

In Book II. His Concio ad Clerum, pag. 398.

In Book III. Among his Remains upon the Apocalyps, Chap. 4. pag. 589. Chap. 8. pag. 594.

In Book IV. Epist. 34, 41, 51, 56, 66, 67, 68, 69, 71, 73, 75, 85. many of them in answer to some Letters of enquiry from Learned men, which for the fuller understanding of the Author's Answers are also published; as that large Letter from Lud. de Dieu, viz. Epist. 48. and those from others, Epist. 55, 57, 59, 62, 65, 70, 72. together with a large Extract of Mr. Potter's Letter about the Number 666.

In Book V. Those Tracts that make Chap. 4. Chap. 7. Chap. 10. Chap. 12. In all XXXII.

---

Discourses, Tracts, Epistles, enlarged out of the Author's Manuscripts, with several Additions.

---

IN Book I. Discourse 11, 31, 32, 33.

In Book II. The Christian Sacrifice, and Disc. upon Ezra 6. 10. pag. 379.

In Book III. In Comment. Apocalyps. are several marginal Notes added by the Author since the first Edition. In the Remains upon the Apocal. Chap. 3. Chap. 6. Chap. 9. Paraphrase on S. Peter, 2 Ep. Chap. 3.

In Book IV. Epist. 43, 54, 58. whereof almost all in the first and last pages is added, Epist. 61. besides several other Epistles with large additions.

In Book V. Chap. 11. Besides the smaller additions of some Words or a few lines in several other parts of these Volumes, too many to be here particularly mentioned.

---

The Discourses, Tracts, or Epistles, whereof there wanted the Original Manuscript to examine them by, are in Book I. Discourse 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 47, 48, 49. In Book IV. Epist. 4, 6, 10, 12, 29, 34, 93, 97.

---

THE LIFE

Of the Reverend and most Learned

Joseph Mede, B.D.

1.  HATH been the practice of the best Historians, sometimes in short Characters and sometimes in larger Descriptions, to represent the Nature, Sayings and Manners of those Persons whose Actions have rendred them Illustrious whether in War or Peace. And it is a Custom very commendable; for by this means a just Right is perform'd to the Glory of their Memories, their Exemplary Vertues are preserv'd in the world by Monuments w<sup>ch</sup> Time cannot demolish, and Ingenuous Readers are highly gratified, who are naturally desirous to know as much as they can of those of whom they have heard any thing which is extraordinary.

2. The same Reason hath made it a Custom to write the Lives of Authors eminent for their Learning, and to annex them to their Works. And indeed such Historical Pictures seem no where plac'd more fitly than in the Beginnings of those Books which were design'd by their excellent Authors to promote true Religion and Piety in the world: Men being no less prepar'd for a chearful reception of Divine Truth, when they see it presented by a Worthy person, than they are apt to give an easie credit to good News, when they are perswaded of the Integrity of him that brings it.

We have therefore attempted to give a Faithful, though Imperfect, Pourtrait of this Excellent Person, the Author of the ensuing Discourses; that the Reader may know what he was who in so high a degree obliged not only the Age wherein he lived, but all succeeding Generations, by his excellent Studies and exemplary Life. The History whereof is briefly as follows.

3. JOSEPH MEDE was born in October 1586. of Parents of honest rank, at * Berden in Essex, and related (as the learned Mr. Alsop did particularly remark in his Funeral Sermon) to the Family of Sir John Mede of Loftus-Hall in the same County, who did much please himself in so worthy a Kinsman, to whom also (when Fellow of Christ's Colledge) he sent his eldest Son to be his Pupil; accounting it a singular felicity to have him under the care and conduct of so worthy and accomplish'd a Tutor.

* A Country-town not far from Bishops-Stortford.

4. When he was about Ten years old, both he and his Father fell sick at the same time of the Small pox: to the Father it proved mortal, to the Son very hazardous: But Almighty God, who designed him for a great Blessing to the world, delivered him then out of that, and afterwards out of other Dangers; of which merciful Preservations he had by him his thankful Memorials, the better to excite himself to a due celebration of the Divine Goodness.

His Mother afterward married one Mr. Gower of Nasing in Essex, by whom he was sent to School first to Hodsdon, and after that to Wethersfield in Essex. In which time going to London upon some occasion, he bought Bellarmine's Hebrew Grammar. His Master, having no skill in that Language, told him it was not a Book fit for him; but he, being of the same generous temper with Demonax, who (as Lucian reports) was ὁπ' οἰκείας πρὸς τὰ καλὰ ὀρμῆς καὶ ἐμψύχῃ πρὸς φιλοσοφίαν ἔρωτῳ. ἐκ παιδῶν οὐδὲς κενήνῃ, would not be discouraged from the perusal of it; but setting upon it industriously, attain'd no small skill in the Hebrew Tongue before he left the School: by these fair Blossoms giving an early assurance to his Friends of those excellent Fruits which he afterward brought forth being planted in a very fertile Soil, and one of the most delightful Seats of the Muses, in the University.

5. His Friends, being encouraged by the pregnancy of his Parts, his assiduous Industry and Proficiency in Learning, (the best grounds of Hope) sent him, in the year 1602, to Christ's Colledge in Cambridge, where he was admitted Pupil to Mr. Daniel Rogers, Fellow of that Colledge. When he had been there three years, Mr. Rogers leaving the Colledge, Mr. William Addison became his Tutor, to whose Pupils, after he was Bachelour of Arts, he us'd to read, as afterward, when he was Master of Arts, he moderated at Dis's, upon the desire of his Tutor, one of the then Proctors of the University.

6. The Improvements which he made in a short time by his industrious Wit were so conspicuous, that they drew upon him the eyes not only of his own Colledge, but of the whole University; which could not but be the more observable in him, because he wanted that felicity of Utterance which useth to set off slight parts, and had so great an Hesitation in his speech as rendred his expression painful to himself and less pleasing to others. Which made him decline (as much as he might) all publick Disputations and other Exercises, as not to be perform'd by him without great difficulty; his Labour in them (as he was wont to tell his familiars) being double to that of others, in regard he was put to study not for matter only, but for words; not to express his mind, (for such words, the matter being excogitated, do not unwillingly follow, and even offer themselves,) but for words that he could utter; yea and to take care to dispose them too in that order, that the contexture might suit with his Ability. Wherein yet he in time became a rare Example, how much a discreet observation of such an Imperfection can work toward the cure of it. For by an heedful inspection into the nature of his defect, what words he most stuck at, either single or in conjuncture, and at what times he was more or less free, he attain'd so great a mastery over that Infirmary, that he was able to deliver a whole Sermon without any considerable Hesitation.

7. That also of his own relation is here not unworthy the remembring, That not long after his entrance into Philosophical studies he was for some time disquieted with scepticism, that troublesome and restless disease of the Pyrrhonian School of old. For lighting upon a Book in a neighbour-Scholars Chamber, (whether it were Sextus Empiricus, or some other upon the same Subject, is not now remembred) he began upon the perusal of it to move strange Questions to himself, and even to doubt whether the τὸ Πᾶν, the whole Frame of things, as it appears to us, were any more than a mere Phantasm or Imagination. The Improvement of this Conceit (as he would profess) rendred all things so unpleasant to him, that his Life became uncomfortable. He was then but young, and therefore the more capable of being abus'd by those perplex'd Notions by which Pyrrho had industriously studied to represent the Habitat-ion of Truth as inaccessible: But by the mercy of God he quickly made his way out of these troublesome Labyrinths, and gave an early proof that he was design'd for profound Contemplations, by falling so soon upon the consideration of subjects so subtil and curious.

* Anno 1610.

8. By that time he had taken the Degree of * Master of Arts, he had made so happy a progress through all kind of Academical studies, that it was manifest to all that that Title was not (as with too many it is) any false Inscription: He was justly so styled, and was universally esteem'd as one who did well understand all those Arts which make up the accomplishment of a Scholar. He was an acute Logician, an accurate Philosopher, a skilful Mathematician, an excellent Anatomist, (being usually sent for when they had any Anatomy in Cains Colledge) a great Philologer, a master of many Languages, and a good proficient in the studies of History and Chronology, of which we shall give a more particular account in the following part of this short History. We mention these things not only to shew his indefatigable Diligence, but also to declare how great Perfections may be attain'd by an assiduous Industry, and withal to manifest the unreasonableness of that complaint, Ars longa, Vita brevis; by which many think themselves sufficiently excus'd who (as Seneca says) spend most of their life aut nihil, aut aliud, aut malè agendo.

9. His

9. His first shewing himself abroad was by an Address he made to that Great Patron and Example of Learning, Dr. Andrews, ( then L. Bishop of Ely, afterward of Winchester ) in a Latin Tract De Sanctitate Relativa, &c. A piece of that commendable Learning, that, had it been published when it was first written, would have discovered the Author's pregnant Parts, and rais'd his just Estimation in the world. And though himself in his latter time was pleas'd to censure it as favouring too much of his infancy in Divinity, and first thoughts, and affectation of style, ( they were his very words to an intimate friend of his soliciting him to publish it ) and that upon this score ( as likewise because he had in his elder days and upon mature deliberation published in * another Treatise of his ( besides what he had delivered in publick in his || Concio ad Clerum ) the Summe and substance of it with farther improvements of that Notion ) he would not permit the forementioned Tract to see the light; yet this early Specimen of his Theological studies gain'd the approbation of so great a Judgment as his was to whom it was presented, insomuch that shortly after, he having need of the King's favour concerning his Election to a Fellowship, that worthy Bishop stood his firm friend, and not only maintain'd his Right then, but afterward desired him for his Household-Chaplain: Which place notwithstanding he civilly refused, as valuing the liberty of his Studies above any hopes of Preferment, and esteeming that freedom which he enjoy'd in his Cell ( as he us'd chearfully to term it ) as the Haven of all his wishes.

* Upon 1 Cor.
11.22.
|| Upon Levit.
19.30. San- ctuarium me-
um vobis amini.

10. And indeed these thoughts had possess'd him betimes: For when he was a School-boy, he was sent to by his Uncle, Mr. Richard Mede a Merchant, who being at that time without children, offer'd to adopt him for his Son if he would live with him: He accepted not the profer, but shew'd betimes that no worldly allurements were sufficient to entice him from his studies. And here it may not be amiss to observe a parallel memorial in the * Life of his honoured friend Dr. Jackson. As they both were eminent for their Sweetness of disposition and carriage, their piercing Wit and profound Judgment, their unweariedly-industrious pursuit after such Notions as were out of the vulgar roade of Studies; particularly their Genius prompted them to enquire into the more Abstruse and Mysterious parts of H. Scripture: so they agree'd in this also, that they were in their youth tried with the like Temptations; for agreeably to what was observed of Mr. Mede, was Dr. Jackson solicited by his friends at Newcastle to a Merchant's life, as being likely to be a more Gainful course than a Bookish life in a Colledge-retirement. Had they listen'd to such charming suggestions, what gainers soever they might have been by the bargain, to be sure the World had lost those Treasures of Wisdom and Learning which ( by the publishing of their Learned Labours ) it has been happily enrich'd with. But both of them ( surely not without a secret guidance and assistance from Heaven ) resisted even in those their younger days any attempt to allure them from a Studious life, and chose rather the humble way, to wrap up themselves in a Gown, as the pious and elegant both Poet and Orator, Mr. G. Herbert, did phrase it, and practis'd accordingly. The All-wise God intended them for better employments and other kind of Traffick than their Friends designed: Through his blessing they traded prosperously in the best Commodities; ( for, according to that Arabick Proverb, Ditissima sunt divitie Intellectus ) and ( which is a rare way of growing rich ) they improv'd their Stock by their free communicating to others, both of them being worthily honoured for their very communicative disposition. In short, to Mr. Mede ( as likewise to Dr. Jackson ) * the Merchandise of Wisdom was better than the Merchandise of Silver, and the gain thereof than fine Gold: He chose the more solitary way of Knowledge, rather than the so-much-beaten and frequented way of Wealth, and made as much hast in his Study to become a more than ordinary knowing and learned man, as others abroad in the World do to be rich even to abundance.

* See Dr. Jackson's Life written by E.
V. and his Ep.
Dedicat. before his 1. Book upon the Creat.

* Prov. 3.

11. Wherefore Divine Providence being favourable to his design, that he might have a fair opportunity to perfect his own Accomplishments, and be the better enabled to promote the good of others, and eminently approve himself the Servant of CHRIST, he was chosen Fellow of that Colledge upon which the Name of CHRIST is called, to whose Service he had seriously devoted his best studies and endeavours. The Fellowship into which he was elected was that of K. Edward's foundation, and therein he was Successor to Mr. Hugh Broughton and Mr. Dillingham, both of them famous for Hebrew learning; the first abroad, the other at home, being one of those appointed by Royal Authority to translate the Bible. This place was supernumerary to the Institution of the Foundress, the Lady Margaret; a Society of Divines she intended it, and by a Master and twelve Fellows alluded to Christ and his Colledge of Apostles: Which Conceit (as somethought) was intentionally spoil'd by the addition of that supernumerary Fellowship, but however gave occasion of an ill-placed jest against Mr. Mede at his Election; one opposite to his admission venting this piece of wit without either civility or judgment, We are twelve of the Foundation, and there (said he, pointing to Mr. Mede) sits the odd Fellow. Which Conceit could have no true sense as touching the quality and character of Mr. Mede, unless by odd had been meant singular, and that for Piety and Learning; which Eminencies could not make him less eligible according to Statute.

12. Being thus chosen Fellow of the Colledge, he was not long after made Reader of the Greek Lecture of Sir Walter Mildmay's foundation, and held it all his lifetime: which rendred that Tongue, as also several others, very familiar to him. For his constant Readings upon Homer did not only make him perfect in that Author, but he being a diligent Collator of the Greek with the Hebrew, Chaldee and Syriack, acquainted himself familiarly with the Idiotisms of all those Languages at once. He had besides made a Collection of such Greek, Latine and English words as he had observed to have a near sense and like sound with the Hebrew; as we have been informed by some that saw in his study a Book of his in Quarto, containing the Hebrew Radices, &c. with Greek, Latine and English words derived from many of them: By which means as he made the Language more familiar to him, so he consulted the pleasure and advantage of his Friends; being from this store furnish'd with what might render his converse more acceptable to them in whose contentment he had a true satisfaction.

13. He preserv'd his knowledge in Academick Learning by the private Lectures which he read to his Pupils, to whom he was an able and faithful Guide. For, being a Fellow of a Colledge, he esteem'd it a part of his Duty to further the Education of young Scholars; which made him undertake the careful charge of a Tutor: and this he managed with great Prudence and equal Diligence. After he had by daily Lectures well grounded his Pupils in Humanity, Logick and Philosophy, and by frequent converse understood to what particular Studies their Parts might be most profitably applied, he gave them his Advice accordingly: And when they were able to go alone, he chose rather to set every one his daily Task, than constantly to confine himself and them to precise hours for Lectures. In the Evening they all came to his Chamber to satisfy him that they had perform'd the Task he had set them. The first question which he us'd then to propound to every one in his order was, Quid dubitas? What Doubts have you met in your studies to day? (For he supposed that To doubt nothing and To understand nothing were verifiable alike.) Their Doubts being propounded, he resolv'd their Quere's, and so set them upon clear ground to proceed more distinctly: And then having by Prayer commended them and their studies to God's protection and blessing, he dismiss'd them to their lodgings. Thus carefully did he discharge the Trust of a Tutor, though he well knew and was us'd to say That the Office of training up young Scholars in the University proved oftentimes but a thankless business. In short, He was not for a soft and easie, self-pleasing course of life; but was most willing to spend himself in a laborious endeavouring the best improvement (not of himself only, but) of others, those especially committed to his care. And here we might take occasion to recount several of his Pupils upon whom his excellent Instructions were not bestow'd in vain: Some of them Persons of Honour and Eminency in the State, Honourable as well for the noble Accomplishments of their Minds and their exemplary Vertues, as for the height of their Descent and Parentage: others of great Merits and Esteem in the Church, both for their personal Endowments, and for their adorning their holy Function by an agreeable Conversation. But we must respicere titulum, and remember that our present business is to write Mr. Mede's Life and what concerns his Story, rather than the Characters of others, though otherwise אנשי השם * men of renown and || the Glory of their times.

* Gen. 6.
|| Ecclus. 44.

14. To return therefore to our Author: He did so entirely devote himself to the study of all excellent Knowledge, that he made even the time which he spent in his his Recreation serviceable to his design. He allow'd himself little or no Exercise but Walking; and oftentimes, when he and others were walking in the Fields or in the Colledge-Garden, he would take occasion to speak of the Beauty, Signatures, useful Vertues and Properties of the Plants then in view: For he was a curious Florist, an accurate Herbalist, thoroughly vers'd in the Book of Nature, not unseen in any kind of ingenuous Knowledges, such especially as were both for delight and use. The chief delight which he took in company was to discourse with Learned friends; particularly for several years he set apart some of his hours to spend them in the conversation of his worthy Friend Mr. William Chappell, (afterward Provost of Trinity Colledge near Dublin in Ireland, and L. Bishop of Cork and Ross) who was justly esteem'd a rich Magazine of Rational Learning, and who again did as highly value the interest he had in Mr. Mede and the singular advantage of his Converse. Accordingly when he was to leave the Colledge and prepare for Ireland, he made it his particular request to Mr. Mede, that he would favour him with his Papers, and permit the transcribing of them for his private use. So high, and yet so just, an esteem had he for those Papers richly stored with unvulgar, but not unuseful, Notions. Mr. Mede, who was made up of love and kindness, did readily gratifie him herein, as he did also afterwards, when he wrote to him from Ireland for more of his Papers, desiring that some that had been his Pupils might transcribe what he would please farther to impart to him, who was one that did highly prize all that came from his deliberate pen: They were the very words of his Letter.

15. In his retirement to his private Studies he employ'd himself principally in a curious enquiry into the most abstruse parts of Learning, and endeavour'd for the knowledge of those things which were remote from the vulgar track.

Among other things he spent no small pains (in his younger years) in sounding the depths of Astrology, and much paper he blotted in calculating the Nativities of his near Relations and Fellow-students, having to this Art (as he would say) above all other Studies a natural propension: Yet did not that propension so far sway his Judgment, as not to discover the vanity and weakness of those grounds upon which the Professors of that pretended Art very often build their too confident Predictions. That which he thought himself to have found by all his search was only this, That the Celestial Luminaries having an unquestionable Influence upon all sublunary Bodies, in the like position of the Heavens, may reasonably be thought to have a similitude in their Operation, and thereby to cause a Sympathy in things produced under like Constellations, and an Antipathy under different. But this not extending farther than a Natural inclination, and being in men alterable by Custom, Education and infinite external impediments, he judg'd it not (without extream vanity) to be presumed upon as any infallible ground of Prediction of future actions; especially in such things wherein men, acting out of choice, run counter many times to their Natural inclinations. But to give the Reader his positive judgment (as near as we can) in his own most apposite and fit words, thus he was wont in familiar discourse to determine touching the Necessity and Contingency of these Subordinate Causes: That the εὐταξία Cœli does beget in man εὐταξίαν Temperamenti, and this εὐταξία Temperamenti begets εὐσφύαν Ingenii, in the way of direct and natural subordination: But that here the Chain is broken off; because εὐσφύα Ingenii does beget or produce εὐπεραξίαν Actionis in man only contingently and without any necessity. And thus è contrà, That δυσταξία Cœli does beget δυσταξίαν Temperamenti, and the δυσταξία Temperamenti begets δυσσφύαν Ingenii; This naturally as before: But that this δυσσφύα Ingenii should beget δυσπεραξίαν Actionis, this is from no necessity, because it is in mans power and liberty, who is naturally ill-disposed, yet through the improvements of Art, and especially by the Grace of God, to become good, or better, as the Divine Goodness shall minister opportunity. Which is as much as can be said in so few words, and might determine the question to all judicious and knowing men, concerning the power of the Stars and those Celestial Influences into and upon this inferior world; where their Operations are genuine and natural and properly efficient, and where they have their stint and their Nè plus ultra, nothing at all to do, unless by a remote disposition, which is properly no Cause at all. This is enough also to vindicate Man, born to Liberty and to command the Stars, from that supposed vassalage whereunto the juggling Astrologers of our days would fain subject him, and cast the credulous world into a Trance of blindness, to believe Lies and Follies and gross Vanities for very Truth.

16. But leaving the hot pursuit of Astrological fancies, (the busie idleness of some even to their old age) he applied himself to the more useful study of History and Antiquities, particularly to a curious enquiry into those Mysterious Sciences which made the ancient Chaldeans, Egyptians and other Nations so famous; tracing them, as far as he could have any light to guide him, in their Oriental Schemes and Figurative expressions, as likewise in their Hieroglyphicks, not forgetting to enquire also into the Oneirocriticks of the Ancients. Which he did the rather, because of that affinity which he conceiv'd they might have with the language of the Prophets, to the understanding of whom he shew'd a most ardent desire. His Humanity-studies and Mathematical labours were but Initial things, which he made attendants to the Mysteries of Divinity: and though they were Preparatives, as he could use them, yet were they but at a distance off and more remote to his aim; for he had more work to do before he could be Master of his design. A well-furnish'd Divine is compounded of more Ingredients than so. For Histories of all sorts, but those especially which concern the Church of God, must be studied and well known; and therefore he made his way by the knowledge of all Histories, General, National, Ancient and Modern, Sacred and Secular. He was a curious and laborious searcher of Antiquities relating to Religion, Ethnick, Jewish, Christian and Mahometan: the fruits of which studious diligence appear visibly in several of those excellent Treatises which have pass'd the Press; particularly in his Apostasy of the Latter times, The Christian Sacrifice, his Discourses upon Daniel, his Paraphrase and Notes upon S. Peter's Prophecy, and in (his great Master-piece) those elaborate *Commentaries upon the Apocalyp*s, where the Fata Imperii (i. e. the Affairs of the Roman State) there predicted are to admiration explain'd out of Ethnick Historians, and the Fata Ecclesie illustrated with no less accuracy out of Ecclesiastick Writers. His Writings best speak his eminent skill in History; yet it may not be amiss to superadde upon this occasion the Testimony of a very judicious person, and one of long and inward acquaintance with Mr. Mede and his studies, (we mean that forementioned ancient Colleague and Consocius of his, Mr. W. Chappell,) who before his going into Ireland was heard thus to express himself, That Mr. Mede was as judicious a man in Ecclesiastical Antiquities, and as accurately skilful in the first Fathers of the Church, both Greek and Latin, as any man living.

17. Unto Histories he added those necessary attendants which to the knowledge of the more difficult Scriptures must never be wanting; viz. an accurate understanding of the Ichnography of the Tabernacle and Temple, the Order of the Service of God therein performed, as also of the City of Jerusalem, together with an exact Topography of the Holy Land; besides other Jewish Antiquities, Scripture-Chronology and the exact Calculation of Times, so far especially as made for the solving or clearing of those difficulties and obscure passages that occur in the Historical part of Scripture, which the vulgar Chronologers have perplex'd, and the best not fully freed from scruple. And how great his abilities were for the Sacred Chronologie, may appear (to omit other proofs) from that clause in a Letter of the then Archbishop of Armagh to him — I have entred upon the Determination of the Controversies which concern the Chronology of the Sacred Scripture, wherein I shall in many places need your help. That great and laborious Work which this equally Learned and Humble Prelate was now entred upon, was his Chronologia Sacra, wherein he intended to confirm those dispositions of Years and accounts of time he had set down in his Annals of the Old and New Testament, lately published by him. This Work had exercised his industry for many years, and he labour'd in it to the last minute of health he enjoy'd; but he lived not to finish it. Yet that the fruit of all his travels herein might not die with him, so much as he had elaborated was published by the Learned Dr. Barlow, Provost of Queen's-Colledge in Oxford, whose great care and industry herein did deserve in this place an express celebration: For such useful Labours justly entitle a man to the honour of being a Benefactor to the world.

18. By the fruit of these Studies, particularly by his happy Labours upon the *Apocalyp*s and Prophetical Scriptures, what honour our Author purchas'd abroad (besides what he gain'd at home) among men studious in this way, and therefore capable of judging, is evident by the many Letters sent him from Learned men in several parts, expressing their own and others high esteem of his Writings: As, the above-mention'd Primate of Ireland, Archbishop Usher, who also acquainted Mr.

Mr. Mede with the great esteem that another Archbishop in Ireland had for his accurate labours upon the Apocalyp's; The judicious and moderate Paulus Testardus, Pastor of the Reformed Church at Blois in France, who was so highly pleas'd with his Clavis & Commentationes Apocalypticae, as to take the pains (amidst his other pressing labours to translate them into French, designing the printing of them for the benefit of his Countrey-men; Lud. de Dieu, a singular Ornament of the University at Leiden, famous at home and abroad for his skill in the Oriental Tongues, whose Letters to and of Mr. Mede were full of honour and respect, and, as a testimony of his great respect, he presented Mr. Mede betimes with his Comment upon the Acts of the Apostles; Dr. Waleus, Divinity-Professor there, who being one of the Principal persons concern'd in the last Belgick Translation of the Bible, and his care (together with some associates) being peculiarly employ'd about translating and illustrating with marginal notes the New Testament, (no part of which bred him more labour than the Apocalyp's) did hugely applaud himself in the happiness he had to be acquainted with Mr. Mede's unparrallel'd Commentary upon that mysterious Book. The great acceptance and kind entertainment which his Writings found abroad among learned persons, might be confirm'd also from not only M. Hartlib's but Sr. William Boswell's Letters, who profess'd It was better than Musick to him to hear the innumerable commendations of so near a Friend. But because we would not expatiate in this (perhaps invidious) argument, we shall crave leave only to superadde this, That though some at home, less affectionate to studies of this nature, for Reasons best known to themselves, were induc'd to speak somewhat diminishingly, and below the worth, of his Clavis and Commentary upon the Apocalyp's; (a Prophet, and a Prophet's Interpreter, wanting sometimes their due honour in their own Country) yet Scholars of good note in their Travels beyond the Sea have heard his Name most honourably mention'd for those Works. And though he was Anonymus in what he had done upon the Apocalyp's; yet when Foreigners travelling into England came to visit the University of Cambridge, they would carefully seek him out, and endeavour'd to gain his acquaintance as much as any others then more eminent in place.

19. And though possibly it cannot be said that he attain'd to an infallible Solution of every Point in those Prophetick Mysteries, (they being a Depth which perhaps no Humane understanding can reach, till assisted by a more full and clear view of Events;) yet judicious men, who are but in the least candid, cannot but say that he proceeded upon grounds never traced by any, and infinitely more probable than any lay'd down by those who before him undertook that task, and such as, though they should not every-where exempt from all possibility of erring in the application, do yet afford an incomparable help to the understanding of many things otherwise scarce discernible, and in the mean time do strongly convince the over-daring vanity of very many confident, but unskillful, Expositors. So that upon the whole matter we doubt not to affirm, (and for the truth of it we appeal to judicious and unprejudiced Readers) That if Mr. Mede's Method of interpreting the Apocalyp's be freely and carefully compared with the elder (we may add also, the newer) methods of any Annotationists whatsoever, it will certainly be acknowledged to be the most natural and unstrained, most agreeable to the style of the Prophets, as likewise to History and Events; and, in short, that his Clavis Apocalyptica (if compared with other Keys) seems most worthy to be deem'd Clavis non errans.

20. Nor is this high, but most deserved, character of his Labours upon the Apocalyp's to be disparaged by one or two Exceptions, which the οἱ ἀντιδιατιθέμενοι marvellously please themselves in, nay one of them they make the petty matter of a poor rejoicing within themselves: It is their First Exception, grounded upon his Conjecture about the King of Sweden, in his Exposition of the Fourth Vial. But there needed not so much noise nor such a-doe to be made about this. For be it granted that the King of Sweden is certainly meant there, (although the Author doth not expressly name him) yet consider,

First, He doth not positively and confidently affirm him to be the person whom God designed to perform the business of this Vial; but intimates only his hope and wishes (in behalf of the afflicted Protestants in Germany) that it might be so: nay instead of a confident saying it would be so, he chose rather to express himself Question-wise, which is the more modest and allowable way: Annon hic est (saith he)

quem

quem Dominus exercituum ad hujusce Phialæ opus exsequendum destinavit? Which Ingenuity of his might have disposed the less-kind Reader to some degree of Candour, rather than to the indecencies of an hasty and over-severe Censure.

Secondly, And the rather may he seem to merit the most candid and favourable usage, because in his Epistle to the Reader, before his Commentary, he makes it his particular request, That the Reader would not over-rigidly censure every passage in his Book, but be pleas'd to read him with that civility and candour and those fair allowances not unusually afforded to the Writings of well-meaning men, such as are free from arrogancy and imposing upon others, and are most ready to express the same Charity and Fairness to other Writers. The request is every way Just and Necessary; considering that there are more Depths and Obscurities in the Prophetical Writings than in any other parts of H. Scripture; and withal, that the best of men are not priviledged from all possibility of erring, no not in plainer and less abstruse matters than the Apocalyptick Visions, those especially about things future and unfulfill'd. And farther how Necessary the request is as well as Just, the Author himself hath prudently observ'd in the fore-mentioned Epistle, where, speaking of the Interpretation of Prophecies, &c. he laies it down as a most certain and approved Truth, Nisi in hisce talibus liberius paulo sentiendi, imò & errandi, venia concedatur; ad profunda illa & latentia Veritatis adyta viam nunquam patefactum iri.

Thirdly, Were this mistake as great a matter as some would make it, (which yet was in truth a smaller ἁρμυα and more venial, because not express'd positively and confidently, but only in the form of a Question,) yet is there not any just ground from this single instance to disvalue and reject the Author and his Commentary upon the Apocalyps. For this Conjecture, or rather Quære, of his was no principal or necessary part of the Structure, and therefore by its failing as to the Event doth not so much as endanger, much less demolish, the whole Fabrick. His Scheme of synchronisms, upon which is grounded his method of interpreting the Apocalyptick Visions stands firm and entire, and is unconcern'd herein. Nor is there any other part of his Commentary endamaged hereby, the truth and solidity thereof not depending upon this Event. Besides, let it be consider'd, that it would be the extremest Severity, the highest Rigour imaginable, to condemn the useful labours of Worthy men for some one misapprehension in a particular of little or no importance to the whole. And what one Author, ancient or modern, (though never so highly meriting) what Book (though never so carefully and exactly written) could possibly scape at such a rate of judging as this? But to speak yet more closely to the present Exception; Though there was a mistake in applying the Fourth Vial to that Northern King, yet that mistake in the particular is no real prejudice to the general and main scope of his Interpretation of that part (much less of the other parts) of the Vision: And, considering the abstruseness of the matter, it may be held very laudable not toto celo errare in the explication of some part of a Vision, especially when other Learned men are deprehended to do so, not only in some one whole Vision, but in a manner universally in the whole Apocalyps; and that not only in those Visions which relate to things unfulfill'd and future Events, (about which if a careful Interpreter be at a loss sometimes and chance to misconjecture, it is more pardonable) but in such Visions and Prophecies as are already fulfill'd, whereinto mistake is the less excusable, because Prophecies are suppos'd to clear up when accomplish'd, according to that of Irenæus, (which is sometimes quoted to an ill purpose, viz. to damp all modest Enquiries into Prophetical Scriptures) Cum evenit quod prophetatum est, tunc Prophetia liquidam habet & certam expositionem. And here (if it were not an over-tedious Digression) it would be no hard task to bring in a large Catalogue of gross Parachronisms, manifest misapplications and mistakes of another nature than this single one they urge against our Author; and these not a few, nor thinly scatter'd in their Comments, but to be met with in every page. The reason of which Misfortune (in which the Interpreters that go the new way are as much concern'd as any) is plainly this, Their want of attending to that only safe Rule and Ground-work of Interpretation, the Apocalyptical Synchronisms; the usefulness and necessity of attending to which is fully made out by Mr. Mede (to omit other places) in his Corollary at the end of his Clavis Apocalyptica: Without this Clue Interpreters will miserably lose themselves in this Sacred Labyrinth; without this Card to guide them in this Mystical Sea, they must needs, like distressed Mariners, * reel to and fro, and often be at their wit's end.

* Psal. 107.

Lastly, Let it be considered that this short passage, concerning the Application of the Fourth Vial, excepted against is not any part of the Author's large and more thoroughly thoroughly-concocted Commentary upon the Apocalyps; for that ends with Chap. XIV. And as for the following Chapters, what he has briefly observed upon some passages therein, (as in Chap. XVI. which treats of the Vials) he calls only specimina, his Essays, and First adventures; intending (if he had health and free leisure) to go over them again, and then to perfect his thoughts, and as fully to enlarge himself upon them as he had done upon the foregoing Chapters. This he expressly advertises the Reader of at the end of his Commentary upon Chap. XIV; in the mean while commending these specimina (which at the solicitation of some Friends he permitted to go along with his Commentary) to the Reader's Candour and Benignity; persuading himself (as the best natures at least apt to suspect any unkindness) that what he thus offer'd with his right hand, others would not take with their left.

This is enough to wash away the supposed stain of this Exception, and perhaps more than was needful, but that some, devoid of Charity, and therefore but * tinkling Cymbals, made such a noise about it, such as childish affect excitare fluctus in simpulo, and love to make ex musca elephantem, ex festuca trabem; in the mean while (through fond self-love and partiality) not minding the more than moles, the great beams in their own eyes, or in the eyes of those whose persons they have in admiration. But to such our Saviour's Counsel is not unseasonable, Why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye. * 1 Cor. 13.

21. Proceed we now (cum bono Deo) to the Vindication of our Author from the other Exception, which in short is this, That he may seem to have afforded too much countenance to the Opinion of the Chiliasists. This Exception (though not the former) is taken notice of by that Reverend person, who was familiarly acquainted with Mr. Mede, and wrote that short View of his Life, published at the end of his Epistles. And the Sum of the Answer he there returns to this Exception is this, That what Mr. Mede did herein cannot be justly counted any blemish to his name and honour: For grant that Opinion were an Error, yet (saith he) it hath very much to plead its toleration and their pardon that hold it. Whatever it be, it pass for a precious Truth, even in the purest and most untainted Ages of the Church, (those next the Apostles) for the space of above 300. years, and had the suffrages of the most eminent Doctors that lived in those times. [viz. Justin Martyr, (who lived within 30 years of S. John's death) Irenaeus, (who was brought up at the feet of Polycarpus who was S. John's Disciple;) they both lived and conversed with the Apostles immediate Disciples: as also Tertullian, (the most ancient of the Latin Fathers now extant) Cyprian Bishop of Carthage, and Lactantius: besides several others, of whose Writings we have only some small Fragments; all these within 300. years after Christ.] Nor was it ever discountenanced, till the Church (recovering breath from her Persecutions) began perhaps a little too much to prize her peace, and (disvaluing her expectations) to set up her rest in her enjoyed tranquillity. And certainly (not to argue its verisimilitude from the consonancy it seems to have with the many glorious * Prophecies of Christ's Kingdom in the Old Testament, which otherwise find many cold interpretations among Expositors) a man can hardly, without admitting it, make good sense of those places in the 20 and 21 Chapters of the Revelation, which tell us of a * First and Second Resurrection, and of a Jerusalem descending out of Heaven from God: Which last (I have often heard our Author say) seemed to him extremely harsh to expound of the State of Bliss in Heaven; and to make [ descending out of Heaven ] to signify [ ascending up thither ] was more absurd than that of the Canonist, who expounded [ Constituimus ] by [ Abrogamus : ] So that he was compelled by that and many other places, against his inclination, to allow so much of Chiliasm as might make sense of those Prophecies; yet always keeping himself from falling into those dotages which some of that opinion fancied, or at least were charged with; * neither denying any necessary Catholick Verity, nor admitting any thing inconsistent with the analogy of Faith; and || submitting his Opinion to the judgment of the Church. And within these limits, I never yet learned why he or any other learned man may not have the liberty of his own sense, or in such Problematical points should incur any censure for dissenting from others.

Thus far that Reverend person now deceased, the Author's ancient Friend, in the View of his Life.

impeach any Catholick Tenet of the Christian Faith. || See his Preface before his Commentary, p. 435. and what he adds at the end of his Specimen de mille annis Tuba Septima, p. 532.

22. In pursuance of which Argument (to which we hold our selves obliged both from the great zeal we have for the honour of the Author's Memory, and from an honest ambition to endeavour the removing of any the least dissatisfaction which may lodge perhaps in the breasts of some even ingenuous and well-temper'd persons; that so none may be offended in him) it may not be unnecessary to superadd (as a Mantissa) these few particulars.

First, That the Author had not the least fond inclination to this or any other Hypothesis, as those have that affect to be talk'd of for some new or uncommon Theory: (his humble Soul was far from any such design of Vain-glory.) Nay when he first applyed himself to the study of the Apocalyps, he came (as he told a Friend of his) with a mind rather posselt against it; and (being desirous to differ as little as might be from the sense of others (he tried all ways imaginable to place the Millennium elsewhere, and, if it were possible, to begin the 1000 years at the Reign of Constantine, (for whom he had a great veneration;) which was the commonly-received opinion of those that wrote before him or after him, as Brightman, Grotius and others. But after all his striving he was * forced (as he ingeniously confess'd) to yield to the light and evidence of this Hypothesis in a sober and qualified sense. He was forced to it by the irresistible Law of Synchronisms; according to which the Millennium could not possibly be placed otherwhere than it is by him; which he nothing doubted but he had demonstrated in his Clavis, Part. 2. Synchron. 4. and 5. Concerning which performance we shall only say to the Reader, as the Author himself us'd to do, (and it was a great word with him, whenever he brought forth any unordinary and important Notion) Expende, (he would say, or else) Consider it. And here it is not unworthy to be remembered, that the late learned Arch-deacon of Surry, * Dr. Hakewell, gives this fair testimony of Mr. Mede, that in his Clavis he hath shew'd himself an able man, and particularly that this part of his Synchronisms is a very exact piece, and such as gives a marvellous great light to the Prophecies of that Book. Besides, this would farther forbid him to make the Millennium of Satan's being bound and restrain'd from deceiving the world to begin at Constantine, namely, That the great deceiving of the world by Mahometism (a most vile and yet prevailing Imposture) began before less than half of the Millennium from Constantine was run out, and strangely prosper'd in the world for the space of 600 years within that Millennium: and not this only, but Antichristian Idolatry and the greatest Cruelty imaginable against the faithful Servants of Christ fell out within the same Millennium; wherein the Devil was so far from being chain'd and shut up, that he never deceived the world more grossly, nor raged more furiously, and consequently was never more loose and at liberty to do mischief.

* See also his Epistle to Lud. de Dieu, (pag. 571.) In quam sententiam de Millennario me nullo animi levitate aut studio præpostero delapsus credas velim; sed postquam alia omnia frustra tentasset, tandem rei ipsius claritudine perfrictum Paradoxo succubuisse.

Secondly, Our Author was not fondly desirous to proclaim this or any other peculiar Sentiment of his before others, as one that was eagerly solicitous to get Disciples or make Profelytes to his Persuasion. No man did ever dictate less than he, or propounded his Judgment, with the Reasons thereof, with more modesty and submission: none was more averse from the humour of masterly imposing an Opinion upon others: none with less impatience and more civility could bear anothers dissent. It was his own expression, There are few men living who are less troubled to see others differ in opinion from them than I am. If any man can patiently suffer me to differ from him, it nothing affects me how much or how little they differ from me. In short, He was not big with a Paradox, and in pain to be delivered of it, as some are when they have discover'd (as they think) some rare and unvulgar Notion; (which temper in them is a certain sign of a Weak mind foolishly over-pleas'd with its own conceptions:) Nay he was so far from proclaiming this or any other new Opinion, that when he was invited by others to speak of it, (for he chose rather to be led into such discourse than over-forwardly to begin it of himself) he would speak but sparingly and in general, especially before such who for want of age and experience were less prepared for such Speculations; and therefore when such proceeded to enquire more particularly concerning his thoughts herein, his way was not to declare himself magisterially, but having quoted such or such a Text of Scripture) modestly to express himself thus, What if it should be so understood? Why may it not be thus? And when he was urged by Friends to add at the end of his Commentary upon the Apocalyps some Notions of his upon the following Chapters, (that the whole might be the more complete,) he only publish'd a short Specimen or Essay about this Hypothesis, together with some short of all Orthodox Christians in the Age immediately following the Apostles, and that none were known to deny it then but Hereticks which denyed the Resurrection. Let the whole specimen be carefully perused by any unpassionate and judicious person, and it will approve it self to be a great Instance of the Author's both Modesty and Prudence as to the way of communicating his particular thoughts concerning the Millennial mystery. And accordingly the Reverend Dr. Charles Potter, sometime Provost of Queen's College in Oxford, a person of a very discerning and candid spirit, (in a Letter to his worthy friend Mr. Mason) gave this fair account of Mr. Mede's proceeding in this abstruse Argument, That, whereas others are confident, he does but modestly conjecture, (viz. in his Specimen de Mille annis) and that upon other and better grounds than their dreaming heads ever thought of. Whereas others would fall out into curious and minute descriptions of the Οἰκουμένη μέλλουσα, and venture to speak as particularly of the Quality of that State as Dionysius the Areopagite (so called) does of the Angelical Hierarchy, intruding into those things which they have not seen; our Author on the contrary kept himself to Generals, industriously abstaining from expressing himself de modo or concerning the particularities of the state of Christ's Kingdom, and was far from being definitive in the least as to any circumstantial account thereof. This was his pious Prudence: He contented himself with that more General account the H. Scripture gives of this Millennium, and in his explication of it he kept within the compass of that Διατύπωσις or Form of Ecclesiastical Doctrine set forth by the First Nicene Council, not swerving one jot therefrom, as he somewhere professeth in his * Epistles. Yea so cautious and careful was he not to determine positively where the Scripture was not express, that he confessed he durst not so much as imagine that Christ's presence in this Kingdom should be a Visible converse upon Earth. He was also well aware that some both of elder and of later times (degenerating from the Piety of the most ancient and purest Ages of the Church, and swerving from that Primitive sober sense and harmless Notion of the Millennium which the Christian Church generally entertain'd in the days of Justin Martyr) had shamefully disfigur'd and deformed it with several erroneous conceits and idle fancies of their own. But herein our Author's name and reputation is not concern'd; he had nothing to do with the wood, hay and stubble, which some foolish builders had built upon the old foundation, nor with those unseemly assumenda and disgraceful opinions which some (that were miserable bunglers at the Interpretation of Prophecies) had fastned upon the ancient Hypothesis: He disavow'd with as much zeal as any one the extravagancies of such men; and yet he would not in a rash heat wholly reject an ancient Tenet for having some Error annex'd to it, for so he might sometime cast away a Truth; as he that throws away what he finds because it is dirty, (it was his own comparison) may perchance cast away a Jewel or a piece of Gold or Silver.

* See this Testimony illustrated and vindicated from a corrupt reading, p. 533.

* Notes upon a passage in Justin Martyr, purporting that it was the General opinion of

* See Epistle
III. pag. 813.

Thirdly and lastly, (to conclude this argument) His Notion of the Millennial State was both Pure and Peaceable, and therefore not unworthy of a fair construction. Pure and clean it was, altogether free from the least suspicion of Luxury and Sensuality. It was his * express Caution, to beware of gross and carnal conceits of an Epicurean happiness misbecoming the spiritual purity of Saints. If we conceit (saith he) any Deliciae, let them be Spirituales, which S. Austin confesseth to be Opinio tolerabilis, (lib. 20. De Civit. Dei.) And therefore he was justly offended with Hierom. who (being, according to his wont, a very unequal relator of the opinion of his Adversaries) imputed to the most ancient Fathers of the Church such an Unspiritual notion as this, That the Felicity of this State was Beatitudo ventri & gutturi Judaico serviens; and in several parts of his Writings, he has clearly detected the unfaithfulness and fallhood of Hierom in loading those Holy Souls with the charge of Judaism and Epicurism; as foul and undeserved an aspersion as could be imagined. And verily such a Sensual State is so contrary to the character of the Kingdom of Christ and the true importance of what is meant by Reigning with Christ, that it is no other in reality than the Kingdom of the Devil and a Reigning with him. He well remembered that the proper Character of the New Heavens and the New Earth (that is, of the World renewed) is thus described in * S. Peter's Prophecy-----Εν οἷς δικαιοσύνη κατοικεῖ, Wherein dwelleth Righteousness. A greater increase of Piety and Peace than has yet been in the world, is that which makes up the Primary notion of Felicity of the Οἰκουμένη μέλλουσα or World to come. And what hearty Christian does not most affectionately desire that Righteousness and true Holiness, Peace on earth and Good will towards men may spread and obtain more universally in the world? These things things would as naturally make the world Happy, as the abounding of Iniquity with the decays of Charity in any age makes the world Miserable.

* See his Remains, p. 603.

* 2 Ep. c. 3.

Nor was his Notion less Peaceable and Pure, as may partly appear by what hath been already observed. He was a true Son of Peace, and lived a life of Obedience to the Laws of the Realm, and of Conformity to the Discipline of the Church: He * feared both the Lord and the King, and meddled not with them that were given to change. And his Writings bare the Impress and Character of his Peaceable Spirit and Life; for, not one clause, not a syllable, not ἰώτα ἐν ἡμῖα κεραία, that naturally tends to blow men up into such furious heats as threaten publick Disquietnesses and Embroilments, is to be found therein, as neither in the Writings of Justin Martyr, Irenæus, Cyprian and others of utmost Antiquity, whose Doctrine touching this Point, as also their Practices, were far from any shew of Unpeaceableness, far from provoking to any thing but Love and Good works. As our Author himself was a man of a cool Spirit, (* קר רוח ) so likewise is his Notion and representation of the Millennium cool and calm and moderate, not ministring to Faction and Sedition, to Tumults and subversion of all Degrees and Orders of Superiority in the publick. And assuredly the Happiness of the Millennial State shall take place in the world without that Disorder and Confusion which some men have extravagantly imagined, men of unhallowed minds and consciences, who, judging of things according to the lusts of ambition and love of the world reigning in them, have deprav'd and stain'd this Primitive Tenet, the ancient, sober and innocent notion of the Kingdom of Christ, as likewise every other Mystery, with not a few carnal conceits and intolerable fancies of their own: And thus * unto them that are defiled is nothing pure. Nor shall those <sup>a</sup> Tempora refrigerii ever be brought in by hot fanatick Zelots, men set on fire, (in the Psalmist's phrase) and ready also to set on fire the Course of Nature, (as S. James speaks) such as are skilful only to destroy and overturn; <sup>b</sup> Destruction and Wasting are in their ways, (they are good at making the World a miserable, uncomfortable and uninhabitable place) but the way of Peace they have not known, (as for Peace and Charity, they have no right sentiments thereof, and know not what belongs to them.) And therefore the Temper and Frame of their spirit being perfectly contrary to the Temper and Quality of those Better times, they are thereby render'd incapable either of furthering and * hastening the Felicities of the New Heavens and Earth, or of enjoying them when the New Jerusalem shall be come down from God out of Heaven, and the Tabernacle of God shall be with men. For the primary Character of that Future State being (as was before observed) Universal Righteousness and Good will, Piety and Peace, it naturally follows, That they who are men of embitter'd passions and of a destroying Spirit, altogether devoid of civility, gentleness and moderation, kindness and benignity towards men, and altogether unacquainted with what is lovely, decorous, venerable, praise-worthy, equitable and just, can have no part nor lot in this matter; so gross and coarse a constitution of spirit as theirs is speaks them unqualified for the Happiness of this Better State. Nor can they ever be made meet for the World to come and the Kingdom of Christ, till they have got the victory over their Self-love and Love of the world, over their Pride and Envy, their Wrath and Bitterness, their enormous Affections and the Lusts that war in their members; howsoever they may vainly conceit and fancy themselves to be upon easier and cheaper terms Kings and Priests to God, fit and worthy to reign with Christ, though they never suffer'd with him, nor was their old man crucified with him, that the body of Sin might be destroyed, as the Apostle speaks, Rom. 6.

And thus we have seen that our Author's Notion of the Millennium was both Pure and Peaceable, and consequently right and genuine, (these being the two first Properties of the Wisdom from above, in S. c James's account:) As for any other representation of it, which is <sup>d</sup> Earthly, Sensual, Devilish, (the three Properties of the Wisdom from beneath) our Author had nothing to do with it, nor with the Patrons thereof, his Soul came not into their secret. And therefore if any ill-temper'd persons, men of wild Principles and Practices, should abuse his name to the countenancing of any bad purposes and selfish designs: (as Antinomians have in like manner abused the names of some ancient Protestant Worthies to the gracing of their unwholesome Opinions,) if any unlearned and unstable souls wrest S. John's Apocalyps and the Prophetical Scriptures; (as well as some did in S. Peter's time the δυσκόνητα in S. Paul's Epistles, and do so still) they shall bear their own condemnation, they do it πρὸς τὴν ἰδίαν αἰσῶν ἀπώλειαν to their own destruction: But in the mean while S. John, S. Paul, the Prophetical Scriptures are holy, harmless and without fault; nor ought our Author and * Prov. 24.

* Prov. 17.

* Titus 1.

<sup>a</sup> Acts 3.
καὶ ἐν ἀναψύ-ξεως, Times of cool refreshing.
<sup>b</sup> Mai. 55.

* 2 Pet. 3.
— ἀπευθύνετε
τὴν περιστάσιν ὡς ὅτι ἡ μέρα.

<sup>e</sup> Ch. 3. 17.

<sup>d</sup> Ver. 15.

<sup>e</sup> Jo. 8. 23. They are from beneath.

and those Protestant Writers to bear the blame of other mens either misapprehensions or misdoings; but let every man bear his own burthen. It is no new thing, but is and hath been an usual artifice of worthless men to derive some reputation to their Opinions and Practices from the pretended authority of some worthy and excellent Writers: and we are the less to wonder at it, since they have not spared in the same kind to abuse the divinely-inspired Prophets and Apostles. Yet should not this (or the like) abuse of S. John's Apocalyps and other Prophecies be deem'd a sufficient ground to disswade from the study of the Prophetical Scriptures, no more than the abuse of some passages in S. Paul's Epistles to Antinomianism and evacuating of the Law, should be of force to take men off from the study of S. Paul's Writings. Nay rather should all serious and judicious persons, out of an holy indignation against such wrongful perverting of the Holy Oracles of God, excite and oblige themselves unto a more studious enquiry and diligent search into the genuine meaning of those Scriptures; that thereby they may be the better enabled to detect the fallshood of those Glosses which men of corrupt minds have for their own ends put upon them, and by discovering the true importance and scope of such Prophecies put to silence those men of Noise and Confidence rather than of Reason and Judgment. And certainly this would be the happy effect of such studious diligences: For they should find that S. Paul's Epistles afford no favourable countenance to Antinomian principles, nor do in the least disparage the indispensable necessity of internal Righteousness and uniform obedience to the Divine Law. It would also appear to them that S. John's Apocalyps contains nothing that may in the least encourage to disobedience and disorder; but on the contrary represents Christian Kings and Princes (those that are Defenders of the Holy Apostolical Faith) under a fair Character, as * Friends to the Holy and * Rev. 21. 24. Beloved City, the New Jerusalem, but Enemies to the Whorish City, the mystical Babylon, which they shall * hate and make desolate: They shall do it; not the People * Ch. 17. 16. without their Princes, but Kings with the help of their Subjects; so hard a work requiring many hands, and the concurrence of several aids.

These Three Considerations (and more such might have been added) may amount (we hope) to a full Answer to the second Exception: And these severals being laid together may be available (through God's blessing) to recover some from their inward malady of an Uncharitable Cenforious humour, and to sweeten others who have some disgust against the Author and particularly upon the score of this Exception. Nor was this an unnecessary Digression, (if any Digression at all) it being of so grand importance for the vindicating of the Author, in whose Story and Character we are now concerned, as also of those Holy and most Ancient Fathers of the Church, and withal of their sober and harmless Notion of the Millennium, yea and for the vindicating of the Holy Scriptures themselves, from all unworthy misconstruction.

23. Having thus somewhat largely (though not without good cause) evinced both the great Exquisteness and the no less Usefulness of Mr. Mede's Labours in that Master-piece of his, his Key and Commentary upon that mysterious Book of the Apocalyps, (a well-chosen Object for his great Understanding to exercise itself upon;) we proceed now to observe to the Reader, That besides these, his Endeavors were happily employ'd in other (though neither easie nor ordinary) undertakings. For his noble Genius leading him on to encounter difficulties, he ever seem'd most delighted with those studies wherein he might strain the sinews of his brain: And as if he accounted them but Half-scholars that did only ex commentario sapere, and knew only so much as taken up from others they held in memory, he was not wont to take Expositions of Scripture upon the credit of any Author, how great or plausible soever, nor to look upon their Resolves as if they were Hercules's Pillars with a Nè plus ultra upon them. And therefore he us'd, as occasion offer'd itself, to set upon those difficult places of Scripture which seem'd to be of more use and concernment, and much time did he spend that way to give light to those συνόντα and dark places in Holy Writ; so that scarce could the question be propounded to him about any obscure and knotty passage therein, whereabout he had not bestowed many serious thoughts before-hand. He was taken notice of by many for his singular faculty in this kind, and sent too by several Learned men for his resolution of such Doubts; which was usually so clear, that there was no person, who loved Truth and was not addicted to jangling, but would be satisfied with his Answers, if not as certain and unquestionable, yet as ingenious and very probable: insomuch that Strangers of other Universities, who had never seen him, gave him this high Elogy, That for assailing of Scripture-difficulties he was to be reckon'd amongst the best in the world.

world. It is agreeable to this which the learned Mr. Alsop spake of him in his Funeral Commemoration before the University, That if he had been encouraged to write in difficiliora loca Scripturæ, and that God in mercy to the world had been pleased to lengthen out his days, assuredly he would have out-gone any Author then extant, and probably would have given light to some hard places of Scripture which now may remain dark and un-assoiled till the last Day of Judgment.

24. As these various Perfections and useful Accomplishments made his company very desirable to Scholars, so the goodness of his Disposition made him equally Communicative and free to impart his Knowledge to those who came to him either out of the same University or from abroad. To these he used to impart himself with that willingness, that it seem'd questionable whether had the greater desire, they to hear, or he to communicate his Studies to them: Which made a familiar Friend of his once merrily to say to one that, having been partaker of his discourse, gave him thanks, That he might spare his thanks; for that they were not so much beholding to him for delivering himself to them, as he was to them for hearing him. For this great advantage he made himself of the Civility which he shew'd to others, that by the communication of his Notions to his Friends they became so fixed in his memory, that he was afterward able readily to deliver them in a well-form'd discourse, and was wont, as often as he had occasion to express himself in publick, (especially in those Colledge-exercises which they call Common-places) to make use of the fore-mentioned Discourses, which with a little labour he could put into an apt form. Some of which are those excellent Diatriba, which with the rest of his Works are published for the common Benefit of the Church. Which though but few in comparison of that great store wherewith so rich a magazine was furnished, yet even in those few he hath discovered more rare pieces of recondite Learning than are to be found in some vast Volumes of many much-admired Authors.

25. Concerning which Diatriba this is fit to be advertis'd, That though there are in some of them several things of a strain that transcends the capacities of common Readers, yet it would be a great mistake for that reason to suspect this worthy person as guilty of Ospretation or Affectation. For as they were Academical Exercises, and not fitted for a vulgar Audience; so he himself was of all knowing men the greatest Hater of that vanity. He always disapprov'd the unnecessary quotations of Authors, and the use of Foreign Languages and Terms of Art in popular Sermons; and expressing his dislike of such practices, (too much in use among some, not only young Fellows of Colledges and other young Preachers, but even those of more age and experience) would sometimes say, That they savoured of as much Inconsiderateness, as if Shoemakers should bring Shoes to be drawn on with their Lasts in them: judging it a scarce pardonable folly for men going about the instruction of the ignorant, to propound things in such Terms as themselves understood not till they had spent many years at the School or University; and which, how significant soever in themselves and to the Learned, yet were but as so many Stumbling-blocks to common Auditors, or at the best but as Stiles, which though some might possibly leap over, yet they interrupted the progress of their attention.

26. Nay, to give this Excellent person his just right, he was so far from the vanity of Ospretation, that it is hard to say whether he was more eminent for his rare Knowledge, or for his singular Humility and Modesty in valuing his own Abilities; insomuch as he could not without trouble hear of that great Opinion and Esteem which some (deservedly enough) had conceived of his great Learning: he owning only some diligence, freedom from prejudice and studium partium, as his best abilities; as himself hath excellently express'd it in a * Letter of his to his friend Mr. Samuel Hartlib. To which may be added, That having received some notices of the great value which some Learned men both at home and in a foreign University put upon his Apocalyptick Labours, he made only this modest return to a Friend, who perhaps thought he might highly please him with that news, That he saw no great cause for all that why he should think much better of himself; adding withal, That he had frequently observ'd it to be the hap of many a Book that had little or no worth in it, to find applause in the world, when in the mean while a well-deserving Book is scarce taken notice of. So far was this Good man from all proud self-reflections, from glorying in his wisdom and strength of Parts, or in any performance of his own.

* See Ep. 96.
p. 881.

Of this rare Temper of Spirit this also may be remembered as another pregnant Instance, That when he was earnestly importun'd by some to write in difficiliora loca s. Scripture, (for which task he was incomparably furnished) he answered with a sigh, No, and being pressed to give a reason; besides many things which he offered, as That it required 1 more time than he could reckon upon he had to live, and 2 more and better Books than he had at present or could command, and 3 that such a work must be done in an Age when mens thoughts are not imprison'd or circumscrib'd within the pale of over-ruling parties; he added this also, 4 That it would require more Learning than he had or was capable of.

27. To omit many other Instances of his Humility, (for his life was full of them) we shall add The little desire which he had either to Academical Honours or to great Preferments and worldly Advantages. For the former, this may not unfitly be here remembered, That he was studiously regardless of Academical Degrees, as being unwilling to make any great noise and report in the world: And, but that he was over-power'd to do it by the then Master of the Colledge, he had never so far proceeded as to have been * Bachelour in Divinity. Thus he express'd himself to some in private. * Anno 1613. A Master of Arts he was, and a great Master of them too before he was so call'd; but more than so to be he affected not. An argument that that Grace was eminent in him, wherein others most commonly are too short and defective. And for the latter, how far he was from any ambitious and eager pursuing the advantages and great things of this world, appear'd, as by his refusing the offer made him by his Uncle, and that also by the then Bishop of Ely, (which we intimated before) so likewise by his modest denial of the Provostship of Trinity Colledge near Dublin in Ireland, to which he was elected upon the recommendation of another great Prelate, the L. Primate of Armagh, and by his unwillingness the second time to accept of it, when he was in danger to be put into that Preferment. The height of his Ambition was only to have had some small Donative sine cura made additional to his Fellowship, or to have been placed in some Collegiate Church or Rural Colledge: Some such place of quiet retirement from the noise and tumults of the world, with a Competency moderated by Agur's wish, (Neither Poverty, nor Riches) was the top and utmost of his desires. And yet when he spake thus, he would add, not that he should be restless or discontented till he could obtain some such thing, but to shew what kind of life he did affect, and in how low an Orb of this world's Preferments he would have been content to be placed. This sense of his mind is clearly express'd by himself in a Letter of his to a worthy Friend, (written upon occasion of certain ungrounded conjectures made by some upon his being by the then Archbishop of Canterbury admitted into the number of his Chaplains) in which he affirms That he had lived, till the best of his time was spent, in tranquillitate & secessu; and now that there is but a little left, should I (saith he) be so unwise (suppose there were nothing else) as to enter now into a tumultuous life, where I should not have time to think my own thoughts, and must of necessity displease others or my self? Those who think so, know not my disposition in this kind to be as averse as some perhaps would be ambitious.

28. This inward sense of his Soul (which was also his most deliberate choice) did not arise from any sad melancholy or sour discontent upon some great disappointment, (for he that had no great Ambitions could have no great Disappointments;) nor did it spring out of a fond and over-dear affection to Privacy, or from an unsuitableness for business and converse with the world, (the property of some who are styl'd Mere Scholars;) for his Colleagues, and others who had the happiness to be acquainted with him, knew him to be a person of singular Prudence and admirable abilities both for giving pertinent directions and advice in any important case, as a Friend, and for the managing of Colledge-affairs, as Fellow, and for discharge of his particular Trust, as Tutor. He was wont indeed to call his Study his Cell; but not as if he meant (according to the lazy and useless Monastick way of life) to immure and shut up himself there from converse with others. He was far from affecting such an unprofitable, unactive Solitude: for none was more free and open for Converse, especially with ingenuous and inquiring Scholars. Let who would repair to him, provided they were not captious and impertinent, he would give them their fill of discourse, and enlarge to ample satisfaction; yea he would farther take the pains, if so much were desired, to give his full mind in writing; even himself would do it without the help of an Amanuensis:

* Chap. 47. 17.

29. There is one thing more to this purpose which here offers it self to be considered, That though our Author loved a retired studious life, yet his Thoughts were not shut up within his Cell; but his Soul covered the whole Earth, (to borrow that expression of * Siracides concerning Solomon) his Heart was as large and wide as the Universe. He so lived and was affected as became a Citizen of the World: More especially, as became a Christian and a member of the Church Catholick, his Thoughts and Cares were particularly concern'd in the affairs of Christendom. And accordingly for the gaining of foreign Intelligence (besides his Letters from some knowing Friends with whom he kept correspondence) he was not unwilling to expend yearly something out of his small Incomes, and when he sent it to such as were at charge to furnish him (weekly for the most part) with Intelligence, he us'd in his Letters to them to call it His Tribute, (that was his word, implying his ingenuity and withal his respect; not Wages, or any the like word of a mercenary or servile signification: ) and to one of them he was pleas'd once pleasantly to say, I am neither Dean nor Bishop; but thus much I am willing to set apart to know how the World goes; adding that if it were with him as it is with some (whose Incomes were greater, and who wanted neither Riches nor Honour, but a good Heart and the power to do good with them in the world) he should do a great deal more than that he did; as numbering the affairs of Christendom amongst his best concerns, and the gaining a more particular acquaintance therewith (by helping to maintain correspondencies amongst Learned and wise men in distant Countries) amongst the best uses he could make of that estate which God had given him. Herein he also verified that of the * Psalmist, The works of the Lord are Great, sought out of all them that have pleasure therein.

* Psalm. 111.

30. But yet more particularly he had a very pious solicitude for the affairs of the Protestant Reformed Churches, being heartily desirous that the Design then on foot for procuring Peace amongst Protestants might take effect: And therefore he could not but greatly wonder to see so little life and affection toward this negotiation for Peace in too many of the Protestant profession, yea even in some who would seem best affected to the foreign Churches; these (he observ'd) would profess a desire that such a Pacification could be accomplish'd, but yet with a kind of heaviness and deadness, as he thought, who in the mean time was not so coldly and indifferently affected, it being his heart's desire and prayer to God that all Protestants would follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith each might edifie the other: then would not those who were come out of Babylon be so unwise and desperate, as manifestly to weaken the Protestant Interest by their fierce animosities and violent contests about some Doctrines neither Fundamental nor Necessary to Salvation, and consequently expose themselves as a prey to the common Enemy that breaths out nothing but threatenings and slaughter against the true Worshippers, the faithful Servants of Christ, and would triumphantly rejoyce to see their memorial cut off from the earth, that the Name of Protestants may be no more in remembrance.

This truly Heroick Design for Peace (that was the Epithet our Author gave it) he foresaw would prove Difficult; but yet he judg'd it Fecible, and the enterprise was the more Heroick, because accompanied with Difficulties. That which made it Difficult was (as he well observ'd) Prejudice and studium partium, and a fond esteem of some Opinions peculiar to each side, or contended for by some of note amongst them, who having once drawn blood in such Controversies, (that was his apt expression, whereby he meant their having publickly engaged and declar'd themselves therein) were therefore the more averse from hearkening to any Overtures of Peace as fearing some beloved Dogmata (and consequently their Reputation) should thereby receive no little prejudice. But that this Pacifick design was Fecible he nothing doubted; and that it might the better attain an happy issue, he thought in general this was the most compendious and effectual way, viz. That neither side should be roughly press'd or urged to relinquish presently their Opinions of difference, but rather all fair and calm endeavours should first be us'd to perswade both parties That the difference betwixt them is not in Fundamentals, but that they both agree in so much as is necessary to Salvation; and therefore That their differing in other matters of lesser import should not so far prevail to the either causing or continuing any uncharitable Disunions, as their agreeing in other Points, such as are Fundamental and Necessary to Salvation, should oblige and perswade them to Charity and mutual Forbearance, and the owning each each other as Brethren and members of the same Body, whereof Christ is the Head. And by this means when their Affections were once put into a better temper, and the acrimony of their Spirits was hereby corrected, they would certainly be in a better disposition to judge of the points of difference between them. Besides, he did not judge it necessary for the procuring and establishing this desirable Union between both parties, that there should be a full Decision of all Controversies in every minute particular thereof; but rather that both of them should abate of that vast distance which their eager contentions had made, not widening the breach, not enlarging, but lessening their differences as much as might be by their candid constructions, fair concessions and condescensions to each other. For except each partie would abate, and cease to maintain stiffly their supposed advantage against the other entire, it would be as impossible to attain this Union, as for a Joyner to set two pieces of timber together, without paring something from either: it was the Author's fit comparison.

This in general was the way of Peace which he chalked out for those whom the Love of Christ should constrain heartily to seek and pursue the Peace of the Reformed Religion, the happy uniting of divided Protestants. But as for the more particular methods for carrying on this Pacifick design, they are at large discours'd of by three Reverend Prelates of our Church, Bishop Morton, Bishop Hall, and Bishop Davenant, and by the last especially, who besides his Tract De Pace inter Evangelicos procuranda, wrote another intituled Ad fraternam Communionem inter Evangelicos Ecclesias Adhortatio. Nor was our Author asymbolus and altogether silent: for though at first he declin'd upon some prudential considerations to express himself otherwise than in general upon this argument, yet after that his Superiors had declar'd themselves, he was pleas'd also to communicate his particular Instructions about this affair; as appears by several Epistles of his written to Mr. H. and Mr. D. heretofore * published, wherein the judicious Reader may observe his great Prudence and equal Moderation, and that he was || clothed as with Humility (of which we have given several pregnant Instances) so likewise * with a meek and quiet spirit, a disposition of near alliance to that of Humility, and an Ornament of as great price and value in the sight of God, as the outward bravery of Jewels, gay attire and curious dressings is highly (but undeservedly) valued and admired in the eyes of men.

* In this Edition these (besides some others) are published with some Enlargements out of the Original MSS.

|| 1 Pet. 5.
* 1 Pet. 3.

31. But it is not fit we should so easily go off from what we last intimated, it fairly leading us to offer unto the Reader's observation that which added no small lustre to our Author's Character, we mean His prudent Moderation in the either Declaration or Defence of his private Opinions. He was never forward in any company to catch at hints of discourse, or to take any other occasion to reveal his particular judgment: So far was he from the Temper of those men who, being puffed up (it may be) with a small knowledge, account it nothing to know, unless others know that they do, who must talk or burst; not so much for benefit to others, as to disperse and publish their own praise. He knew there was * a time to speak, and a time to keep silence; and he knew how to do both with as much ease as any man living. There is that keepeth silence, (saith Siracides, Chap. 20.) knowing his time: so did he. It was a frequent Proverbial speech of our Author's, He that cannot hold his tongue can hold nothing; and he practis'd accordingly. Not that he was a niggard of his Notions, or backward to impart to others what himself knew, (for he was most communicative both of his Notes and Notions;) but he prudently consider'd the Character of the Persons then in presence and the Temper of the Times; nor did he neglect to follow that other Maxime of the Son of || Sirach in a more improved sense, Shew not forth wisdom out of time. He was always more modest and sober than to prostitute his Thoughts to unworthy persons; which were to cast pearls before swine: But if any were seriously desirous to be informed, and did seem out of no ill design to ask his opinion, especially if it were in re nova & paradoxa, to such he was not unwilling to communicate his inward Sentiments privately & sine arbitrio. (So the wisest and best Philosophers had their Ἀρεθματα, their Ἑσωτερικά and Ἐποπτικά, which were not publicly and promiscuously imparted to all (as were their τὰ Ἐκφρα or their Ἐξωτερικά) but to those only who were Μεμνημένοι and prepared for such mysteries. Yea our Blessed Saviour himself did speak some things to his Disciples κατ' ἰδίαν, and taught them as they were able to bear.) Otherwise our Author was well content and satisfied without even these private communications, not caring to impart any of his peculiar Notions, but (as he would say) where he found some appetite; nor would he offer them and try whether they had a stomach, but they themselves

* Eccles. 3.

|| Chap. 32.

Iuk. 10.
Job. 16.

must discover it; much less would he go about (as he said) to cram them. So far was he from being obtrusive unto any, that even some of familiar acquaintance with him (he profess'd) knew as little of his Notions as any Stranger whatsoever.

Nor did his Modesty and Good Temper less appear in the Defence of his private Opinions: For he would not be offended with others who were not of his mind, nor eagerly contend with those who differ'd from him; having resolved never to abandon Love in his prosecution of Truth. I never found my self prone to change my hearty affections to any one for mere difference in Opinion, was a worthy return of his to one who had oppos'd him with more heat than needed. And therefore only as occasion required, having fairly propounded his Judgment and the Reasons of it, he ingenuously left every man to judge for himself, without expressing the least ambitious zeal to win others to his Opinion. To this purpose he express'd himself to a tenacious piece he had once to do with, one that would be always replying, having found out some shift or other that must go for an Answer; It is sufficient (said he) for a man to propound his Opinion with the strongest evidence and arguments he can, and so leave it: Truth will be justified of her children. He observed also that in most points of Controversie mens passions are vehemently engaged, and the Disputants generally argue according to their Interests: and therefore when he saw men impetuous in the assertion of their Opinions, and peremptory in the rejection of other mens Judgments, he commonly answer'd such only with silence; not caring to entertain discourse with them who, in stead of a sober and modest Enquiry into Truth, were addicted to a disingenuous humour of Disputacity; that was his term, which in his sense signified To be always resolved for the last word, (which is the troublesome temper and practice of self-conceited and pertinacious wranglers) for after he discover'd any to be such, he would give them full leave to have the last word and all, because he would speak no more, what-ever he thought.

Nor was he less unwilling to allow them also the last word in writing. Witness those Paper-collations between him and Mr. T. H. a great follower of that man of more Reading than Consideration, Mr. Hugh Broughton. Indeed T. H. had a great opinion of his own performances in this kind, and of the much good might be done by such Conferences, and accordingly did ply Mr. Mede with one Paper after another, who yet was wholly of another mind, and plainly told him, Of these reciprocations of discourse in writing, wherein you place so much benefit for the discovery of Truth, I have often heard and seen Truth lost thereby, but seldom or never found. And for this reason (as also because Conferences by writing were tedious and less safe, and would take away a great deal of his time) he was averse from all such Pen-work, (as he call'd it,) desiring him not to make any Reply, for he was resolved to answer no more, whatsoever he should send, and he was as good as his word: for though Mr. H. could not hold, but would needs send him another large Paper of the same complexion with the former, yet could not this provoke him to recede from his fix'd and well-grounded resolution against all multiplying of unnecessary and fruitless Replies. So true was he to that expression of his, I can with much more patience endure to be contradicted, than be drawn to make Reply; having little or no edge to contend with one I think settled and persuaded, unless it were in something that nearly concern'd his Salvation: and withal he added, You know as much of my Opinion and my Grounds for the same as I would desire of any mans; and I think I perfectly understand yours: Why should then either of us spend our time any farther to no purpose?

32. But not to dwell only in Generals; His Prudent moderation particularly discover'd itself in an Instance of no small weight and importance: In short thus. When that unhappy difference about the point of Predestination and its Appendants (instead of a more free, sedate and Christian-like method of debating it) was blown to so high a flame in the Low-Countries, and began to kindle strifes here at home, he would often say, he wondred that men would with so great animosity contend about those obscure Speculations, and condemn one another with such severity, considering that, as the * Wise man saith, (to whose words he would often allude) We hardly guess aright at things that are upon Earth, and with labour do we find the things that are before us: But the things that are in Heaven who hath searched out? But if at any time (as it was said of || S. Paul at Athens, παρωξύνετο τὸ πνεῦμα αὐτοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ) his spirit was stirred within him, it was when he observ'd some to contend with an unmeasurable confidence and bitter zeal for that black Doctrine of Absolute Reprobation; upon which occasion he could not forbear to tell some of his Friends, That it was an Opinion

* Wisd. 9.

|| Act. 15.

he could never digest, being herein much of Dr. Jackson's mind, That generally the Propugnators of such Tenets were men resolved in their Affections of Love and Hatred, both of which they exercis'd constantly and violently, and according to their own Tempers made a judgment of God and his Decrees. To the like purpose he express'd himself (about two years before his death) in a Letter to an ancient Friend of his, formerly of the same Colledge, It seems harsh that of those whom God hath elected ad media Salutis, and calls by the preaching of his Gospel, any should be absolutely and peremptorily ordain'd to damnation. And afterwards, by way of Reply to the objected authority of S. Austin as to some part of the Predestinarian Controversie, he added, If those were Hereticks which followed not S. Austin, the most part of the Fathers before him were in Hereise, and a part of the Church after him. Zelots are wont to be over-liberal in such charges. Thus would he sometimes in private reveal his judgment, but in his publick performances he was reserved and did purposely abstain from meddling with these matters. And accordingly we have received this from some old acquaintance with him, That in those days when the Controversies between the Remonstrants and Contra-Remonstrants made so great a noise in the world, he was wont to bring his Common-places to an ancient Friend and Colleague to be perused by him, with a desire that he would expunge whatsoever did but seem to countenance the Positions of either party. To which may be added this other Instance of his own relating in a Letter to another Friend about four years before his death, viz. That there being great combustions and divisions among the Heads of the University in preparation to the Commencement, each party being desirous to get the advantage in the Election of the Answerers, and so to fit the Questions to their mind, and the more Calvinian party having prevail'd upon this occasion; I went not (saith he) to — this week (as commonly I use to do,) for fear of being taken to be of a side. These things we have noted particularly, to shew with how much Sweetness as well as Prudence the great Learning of this Good man was admirably temper'd.

33. But besides his Prudent Moderation, there was also to be observed in him, that which by the Epigrammatist is made one main Ingredient of an Happy life, Prudens Simplicitas, a mixture of what our Saviour Christ commends as imitable in the wise Serpent and in the harmless Dove. He was not so Imprudent as always to utter all his mind, (that's the property of a Fool, Prov. 29.) or before any company to reveal what new Notion or unvulgar Truth he had discover'd: But he was always so generously Honest, so Apert and Single-hearted, as not * to speak wickedly for God, or talk deceitfully for him; nor would he apply himself to any unwarrantable policies for the promoting or commending of Truth to others. Such little crafts and undue practices were below the Nobleness and Integrity of his spirit. To this purpose we may fitly take occasion here to remember a serious and excellent passage of his, I cannot believe that Truth can be prejudiced by the discovery of Truth; but I fear that the maintenance thereof by Fallacy or Falshood may not end with a blessing. Thus did he upon occasion express himself, with a just reflexion upon some who, pretending to Policy, did (prudently, as they thought) advise, That for the better securing and advancing some Doctrines, men should be born in hand that they were Fundamental, and accordingly were to receive them as such. But our Author (who was a great lover of Truth, (endeavouring to judge and speak of every thing according to the truth of the thing) and who always valued the Jacob-like Plainness and Simplicity of spirit, a free Openness and Singleness of heart, in any faithful Christian, as an high Perfection) look'd upon all such Practices with the greatest disgust and abhorrence; and so will every one who is an Israelite indeed, in whom there is no guile: And yet, though it be a most unworthy, it has been nevertheless a too common and usual artifice among some of the divided Churches in Christendom, to heighten Speculative Doctrines and such as are less weighty (and sometimes doubtful and uncertain) into Fundamental Articles, especially when it is for the advantage of the party that they should be deem'd such. But it had been infinitely better if the Moderation of the Church of England as to Articles of Religion had been imitated in other Churches; for want whereof elsewhere Ex Religione Ars facta est, cui deinde consequens fuerit, ut ad exemplum eorum qui turrim Babylonicam edificabant, affectatio temeraria rerum sublimium dissonas locutiones & discordiam pareret; as Grotius complains upon a like occasion in his De Veritate Relig. Christi. l. 6.

We might also briefly observe another Instance of his Prudence, and that was as to the choice of the fittest and most seasonable Time for communicating Truth to others.

And

And indeed this was a point of Prudence which he would advise should be most carefully consider'd, as being in his esteem half the work: otherwise some Useful Notions might, because they were Uncommon, be rashly condemned, before they were well considered and understood: and there are none more ready to condemn, than the half-learned and half-witted (which are not the less numerous nor the less confident) sort of men, who fear not (as he observed) by Reason, but by another Compass, viz. Fashion, or Interest, or Affection, &c. So true is that of the Comœdian,

Homine imperito nunquam quidquam injustius;

Qui, nisi quod ipse facit, nihil rectum putat;

Whereas men of the greatest Reason, deepest Judgment and noblest Accomplishments, are also men of the greatest Civility, Candour and Ingenuity;

Ἀνδράσι δὲ πινυτοῖσι τίλει νόσος ἡπίου αἰεί.

34. And now having advanced thus far in the Description of his Vertues, we may not silently or slightly pass over his Charity, a Grace that was very eminent and conspicuous in him; and so it ought to be in every Christian, it being the peculiar Badge and Livery of Christ's Disciples, as well as their indispensable Duty and necessary Qualification for their doing good here and their receiving a Reward hereafter. And therefore (to allude to that in 1 Cor. 13.) although our Author had great skill in Tongues, and had the gift of * Prophecy, and understood Mysteries, and was also able to remove Mountains of Difficulties, so as to make all become plain and smooth, particularly as to the understanding of hard passages in the more Myste-rious and Prophetical Books of H. Scripture; yet (notwithstanding all these Accomplishments) had he not had Charity, he had been nothing better, nay he had been just nothing, (according to those two observable expressions in that fore-named Chapter, ὃς ἐν ὡφελείᾳ and ὃς ἐν εἰρήνῃ.) His Knowledge, if alone, might have been apt to puff him up; but his Charity, which accompanied it, both disposed and enabled him to edify and build up others in the most holy Faith, in sound Wisdom and Understanding. His Charity was of the right kind, and could have approved itself such to those that were capable to judge thereof, by all those Fifteen Properties mentioned in that Chapter as the sure Marks and proper Characters of the genuine Christian Charity. But to insist upon so many particulars would be an unreasonable Excursion, and an unmerciful usurping upon the Reader's Patience: And besides, it is not very needful, some of those Properties having been more or less spoken to already in some foregoing Sections. To pretermitt therefore his most endearing Sweetness and obliging Affability in converse with others, his absolute Inoffensiveness either in words or behaviour towards all men, his rare Communicativeness and singular Alacrity in imparting what he knew to those who were of a soberly-inquisitive Genius, (all which were the fair Fruits and excellent Effects of the true Christian Love) we shall select only Two more General Instances wherein he express'd his Charity towards men, (for of that we are speaking:) and they were, 1. His careful * concealing or lessening of others Failings and Imperfections: So far was he from making the worst of every thing, as some do, who without making any favourable allowances are extream in marking what is amiss. And 2. His free relieving of the Necessitous: So far was he from hiding his face and shutting up his bowels from the poor and needy in the day of their distress.

* That by the gift of Prophecy (in 1 Cor. 13. and in other places) is meant the gift of interpreting Scripture, is clearly proved by the Learned Dr. Hammond and others.

* 1 Cor. 13. 7. Charity covereth (στέγει) all things.

* Jer. 20. 1 Cor. 13. 6. Charity rejoiceth not in iniquity.

* Num. 12:

* Chap. 10.

He was so perfect in the first instance, that he would μὴ δέειν βλασφημεῖν speak evil of no man: much less would he * watch for their halting, as one that || rejoiced in iniquity. Nay at such a distance he was from that evil, but epidemical, humour, that he chose rather to speak well of those in whom he had only Hope for a ground of commendation. Nor did he only conceal and cover the faults of others, even of his Enemies, (as far as the circumstances would bear, and in case it were not a greater Charity sometimes to disclose them) but he would also avoid the company of such as he had observed to please themselves or thought to tickle ill-minded persons in passing unworthy censures upon other men. And thus sometimes by silence, sometimes by rebuke, and (when it was convenient) by withdrawing from the place and company, he declared he would have no share in the sin of those who endeavoured to shew their uncharitable wit in either disparaging the parts or vilifying the performances of others. As for himself, when his own name was concern'd, he was signally Patient, even another Moses for Meekness, * vir mitissimus; he knew how to bear personal disrespect with an untroubled spirit, nobly and meekly, and thus (according to that of * Siracides) he glorified his soul in Meekness. An instance whereof appears in his civil

Reply

Reply to the Strictures of Dan. Lawenius; which were not without some angry and unhandſome reflexions upon our Author. The man had a long time been poring upon the Apocalyps, and ſeem'd to envy him the praiſe due to him for his Apocalyp tick Labours; fearing (belike) that thereby Mr. Mede would increase, and his writings muſt proportionably decrease in fame and reputation. Nor could any one that look'd upon our Author, his parts or pains with an evil eye, ſpeak ſo meanly and diminithingly of him as he would of himſelf; innocently revenging their great Envy, Paſſion or Prejudice with his as great Modesty and Meekneſs. Thus was he a rare Pattern of Patience, when himſelf was touch'd: But otherwiſe (which was his Vertue and Honour) juſtly Impatient he would be, when any, eſpecially worthy perſons, were reproached and unworthily dealt with in his preſence: Which may be verified by this remarkable and illuſtrious example among many others. After many invitations both by Letters and otherwiſe, he purpoſed to give a viſit to the famous Univerſity of Oxford, and particularly for the ſake of his much honoured and much obliging friend, Dr. Jackson, Preſident of Corpus Chriſti Colledge; (whoſe Piety and Learning (together with the great Candour and Benignity of his ſpirit) are eminently conſpicuous in the laſting Monuments of his elaborate Works, publiſhed partly by himſelf and partly by the unwearied induſtry and care of the Religious and Learned Mr. B. Oley.) There he was entertain'd (together with ſome of his quondam Pupils, who attended him from Cambridge) very civilly and nobly by the fore-mention'd Doctor, whoſe Courteſie was moſt obſervable in this, (to omit other particulars) That ſome choice and eminent men of the Univerſity were deſired by the Doctor to accompany Mr. Mede during his ſtay in Town. It chanced at dinner one day that the Theme of their diſcourſe was diſpleaſing to this Good man; for, by the liberty which was taken, ſome were criticizing upon and ſpeaking (as he thought) but unduly, or at leaſt not up to the worth of their Learned and worthy Profeſſor Dr. Prideaux, (afterwards the R. Reverend Biſhop of Worceſter.) Mr. Mede could not hold, but (as ſome then preſent have made the report) brake out into theſe or the like words; Gentlemen, I beſeech you deſiſt; the man of whom you now ſpeak deſerves far better words. It was his infirmity, let it be admitted, in this to be overſeen: But he hath Vertues and great Accompliſhments far more than enough to make up this defect. That he is both Learned and Pious, it may not be queſtioned; and one Infirmity amidſt ſo many Perfections is not to be regarded nor ever made mention of by one Chriſtian towards another. Let me therefore take the boldneſs to crave this at your hands, that you would deſiſt from this diſcourſe, and fall upon ſome other more profitable argument. A noble example and moſt worthy of imitation. Proceed we to that other inſtance of his Charity.

35. As he was thus Chriſtianly careful to conceal or leſſen the Failings and Imperfections of others; ſo he was no leſs diligent to expreſs his Charity in relieving thoſe Wants which could not be concealed. For as to his Temper, he was * συμπαθής and * 1 Pet. 3. εὐσπλαγχνός, inwardly ſympathizing and affected with the tenderest of Compaſſions towards others in their ſtreights and difficulties, as feeling in himſelf their very griefs, and reſenting their calamities and hardſhips as his own. And agreeable to this Temper was his Practiſe: For as became him that was ſo Chriſtianly affected, and was therefore * ἐν μεταδότῳ and κοινωνικός, he forgot not to do good and to communicate upon * 1 Tim. 5. all juſt occasions. And he was the more exactly careful to obſerve all the due ſeaſons and objects of Beneficence, becauſe he look'd upon Charity and Alms-giving not as an arbitrary thing, left to mens choice or diſcretion to be done or omitted; (under which Notion too many conſider it, for what ends it is eaſie to gueſs) but as a neceſſary and indiſpenſable Duty. It was an ingenious obſervation of his to this effect, That the word for Alms (in the language which our Saviour ſpoke) was צדקה, which imports Righteouſneſs, and conſequently carries an Obligation with it. And farther he conſidered Alms under the Notion of a Lords-rent and Tribute of Thankſgiving, which God the Lord of all (whoſe is the Earth and the Fulneſs thereof) juſtly requires from us, that thereby we may teſtifie our acknowledging of God as our Great Landlord, and our ſelves his Tenants, that hold all we have, of him. And thus * He that hath mercy * Prov. 14. on the poor, honoureth his Maker; and || He that giveth Alms, ſacrificeth praiſe. * Eccius. 35. Moved therefore to this great Duty of Charity by theſe and other Conſiderations, (as that it is expreſſly commanded and earneſtly inculcated in very many places of H. Scripture, and withall enforced from that Equity (and it is the greateſt Equity imaginable) which ſhines out in that * Royal Law, Thou ſhalt love thy Neighbour as thy ſelf; * Jam. 2. as alſo from ſome peculiar Motives which the Goſpel propounds whereby a Chriſtian's obligation obligation to this Duty is rather increas'd and heightened ) he persever'd and was not weary in doing good even unto all men, as he had opportunity or * ability ; wisely contriving to proportion and suit his Charitable reliefs answerably to the Necessities of others.

* So some render κατὰ Gal. 6.

Chap. 30.

* Gal. 6. ὡς ἐκτακόμεναι, &c.
|| Luke 6. 35.
* Rom. 12.

* Luke 6. 32.

Nor would he be discouraged and taken off from such acts of merciful Beneficence by the unworthy returns he sometimes met with from some disobliging persons. One instance whereof it may not be amiss here to insert. There was one in Cambridge to whom Mr. Mede had shewed favour in lending him money at a time of need ; but he being put in mind of his engagement, instead of making due payment, repay'd Mr. Mede only with undue words to this effect, That upon a strict and exact account he had no right to what he claim'd. No right? answered he. No, no right, it was told him, because he was none of God's children, for that they only have right who are gracious in God's sight. Ungracious and Unthankful Sectary ! His name might be mentioned, but let him be Anonymous, as fit to be numbered only among the שְׂכָרֵי הַבַּיִת, as Job doth express men of a vile character. The Story was related by Mr. Mede upon the occasion of some Intelligence received from London, That there was at that time a more strict examination there of those who came to take Holy Orders, concerning that strange Position, Dominium temporale fundatur in gratia ; at which one then in company being astonished, as supposing none would be so impudent as to assert it, Mr. Mede replied that he had particular experience of the evil effect and consequence of such Doctrine, as in the fore-mentioned Story. Yet notwithstanding such unworthiness ( which some perhaps would have made a gain of, as fancying themselves thereby excus'd from Charity ) he was not * slothful nor tired out in well-doing, but, as became a Follower of God, ( the Highest Pattern of Charity ) who is || kind even to the unthankful and to the evil, he continued patiently in doing good, chusing rather * to overcome evil with good, than to be overcome of evil. Other Charities seem'd to him but low and easie and common, such as even * Publicans and Sinners ( those of the worst note in the world ) do perform, who love those that love them and do good to those who do good to them : But the Charity which is extended to All, even to Enemies, to those who are contrary to us in either Judgment or Affection, is the more noble, God-like, unordinary : and such was our Author's ; for were men of different persuasions from him, and at as great a distance from one another as from Rome to Geneva or Amsterdam, &c. yet even all these might more or less upon occasion be influenc'd upon by his Charity.

* Micah 6. 8.
|| 2 Cor. 9.
* Eccius. 35.
|| 32.

* Eccius. 35.

36. As his Charity was thus largely Extensive and Universal, so was it likewise accompanied with the greatest Chearfulness. He so shew'd mercy as one that indeed * loved mercy ; and by giving chearfully he made it appear that he well remembered that of the Apostle, || God loveth a chearful giver ; not forgetting that of * Siracides, Ἐν πάσῃ δόσει ἰλαρῶσον τὸ πρὸς ὁπῶν σου. He so gave, as one possessed with the grand importance of that noble Maxime of our Saviour, ( not recorded in the Gospels, but preserved from oblivion by S. Luke in the Acts Chap. 20. ) IT IS MORE BLESSED TO GIVE THAN TO RECEIVE. He gave with a * chearful heart and ἐν ἀγαθῷ ὀφθαλμῷ with a chearful eye, as if he sensibly and feelingly knew the Deliciousness of that inward Joy and Satisfaction which arises from the conscience of doing good, so as to rescue others by a seasonable Charity from sorrow and misery. For besides the great Gains and rich Advantages that come in by Charity in this life, ( as well as the Promise of a great Reward and an unspeakable and glorious Joy hereafter ) there is an incomparable Pleasure that attends it here, and renders the very work and labour of Love its own Reward : and upon this score does that Prince of Divine Poets, Mr. G. Herbert, not impertinently in his Church-porch ( a piece enrich'd with most Divine Morality ) perswade to a chearful and frank Beneficence,

————— *All worldly Joys go less
To the one Joy of doing kindnesses.*

* Essay 58:
|| 2 Cor. 9.

37. His Charity was large as well for the Measure and Proportion thereof as for its Extensiveness : It was not wrung or squeez'd out of him by slow and small drops, ( for he gave neither grudgingly nor sparingly ) but freely and bountifully flow'd from him, who was ( as the * Prophet speaks of the Merciful man ) like a Spring of water, whose waters fail not. He remembered and followed the Apostle's advice for || sowing bountifully, and was not for an ἀδύπαντος εὐσέβεια, that cheap and easie and saving Religion, affected affected by most men; a saving Religion indeed, but how? of their Purfes only, not of their Souls: and yet not saving neither, as they imagine; for very often is verified that of Solomon in Prov. 11. There is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty. But from such Illiberal, and in the end Improvident and disadvantageous, courses our Author was far removed: With him it went for a great Imperfection and Blemish in a Christian to be attentior ad rem quam sat est; and the more of that Worldly spirit and Earthy temper in a man, the less a Christian, the less a Wise man; for Covetousness betrays men to many Indecencies, to ignoble and unbecoming practices, and withal blinds their eyes that they see not those Indecencies in themselves which are easily espied by others. In his account it was unworthy and dishonourable for a Christian to expels his Charity in a parsimonious and scant measure, whenas the promised Reward is set forth by our Lord so fully and significantly under the similitude of * Good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over.

* Luke 6.

And therefore our Author leaving אנוש מן הארץ * the man of the earth and מתי מן העולם || the men of the world, such as do only * ταῦτα γὰρ φρονεῖν, relish and mind earthly things, to their penurious scantlings, their low and weak degrees of Charity, beyond which their Niggardise will not suffer them to move; and leaving also the more common and ordinary measure and proportions of Beneficence, wherein the better sort think they quit themselves like Christians and come off fairly and creditably; he chose the more Excellent way, and (to the Glory of God and the Honour of the Author's memory be it here remembred) He devoted unto God and set apart the Tenth of his yearly incomes for charitable and pious uses. To this his Vowing unto God so large a Free-will-offering not any vain-glorious humour, but the Love of Christ constrain'd him, and a deep sense of Gratitude to Almighty God for his many and undeserved favours. Nay so far he was from that poor design of gaining hereby a thin reward of Aieri applause from the world, that he studied as much to keep it secret, as the Pharisaick Hypocrites contrived to do their Alms with noise and all the pomp and observation imaginable; for they did all * to be seen and to receive glory of men, and so were no less Beggars than those they gave to; Praise and Applause was the Alms they begg'd of men, while they were solemnly and publickly (after their sounding the Trumpet) giving Alms to others.

* Psal. 10.

|| Psal. 17.

* Phil. 3.

* Matth. 6.

38. The same noble proportion of Charity is recorded (though too briefly) of that Religious young Lord, the Lord Harington, in the Sermon preached at his Funerals by Mr. Stock, where this is said for a Memorial of him, That (besides his Occasional Charities) he gave the Tenth of his yearly revenue to the poor. The same is particularly remembred of the Learned and Pious Dr. Hammond, among several other Excellencies worthy of celebration, in his Life. The like is also recorded (though but * briefly mentioned) in the Life of that Practical Preacher Mr. W. Whately, one of the same Colledge and Contemporary with Mr. Mede. And herein these Israelites indeed, the spiritual seed of Jacob, followed that high Pattern which of old that holy Patriarch Jacob had set the world, who devoted the Tenth part of his estate to God, Gen. 28. Nor did he lose by it, for God blest'd him exceedingly: And those that have been followers of Jacob, as in his Plainness and Singleness of heart, so likewise in the Largeness of his Charity, have found it true, and upon their experience have deliver'd it for a most certain Aphorism, That such Giving is the surest way of Getting, and That thus to * scatter is the safest means of increasing.

* See this at large and particularly related in the Appendix to Mr. Mede's Life, Sect. I.

* Prov. 11.

And for a yet more particular and pregnant proof hereof, it is worthy here to be remembred what the Reverend Mr. Gataker delivered in his * Sermon preached at the Funeral of Mr. John Parker, Merchant and Citizen of London, a person eminent for his exemplary Beneficence, (as also for all other Christian Vertues) and therefore worthy to be added to those other Charitable Heroes mentioned by us. In short thus: "At his first effectual Call, this, among other things he then resolved upon, "was one, To set apart every year a Tenth of his Gain for the relief of the poor. Hereunto he was induced by this Reason, (besides others set down by him in his Memorials) That he might shew his Love and Thankfulness unto God, as for raising him from a mean condition to that Wealth he then had, so especially for his Spiritual Goodness to him. This proportion he constantly set apart, and out of this Treasury it was that he so liberally dispens'd upon all just occasions. This was his Practice, and it was agreeable to his daily Prayer, That as God increas'd him in Wealth, so he would be pleas'd withall to increase in him Humility, Thankfulness, together with a constant Perseverance in that lovely Grace of Charity. But what was the issue of all? God

* The Title of the Sermon is, The Decease of Lazarus.

" heard

“heard his Prayers, and rewarded his Alms: but he would fift try him. For (which is not to be unremember'd) he reported it himself, that for some space of time (some three or four years) after that his resolution of setting apart the Tenth of his Gain for Charitable purposes, he found no increase, nor did it appear that he thrived in the world: yet was he not thereby discouraged, but still gave bountifully and cheerfully. And this he did (to use his own words) out of love to God; freely leaving Prosperity in Temporal things to God's good pleasure, and conceiving that God in wisdom and Goodness prospered him not, thereby to try his Sincerity to him and his Charity to others; and that he himself might thereby have experience of his Love to God, his Faith, Patience and Constancy: nor would he forgoe those Evidences hereof that thereby he gain'd for ten thousand times ten thousand times more than they cost him. And thus God recompensed his patient continuance in doing good with Inward Blessings, and he then thrived in his Spiritual estate, if not in his Worldly. But from that time forward (after this proving of him for a season) God abundantly advanced his Temporal estate, so that he profess'd he found experimentally those gracious Promises of God to be true, of his blessing him that \ differseth and giveth to the poor,* and of the || repayment of that with interest that is lent unto the Lord, and of the \ finding again after many days* with increase the bread that is cast upon the waters.

* Psal. 112.

|| Prov. 19. 17.

* Ecclel. 11. 1.

* 2 Cor. 9.

“This was his Constant and Stated Charity, besides what over and above all went out of his Poor's-purse, which he never carried out empty, that he might ever be doing good. Nor did he in all this seek his own Praise, but God's, that so his Charity might occasion \ many thanksgivings unto God.* And therefore, when he himself gave to others, his usual word was, Praise God; or when he sent to others any summe to be distributed among the poor, his manner was to add in his Letter, Will them to praise God for it: Just according to the mind of the Religious Mr. G. Herbert, who in his Character of the Country-Parson doth thus express himself; When-ever he gives any thing, and sees men labour in thanking of him, he exacts of them to let him alone, and say rather, God be praised, God be glorified; that so the Thanks may go the right way, and thither only where they are only due.

These excellent Memorials of this Merciful mans Charity we thought good to excerpt out of the fore-named Funeral Sermon, and to present them here, though in a more contracted form, they being so highly Exemplary and Useful, and therefore worthy to be made more publick; too good to be lost, as else they might be, that Sermon being printed many years since, and by itself, and not extant in the Volume containing his other Sermons.

39. But to return to Mr. Mede; There were not a few that wonder'd at his Diffusive Charity, considering his Incomes were not great, (for he had nothing but what his place in the Colledge afforded him, no Dignity or advantageous Preferment abroad.) But their wonder might have been lessen'd, had they either seriously considered the Promises of Plenty and outward Blessings in this life made by God peculiarly to this Grace of Charity, or had they known how great a Summe the prudent charitable man is able to lay up for the poor by a Frugal management of a little Stock. But our Author knew it well and by Experience, which is the mother of Wisdom, the surest way of knowing for our selves and of convincing others. Experimentis optime creditur. Accordingly to this purpose (upon an occasion which proved expensive to him through the disingenuity of some who yet were obliged to ease him) he thus express'd himself—I take it patiently, and put it among my Erogations of Charity; and I thank God I have not been so ill a husband of a poor Fellowship, but I can spare so much for pious uses. He warily therefore avoided the occasions of unnecessary expences, and when he saw others lavishly spending beyond their Income, and not wisely proportioning their expences to their Receipts, he used to say, (with a pleasant allusion to that Philosophick term) They wanted the Estimative Faculty. And indeed in Prudence it was not less than needful for him to husband well his small Stock, who employ'd his thoughts and cares, his studies and best diligences about other things than Wealth, Honour and Pleasure, which yet are the things that not a few men pursue eagerly and industriously, with all their mind and heart, with all their soul and all their strength; to the dishonour of their Function, if any Clergie-men should be so Secular and Unspiritual in their Disposition and Practice, as also to the dishonour of the Doctrine of the Holy Jesus deliver'd in his Sermon in the Mount, be they Christians of what denomination soever. Besides that this πλεονεξία or Plurihabitio, this covetous ambition greedily hunting after more and more still, is contrary to the great and many obligations obligations of our Religion, to that High, Holy and Heavenly Calling wherewith Christians are called, as also to the expectation of that * better and enduring substance, that * Hebr. 12. great recompence of Reward, reserved in Heaven.

His honest Thrift and Frugality was the more able to administer to his Charity, because it was accompanied with a constant Temperance. His feeding for the most part was rather to suffice Nature than to allow any pleasure to his Appetite, which, being usually good, sometimes (though very seldom) he would gratifie with making a larger meal; but his ordinary was his Colledge-Commons (to which no man was more constant) with the smaller sort of Beer, (the Wine which he drank at the Communion being usually more than he drank all the year besides:) Which made him merrily to tell them who observ'd the thriving of his Body, (which in his latter years was very apparent) that They might see what Colledge-commons could do.

And in his both Frugality and Temperance he verified that of the Psalmist, * A good * Psalm. 112. man will guide his affairs with discretion: It being a most approved and experienced Truth, That for the enabling a man to a free and chearful exercise of Christian Charity it is absolutely necessary that he retrench and cut off all needless expences either about Apparel or Diet, Building or Sports and Recreations, &c. Otherwise Frequent or Expensive Treatments, Pride and Curiosity about Attire and Dressings will soon make Charity bare and cold, make it look pale and meagre, and at last quite starve it. Where much is laid out upon Back or Belly, there will be but little spared for Beneficence. Where a man, through his Voluptuousness and Sensuality, finds himself too dear for himself, so that it becomes difficult to maintain his deliciousness, it will be thought too grievous to maintain good works for necessary uses, as the Apostle speaks, Tit. 3. Such a one will be greedily scraping for himself, that he may have to consume upon his Lusts, rather than μεταδοῦναι τῷ χρείαν ἔχοντι to distribute (proportionably to his estate) to him that needeth. Where so much is solemnly offer'd in Sacrifice (as especially at great Feasts) to that false God, the * Belly, (and the best and fattest is offer'd up, and withall the sweetest, for large Drink-offerings, to that mortal and perishing God,) there will be but little reserv'd for the * sacrifices of communicating and doing good, with which the Eternal and only true God is well pleased. But Christian Religion (as it designs to cherish and advance every thing that is worthy, lovely, and useful for the good of man) is excellently prepar'd and accommodated to secure the Grace of Charity, by obliging to Modesty and Humility, sober Frugality and Temperance, and (in order thereunto) to the subjugating of all inordinate Affections, to the resolute denying of the clamorous cravings and impetuous desires of the Sensitives Powers; the subduing whereof is a great instance of Spiritual Valour, inward Health and Strength: as on the contrary it is a great Imperfection and Weakness, and withal a dishonourable thing, for one that owns the name of Christian, not to have power over his Sensual appetites, but to have impatient desires, vehement affections for such or such delicacies, and as vehement delights in them, to be overcurious and studious for pleasing his Appetites, to be enslaved to his Palate, * enslaved to Wine, and || serving various pleasures, as the Apostle describes the temper of some unworthy Christians. Besides, it argues a man not to have had so true a * Gust * Tit. 2. εἰς τὴν ἀσχηματίαν of the powers of the world to come, nor to be as he ought affected with the Hope of those pure and permanent Felicities in the Future Life, which Christianity (over and above the present ease and pleasure that accompanies Humility and Temperance here) hath more fully brought to light and set before us: For were these cordially believed, they would work in men a generous disregard of those Sensual enjoyments which too many (such is the courseness of their Temper) count their Felicity, making themselves hereby like the Beasts that perish, who (if this were Felicity) enjoy as much or more of it than Man himself. To conclude: If men are not so much under the Power of Religion as to deny the solicitations of their inordinate Appetites, and bring in subjection the Flesh with the Passions and Lusts thereof to the Spirit, they do but Parrot-like, and as they are taught, talk of Self-denial and Mortification; and being * φιλήδονοι μᾶλλον ἢ φιλόθεοι, Lovers of Pleasures rather than Lovers of God and their Neighbour, they plainly and in reality deny the Power of Godliness, though they may have the Form of it. Whereas if they were under the power and energy of Religion, they would find themselves thoroughly furnished and chearfully dispos'd to every good work.

So true a Friend is Frugal Temperance, so hurtful an Enemy is a Delicious, Soft and Luxurious (as well as the Covetous) humour to that Divine, Amiable, and universally-Beneficial Grace of Charity!

40. And now having spoken of his Charity or Love towards men, it aptly falls into this place that we should observe something of his Love towards God; wherein yet we need not be so large as in the former Instances; for what we have already observ'd of his Character doth abundantly prove it. His Meekness, Patience, Christian Prudence and Moderation, and (those Two bright Graces of the Greatest magnitude) his Humility and Charity are pregnant evidences and real demonstrations of the Love of God dwelling in him. Where these Fruits of the Spirit grow and flourish, it's a sure sign that such a Christian is * ἐν ἀγάπῃ ἐρριζωμένος rooted in Love. To be Meek and Patient, Humble and Lowly in Spirit, to have an Heart full of Charity, and melted into all compassionate endeavours for the good of others, even of Enemies, these are higher and harder things than to talk of Religion, * to say, Lord, Lord, || to shew much love with their mouth, to abound in the external observances of Religion; for so did the Pharisees, who therefore by their outward specious profession gain'd a great reputation of Sanctity from the world, but yet of them our Saviour Christ pronounces freely and smartly, * I know you, that ye have not the Love of God in you: a startling and grievous word to the Pharisees then, and the like it would be to the Pharisaick Christians to be told so now. In brief, He testified his Love to God in that which is the most eminent and genuine expression of it, viz. an Entire, Sincere, Uniform and Constant Obedience to his Commandments, * For this is the Love of God, that we keep his Commandments; or (according to those two main Characteristicks of the Pure and Undeified Religion in S. * James) in Unspottedness from the world and Charity to the poor and desolate. What's less than this is but Lip-devotion, religious Courtship, insignificant and empty Complements. And whereas he observ'd that too many seem'd to make conscience of the Duties of the First Table, but had little or no care of the Duties of the Second; he had * respect unto both: For (said he) None can be truly Religious towards God, that is not truly Honest in his conversation towards his Neighbour. Thus he believ'd, and thus he practis'd.

41. But to superadd some other particular Instances of his Love to God; He farther shew'd the Tendernefs of this Affection by the Zeal he had for the Honour of God, and by the dear regard he express'd to every thing wherein he thought the Divine Interest was concern'd. He could in no wise brook the bestowing Religious Worship upon Creatures, and therefore with a just severity he would equal the practices of the present Roman Church in their Saint-worship and Image-worship with those of the Israelites in following the * ways of Ahab and Jeroboam; and constantly asserted That the Great Apostasie or Antichristianism did (as to one main part thereof) consist in Spiritual Fornication or Idolatry. Nor need any Protestant be disturb'd at the word Antichristian or Antichrist so frequently used by our Author when he has to do with the Roman Polity and the Chief thereof: For (to obviate any impertinent λογωμαχία and contest about the word as used in S. John's Epistles) our Author was well aware that the Antichrist and Antichrists mention'd there might particularly and primarily respect some * Impostors that began then to appear in the world about the end of the Jewish State; but withal he thought that what was said of those Antichrists [in chap. 2. 22, &c.] might interpretatively (though not explicitely and directly) be verified of the Great Antichrist then not in being, but to come, and by no unnatural consequence be applied to him, of whom those other Antichrists were in some sense Figures or Forerunners: For this was his Notion in this particular, He that sets up and substitutes in the room of Christ Saints and Angels, as so many Mediators between us and God, (agreeably to the practice of the Heathens, who of old set up Demons as Agents between the Sovereign Gods and Men) eo ipse negat Jesum esse Christum, does thereby really deny that Jesus is the Christ; as he that worships more Gods than one, does ipso facto deny that Jehovah he is God. And in pursuance of this his Notion he had this not improper Observation, viz. That after S. John had said concerning Christ, * This is the true God, and eternal life, he immediately adds, Little children, keep your selves from Idols; intimating (said he) thereby, That in that Fatal and Great Apostasie which was to surprise the Church, Christians would worship Idols (i. e. false Christs and Mediators) in stead of Christ, and thus deny the Lord that bought them, the Lord Christ, the true and only Mediator between God and men.

Not being fondly addicted therefore to the use of this word, he does frequently in his Commentary upon the Apocalyps make choice of other Forms of speech, and such as were suggested to him from the style of that Mysterious Book, [as, Bestia Bicornis, Pseudo- * Ephes. 3.

* Matth. 7.
|| Ezek. 33.

* Jo. 5. 42.

* 1 John 5.

* Chap. 1. 27.

* Psal. 119. 6.
— I have respect unto all thy Commandments.

* See Discourse 43. pag. 238.

* See Book V. Chap. 7. which seems to be an Essay or First Draught of his Notions upon that Subject.

* Chap. 5. 20.

Pseudo-propheta Romanus, Meretrix Babylonica, Bestia Pseudo-prophetica seu Pontificia, Caesar Papanus, Regnum Pontificale, &c. ] when he has occasion to speak of the Roman Polity and the Head thereof: yet withal he was not so weakly nice as wholly to decline that word [Antichrist] in his Apocalyptick labours; as appears in his Comment. upon what concerns the Third Trumpet in Chap. 8. — Episcopus Romanus — nihil aliud effecit quam ut hoc quasi oppanso velo, nè ipse pro Capite Novissimo, id est, Antichristo, tandem à minus perspicacibus tam liquidò haberetur; as also in his Comment. upon Chap. 14. vers. 17, &c. Nos qui Occidentalem Antichristum asserimus, &c. and (to name no more) in his Specimina upon Chap. 16. are to be found Bestia Antichristiana, Terra in Universitate Antichristiana designat scabellum Antichristi, Universitas Pontificia, Mundus Antichristianus, Jurisdictio Antichristiana, Mare Antichristianum est Ditionis Pontificalis ambitus, with other expressions of the like import, concerning which the Reader without an Oedipus may know the Authors mind, and to whom they are there applied. Wherefore though this Title was properly and primarily meant (in S. John's Epistles) of some Impostors and Hereticks that appear'd about that Age: yet seeing the ancient Fathers made use of this word to signify and characterize some other Enemy of Christ yet to come, (whether a more open Enemy of Christ, or a more close one that is rather against the Interest of Christ though he pretends to be for him;) and seeing that after-Writers have taken the word from the Fathers; and (it being a compendious significant expression) have made use of it in their Writings, as well Papists, who apply it to one that is to come at the end of the world, as Protestants, who apply it to some in being; our Author was not so scrupulous as to decline a word that was become thus current and passable in all Ages, (and as allowable, if not unfitly used, as any Technical word in any Faculty) though sometimes it were improperly and unworthily used by rash Zelots, to the gratifying of their pride and passion. And accordingly whosoever has been conversant in the Writings of the Renowned Arch-bishop Whitgift against T. C. and the Disciplinarians, will find that more than once he makes use of this word when he has occasion to speak of the Roman Church, although T. C. and his Adherents were over-apt to call things not only innocent, but laudable and decorous also, Antichristian: wherein they express'd a Zeal not less Imprudent than Uncharitable; for hereby as they did the Common Enemy no small credit and service, so they likewise weakned the true Interest and hazarded the safety of the Protestant Reformed Religion. Which was piously and prudently observ'd by the fore-mentioned Arch-bishop, and accordingly he tells them faithfully and plainly, * I know that Sects and Heresies gave strength unto Antichrist, and at the length were one special means of placing him in his Throne; even as I am also persuaded that he worketh as effectually at this day by your stirs and contentions, whereby he hath and will more prevail against this Church of England than by any other means whatsoever. Therefore it becometh you to take heed how you divide the Army of Christ, which should unanimiter fight against that Antichrist. By which passage (to omit others) it appears this Reverend Prelate was Semper idem, of the same judgment in his elder days and in his greatest Height, as when formerly he maintained this Thesis at the publick Commencement, answering for his Degree of D. D. Papa est Ille Antichristus, as Sir George Paul relates in the History of his Life.

* See his Defence of the Answer to the Admonition, pag. 349.

And therefore our Author, in applying that Title to the Papal or Roman Hierarchy so miserably degenerate, was not alone, but did tread in the steps of those who were of greatest eminency in our Church, and (not to mention those other great Names) particularly in the steps of the Renowned Bishop Andrews, his ancient and constant Friend, whose multifarious reading and great judgment did abundantly qualifie him for an able and most accomplish'd Guide in this affair. What his Sentiments were herein appears by several passages in his Tortura Torti, [particularly in pag. 183. to pag. 188.] where he proves against the cavils of that busie Romanist, That by Babylon in Apocal. chap. 17. & chap. 18. is meant non Roma Ethnica, sed Antichristiana; and withal evinces the vanity of that poor subterfuge, (and yet made use of (as that other also of Roma Ethnica) by H. Grotius in his Annotations) That by the Destruction of Babylon there foretold is to be understood the Burning of Rome by the Goths and Vandals about the year 455. as afterwards [in pag. 312, 315.] he makes it clear that Idolatry (the great Character of Antichristianism, or that Token of Antichrist's Kingdom, as the sumptuous decking of Images is styl'd in the Homily against the Peril of Idolatry) is justly charged upon the Roman Church: and in the same place likewise he detects the impertinency of that trivial shift of the Romanists in distinguishing between Idolum and Imago; with much more of the like import in that Treatise of his,

* In Ep. ad
Fr. Ducaum.

which the Learned Is. Casaubon worthily styles * Exactissima fidei & diligentia Scriptum.

* Febr. 25.
1636.

That learned Tract of his about the Numbers in Dan. 12. is call'd by him
Revelatio Antichristi; it was finished by him three years before his death.

To conclude, It may not be amiss here to add a short story not impertinent to the argument in hand. Mr. Mede having lately preached a Sermon at * S. Marie's in Cambridge upon Eccles. 5. 1. about the Reverence of Gods House, a young Master of Arts took the freedom sometime after to tell him (as who might not be free with him, a person of such exemplary Humility and Condescensions?) That from some passages in that Discourse the world concluded that he had changed his Opinion, and that he did not now think as formerly that the Pope was the Hogben Moghen, (that was his drolling expression.) No? replied Mr. Mede, But I do, and shall think so as long as I live, for all this.

And in Epistle 58, written within less than two months before his death, it is plain whom he means there by the Man of Sin and Antichrist. See pag. 882 & pag. 834.

42. And here we have a fair occasion to represent another of those worthy Qualities that adorn'd his Character, His well-grounded Constancy and Unchangeableness of Judgment. We say, Well-grounded; otherwise for a man to persist resolutely in an Opinion, because it has been his Opinion, is neither Vertue nor matter of Praise, but rather a piece of troublesome Stiffness and Pertinacity, usually accompanied with fond Self-conceitedness and a design to secure his fame and some emolument he receives from his easie admirers: From which humour none was more free than our Author, who would profess That (so far as he could judge of himself by experience) he was as willing to embrace Truth, when he saw evidence for it, as any man living; as well considering that it is the part of a true Christian, (as Aristotle observes it to be of a true Philosopher) ἐπὶ σωτηρίᾳ τῆ ἀληθείας καὶ τὰ οἰκῆα ἀναιρεῖν, for the interest and advancement of Truth to forgoe and quit his own private conceits and speculations, how dear soever they were formerly unto him; and on the contrary, an argument of a low and servile spirit, δαλεῦν τῇ ὑποθέσει, to be either fondly addicted or enslaved to any Hypothesis and Opinion either of his own or others. Our Author was not indeed light of belief, nor would he easily take up an Hypothesis: But when any new Notion was presented to him by others, or offered itself to his thoughtful mind, he would first make a stand and pause well upon it, strictly examining the Grounds thereof; and if, upon a serious and due weighing of all that was fit to be taken into consideration, he found it to be a solid Truth, he was not apt * σαλευθῆναι ἀπὸ τῶ νόου, to be shaken from his judgment; a right τετράγωνος ἀνὴρ, (as Aristotle both in his Ethics and Rhetorick styles a Vertuous man) or, in the Apostles language, * ἰσχυροῦς, ἀμετακίνητος, || ἐνηργυγός, ὃν τῇ παρούσῃ ἀληθείᾳ, Stedfast, unmovable, and established in the present Truth: Yea he was ever so impartial and constant a Lover of Truth, that nothing but the Holy Scripture and sound Reason could prevail upon him. 'Tis true, To conceal his judgment, not to divulge every thing that was Truth to him, he was not hard to be perswaded. The remembrance of the Apostles Rule, (Rom. 14.) Hast thou faith? have it to thy self, as also his own Charity, Prudence and Peaceableness of spirit, did dispose him to it, εἰ δέον ἐστὶ and where it was convenient: But neither Friends, nor Interests, nor any worldly Allurements whatsoever were of force to corrupt his affections, or pervert his judgment; much less could they prevail with him unworthily to deny any Truth, how unplaussible soever it was to some men, and therefore disadvantageous to himself. For a proof of his constant and unremovable affection to Truth, as also of his patient enduring the contradiction of others against himself, take this Instance, viz. That in the revolution of about twenty years by-past (the saying was his own) he had by the self-same persons been look'd upon, and accordingly reported of, as Popish, Protestant, and Puritan; and yet he would protest it, as in the presence of God, that to his knowledge he had not in the least receded from his very first perswasions: So that all the while he was the same without wavering, although varied to their appearance, because they sailing with the tide and wind varied towards him. Thus they in the Vessel under sail, being always in motion, think the Land moves, (so it seems to their erring sense) which yet is never the less fixed and unmoved for their thinking amiss. But our Author, as he consider'd that Precept in Siracides, (chap. 5. 10.) Ἰδοὺ ἐνηργυγός. ὃν συνέσει σε, Bethou stedfast in thy understanding; so he knew likewise that the ready way to attain to this establishment was this, (according to the counsel in the foregoing verse) *not to winnow, or * sail with every wind.*

* Grotius upon the place expounds this phrase by that in Plautus,
Ut ventus esset,
volum vertere.

But we must not indulge our selves the liberty of enlarging upon every thing in our Author which render'd him justly exemplary, worthy of praise and imitation:

Return

Return we therefore from this Digression to what has a near affinity to our former argument: In speaking to which and the remaining particulars we must study to be short, and take the nearest way to our journey's end, lest we over-drive the more infirm, and therefore the more querulous, sort of Readers, and wear out their patience; otherwise, to those that are of sounder and stronger judgments (and consequently capable to value and honour and *love the Author) we doubt not but a larger Narrative than this would seem not tediously long, but too short rather, as indeed the most enlarged History of his Life, his Piety and Learning, is in itself and upon a true account a short History, too short, if we consider the great Worth and manifold Perfections of the Person; of whom though we should speak much, we shall yet certainly come short, if we may here use in an inferior sense what is said of God by the Son of Sirach, chap. 43. To proceed then:

* Non parior me quicquam nescire de eo
quem amam.
Plin.

43. As he abhorr'd Idolatry and superstition, so he likewise abhorr'd Sacrilege and all Profanation of Holy things. As for Sacrilege, his judgment is well known to those who have read his Works with attention: amongst which (to omit several passages in his other Discourses) there is one Diatriba wholly spent upon the Story of Ananias and Sapphira in Acts 5. wherein the nature and proper notion of the Sin there mentioned is clearly explained, as also the hainousness and danger of Sacrilege is fully proved from several Examples of special remark in H. Scripture, all eminently verifying that of Solomon, * It is a snare to the man who devoureth that which is holy. With the consideration whereof our Author being deeply affected, as also of the great disservice done hereby to any Intendment of Pious Charity, and the no less dishonour done to Religion, when what is devoted to Pious purposes is less secure from the evil eye and rapacious hands than what is given to any other use or service whatsoever, yea though it were to the service of Vanity, Luxury or any other Lust; he could not but heartily wish that some of the Protestant Churches would seriously lay it to heart, and approve themselves more and more Reformed, in the cleansing and purifying themselves from any the least stain of Sacrilege; from which yet (so tempting is this Sin with the seeming advantages it presents) they that call themselves Catholicks are not free neither, yea even he that is peculiarly styl'd Rex Catholicus is wont to be accursed and excommunicated at Rome on Maundy-Thurs day for detaining part of S. Peter's Patrimony, as they are pleas'd to call it.

* Prov. 20. 25.

And it is as well known how much he abhorr'd any kind of Sacrilegious profanation of what is Relatively holy, whether Times, Places, or Things Sacred, as Bona Ecclesiastica, the Sacred Revenues and the like; and that in more than a few Discourses he hath largely asserted the Distinction between Things Sacred and Common, and that therefore what is Sacred, and consequently is become God's by a peculiar right, should be used appropriately and with a different respect from things Common: such an appropriation and discriminative use of Holy things being a just testimony and expression of the respect and honour due unto Almighty God, whose Name is called upon them. The like Zeal he had particularly for God's House, his Worship, and Service therein; that all things might be done there * εὐχαριστῶν and || πρὸς οἰκονομίαν, decently (for the honour of God,) and to edification (for the benefit of our Neighbour.) Which two Rules of the Apostle excellently score out the way, and exactly contain, even in external and indifferent things, what course is to be taken, as the Religious and Prudent Mr. G. Herbert * hath stated the case; who hath also in his Poem [The British Church] elegantly and fully express'd the very same Sentiments that our Author had touching the εὐπρέπεια of God's House, the keeping the mean between Superstition and Slovenliness, between the painted looks, lascivious gaudiness of the Church upon the Hills, and the careless neglected dress of some Churches in the Valley. Both our Author and this Good man were after Davids heart, (the man after God's heart) who thus breath'd forth his affection, Domine, dilexi decorem Domus tue, and thought it unworthy that the Ark of God should dwell within curtains, whereas he himself dwelt in an house of Cedar; nor was he of so ungenerous a disposition in Religion as to serve the Lord his God of that which did cost him nothing. So agreeable is it to a Soul that is established with a religious and free spirit, as well as it is agreeable to the Light of Nature, That God, the Best of Beings, should be served and honoured with the Best: Which was shadowed out of old in the Sacrifices and Drink-offerings; In the Peace-offerings, wherein God did feast with the people, the Fat upon the inwards, &c. was God's Mef, his מִנְחָה or Food; All the Fat is the Lord's; and was therefore to be burnt upon the Altar and offer'd unto the Lord. Nor were the Drink-offerings to be of any sort of Wine, but of Shecar, the best Wine, Num. 28.

* 1 Cor. 14.
40.
|| Verse 26.

* In his Character of the Country Parson, Ch. 13.

2 Sam. 24.

Levit. 3.

This Concio ad Clerum, now published, was preach'd Anno 1618.

Nor had our Author herein any ambitious design to please men, and thereby to advantage himself in the world, (as some that less knew him were apt rashly to impute unto him Time-serving;) for this just right was done to him in print by one better acquainted with him, though of a different perswasion, That he had, many years before the Times did relish those Notions, declar'd himself to the same purpose, instancing in his Concio ad Clerum; which particularly treated De Sanctitate Relativa & Veneratione Sacra: and to the same effect he had express'd himself in an early Specimen or first Draught of his Thoughts, which he presented to the R. R. Bishop Andrews, after he was newly made Fellow of Christ's Colledge.

* 1 Pet. 2.
1 Heb. 13.

1 Pet. 2.

* Chap. 10.

44. With his zeal for God's honour and Church-decorum, we may not unfitly joyn his mindful observance of the Apostle's Precepts, * Honour the King, and || Obeys them that have the rule over you, and submit your selves; for they watch for your Souls, as they that must give account: and herein he shew'd himself a true Son of peace, as we observ'd before, and shall now farther add, That he had so great a value and so hearty an affection for the Peace of our Jerusalem, and, in order thereunto, for submitting to every ordinance of man for the Lords sake, whether to the King as Supream, or unto Governours as those that were sent by him; that when he received notice of the evil that was then breaking forth out of the North, to apply that of Jeremy, (chap. 1.) who elsewhere complains in the same note, * Behold, the noise of the bruit is come, and a great commotion out of the North-country; upon this intelligence of wars and rumours of wars, his righteous and meek Soul was grieved within him, and in a Letter of his written to a Friend within less than three months before his death he thus express'd his resentments, concluding in a strain almost Prophetical, If the Scottish business be no better than you write, I pray God both they and others have not cause to curse the time at length when such courses were first resolved upon, and that in the event the cause of Religion pretended be not advanced thereby as it is in Germany, and no better. I am firmly perswaded there will never come good of it. God avert his judgments, and make them wiser.

* 1 Cor. 3.

* Jam. 3.

His reverential regard to the establish'd Government and Discipline of the Church was well known to them that knew him; and they that knew not his Person, may know it from his Writings, these testifie of him, how great a Lover he was of Unity, Peace, all good and decent Order, and whatsoever might make for the beauty and strength, the honour and safety of the Protestant Reformation both here at home and abroad; as considering that (those Characters of * a Carnal and Unspiritual temper) Envy, and Strife and Divisions, and (the consequents thereof) * Confusion and Disorder, would at once both weaken and dishonour the Protestant Cause, and occasion the Grand Enemy to triumph, who, seeing much of his work done for him by those who would seem to be most averse from him, while they bite and devour one another, claps his hands, saying, Aha, Aha, Our eye hath seen it, So would we have it. But our Author thought it his becoming duty to study Obedience for peace and good order's sake, and not to expose the Protestant Interest to danger and ruine.

* Jam. 1.

* Psal. 51.

'Tis true, There were not wanting even in his days some who, breaking themselves off from the Great Congregation, were apt to say, Lo, here is Christ; Behold, he is in the secret chambers: as if Christ were not wherethe Name of God is call'd upon in publick, through the Mediation (not of Saint or Angel, but) of the One Mediator Christ Jesus; and where the Word of Christ (not unwritten and uncertain Traditions and fabulous Legends) is publickly read and preach'd, and hath prosper'd (through God's blessing) to the conversion and salvation of many thousand Souls. But our Author (being a strong and adult Christian, one that could see into the nature and reasons and consequences of things, one that had * look'd into the perfect Law of liberty, and was * establish'd with a free spirit) well knew the slight insignificancy of what is pretended by some for their uncharitable Separations, and that their way was not Perfection, but Weakness, an argument of a low, narrow and Jewish spirit, that would engross Messias only to themselves, and confine him to their particular modes; and no less an argument of a weak, servile and really Superstitious spirit, to be unreasonably scrupulous about things of an indifferent nature, to forbid themselves such things as God hath no-where forbidden, and to put a greater stress upon the doing of some things and the not-doing of other things than either the Scripture hath or the nature of the things will bear. And therefore the Scripture represents those of this temper as Weak in the faith, in opposition to the Strong, who as they manifest themselves to be such in a not being over-sollicitous about those little things, (though in the mean while most mindful and strictly observant of the necessary and substantial things of Religion, ligion, which are all clearly declar'd in the H. Scripture) to likewise in that they can better bear the censurings and sometimes unhandfom dealings of those that are Weak, and find it more easie to treat such civilly, and to look upon them with a more benign and clear aspect than the οἱ ἀδυνεῖς do, at least some of them, if we may judge of men by their behaviour. But of that better temper was our Author, a person that did not proudly or passionately despise or behave himself unseemly to those that dissented from him; ( for then of Strong he had become Weak; ) nor would he do any thing that was uncivil or unhumane unto any: he could say in a very good sense (to borrow that of the Comœdian) Homo sum, humani à me nihil alienum puto.

45. Before we conclude this argument, it may be Operæ-premium to superadde one useful Observation and Notion of our Author's, not impertinent to the present business. There were some in his time who thought themselves excused for non-compliance with the establish'd Liturgy and Orders Ecclesiastick, by a vulgar (yet false) notion of Scandal, as if To scandalize were To displease or aggrieve others, or To occasion the dislike or anger of others, as of such particularly who had formerly entertain'd a good opinion of them and their Ministry. Now as these things came sometimes to be mention'd in discourse, he was wont to express his Thoughts concerning the right and genuine notion and importance of that word to this sense; "That the word σκανδαλίζειν (being Verbum καταβατικόν and having a Transitive signification, as words in the Conjugation Hiphil have in Hebrew, and therefore well render'd To make to offend, 1 Cor. 8. 13. and so in the Margin, Matth. 5. 29.) doth (according to the Syle of the Scripture) generally import thus much, By our actions to induce another to sin in imitation of our evil example, and so to put a stumbling-block in the way of piety; and therefore Σκάνδαλον is fitly render'd stumbling-block in Rev. 2. 14. where Balaam is said to have taught Balak βαλεῖν σκάνδαλον to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, &c. or when it is joyn'd with πεισομομα a stumbling-block, it is as fitly render'd an occasion of falling, Rom. 14. 13 *. Nor is this sense much distant from the Etymon of the word, ἀπὸ τοῦ σκαλίζειν à claudicando; and accordingly To scandalize is to make or to occasion one to fall, or some way or other to hinder one from walking evenly, steddily and regularly as he ought. And agreeable to this sense is that observable description of scandal given by a Tertullian, scandalum (ni fallor) non bonæ rei, sed malæ exemplum est, ad delictum. This our Author did apprehend to be the proper notion of the word, rather than that which the other did pretend, viz. To do that which may displease or grieve or vex others. For some are angry without a cause, and are offended and displeas'd sometimes at that which is not in itself evil; yea are grieved and vexed when another is doing his duty; and being so affected are therefore far from being induced and emboldened to the practice of that which the other accounts his duty, and consequently far from being scandaliz'd, according to the general sense of the word in Scripture; only they are displeas'd, offended and angry, but without any just cause, and therefore not to be justified in that humour, as neither are the Ministers upon that score to think themselves excus'd from their duty. For a man to neglect his Duty (and such as the performance whereof is accompanied with the advantage of being instrumental to the best good of others) is plainly to displease and offend God, who is never displeas'd but justly. But to offend man is not always to sin against our Brother; and to do that which may displease or dislike others (and how is it possible, in such a contradiction of humours and vast contrariety of fancies, not to be displeasing unto some?) is not necessarily to scandalize in the Scripture-idiom. Besides what the great Apostle saith would be seriously consider'd, * Do I seek to please men? For if I yet pleas'd men, I should not be the servant of Christ?

* In 1 Jo. 2. 10. it's render'd an occasion of stumbling.

a In his De virginitate. l. 1. c. 3. b Alluding perhaps to the οικοδομηθεῖσται, &c. in 1 Cor. 8. 10.

* Gal. 1. 10.

To this purpose has our Author been known to express himself in familiar discourse with some Friends: And much-what like the Notion did the Learned Dr. Hammond happily light upon, as appears by his elaborate Tract of Scandal.

46. HITHERTO we have endeavour'd (though in a rude and imperfect draught) to represent the rich Endowments of his Mind, together with those Vertues and Graces that adorn'd and beautified his Inward man, and made his Soul a meet Habitation for the Divine Shechinah, which loves to rest in such Souls as are Holy, Humble and Meek, full of Charity and Good will towards men. It remains now, before before we conclude this Narrative, that we add something concerning the Frame and Temper of that Body wherein this excellent Soul dwelt, that Earthen Vessel wherein these Heavenly Treasures were deposited, and which only of him was capable of Mortality; and thence pass to the last Scene and Epilogue of his Life.

The like is related in the life of F. Paul of Venice (a person of eminent parts, of a clear Head and profound Judgment) concerning the constitution of his body. D'ordinario stava tre giorni, alle volte tutta la settimana senza che le parti naturali destinate all' espulsione de gl' escrementi facessero il lor' officio, &c.

His Body was of a comely proportion, rather of a tall than low stature. In his younger years (as he would say) he was but slender and spare of body; but afterwards, when he was full grown, he became more fat and portly, yet not to any such excess as did diminish but rather encreas'd the goodliness of his presence to a comely decorum. His eye was full, quick and sparkling. His whole Countenance compos'd to a sedate seriousness and gravity; Majestas & Amor were well met here, an awful Majesty, but withal an inviting sweetness. His Behaviour was friendly and affable, intermixt with a becoming cheerfulness and inoffensive pleasantry. His Complexion was a little swarthy, as if somewhat over-tinctur'd with Melancholy, which yet rather seem'd to serve the design of his studious Mind, than to clogg it with those Infirmities which commonly attend the predominancy of that Humour. And as for the whole Constitution and Temperament of his Body, it could not be observed but his Vitals were strong; and yet it was noted of him that there was an asymmetry and disproportion in the subservient Faculties, as not all duly performing their particular offices in so exact time and measure as ordinary; and yet Nature was so faithful in her compensations, that there were no such irregularities in her Economy as made him fall short of that chief desire of all wise men, the having Mentem sanam in Corpore sano.

47. He was patient of Cold, and well able to go through a Winter without much Fire; so that his rule was for divers years together to have no Fire made in his Chamber before All-Saints day; and then after that but some times, now and then (and not constantly) as the weather did require. But that year in which he died he found an alteration, being somewhat chill and indisposed a moneth or two before; so that he was forced to alter his custome, and could not stay for a Fire till November, because he found himself indisposed and not perfectly well. His expectation was in the interim that Nature by some way or other would have relieved herself: which encouraged him to go on in his attending upon those Offices which were performable in his place, and the rather because his Aguish indisposition was not constant.

48. Upon the 29 day of September, being Saturday, 1638. (the day of the weekly Accounts, when (according to the laudable custome of that Colledge) the Manciple after Dinner was to give up the particulars of all the Expences of the whole Colledge that week to the Master and Fellows then present, amongst whom Mr. Mede never fail'd to be one, unless detain'd by some extraordinary occasion) he appear'd in the Hall at dinner-time as usually. But before all was ended, he was forced to rise up and to hast to his Chamber, being sick and ill at ease. Thither when he was come and set down in his chair, he presently fainted away and sunk down upon the hearth: and the posture that he was found lying in was not without some danger to one of his Leggs from the Fire. A Master of Arts of that Colledge, a Friend to Mr. Mede and who honoured him very much, comes upon a particular occasion to his Chamber, (so the good Providence of God did order it;) who seeing him lie in that posture, at which he was surpriz'd with no little astonishment, put to all his strength to recover him to his seat: and that he did indeed, but with very much ado. Being a little come to himself, he complain'd he was ill. And ill it proved for him, (or rather for the surviving) that it happened to be so at a time when the best noted Physicians were from home; (the University being then the more thin by reason of the Plague which had been in Cambridge that Summer.) An Apothecary being sent for, he went to Dr. N. an ancient, learned and very judicious Physician, but less fit for practice, being gouty and bed-red. He prescribed a Clyster to be presently administered him. But the Apothecary unacquainted with the state of his Body (not having that special regard to the tenderness of those parts, which, had he been acquainted with before, he should reasonably have had) did so irritate his Hæmorrhoid Veins, that they swell'd up immediately; and so angry they grew, that they shut up the passage. And now this Good man began to be in extremity of pain; for the Clyster working inwardly (because no passage downward was to be found) tormented him exceedingly ceedingly. But the next day, being Sunday, and the last of September, the adventurous Apothecary (whether with the forefaid Doctor's advice or not, it could not clearly be resolved) adventured upon a farther experiment, and so gave him a strong Purge; imagining (it's likely) that this would force all downward. But contrary to that fancy it wrought still but within, and so procured more torment and sickness to the distressed Patient. All that day he continued very ill and out of order, worse and worse still, as 'twas easie to observe. But to those that were Eye-witnesses of his pain and great affliction, it was as easie to observe his Christian Patience at this time. We may easily conceive the exquisiteness of the pain he endur'd by reason of the Physick tearing him within: but some then present have profess'd that they could not but admire his Incomparable Patience under this sore trial, and that he lay under the extremity of his distemper with so much Meekness and quiet Submission to the hand of God, that they never knew the like. Thus had * Patience her perfect work in him: and as he || possess'd his Vessel (his Body) in sanctification and honour, having lived a life of Chastity and Purity; so he likewise * possess'd his Soul in patience, while he possess'd it in this earthen and brittle Vessel of the Body; and hereby gave an illustrious proof that he had well learn'd that great Lesson of Self-denial and Resigning up himself to the Will of his Heavenly Father: It was, in the time of his Health, his Meat and Drink to do his Will; and now to be enabled meekly to submit to it was his Cordial. Thus was he still and silent before God, || committing himself to him as unto a Faithful Creatour, and unto Christ Jesus, that * Merciful and Faithful High-Priest, who ever liveth to make intercession for us, the Glory and Prerogative of whose Sole Mediation at the Right hand of God he had always faithfully asserted in his || Discourses.

* Jam. i.

|| 1 Theil. 4.

* Luke 21.

|| 1 Pet. 4.

* Heb. 2. & 7.

|| See this more largely discoursed of in his Apostasy of the Latter Times.

49. In the Night following his spirits began to fail; yet being in perfect memory, an hour or two before day-break he desired to have Mr. John Alsop sent for, (a most worthy Consocius of that Learned Society;) who being come, Mr. Mede told him he hoped he should do well, for that now he perceived his Physick to work downward. But Mr. Alsop, by what he saw, was fearful of the work, suspecting (as it proved true) that that purging downward proceeded not in that case from any activity or strength of Nature, but rather from debility and weakness: thereupon, like a wise and good man, he advised him, however it might please God to deal with him, to set his House in order, and to dispose of by Will whatsoever God had given him. It was readily accorded to by Mr. Mede, and Mr. Alsop was by him constituted the Executor of his Will, whereby he gave to the poor of the Town of Cambridge an Hundred pound, and to the Colledge whereof he was a Member all the remainder of his Estate, (after some Legacies to his Kindred) amounting to Three hundred pounds, (a large Legacy out of a Scholar's purse) for and towards the New building then intended, as also for the adorning of the Chappel; nor was he unmindful of the Library, for he knew well the excellent use of good Books. This he did in way of a Grateful return for the Mercies he had so long enjoy'd in that Colledge, the enlarging and encrease of whose prosperity and good estate was his great desire and endeavour, and that which he * preferr'd above his chief joy.

* Psal. 137.

50. And now having finished the care of his Secular affairs, he compos'd his Soul for its address into the Divine presence with holy Thoughts and humble Prayers; desiring also to strengthen his Faith and heighten his Love, whilst by the participation of the Sacred Eucharist he made a thankful Commemoration of his Saviour's Death, by which he hoped for an Entrance into the Happiness of an Eternal Life. But in this he was prevented (shall we say?) by the sudden approach of Death; or not rather more suddenly and in an higher measure satisfied in his desire by the Love of his Saviour, who, in stead of giving him a tast of the Bread of Life here on Earth by Faith, received him into the present possession and more full participation of the ineffable Joyes in Heaven?

51. Thus died this Religious and Learned person, upon Monday-morning, about break of day, the first of October 1638. having lived Fifty two years, and spent above two thirds of his time in that Colledge, to which, whilst he lived, he was so great and illustrious an Ornament, and which, now he is dead, is his Monument.

The next day in the Evening (being October 2.) he was decently carried to his Grave by the Fellows of the House, and there in the Inner Chappel of the Colledge, about about the middle of the Area on the South-side, close to the Bachelors or Sophisters Seats, he lies interred; his Memory being embalm'd with his Vertues, (of more force to preserve his Name than the Spices which the Hebrews or Egyptians used for the embalming of Bodies) and having left his most Learned Writings as his truest Picture and best History.

* Upon Febr. 1.
1639.

52. The Executor * some time after (against which time he had gathered in some scattered debts and paid out some Legacies) preach'd his Funeral Sermon in a full Congregation of Regents and Non-Regents at S. Marie's, before the whole Univerſity, with high approbation of all that heard it, upon that Text in Gen. 5. 24. And Enoch walked with God, and he was not, for God took him. A thousand pities it is that that excellent Sermon miscarried in the late Troubles; had it survived to have been printed with these Works, it would have been for its own sake very acceptable to the world, being a Texture (as all his were) of an accurately-spun thread: And that part of it which particularly commemorated Mr. Mede was so full and expressive to the life, as might have made any after-endeavours to represent this Great Author less necessary.

12 King. 22.

53. We will only observe one thing more concerning the Time of his Death, That he was taken away from the Evils that were then ready to come upon this Island: a Favour which God vouchsafes to many of the righteous (Esay 57. 1.) So of good Josiah it is said, || He should be gather'd to his grave in peace, and not see all the evil which God would bring upon Jerusalem. So Posidonius in the life of S. Austin relates that he was taken away by death when the Goths and Vandals had begun to besiege Hippo, so that he saw not the direful Miseries that were coming upon that place. Thus that good God who had favour'd our Author with a life of Tranquillity and Freedom from worldly encumbrances, made his Death a preservative against those approaching Evils which then hover'd over this Kingdom, and closed his eyes that he saw not those dreadful Calamities which were so grievous and afflictive unto all meek and humble Christians to behold.

The Preface to Mr. Herbert's Remains observes of those 3 pious persons, Dr. Jackson, Mr. Herbert, Mr. Fer-rar, that they spoke Prophetically of the like Events.

'Tis true, he beheld them at a distance, and by the presage of his own divining spirit he guessed at what afterwards came to pass. For, about a year or two before he died, he would sometimes mention an Observation of his upon that in Judg. 3. 30. The Land had rest fourscore years, (the longest period of time (as he noted) that the people of Israel ever enjoy'd it, and then which scarcely any other Nation ever enjoy'd a longer) Such a rest (would he say) from the beginning of Blessed Queen Elizabeth's Reign we of England have enjoy'd, and who knows whether our period be not near at hand? And whether it be so or not, whosoever shall live but a year or two may know it certainly. It happened accordingly; and what havock the devouring Sword made amongst us, after God had sent it to revenge our abuse of his Mercies, is well known, and can never be remembred without horror. That God who maketh wars to cease, and by his miraculous Providence in the peaceful reduction of his sacred MAJESTY hath dissipated those Storms of fire and dried up those Shours of blood, he of his Goodness grant that, whilst we all offer up our due Thanks for his so great and undeserved Mercies, we may so carefully avoid the Sins which drew down our late Punishments, and so zealously make up the defects of our former Omissions, that God may be pleas'd not only to perpetuate the Felicity of our present Peace, but also to increase it by the accumulation of all necessary Blessings.

---

The End of the Author's Life.

---

Effare, Marmor iners; Dic, Cujus Cinis?

Salvis modestissimi Viri Manibus,
JOSEPHUS heic MEDUS jacet,
S. T. B.

Collegii Christi apud Cantabrigienses Socius, Ipse Musarum Hospitium solenniorum, &
Juncta in Collegio Universitas;

Qui

Omnes Linguas calluit, Artes excoluit,
Philosophiæ & Mathematicæ adjungens Quicquid Ægyptii occultârunt, aut invenerunt Chaldæi;

Chronologiam insuper, ac Historiam, omniûmque Reginam

Theologiam:

Quarum prælucente face,
Induit se in abditissimos Prophetiarum recessus, &
Speluncâ Apocalypticâ exiit Romanam Belluam; Confligendi cum Difficultatibus avidissimus,
Mysteriorum Interpres felicissimus;
Ut in JOSEPHO hoc nostro
Facilè agnovisset Gens Hieroglyphica
Zaphnath Paaneah redivivum.

Hic

Nullis addictus partibus, omnibus æquus fuit,
Veritatis ac Pacis amans;

Benignus aliis, Amicis totus patens;
Verbis, Voto, Vitâ, sanctus, castus, humillimus.

Ast

Imminentis tunc Ecclesiæ & Reipublicæ Tempestatis

Mens, Prophetis contubernalis, præsaga

Cœlestem portum occupavit

Anno post natam Salutem

M DC XXXVIII.

Ætatis Sux

LII.

Some Additionals to Mr. Mede's LIFE, by One who had the Honour and Happiness to be intimately known to him many years.

Understanding what rich Materials are prepared for Mr. Mede's Life, and into what accurate Hands they are come for the Composure; I can never give my consent that these coarse and ragged Papers be admitted otherwise than Post-script wise, or as a Codicill (which may pass through any ordinary hand) annexed to an exactly-penn'd Testament: yet so, as that the one may justly pretend to the same Veracity and Authentickness with that of the other.

Upon this condition I proceed, and in this Order, contriving what I have to say into certain distinct Particularities: Which I humbly conceive will be less unacceptable to the Reader.

As for the purpose,

- I. Remarkables concerning Mr. Mede's Election into his Fellowship, together with the Occasion of his devoting the Tenth of his Estate to Pious uses.

MR. Mede had now continued in the University until after he took the Degree of Master of Arts, and had already received some strange Preteritions at Elections, Dr. Carey, (after Bishop of Exceter) the then Head of the Colledge, entertaining a very causeless Jealousie of him, that he looked too much towards Geneva. About this time a worthy Gentleman in the North earnestly invited him to live with him, and upon very handsome Terms. Yet Mr. Mede took time to consider of it. It was then Sturbridge-Fair, and there in a Stationer's shop Mr. Mede lighted on a Book of Mathematicks which he had great use of, and had long thirsted after. The lowest price was 50s. He thought the Book worth the money: But the great Question was, Whether the taking so much Money out of his Purse would not be as the taking away too much Blood from an extraordinary weak Body. Hereupon he, retiring into a private walk hard by, entered into a serious Consultation with himself what he should do; whether he should buy the Book and leave the University, (embracing the Gentleman's noble Proposal) or else whether he should leave the Book and continue there longer. For his slender Income would not allow him to enjoy both Conveniences together, nor could he possibly afford his Continuance in the Colledge so long, had it not met with the great felicity of so Frugal and Prudent a Manager of it as himself was. Whilest he was busily pondering and weighing Conveniencies and Inconveniencies, one against another, on both sides, who should accidentally pass by but that Excellent Person and his very dear Friend, Sir William Boswell, then Fellow of Jesus Colledge, and a rare Ornament to the whole University? He, perceiving who it was that walked there in such a deep study, drew near to him, closed with him, and (as he mought well do it) demanded the Reason of that his solicitous Thoughtfulness. Mr. Mede, glad of the Opportunity, readily disclosed all to him. Mr. Boswell (that was his Title then) at first encouraged him to accept of the Gentleman's Propositions, who himself knew to be a Worthy Person, Noble, Ingenuous, Learned, and Master of a well-furnished Library: alleging farther, that the good Leisure, the good Conversation, the now good Competency, (that honest Salary being twisted with what he had of his own) and other good Accommodations he should there enjoy, would enable him to do the Church and Commonwealth of Learning more service with his Pen, than perhaps his Impediment of Speech would suffer him to do in the Pulpit. Mr. Mede easily consenting to the Advice of so great and good a Friend, parted from him with a Resolution to go that way. He was not gone many steps, when Mr. Boswell called him back again; But, Joseph, (saith he) it is great pity though that thou shouldst leave us for want of a Book: Lo, here is all my stock at present, (shewing him 5 pieces;) but come, we will divide, Go and buy the Book. Mr. Mede began modestly to refuse this Courtesie, as too great to be received, and objected, How shall I be able to be solvent in convenient time? Mr. Boswell as importunately forced it upon him with these friendly words, I pray thee take no care of re- payment;

payment; let that be when thou canst, or in what small parcels thou wilt, or whether it be ever or never, it will be all one to me. And so Mr. Mede is possessed of his Book, and become a Continuer again.

Within a short time after, the Colledge had privy notice of a Stranger who had got a Mandamus for a Fellowship, either Fallen or Falling. This news hastened them to a preventing Election; and now the Master is contented to hear of Mr. Mede. He is chosen, but conditionally and provisionally, that if the Mandamus be not diverted and shall be over-powerfully urged, he must recede. Mr. Mede therefore maturely makes his Applications to that Great both Oracle of Learning and Protector of Learned men, the thrice Renowned L. B. Andrews; by whose propitious Assistance he is now confirmed Fellow of that Colledge to which he owed his Education, and for which he had so Filial a Dearness. This Signal Providence and Goodness of Almighty God Mr. Mede was so piously sensible of, that he solemnly vowed (and as Religiously kept that Vow) to lay aside every Tenth shilling he should ever receive in the Colledge, and to dedicate it to Pious uses. This Story (to me not inconsiderable) left so deep an Impression in me, that I am able to warrant not only the Substance, but even almost every Circumstance of it, as I have related it. And as to the Interlocutory part, I verily believe I scarce vary in a word, as I received it (and all the rest) immediately from the lips of that Miracle of Worth, (whether as a Scholar, or a Statesman, or a Friend, or a Patriot, or a Christian) Sir William Boswell, while he was Ambassadour Resident in the Netherlands.

As concerning this strange Vow, I had heard of it accidentally in Mr. Mede's lifetime, and once I took the freedom to ask him about it. He startled at it, that I should come to the knowledge of it; and, after a pause, he only said this, I charge you as a Friend to keep it to your self; which I faithfully did, till after his death.

And now, if the Reader will not think his Patience too much imposed upon, I could furnish him with another like Instance, and that out of Mr. Mede's own Colledge, one who was Contemporary with Mr. Mede, (but a long and early Discontinuer) and one, I think, not unknown to him; I am sure, a great Admirer of him. And this was Mr. William Whately, sometime Vicar of Banbury, that famous and perfect Preacher, and that not only ad Populum, as some great Wits have liberally acknowledged, who would often slip out of Oxford on purpose to hear him, and came at first with prejudice enough. This Rare Preacher (and therefore the Rarer because so Frequent) had in his Pulpit (upon a Holy-day, when there was a very full Auditory) with great Zeal, and with as great Solidity of Reason and Embroidery of Rhetorick, pressed (as his Theme led him) Works of Charity. Among other passages he exhorted his Hearers to make this Experiment; When they had received good gain by Traffick or Bargain, &c. to take 6<sup>d</sup> or 4<sup>d</sup> in the Pound, and put it in a Purse by it self, for works of Piety. This (he warranted) as it would be very beneficial to their Estate, so it would take away all secret Grudgings: For now they had lay'd so much aside for such a purpose, they would rather wish for an Opportunity of disbursing it, &c.

After Sermon, being visited by a neighbour-Divine, (and one allied to him) they presently fell into discourse about that Subject, and Mr. Whately's Judgment was desired more particularly concerning the Quotapars to be so devoted. As for that (saith he) I am not to prescribe to others; but since here are none but very good friends, and we are all so private, I will tell you what hath been my own practice of late, and upon what occasion. You know, Sir, some years since I was often beholden to you for the Lene of 10l at a time: The truth is, I could not bring the year about, though my Receipts were not despicable, and I was not at all conscious to my self of any vain Expences or of Improvidence. At length I began to examine my Family what Relief was given to the Poor: And although I was assured that was not done niggardly, yet I could not be so satisfied, but resolved instantly to lay aside every Tenth shilling of all my Receipts for Charitable uses. And (to let you see how well I have thrived this way in a short time) now, if you have occasion to use an 100<sup>l</sup> or more, I have it ready for you. Just Mr. Mede's Method, and with a like prosperous Success. This I can avouch, for I was present both at the Sermon and at the Conference.

Neither do I conceive I have been wandering far from Mr. Mede all this while; these two Persons meeting so near in so many Respects: Both of them of the same House in the University; both Contemporaries; both Eminent, though in far distant ways; both inviolably kept their Principles of Loyalty to their Prince and Obedience to their Mother the Church; both suffered injuriously; some (when time was) made themselves too (Poetically) merry with Mr. Whately's Name; both met in the same practice of Charity, for which chiefly the latter was instanced in; lastly, both of them were peaceably and honourably Interred a little before the late unnatural War.

I do not ask the Reader's Pardon for this seeming Impertinency, because I rather expect his Thanks for helping him to so rare a Project how he may no less certainly than Piously improve his Estate, if he please to make due Trial of it. Howsoever, I shall make him amends, as to Brevity, in the ensuing Particularities. Whereof the next is

2. Concerning Mr. Mede's Communicativeness.

AS to be Communicative of Good is a Royalty and Beam of Glory even in the Divine Majesty itself: so upon what Person soever this shall be more or less shed and diffused, it must needs render him proportionably God-like. Now that such a Quality was eminently conspicuous in this divine Person is altogether as unquestionable as Whether there ever was such a Man as Mr. Joseph Mede.

• Dr. Steward late Dean of the Royal Chappel, &c.

I shall not instance in his Writings, wherewith he hath blest the world; concerning which (I speak of those few then extant) (if the commending of them would not be but as the Gilding of Gold and the Painting of Rubies) I could give you the opinion of * one (among many others) who was Master of as great a Treasure of choice Learning, and of as curious a Pen and Tongue, as few Ages have seen; which he hath often expressed to me in these words, I never in all my life met with such a Useful Critick as Mr. Mede, with many other Encomiums.

That I have now to speak to is his Communicativeness in ordinary Discourse. And this indeed he made the main of his Divertisement and Recreation. I never heard he used any other, unless it were in and upon the Fellows Orchard; the Beautifying whereof he took great delight in, and towards that he would not only lend his handsome and happy Contrivances, but also disburse Money before-hand, till the Colledge-Audit. Here he hath been found very busie (at due hours) and sometimes knuckle-deep, when he would say smiling, Why? this was Adam's work in his Innocency. But then, instantly, taking for his Theme either a Plant or a Weed, or almost any thing next hand, he would fall into some very significant discourse. All his Discourses (to speak it once for all) were extremely distant from any thing that looked like either Levity, or Vanity, or Pedantry.

These Charitable works of his Tongue, (for so I call Mr. Mede's Discourses) as well as those other of his Hand, proved no less Gainful to himself than they were Beneficial to others. A double Gain, he hath often acknowledged, came in to him this way.

One, That his Notions, by often Repeating them, became more fixed and rivetted in his Memory: And therefore he would merrily say to a Familiar, whose Studies lay quite another way, (and in that kind of Learning was confessedly incomparable and unmatchable) when he seemed not so attentive to some of his Discourses, Chuse (saith he) whether you will hear me or no; I love to repeat what I have been gathering, though it be but to the Walls, for my own Memorie's sake.

The other Gain was, That hereby his Notions were better shaped and formed, and so more accommodated to use. For (saith he) every time I am imparting them to others, it is great odds but some fitter and clearer Expression will casually come out of my Mouth than at first came into my Mind. So that his Notions always lay by him ready, in good Currant Coin, whiles others (who too much affect the hoarding up) have theirs at the best but in the Barre and Ingot, and perhaps sometimes but in the Ore.

Wherefore I am apt to believe it was not a mere Complement of Mr. Mede's, when he thanked those for Hearing him, who thought they had a great deal more reason to thank him for his so Edifying them; because he knew his own Gains hereby were still multiplied.

When my Acquaintance with him was of that Standing as to take the Degree of one of his Familiars, he would treat and entertain me in this manner.

After some short prelufory talking of News and Occurrences, Come now, (saith he) what be your Questions? Which as I was never to come unprovided of, so was he always much more provided to resolve them to my unspeakable satisfaction. Yea more than that, (such was his Obligingness) he would sometimes fetch out of his Study divers of his Colledge and Publick Exercises; and sometimes one peculiar Paper-book, wherein he was wont to write sundry knotty Questions and difficult Texts of Scripture, and under them set down in brief his present Conjectural thoughts, which afterwards (at better leisure) he would bring to the Test, and pursue with more accurateness. Pitching upon some of these, he hath done me the honour to promote me to be his Amannensis: And then first causing me to turn to Texts in the Hebrew Fountain and in the the LXX, he would Critically give the Importance of the words, and here drop many a rich Observation. That done, he would take down many of the Ancients, whether Church-Historians or Fathers, Greek and Latin, &c. and directing me to what places I should turn, make me read them to him: Upon which again he would, by the By, give but very considerable Notes; and still as he had done with each Author would say, You see it holds yet, and yet, &c. So at last, one of those Conjecturalls and What Ifs (as he call'd them) became an adopted Verity. And this he called Hunting of Notions. At this Sport, no less profitable than pleasant, we have, upon Fasting-days, continued from three after Mid-day until the knocking of the Colledge-gates at Night, and then he has dismissed me richly laden.

3. Of his Advice to young Students in Divinity.

TO those who intended Curam Animarum he would give, among many other, these Three Counsels.

1. That they familiarly acquaint themselves with and constantly make use of that Golden Observation of Is. Casaubon, viz. Universam Doctrinam Christianam Veteres distinguebant in τὰ ἔκφορα, idest, ea quæ enunciari apud omnes poterant, & τὰ ἀπορρητα, arcana temere non vulganda. It is in his Exercit. XVI. ad Annal. Eccles. Which whole Exercitation he would commend to their often reading, and indeed the whole Book.

And here he would sadly complain, to the same effect, and almost in the same words, with the Admired Lord Verulam, "It is a Point of great Inconvenience and Perill, to entitle the People to hear Controversies and all kinds of Doctrine. They say no part of the Counsel of God is to be suppressed, nor the People defrauded: So as the Difference which the Apostle maketh between Milk and Strong Meat is confounded; and his Precept, That the weak be not admitted unto Questions and Controversies, taketh no place.

In his Advertisements touching the Controversies of the Church of England.

Upon neglect of which sage Counsel we have lately seen those Dismal and Tragical Consequences, which Mr. Mede did indeed Prophetically presage would be thereupon. And for the present he gave some Instances (but not without Indignation) of them who, under pretence of Revealing the whole Truth to the People, would make choice of strange Texts, in Leviticus and elsewhere, and out of them vent such Stuffe as no modest Ear could endure to hear.

2. His next Counsel was, That with other Practical Doctrines they should not forget to preach and press Charity: and this not in a slight perfunctory manner, but Studiedly and Digestedly to give the People the true Nature of it, the full latitude of it, the absolute and indispensable Necessity of having it, (both Præcepti and Medii) and (as the * L. Verulam hath express'd it) "to bring down Doctrines and Directions ad Casus Conscientiæ; otherwise the Word, the Bread of Life, they will but toss up and down, and not break it.

* Ibid.

3. His last Counsel was, When they had some Necessary Truths to deliver, against which the present Humour of the Times ran counter, that in this case they should go Socratically to work: as to lay down at a convenient distance, first one Postulatum, and then another (that will be clearly inferred from the former,) and so a third, and a fourth, &c. still depending upon and strengthening each other. A Truth brought in thus Backward (saith he) will be swallowed down unawares: Whereas if you first shew its Horns, there will be such startling and flinging, that there will be no coming near with it.

4. How far he was from Ambition.

FOR proof hereof we cannot desire a clearer Evidence or Demonstration than his so constant declining Preferments even then when they sought him out.

Witness his * Answer to the Letter of the Fellows of Trinity Colledge near Dublin. * See Book 4. And, by the way, that Election into that Provostship was so firm, as well as free, that he was desired to make a Formal Resignation before his * Successor could be elected and admitted into it: which he did, as himself hath told me more than once. Epist. 2.

Witness again his * Third Letter to the then Lord Primate, what time some new hopes began to be raised of his acceptance of the same Provostship, upon the remove of Bishop Bedel. * Mr. Bedel, afterwards B. of Kilmore.

To all this I can add two more Instances, which I believe are not known to many. * See Book 4. Epist. 29.

One, That divers years after the refusal of the Provostship, he received a Letter from a Friend in Ireland, assuring him there was then kept for him a Dignity worth at the least 1000<sup>l</sup> per ann. and staid only for his acceptance. To persuade him to which, he used many potent arguments; among the rest this, The great freedom from molestations and incumbrances that place would indulge him in, &c. This Letter he was pleased to communicate to my self, when freshly received, concealing indeed the Name subscribed, though that was not hard to guess at. But here again his Modesty proved inflexible.

The other Instance is this: When he newly related to his then Grace of Canterbury, and now glorious Martyr, (neither of whom, I believe, had seen each others face in all their lives, I am sure he told me so not long before his death) he desired me to tell him freely what I heard men say concerning his Chaplainship, &c. The sum of my Answer was, That I perceived he was looked upon as a Rising man, and that many rejoiced at it because of his known merits, &c. To the latter part of my Answer he replied, I am much beholden to my Friends for their good opinion of me, &c. But no man knows my Defects so well as my self. And this was but the native Language and Dialect of his innate Modesty. But when he came to reply to the former part, which spake him a Rising man, here he used more than ordinary Solemnity, and with a grave, composed countenance uttered these words; As to my Rising,— come now, I will make you my Confessor. I can safely appeal to that Infinite Majesty who hears me, (which words were accompanied with a gesture of great Reverence) that if I might obtain but a Donative sine cura, (sine cura, he repeated it) which I may keep with my Fellowship, I would set up my staffe for this World. And the reason why I desire this is, that I mought be able to keep a Nag for my Recreation sometimes, in taking the air, and in visiting my friends in the Countrey, since this my Corpulency (then growing upon him) makes me unwieldy for walking.

In pursuance of this discourse, I chanced to smile at a Conceit then coming into my mind; which he quickly observed, and was very earnest to know the reason of it. After a pardon obtained for my freedom, I thus declared; That I thought in one case he would be persuaded to accept of a Bishoprick for all this. Why think you so? rejoined he suddenly, and with some warmth. Presuming upon the license granted me, I shall tell you, replied I, and, more than that, I believe you will acknowledge as much your self. At this he began to bungle at being angry, for indeed that Passion was so great a stranger to him and so little in favour with him that, unless it came in the company of (or rather attending upon) true Zeal to God-ward, he would not endure its presence.

In short, I remembred to him, how often I heard him wonder why none of our Christian Kings had ever erected a Bishoprick in S. Alban's, that Martyr being of such Fame and Antiquity, and the Place so many ways convenient, &c. And then I propounded this case:

That if our then present Sovereign (who afterwards, in spight of Hypocrisie and Treason, became indeed so Glorious a King, that of all Kings He was the First Martyr) should resolve upon an Erection of a Bishoprick at S. Alban's, upon this one only condition, That Mr. Mede will be persuaded to be the First Bishop there, otherwise there shall be no Bishoprick at all; I ask whether, in this case Mr. Mede would not be willing to accept of a Bishoprick. Hereat he laughed heartily, and said at first, Now thou puttest me to it indeed. But by and by recollecting himself, he concluded gravely to this purpose: As there is no great fear of such a Temptation, rebus sic stantibus; so I dare reassume my former Protestation. A Donative sine cura with my Fellowship will confine the utmost of my Ambition in this life.

Then Clouds began to gather in the North.

5. Of his Zeal against Sacrilege.

Which had been heightned to a superlative degree, yet in him of most men living would have been least to be wondered at and most to be justified; because few men of his (or any) Age could pretend to that absolute sovereignty over themselves, in point of Interest or ambitious Designs, which he had; and, because none was more punctual in paying his Homage and Rental to Almighty God than he was. But yet that his Zeal was according to knowledge, and guided with great Judgment and Discretion, will manifestly appear unto all men who will but cast their eyes upon some of the Principles and Grounds he went upon. E. g.

1. That, according to the common Law of Nature, the great Land-lord of the whole World ought to receive Homages from his Tenants and Dependents.

This God claimed in Paradise itself, when Man was in the Zenith of his Perfection. For (would he say) the Prohibited Tree there was a sacred and a sacramental Tree.

Wherefore

See his Discourse upon
Acts 5. 3. 4.

Wherefore he was positive and dogmatical in determining that the Formalis ratio and specific Nature of Original Sin was Sacrilege. Whereunto by the way he annexed this grave and serious Meditation: Adam was turned out of his Paradise for sacrilege; and do we not frequently see many men turned out of their Paradises likewise (their fair Estates) for the very same sin?

This, again, hath been imprinted in the breasts of all Mankind, who naturally and universally have ever abhorred Sacrilege. Why then should Christians (said he) presume more upon their God in this case than others? why more than the Pagans, or Jews? Here he quoted that of Malachi 3. ver. 8. Will a man rob God? Durst ever any man entertain such a thought? And that of I Cor. 9. ver. 13, 14. See how dextrously he hath handled that Scripture in a set and just \ Diatribe*. As also that, Rev. 5. ver. 12. in that New song, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive Power, and Riches, & Strength, &c. Lo here (said he) is mention of Riches due to the Lamb that was slain. But what need hath He of our Riches? True, no more than a great rich Land-lord hath need of a Pepper-corn. But yet, as it is an Homage, it is expected from the Tenant, and may not be neglected by him without the Forfeiture of the whole. And then for those who confidently deny Tithes to be due under the Gospel, they do not consider how in so saying they must deny also Christ to be a Priest for ever after the order of Melchizedek: For as Tithes were paid to Melchizedek long before Aaron; so are they due to Him who is a Priest after that Order, now after Aaron.

* See Book 1.
Discourse 21.

2. And this minds me of another of his Grounds, viz. God's so favourably dealing with Men in requiring but the Tenth; which is, in truth, (said he) the least part of our Goods, according to the first division. For as Ten is the Periodical number of things of a fixt and substantial nature; so when we proceed beyond Ten, we begin to make a new division; as Eleven is Ten and one, Twelve Ten and two, &c. Thus likewise God contents himself with the least part of our Time, when he demands but the Seventh, as the number Seven is the Periodical number of Time, &c.

3. A third Ground was, That the chiefest things now dedicated to God are, for the most part, laden with a חרם. Here he related at large with what Solemnity many of those Ancient Deeds and Writings (specifying Goods and Lands devoted to the Service of God) were wont to be offered at the Altar; and what Vollsies of all the hideous Curses imaginable, touching either Body, or Soul, or Estate, or Posterity, were enumerated in those Writings, and denounced against any who would offer to alienate them.

Upon this occasion he was wont to discourse very gravely How that, at the first Reformation in England, if the violent heat of seeming Zeal, but indeed of Interest, would have admitted so much of Consideration, those Church-Lands of Abbies, &c. might have been most happily disposed of in some such manner.

If one Part had been allotted to the Advancement of Learning, and to the Augmentation of smaller Salaries for Cures, and to the Reparation and beautifying of Churches. Colledges, &c.

If another Part had been for Provision of Clergy-Mens Widows and Orphans: which God took special care of in the time of the Legal Priesthood, (the Sons being to inherit their Fathers places, and the Daughters to be matched as well as their Mothers before them) and which is not neglected by any of the Reformed Churches abroad.

If a third Part had been reserved for Bellum Sacrum, in the defence of Church and Kingdom.

By this means (pursued he) our Kings would not have needed such Subsidies, &c. from their Subjects, and the Church had kept her Patrimoine, and very many great Families (who too greedily possess'd themselves of Church-lands) had not been totally ruined and extinct.

4. And this leads me to a Fourth Ground, which was the Series of Punishments which have constantly pursued this Sin.

It is to be observed (said he) that God did always set a special Mark of his Displeasure upon every one who durst First presume upon a notorious Sin, thereby to give Warning to all others. As, upon Cain the first Murderer, upon Corah and his Complices who first moved a Sedition upon the point of Equality in the Priesthood, upon Absalom the first unnatural Rebel, &c. But now for this Sin of sacrilege, as God began to punish it very early, even in Paradise itself, (ut supra) so hath he continually pursued and hounded this Sin; as in Achan in the Old Testament, in Annianus and Sapphira in the New, that no man may pretend the Antiquateness of the Old Testament, &c. And in latter Ages, besides what the learned Pens of Sr. Henry Spelman and others have published, he had collected many rare Instances of his own private Observation, which upon prudential Considerations I forbear to recite.

And now after all this, Is it not admirable to consider, how strangely the seeming present Profit of this Sin doth infatuate men? That though they daily experiment these Truths, yet they will not be persuaded either from Venturing on the Sin, or from Continuing in it? What doth this but betray in Men the same Shortness and Shallowness of Understanding that we see in Rooks and Martins and other silly Fowls, which will needs be building every year in those very places where they are sure to be disturb'd, and endanger'd themselves, and to have their Nests demolished, and their Young destroyed; or if any chance to escape, yet they always lie at the mercy of every Passenger?

6. Of his becoming Facetiousness.

THose his so grave, knotty and crabbed studies did not at all render him Sour or Morose, but in due Time and Place he knew how to be Pleasant and Facetious. To give the Reader a Taste of this, for Divertisement: By this time perhaps he will but need it, having tired himself with reading these dull and flat Narratives.

1. The Chamber he kept in was known to be a Ground-chamber just under the Colledge-Library. Partly for the benefit of that, (for the Library was his other Study and Closet) and partly for the conveniency of having no Students over him to disturb him by walking, &c. he continued there very many years. His Bed-chamber-window opened into the Street, and in the Summer-time, when the Evenings were clear and serene, he would leave his Window open all night for fresh air. This was not long unobserved by the Hooker, who once began to draw away his Bed-cloaths while he lay awake. Nay, friend, (saith he) I pray thee stay till I am asleep, &c. with that the Hooker ran away, and he slept securely with his window still open. Not long after the same (or another of his Tribe) came again; and then he was asleep. But when the Fellow was plucking away the Cloaths, he soon awakened, and then said, Oh friend, if thou takest away my Bed-cloaths, (his wearing-cloaths he had secured well enough) I shall take cold, &c. And so he was rid of his Chapman again, and never heard more of him, though his windows were still continued unshut. With which pretty Confidence of his he overcame that of the Hookers, and made himself very merry with the story among his friends.

2. In the Vacations he was wont to be invited into the Country by a Kinsman and a Knight. At his first coming thither, (being then a young Master of Arts) he in curiosity stood observing the Falconer feeding his Hawk, and in way of complaisance began to praise the Hawk: As first, What a brave sharp Bill she had. Bill? said the Falconer, it is a Beak, Sir. By and by, What notable Claws she had. Claws, Sir? said he, they are Pounces. Anon he commended her fine Feathers? Feathers, Sir? they are Plumes. After that, her goodly Tail. Tail, Sir? it is a Train.

Mr. Mede not a little abash'd that he should be thus mistaken all along in those Terms of Art, and believing the Falconer would expose him for his Ignorance to his fellow-servants, he studied this innocent piece of Revenge: The Falconer, he saw, used to wait at Table, and therefore taking his time, three or four days after, when he thought the thing was quite forgotten, he sets them all at the Table on reading of Riddles. And when they were well in, he turning to the Falconer, asked him, Friend, What kind of Bird is that which hath neither Bill, nor Claw, nor Feathers, nor Tail? The Falconer was utterly pos'd, and stood mute. Why then (said Mr. Mede) I will tell you: It is your Hawk. That hath no Bill, but a Beak; no Claws, but Pounces; no Feathers, but Plumes; no Tail, but a Train, There was I even with him, would he say triumphingly.

3. Such Fellow-commoners who came to the University only to see it and to be seen in it, he call'd The University-Tulips, that made a Gaudy shew for a while, &c.

To these might be added many more; whereof some perhaps would tast a little too salt to some, but all of them would relish well enough to younger Palats.

But I must remember the Gravity of the Person I am speaking of, and whiles I am upon this pleasant Argument, shall endeavour to imitate his Practice which was, to make his Facetiousness always usher in something that was Serious. To the next then.

7. Some of his handsome and serious sayings.

SO I call them rather than Apophthegms, though some of them may possibly lay claim to that Title.

1. It was often in his Mouth, Over-doing always undoes; very applicable many ways.

2. To

2. To that stale triumphing Demand of the Romanists, Where was your Church before Luther? he answered with another Question, * Where was the fine Flour when the Wheat went to the Mill?

* And sometimes thus, Where was the Meal before the Corn was ground?

3. Where there is Siding and Studium partium, the prevailing Party always makes the other complain: "Just as it is at the great Crowding in the Commencement-House when an extraordinary Pravaricator comes up; the Crowd sways sometimes on one side, then they that are crushed to the walls cry out, Oh, Oh, and being sensible of the pain, they set their feet against the walls, and with their backs and all their strength cause the *Pres*s to turn as much to the other side; and then these cry out as fast, Oh, Oh, as the other did before: and so alternis vicibus."

4. To that old Complaint, (now newly dressed up and followed with such noises and Hubbubs) Is it not great pity that men should be silenced and laid aside only for their not subscribing? his answer was, So it is great pity that some goodly fair Houses in the midst of a populous City should take fire, and therefore must of necessity be pulled down, unless you will suffer the whole Town to be on a flame and consume to ashes.

5. That which followeth cannot properly be called a Saying, but rather a Discourse, resembling a rich Jewell made up of divers costly Gemms.

After he had been speaking very Judiciously and very Piously what great reason we all had to pray earnestly for our Governours in the Church, That God would direct and assist them, as in many other things, so in this, viz. in their Choice of or Recommending Persons to those Dignities in the Church which do ipso facto make them Convocation-men; Because (said he) as the Convocation is properly the Clergie's Parliament, so such Men are the lasting Members of that House, and therefore a special care to be had that they be well qualified; not only of good Learning and good Life, but of good Experience, good Temper, and of good Repute with the Gentry. This last he added, and gave good reasons why, and then proceeded, Although it is possible, yea very probable, that some who sit high in the Church, enjoying the benign Aspect and happy Influence of a Good and Gracious Prince, may very much advantage and advance the Church in other respects; yet, without a great regard had of fit Convocation-men, all the rest will be but as building high without Buttresses, and it may suddenly tumble down again.

8. What opinion strangers had of Mr. Mede and of some others of our Country-men; with a modest Advertisement.

FOREIN Testimonials are held to be the more considerable, because they are supposed to be less partial, as proceeding rather from right Judgment than from any by-alled Affection. I shall not here repeat any thing out of Sir William Boswell's Letters, or out of those of Lud. de Dieu and of others; but I shall tell you what I have received from the mouths of some Grandees in Repub. Literaria. They pronounced him not only "a most Judicious and Profound Divine, but a Person Eminent in almost all variety of choicest Learning, besides Languages. And therefore they did not doubt "to rank him with the Lord Verulam and with Mr. Thomas Lydiat. To which three Persons (I speak still of men of great variety of Learning; for otherwise they had an exceeding high Veneration for very many of our Divines, and for others of other Faculties: but to these three) they gave such a Preeminency as was given to David's three first Captains in the List of his Worthies.

Here I cannot conceal what dropp'd from one of their mouths, because I wish good use may be made of it at home.

Inquiring what Fortunes these men had, and understanding they were but ordinary, especially that of Mr. Lydiat; he burst out into this speech, Tou in England deserve not to have such Brave men among you, since you make no more of them.

That his Zeal for good Worth had been the more excusable, had it not exceeded so much as not to suffer his Judgment to consider what afterwards he was minded of.

1. That the L. Verulam was advanced to as high a Place in the State as a Subject is capable of: but how he lost his footing, no ingenuous man is willing to remember.

2. That some men, who are very Bookish and Studious, usually prefer their Leisure and Liberty before all Preferments whatsoever. Which was Mr. Mede's and Mr. Lydiat's case. The former of whom might have been much higher than he was, if he had pleased*; and was as high as he desired to be, had he lived to get but a Dominion to his Fellowship. And in that his Condition (such as it was) he thrived so well, as to become a considerable Benefactor to his Colledge.

* Of the preferment in Ireland that was offer'd him, Vide supra.

3. But

3. But now concerning Mr. Lydiat, (for whose sake chiefly that smart speech was uttered) here the Difficulty rises higher and grows more perplex'd.

His great Worth hath been celebrated enough by those his rare Pieces now extant. In his many Chronological Disquisitions he conflicted, as with Christoph. Clavius, and with the whole Colledge of Romish Mathematicians, so with that great Goliath of Literature, Joseph Scaliger, whom yet he so manifestly worsted, as to make him forsake his Weapon, and to betake himself unmanly to his Tongue. When the news of his Death came beyond Sea, I knew a certain great Mecenas and Patron of Learning there, whose Industry travelled very much to collect what of his Papers might be had, and to that end employed divers, (among the rest my self,) with a Resolution to have them fairly and faithfully printed at his own charges. But they were not to be retrieved.

Now let us see what Favours and Encouragements were afforded to a Person of so great Merits.

It is true, Prince Henry, of Famous and Glorious Memory, took so much notice of him, as to receive him into His Service, and to have him read to Him. Here questionless he had found a very Bountiful and Royal Master, had not that Peerless Prince been cropt just in his Bloom and Blossome. But now, alas! Mr. Lydiat's Hopes saw their own Funeral in that of his Royal Master's. Wherefore retiring into a small obscure Living at Alkerton in the Edge and Fringe of Oxfordshire, there he sojourned himself in his private Study, until, being unhappily engaged for the Debts of one nearly allied to him, he was thrown into Prison, where he lay a long time. At length, partly by the assistance of Sir William Boswell, (never to be named without very great Honour) and partly by the helps of the excellent Dr. Pinke, (that most worthy Warden of New-Colledge, whereof Mr. Lydiat had been sometime Fellow, as I have heard) and by the noble bounty of some other Friends of that University, he was restored to his Liberty, and returned to his little Living, wherein (maugre all the Disasters he had felt before, and all that salvage usage he after suffered for his Loyalty in the late Troubles) he left behind him at his Death a very neat and substantial Parsonage-house, with Barns and Stables, Garden and Orchard sutable, all which he built and raised from the ground, as also a new Chancel (of his own building likewise,) wherein he lies buried, as in his own proper Tomb and Monument.

But to say the Truth, when all is said that can be said, It were heartily to be wished That Publick Spirits would come up a little thicker in the World. It was a memorable Passage of an Italian Ambassador here in England, who, having taken his leave, and being now under sail homeward, stood upon the Deck, and looked wistly towards our Country as long as he could well discern it, and then for a Vale uttered these words, O troppo felice Isola, &c. O too happy Island, if thou hadst but some more Publick Souls in thee. This I have heard frequently repeated, and most feelingly, by as great a States-man, and as good a Commonwealths-man, and as sound a Christian, as our Nation hath bred in many Ages*.

* The thrice Renowned Sir Thomas Rowe, who, after so many Ambassages to almost all the Princes and States in Christendom, and to the greatest Emperors beyond Christendom, (all which were managed with admirable Dexterity and Success and Satisfaction) was last of all Ambassador extraordinary to Ferdinand III. Emperor of Germany, who gave him this Character, I have met with many Gallant Persons of many Nations, but I scarce ever met with an Ambassador till now.

It were to be wished again, That there were not too much of Truth in a speech that fell from a through-Scholar and Divine, — Many (by their fine Arts and Methods) get into Preferments, whiles Scholars (of good deserts) are hard at their Studies. It was not the least Ruby or Diamond in that fair Brooch stuck upon the Memory of the ever-Blessed B. Andrews,* That he sent for men of Note that he thought wanted Preferment, and gave them Prebends and Benefices under Seal before they knew of it; as to Mr. Boys, Mr. Fuller, &c. And I can never forget with what a Gusto that Brave Sir William Boswell was wont to relate this (among the infinite more observable Passages) in the Happy Reign of Q. Elizabeth, That she gave a strict Charge and Command to both the Chancellors of both Her Universities, to bring Her a Just, True and Impartial List of all the Eminent and Hopeful Students (that were Graduates) in each University, to set down punctually their Names, their Colledges, their Standings, their Faculties wherein they did eminere, or were likely so to do. Therein Her Majesty was exactly obeyed, the Chancellors durst not do otherwise: and the use She made of it was, That if She had an Ambassador to send abroad, then She of Her self would nominate such a Man of such an House to be his Chaplain, and another of another House to be his Secretary, &c. When She had any places to dispose of, fit for Persons of an

* See the Funeral Sermon, &c.

Academical

Academical Education, She would Her self consign such Persons as She judged to be pares Negotiis. Sir William had gotten the very individual Papers wherein these Names were listed, and marked with the Queen's own hand, which he carefully laid up among his Κεφάλια. Now ( as Sir William pursued ) this could not be long concealed from the young Students, and then it is easie to be imagined ( or rather it is not to be imagined ) how this Consideration, that their Sovereign's Eye was upon them, ( and so Propitious upon the Deserving among them ) how this, I say, would switch and spur on their Industries.

I end these Additionals to Mr. Mede's Character with that plain ordinary Vote, wherein yet, I believe, I shall have very many joyn with me,

Sic mihi contingat vivere, sicque mori !

God grant we may all in some proportion live as humbly, as faithfully, as fruitfully and Christianly, and then die as peaceably and comfortably as he did. Amen.

THE END.

---

If any one should scruple my Fidelity in relating some speeches of Mr. Mede's, because spoken so many years since ; he may please to satisfy himself with this, That it was my Custom, presently when I went from Mr. Mede's Chamber, to set down in writing what I conceived observable : which writings I have yet by me, and consulted with them in these my Narratives.

---

---

D I A T R I B Æ.

---

THE FIRST BOOK
OF THE WORKS
OF

The Pious and Profoundly-Learned

Joseph Mede, B. D.

S O M E T I M E

Fellow of CHRIST'S Colledge in

C A M B R I D G E.

---

Containing as many

DISCOURSES

On Several Texts of

SCRIPTURE

as there are Sundays in the Year.

---

Corrected and Enlarged according to the Author's own Manuscripts.

---

August. de Doctr. Christ. l. 2. c. 6. & in Psal. 140. Præfat.

Spiritus Sanctus magnificè ac salubriter ita Scripturas modificavit, ut locis apertioribus fami occurreret, obscurioribus autem fastidium detergeret.

Si nusquam aperta esset Scriptura, non te pasceret; Si nusquam occulta, non te exerceret.

---

THE

THE CONTENTS OF THE FIRST BOOK.

DISCOURSE I. Page 1

S. Matthew 6. 9.

ΟΥΤΩΣ οὖν προσεύχεσθε ὑμεῖς· Πάτερ ἡμῶν, &c. Thus therefore pray ye; Our Father, &c.

DISC. II. pag. 4

S. Matthew 6. 9. S. Luke 11. 2. Sancti-ficetur Nomen tuum. Sanctified, or Hallowed, be thy Name.

DISC. III. pag. 19

Acts 17. 4. There associated themselves to Paul and Silas of the worshipping
Greeks a great multitude.

DISC. IV. pag. 23

2 Peter 2. 4. For if God spared not the Angels which sinned, [ ἀλλὰ σιχαῖς ζόφου παρλαρώσας, παρέδωκεν εἰς κέρας τέληνμῶν ] ----- but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of dark- ness, to be reserved unto Judgment, &c.
so we translate it:

To which of S. Peter answers that of
S. Jude, ( as almost that whole Epistle doth to this ) vers. 6. And the
Angels which kept not their first estate,
[ or principality, ] but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the Judgment of the great Day,

DISC. V. pag. 25

1 Cor. 4. 1. Let a man so account of us as of the Ministers ( ὑπηρέτας ) of Christ,
and Stewards of the Mysteries of God.

DISC. VI. pag. 28

S. John 10. 20. He hath a Devil, and is mad.

DISC. VII. pag. 31

Proverbs 21. 16. The man that wandreth out of the way of understanding, shall remain in the Congregation of the Dead, בקהל רפאים. in coetu Gigantum.

DISC. VIII. pag. 34

Genesis 49. 10. The Scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor a Law-giver
from between his feet, untill SHILOH come, and unto him shall the gathering of the People be, ילו יקהל עמי.

DISC. IX. pag. 36

Psalm 8. 2. Out of the mouth of Babies and Sucklings thou hast ordained strength,
because of thine Enemies; that thou
mightest quell the Enemy and the Avenger.

DISC. X. pag. 40

Zachariah 4. 10. These Seven are the eyes of the Lord, which run to and fro
through the whole earth.

DISC. XI. pag. 44

S. Mark 11. 17. Is it not written, My House shall be called a House of Prayer
πᾶσι τοῖς ἔθνεσι to all [ the ] Nations?

DISC. XII. pag. 46

S. John 4. 23. Eut the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in Spirit and Truth: For the Father seeketh such to worship him.

e DISC.

THE CONTENTS.

- DISC. XIII. pag. 49.
S. Luke 24. 45. Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures: 46. And said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day.
- DISC. XIV. pag. 52.
Exodus 4. 25. Then Zipporah took a sharp stone, and cut off the fore-skin of her son, and cast it at his feet, and said, כִּי חַתָּן דָּמִים אֲנִי לִי, Sponsus sanguinum tu mihi es.
- DISC. XV. pag. 55.
Ezekiel 20. 20. Hallow my Sabbaths; and they shall be a sign between me and you, to acknowledge that I Jehovah am your God.
- DISC. XVI. pag. 58.
1 Cor. 11. 5. Πᾶσα γυνὴ προσευχομένη ἢ προφητεύουσα ἀκατακαλύπτῳ τῇ κεφαλῇ, κατασχύνει ἢ κεφαλὴν ἑαυτῆς. Every woman praying or prophesying with her head uncovered, dishonoureth her head.
- DISC. XVII. pag. 62.
Titus 3. 5. Διὰ λυτρῶν πολλῶν γενέσεως, καὶ ἀνακαινώσεως: Πνεύματος ἁγίου. By the washing of Regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost.
- DISC. XVIII. pag. 65.
Joshua 24. 26. And Joshua took a great stone, and set it up there ( viz. in Sichem ) under the Oak which was in the Sanctuary of the Lord: Alii, by the Sanctuary. Hebr. שֶׁמֶרַח.
- DISC. XIX. pag. 70.
1 Tim. 5. 17. Let the Elders that rule well be counted worthy of double Honour; especially they that labour in the Word and Doctrine.
- DISC. XX. pag. 74.
Acts 2. 5. And there were [κατοικοῦντες] sojourning at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every Nation under Heaven.
- DISC. XXI. pag. 77.
1 Cor. 9. 14. Even so hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the Gospel, should live of the Gospel; ἐκ τῆς Εὐ-ΑΓΓΕΛΙΟΥ ζῆν.
- DISC. XXII. pag. 80.
Psalm 112. 6. The Righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance.
- DISC. XXIII. pag. 84.
S. Matthew 10. 41. He that receiveth a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, shall receive a Prophets reward.
- DISC. XXIV. pag. 89.
S. Luke 2. 13, 14. And suddenly there was with the Angel a multitude of the heavenly Host, praising God, and saying, Glory be to God on high, ( or, in the highest ) and on earth Peace, Good-will towards men.
- DISC. XXV. pag. 97.
S. Mark 1. 14, 15. Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom of God. And saying, The time is fulfilled, and the Kingdom of God is at hand; Repent ye, and Believe the Gospel.
- DISC. XXVI. pag. 106.
S. Mark 1. 15. Repent ye, and believe the Gospel.
- DISC. XXVII. pag. 115.
Acts 5. 3, 4, 5. But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the holy Ghost, and to purloin of the price of the land? Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thy power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? Thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God. And Ananias hearing these words, fell down and gave up the ghost.

DISC.

THE CONTENTS.

- |   |  |
|---|--|
| DISC. XXVIII. pag. 124. Proverbs 30. 8, 9. Give me neither Poverty, nor Riches; Feed me with Food convenient for me, [ק'י] Left I be full and deny thee, and say, Who is the Lord? or left I be poor and steal, and take the name of my God in vain. [יחפשי' שם אלהי] DISC. XXIX. pag. 135. Isaiah 2. 2, 3, 4. And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the Mountain of the Lords House shall be established [or, prepared] in the top of the Mountains, and exalted above the Hills; and all Nations shall flow unto it, &amp;c. DISC. XXX. pag. 140. Judges 1. 7. As I have done, so God hath requited me. DISC. XXXI. pag. 150. S. Matthew 11. 28, 29. Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. DISC. XXXII. pag. 157. S. Matthew 11. 29. ----- Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. DISC. XXXIII. pag. 164. Acts 10. 4. And he said unto him, Thy Prayers and thine Alms are come up for a memorial before God; or (as it is verse 31.) are had in remembrance, &amp;c. DISC. XXXIV. pag. 173. Nehemiah 13. 14. Remember me, O my God, concerning this, and wipe not out my good deeds [Hebr. חסד] that I have done for the House of my God and for the Offices thereof. with Verse 22. Remember me, O my God, concerning this, and spare me according to the greatness of thy mercy. | DISC. XXXV. pag. 177. Deuteronomy 33. 8. And of Levi he said, Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy Holy One. DISC. XXXVI. pag. 187. Jeremiah 10. 11. Thus shall ye say unto them, The Gods that made not the Heavens and the Earth, (even) they shall perish from the Earth, and from under these Heavens. DISC. XXXVII. pag. 199. Proverbs 4. 23. Keep thy heart with all diligence [Hebr. מכל-משמר] above all keeping: For out of it are the issues of life. DISC. XXXVIII. pag. 206. Isaiah 55. 7. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. DISC. XXXIX. pag. 213. S. Matthew 7. 21. Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of heaven; but he that doth the will of my Father which is in heaven. DISC. XL. pag. 220. Genesis 3. 13. And the Lord God said unto the woman, What is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, The Serpent beguiled me, and I did eat. DISC. XLI. pag. 228. Genesis 3. 14. And the Lord God said unto the Serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattel and above every beast of the field: upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life. DISC. XLII. pag. 234. Genesis 3. 15. And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel. |
|---|--|

THE CONTENTS.

DISC. XLIII.	Page 238	the blessing of the Lord thy God which he hath given thee.
2 Peter 2. 1. But there were false Prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false Teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable Heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction.		DISC. XLVIII. pag. 265
DISC. XLIV.	pag. 245	Deuteronomy 16. 16, 17. .... In the Feast of Unleavened bread, and in the Feast of Weeks, and in the Feast of Tabernacles: and they shall not appear before the Lord empty. Every man shall give as he is able, according to the blessing of the Lord thy God which he hath given thee,
1 Cor. 10. 3, 4. And they did all eat the same Spiritual meat; And did all drink the same Spiritual drink: (for they drank of that Spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ.)		DISC. XLIX. pag. 271
DISC. XLV.	pag. 251	Genesis 10. 5. By these the Isles of the Gentiles [אֲיֵי הַגּוֹיִם] were divided [בְּפִרְדֵּי] in their lands; every one after his tongue, after their families, [לְמִשְׁפְּחוֹתָם] in their nations.
1 Cor. 10. 3, 4. .... And they did all eat the same spiritual meat: And they did all drink the same Spiritual drink.		DISC. L. pag. 276
DISC. XLVI.	pag. 255	Genesis 10. 5. By these were the Isles of the Gentiles divided in their lands, &c.
1 Cor. 10. 5. But with many of them God was not well pleased: for they were overthrown in the Wilderness.		DISC. LI. p. 284
DISC. XLVII.	pag. 260	Psalms 50. 14. Offer unto God praise, and pay thy Vows unto the most High.
Deuteronomy 16. 16, 17. Three times in a year shall all thy males appear before the Lord thy God, in the place which he shall chuse: in the Feast of Unleavened bread, and in the Feast of Weeks, and in the Feast of Tabernacles: and they shall not appear before the Lord empty. Every man shall give as he is able, according to		DISC. LII. p. 295
		Revel. 3. 19. As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: Be zealous therefore, and repent.
		DISC. LIII. pag. 303
		1 Ep. John 2. 3. Hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his Commandments.

---

THE FIRST BOOK;

---

CONTAINING

DISCOURSES

ON

DIVERS TEXTS

OF SCRIPTURE.

---

---

DISCOURSE I.

---

S. MATTHEW 6. 9.

Οὕτως οὖν προσεύχεσθε ὑμεῖς· Πάτερ ἡμῶν, &c.
Thus therefore pray ye; Our Father, &c.

T was well hoped, after the question about the lawfulness and fitness of a set Form of Prayer had been so long debated in our Church, that the Sect of those who opposed it had been ere this well-nigh extinguished: But experience tells us the contrary, that this Fancy is not only still living, but begins, as it were, to recover and get strength afresh. In which regard my Discourse at this time will not be unseasonable, if, taking my rise from these words of our Saviour, I acquaint you upon what grounds and example this practice of the Christian Church hath been established, and how frivolous and weak the Reasons are which some of late do bring against it.

To begin therefore; You see by the Text I have now read, that our Blessed Saviour delivered a set Form of Prayer unto his Disciples, and in so doing hath commended the use of a set Form of Prayer unto his Church: Thus therefore (saith he) pray ye; Our Father which art in Heaven, &c.

Is not this a set Form of Prayer? and did not our Saviour deliver it to be used by his Disciples? They tell us, No. For Thus, say they, in this place is not thus to be understood; but for, in this manner, to this effect or sense, or after this pattern; not in these words and syllables. To this I answer, It is true that this form of Prayer is a Pattern for us to make other Prayers by; but that this only should be the meaning of our Saviour's Thus, and not the rehearsal of the words themselves, I utterly deny: and I prove it out of the eleventh Chapter of S. Luke, where the same Prayer is again delivered in these words, "Ὅταν προσεύχησθε, λέγετε, When ye pray, say, Our Father which art in Heaven — that is, do it in hæc verba. For what other phrase of Scripture is there to express such a meaning, if this be not? Besides, in this of S. Luke the occasion would be considered. It came to pass (saith he) as Jesus was praying in a certain place, that when he ceased, one of his Disciples said unto him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his Disciples. From whence it may not improbably be gathered, that this was the custom of the Doctors of Israel to deliver some certain Form of Prayer unto their Disciples, to use, as it were a badge and symbolum of their Discipleship; at least John Baptist had done so unto his Disciples: and thereupon our Saviour's Disciples besought him, that he also would give them in like manner some Form of his making, that they might also pray with their Master's spirit, as John's

Matth. 6. 9.

Disciples did with theirs. For that either our Saviour's or John's Disciples knew not how to pray till now, were ridiculous to imagine; they being both of them Jews, who had their certain set hours of prayer, which they constantly observed, as the third, sixth and ninth. It was therefore a Form of Prayer of their Master's making, which both John is said to have given his Disciples, and our Saviour's Disciples besought him to give them.

For the fuller understanding whereof, I must tell you something more, and the rather, because it is not commonly taken notice of; and that is, That this delivery of the Lord's Prayer in S. Luke is not the same with that related by S. Matthew, but another, at another time, and upon another occasion: That of S. Matthew in that famous Sermon of Christ upon the Mount, whereof it is a part; that of S. Luke upon a special motion of the Disciples at a time when himself had done praying: That of S. Matthew in the second; that of S. Luke in the third year after his Baptism. Consider the Text of both, and you shall find it impossible to bring them into one and the same. Whence it follows, that the Disciples, when it was first uttered, understood not that their Master intended it for a Form of Prayer unto them, but for a pattern or example only, or, it may be, to instruct them in special in what manner to ask forgiveness of sins. For if they had thought he had given them a Form of Prayer then, they would never have asked him for one now. Wherefore our Saviour this second time utters himself more expressly, "Ὅταν προσεύχησθε, λέγετε, When ye pray, say, Our Father which art in Heaven — Thus their inadvertency becomes our confirmation: For as Joseph said to Pharaoh, * The dream is doubled unto Pharaoh, because the thing is established by God; so may we say here, the delivery of this Prayer was doubled unto the Disciples, that they and we might thereby know the more certainly that our Saviour intended and commended it for a set Form of Prayer unto his Church.

* Gen. 41. 32.

Thus much of that set Form of Prayer which our Saviour gave unto his Disciples, as a precedent and warrant to his Church to give the like Forms to her Disciples or members; a thing which from her infancy she used to do. But because her practice is called in question, as not warranted by Scripture, let us see what was the practice of the Church of the Old Testament, than whose example and use we can have no better rule to follow in the New.

First therefore, we find two set Forms of Prayer, or Invocation, appointed by God himself in the Law of Moses. One, the Form wherewith the Priests were to bless the people: Nam. 6. 23, 24, 25, 26. On this wise, saith he, shall Aaron and his sons bless the children of Israel, saying unto them, The Lord bless thee and keep thee; The Lord make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee; The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace. Is not this a set Form of Prayer? For what is to bless, but to pray over or invoke God for another?

The second is the Form of profession and prayer to be used by him who had paid his Tithes every third year: Deut. 26. 13. O Lord God, I have brought away the hallowed things out of mine house, and also have given them unto the Levite, and unto the stranger, and fatherless, and unto the widow, according to all thy commandments which thou hast commanded me: I have not transgressed thy Commandments, nor have I forgotten them. 14. I have not eaten thereof in my mourning, neither have I taken away thereof for an unclean use, &c. 15. Look down from thy holy habitation, from heaven, and bless thy people Israel, and the Land which thou hast given us, as thou swarest to our Fathers, a Land that floweth with milk and honey.

But what need we seek thus for scattered Forms, when we have a whole Book of them together? The Book of Psalms was the Jewish Liturgy, or the chief part of the Vocal service wherewith they worshipped God in the Temple. This is evident by the Titles of the Psalms themselves, which shew them to have been commended to the several Quires in the same, To Asaph, To the sons of Korah, To Jeduthun, and almost forty of them To the Magister Symphonie the Prefect or Master of the Musick, in general. The like we are to conceive of those which have no Titles; as for example, of the 105 and 96 Psalms, which, though they have no such Inscription in the *Psalmb*ook, yet we find 1 Chron. 16. 7. that they were delivered by David into the hands of Asaph and his Brethren for forms to thank the Lord. This a man would think were sufficient to take away all scruple in this point; especially when we our selves, and all the Reformed Churches, use to sing the same Psalms, not only as set Forms, but set in Metre that is after a humane compofure. Are not the Psalms set Forms of Confession, of Prayer, and of Praising God? And in case there had been no Prayers amongst them, yet what reason could be given, why it should not be as lawful to pray unto God in a set Form, as to praise him in such a one?

What

What therefore do they say to this? Why, they tell us, that the Psalms are not sung in the Church unto God, but so rehearsed for instruction of the people only, namely, as the Chapters and Lessons are there read, and no otherwise. But if either we do, ought, or may sing the Psalms in the Church with the same end and purpose that the Church of the Old Testament did, (and it were absurd to say we might not,) this Exception will not subsist. For what is more certain than that the Church of Israel used the Psalms for Forms of praising and invoking God? What mean else those Forms, Cantemus Domino, Psallete Domino, Let us sing unto the Lord, and, Sing ye unto the Lord, and the like so frequent in them? But there are more direct and express testimonies. In 1 Chron. 25. 3. it is expressly said of Jeduthun and his sons, that their office was to prophesie with a Harp, to give thanks, and to praise the Lord. In the second of Chron. 30. 21. we read, that the Levites and the Priests praised the Lord day by day, singing with loud Instruments unto the Lord. And, as ye heard even now, out of 1 Chron. 16. David, at the time when he brought up the Ark unto Jerusalem, then first delivered the 105 and 96 Psalms into the hands of Asaph and his sons to confess or give thanks unto the Lord. And lastly, to leave no place for farther doubt, we read Ezra 3. 10, 11. that the Levites the sons of Asaph were set with Cymbals to praise the Lord, after the ordinance of David King of Israel: and that they sung together by course, in praising and giving thanks unto the Lord, because he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever. For this reason, the four and twenty Courses or Quires into which the Singers of the Temple were divided by King David to serve in their turns, consisted each of them of twelve, according to the number of the Tribes of Israel; that so every Tribe might have a mouth and voice to praise and to give thanks unto God for him in the Temple.

Math. 6. 9.

Thus we have seen what warrant to pray and call upon God in a set Form hath from the practice of the Church of God in the Old Testament. And, if Reason may have place, in the publick service of God, where one is the mouth of many, there is none so proper and convenient. For how can the Minister be said properly to be the mouth of the Congregation in prayer unto God, when the Congregation is not first made acquainted and privy to what he is to tender unto God in their names? Which in a voluntary and extemporary form of Prayer they are not, nor well can be; I am sure neither so properly nor conveniently as in a set Form, which both they and the whole Church have agreed upon, and offer unto God at the same time, though in several places, in the self-same form and words. And this may be a second Reason, I mean from Uniformity: For how can the Church, being a Mystical Body, better testify her unity before God, than in her uniformity in calling upon him? especially our Saviour telling us, that if but two or three shall agree together on earth, as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done unto them of his Father which is in heaven. So preavailable with Almighty God is the power of Consent in Prayer.

Math. 18. 19.

LET us now, in the last place, see what Reasons they bring who contend altogether for voluntary Prayer, and would have no set Forms used.

First, they say, It is the ordinance of God, that the Church should be edified by the gifts of her Ministers as well in Praying as Preaching. Ergo, their Prayers should be extemporary or voluntary; because in reading a set Form of Prayer this gift cannot be shewn.

11

To this I answer, First, That there is not in this point the same reason for Prayer and for Preaching: for in Prayer (I mean publick) the Minister is the mouth of the Church unto God, and therefore it were convenient they should know what he puts up to God in their names; but in Preaching he is not so. Secondly, Why should not the Pastors and Ministers of the Church edifie the Church by their gift of Prayer, as well in composing a set Form of Prayer for her use by general agreement, as in uttering a voluntary or extemporary Prayer in a particular Congregation? Thirdly, Are not the members of the Church to be edified as well by the spirit of the Church, as the Church or some part thereof by the spirit of a member? But how can the Church edifie her members by her gift of Prayer, otherwise than by a set Form agreed upon by her consent? Fourthly, Ostentation of gifts is one thing, but Edification by them another. Ostentation of the gift of Prayer is indeed best shewn in a voluntary or extemporary Prayer; but the Church may be edified as well by a set Form. Yea such a Form in the publick service of God is more edificative than a voluntary: And that, both because the Congregation is first made acquainted therewith; and secondly, because they are better secured from being engaged in ought that might be unfit to speak unto God, either for matter or manner, or such as they would not have given their consent to if they had been aware of it. For now that extraordinary assistance of the Holy Ghost, which was in the Primitive and Apostolical times, is long since ceased; and all men, to whom that office belongeth to speak to God for others, are not at all times discreet and well advised, when they speak to him at will and extempore, but subject to miscarriage. Lastly, I answer, That the Church is to be edified by the gift of her Ministers in voluntary Prayer, loco & tempore, in fit place and upon fit occasions, not in all places and upon all occasions. And thus much to this Objection.

Matth. 6. 9.

2. But they object secondly, That the spirit ought to be free and unlimited, and that therefore a Book or set Form of Prayer, which limits the spirit in praying, is not to be tolerated or used.

To this I answer, It is false, that the acting of the Spirit in one Christian may not be limited or regulated by the spirit of another; especially, the spirit of a particular man in the publick worship, by the Spirit of the Church whereof he is a member. For doth not the Apostle tell us I Cor. 14. 29, 30. that even that extraordinary Spirit of prophecy, usual in his time, might be limited by the spirit of another Prophet? Let the Prophets, saith he, speak two or three, and let the other judge: If any thing be revealed to another that sitteth by, let the first hold his peace. Is not this a limiting? He gives a reason v. 32. For the spirits of the Prophets, saith he, are subject to the Prophets. Besides, are not the spirits of the people as well limited and determined by a voluntary Prayer, when they joyn therein with their Minister, as they are by a set Form? True, the spirit of the Minister is then free; but theirs is not so, but tied and led by the spirit of the Minister as much as if he used a set Form. But to elude this, they tell us, that the Question is not of limiting the spirit of the people, but of the Minister only: For, as for the people, no more is required of them but to joyn with their Minister, and to testify it by saying Amen; but the spirit of the Minister ought to be left free, and not to be limited. But where is this written, that the one may not be limited as well as the other? We heard the Apostle say even now, The spirit of the Prophets is subject to the Prophets: If in prophesying, why not in praying? And what shew of Reason can be given, why the spirit of a particular Minister in the publick worship of the Church may not, yea ought not to be limited and regulated by the spirit of the Church Representative, as well as the spirit of a whole Congregation by the spirit of a particular Minister? For every particular Minister is as much subordinate to the spirit of the Church Representative, as the spirit of the Congregation is to his. So much for this Objection.

3. There remaineth yet a third, which may be answered in two or three words. No set Form of Prayer, say they, can serve for all occasions. What then? yet why may it not be used for all such occasions as it serves for? If any sudden and unexpected occasion happen, for which the Church cannot provide, the spirit of her Ministers is free: Who will forbid them to supply, in such a case, that by a voluntary and arbitrary form, which the Church could not provide for in a set Form? And this is what I intended to say of this Argument.

DISCOURSE II.

MATTHEW 6. 9. LUKE II. 2.

Sanctificetur Nomen tuum.

Sanctified, or Hallowed, be thy Name.

Although I make no question but that which we so often repeat unto Almighty God in our daily prayers, is for the general meaning thereof by the most of us in some competent measure understood: yet because by a more full and distinct explication the knowledge of some may be improved, and the meditations of others occasioned to a further search; I hope I shall not do amiss, nor be thought to have chosen a Theme either needless or not so fit for this Auditory, If I shall enquire What that is we pray for in this first Petition of the Prayer our Lord hath taught us, when we desire that God's Name may be sanctified: For perhaps we shall find more contained therein than is commonly taken notice of.

The words are few, and therefore shall need no other Analyse than what their very very number presents unto us, viz. God's Name, and the sanctifying thereof; Sanctificetur Nomen tuum. I will begin first with the last in order, but first in nature, Nomen tuum, God's Name. By which, according to the style of Holy Scripture, we are to understand in this place, First of all, God himself, or His sacred Deity, to wit, abstractly expressed, according to the style of eminency and dignity, that is, Dei αἰωνία, the Divine Majesty: as we are wont for the King to say, His Majesty, or the King's Majesty, and of other persons of honour and eminency, their Highness, their Honour, his Excellency, and the like; so of God, His Name, and sometimes, with the self-same meaning, His Glory; as Jer. 2. 11. Hath any nation changed their Gods, which yet are no Gods? but my people have changed their Glory (that is, their God) for that which is good for nought. So Psalm 106. 20. of the Calf made in the wilderness, They changed their Glory into the similitude of an Oxe that eateth grass: And S. Paul, Rom. 1. 23: They changed the Glory (that is, the Majesty) of the incorruptible God into an Image made like to corruptible man, &c. Such is the notion, but much more frequent, of God's Name. In a word, Nomen Dei in this kind of use is nothing else but Divinum Numen. Whence it is that in Scripture, to call upon the Name of God, to blaspheme the Name of God, to love his Name, to swear by his Name, to build a Temple to his Name, for his Name to dwell there; and in the New Testament, to believe in the Name of the Lord Jesus, to call upon the Name of the Lord Jesus; these, I say, and the like expressions have no other meaning, than to do these things to the Divine Majesty, to the Lord Jesus, whose is that Name above every name, whereat every knee must bow. Accordingly here, Sanctificetur Nomen tuum, Hallowed be thy Name, is as much as to say, Sanctificetur Numen tuum, Sanctified be thy Divine Majesty.

Matth. 6. 9.
Luke 11. 2.

Secondly, Under the Name of God here to be sanctified or hallowed, understand, besides the Majesty of his Godhead, that also super quod invocatum est Nomen ejus, whereupon his Name is called, or that which is called by his Name, (as we in our Bibles commonly express this phrase of Scripture;) that is, all whatsoever is God's, or God is the Lord and owner of by a peculiar right; such as are Things sacred, whether they be Persons, or whether Things by distinction so called, or Times, or Places, which have upon them a relation of peculiarity towards God. For such as these are said in Scripture, to have the Name of God called upon them, or to be called by his Name; that is, to be His. Thus we read in Scripture of an House which had the Name of God upon it, or which was called by his Name, that is, God's House, 1 Kings 8. 43. Jer. 7. 10, &c. Of a City upon which the Name of God was called or named, to wit, the Holy City, Jerusalem, the City of the great King, the Lord of hosts, Jer. 25. 29. Dan. 9. 18. Of an Ark upon which the Name of God the Lord was called, 1 Chron. 13. 6. 2 Sam. 6. 2. that is, the Lord's Ark, or the Ark of his Covenant, as it is elsewhere named. Of a People upon which the Name of the Lord was called, or which were called by his Name, Dent. 28. 10. Dan. 9. 19. and elsewhere; that is, were his peculiar and holy people; as is said in like manner, and with like meaning, of the Church of the New Testament, James 2. 7. Acts 15. 17. I represent not these places of Scripture at large, because I know that every ear that is acquainted with Scripture can bear witness unto them. And for the meaning of this expression of God's Name to be called upon a thing, or a thing to be called by his Name, that it is all one as to say it to be His, (besides the evidence of the matter whereabout it is used,) appears by the same phrase used in two other places, of the like relation of men to that which is theirs: as Gen. 48. 16. where Jacob blessing Joseph's sons saith, The Angel which redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads, and let my name be called upon them; that is, let them be mine, namely, as Reuben and Simeon are mine, as he saith a little before; for they are words of adoption. Again, in the 4. of Esay 1. where it is said, that seven women should take hold of one man, and say, We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel, only let thy Name be called upon us, to take away our reproach; that is, Do thou own us, or let us be thine, that it may not be a reproach unto us that we have no husband. The Ancients were wont to set the Names of the Owners upon their houses and other possessions; which they called Tituli, Titles. Chrysologus serm. 145. sicut dominos prædiorum liminibus affixi. Tituli proloquuntur, As the Titles fixed to doors do speak the owners of the possessions. S. Augustine in Psal. 21. Quando potens aliquis invenerit Titulos suos, nonne jure rem sibi vendicat, & dicit, Non poneret titulos meos, nisi res mea esset? When any great man shall spy his own Titles, does he not justly challenge the goods, and say, No man would put my Titles to it, unless the thing were mine? Whether this phrase of Scripture, of God's Name to be called or named upon a thing, hath reference unto any such custom, I cannot affirm; but surely the meaning is the same, to wit,

Matth. 6. 9.
Luke 11. 2.

that God is the Lord and Proprietary of them. And thus ye have heard what is this Name of God we pray here to be sanctified; to wit, a twofold Name, first, his Name and Majesty which we call upon; secondly, that also which is called by his Name: The first we may call his Personal, the other his Denominative or Participated Name.

HAVING learned what Nomen Dei importeth, and so cleared the Object of what we pray for; let us next enquire what that is which the word sanctifie, or To be sanctified, implieth, being that which our vote witnesseth ought to be done thereunto. And this I intended for the main and principal Argument of my present Discourse, being a matter not so well traced as the former, and perhaps not altogether freed of obscurity and difficulty to be understood.

For our more certain and assured discovery whereof, we will first examine the abstract thereof, sanctity, and find out the true notion of it, namely, what is the ratio formalis, the formal state or nature of that which the Scripture entitleth in the general קדוש or ἅγιος, that is, Holy; not regarding what notion the Greeks or Latines had respect to in their Languages, but what the Holy Scripture properly intendeth under that name. For because to be sanctified can have but these two senses, either to be made holy, or to be used and done unto according to, or as becometh, its holiness; and that the Majesty of God, which is the prime object of this Act, is not capable of the first sense (viz. to be made holy) but of the second only: if we therefore once rightly understand what is the condition and property of sanctity according to the notion of Scripture, we shall not be long ignorant what it is either for the Name or Majesty of God, or that which is called by his Name, to be hallowed or sanctified, namely, to be done unto according to their Holiness.

Now R. David Kimchi upon the 56 of Esay, ver. 2. Blessed is the man that keepeth the Sabbath from polluting it, hath these words, "קדוש שבת להכרילו משאר הימים To sanctifie the Sabbath is to separate or distinguish it from other days; כי כן כל לשון קדושה הוא ענין הברלו מאחר במעלה Because all words of Sanctity import a thing separated or divided from other things by way of preeminence or excellency. Thus the Rabbi. And that this which he saith is true, namely, That sanctity consists in a discretion and distinction from other things by way of exaltation and preeminence, may appear by these instances and examples which I shall now produce out of Scripture.

And first from that Law touching the Holy oyl, Exod. 30. 31. where, after the composition thereof described, This (saith the Lord) shall be an holy anointing Oyl unto me. What is that? why, it follows, v. 32. Upon mans flesh shall it not be poured, neither shall ye make any other like it, after the composition thereof. It is Holy, therefore it shall be Holy unto you. That is, As this Oyl is holy and discrete from other Oyls, so shall it accordingly by you be used with difference and discrimination: For the Text goes on v. 33. Whosoever compoundeth any like it, or putteth any of it upon a stranger, (that is, upon any besides those it was appropriated to,) shall be cut off from his people. What else means all this, but that this Oyl should be a singular or peculiar Oyl, set apart and distinguished from all other Oyls both in its composition and use; and that to be such, was to be Holy or Sacred.

The like we shall find in the 35. verse of the same Chapter, concerning the Holy Perfume there described: Thou shalt make it, saith he, (to wit, the ingredients he afore mentioned) a perfume, a confectiō, after the art of the Apothecary, tempered together, pure and Holy. Verse 37. You shall not make to your selves (that is, not for your own use) according to the composition thereof: It shall be unto thee Holy for the Lord. Ver. 38. Whosoever shall make the like unto it, to smell thereto, shall be cut off from his people.

But above all others this notion of sanctity or Holiness is most expressly intimated and taught us in those divine Periphrases or circumlocutions which the Lord himself more than once makes of an Holy People: as Lev. 20. 24. speaking on this manner; I am the Lord your God which have separated you from other people.—Ver. 26. And ye shall be Holy unto me: for I the Lord am Holy, and have severed you from other people, that ye should be mine. Mark here, that to separate is to make Holy; and that to be Holy is to be separated from others of the same rank. Again, Deut. 26. 18, 19. The Lord hath avouched thee (to wit, Israel) this day to be his peculiar (or appropriate) people, as he hath promised thee:—And to make thee high above all nations which he hath made, in praise, in name, and in honour; namely, that thou mayest be an Holy people unto the Lord thy God, as he hath spoken. Now what is this but Rabbi Kimchi's definition almost verbatim? that to be sacred or Holy is to be separated or set apart from other things by way of of excellence; or, which is all one, to be set in some state of singularity or appropriatedness, whereby it is advanced above the common condition of things of the same order. He that will, may compare also two other passages, Deut. 7. 6. & 14. 2. parallel to those I have produced; where to be an Holy, and to be a Peculiar people, are made one and the same, or the one expounded by the other.

Matth. 6. 9.
Luke 11. 2.

It may be yet further confirmed by comparing Deut. 19. 2, 7. with Joshuah 20. 7. For whereas in the former of these places it is said concerning the Cities of refuge, Thou shalt separate, תבדיל, three Cities for thee in the midst of thy land: in Joshuah, where this commandment is put in execution, we read in stead of separated, יקדשו, i. they sanctified three Cities, Kadesh, Shechem, and Hebron. Where that the one is equivalent to the other, the seventy so well understood, that even in this place of Joshuah, for יקדשו, which is, sanctificarunt they sanctified, they rendred * διέκειλαν, separarunt, or discreverunt, they separated or set apart.

* By which th-y are wont otherwise to render the verb

The same notion of Holiness may be gathered from the Antithesis or opposite thereunto, to wit, Unholy, or Unclean, which the Scripture is wont to express by the name of Common. So S. Peter in his Vision, Acts 10. 14. Lord, saith he, I have never eaten any thing that is common or unclean, Οὐδέποτε ἔφαγον πᾶν κοινὸν ἢ ἀκαθάarton. For know, that because that which is Holy ought to be kept pure and clean; or rather, because Cleanness imports a separation from filth, as Holiness doth from common; thence Clean and Holy, and so also Unholy and Unclean, are used the one for the other: whence 1 Cor. 7. 14. Unclean and Holy are opposed. But to go on; the voice from heaven answers S. Peter in the same language v. 15. What God hath cleansed, (that is, sanctified,) σὺ μὴ κοίνου, account not thou common. So in 1 Mac. 1. 47. κτήνη κοινὰ are unclean beasts; and v. 62. φαγαὶν κοινὰ, to eat unclean things.

ברר, or הבדיל

The like Antithesis of Holy and Common is to be found Heb. 10. 29. where the Apostle saith of a Believer or Christian that lives an ungodly and wicked life, He hath troden under foot the Son of God, and counted the blood of the Covenant wherewith he was sanctified, κοινόν, as a common thing; that is, he had profaned it. Our translation rendreth it an unholy thing; the opposition thereof to sanctified witnessing, that to be the meaning. Now then, if to be Unholy or Unclean be to be Common; surely it follows by the Law of opposition, that to be Holy is to be separated from the common, or to be singular and appropriate in some manner or other.

Lastly, it is to be observed, that whereas in the Law given Numbers 6. concerning the Vow of Nazarisme (which word signifies separation, of Nazar, to separate) the words, to separate, and separation, come very often in the Text; the vulgar Latin renders for them above ten times, consecrare, consecratio, sanctificare, and sanctificatio: which shews, that this notion, namely, that Holiness consists in a state of separation, is no new conceit, but such as Antiquity took notice of.

As the Lxx, once or twice in this place,
and elsewhere
sometime render the same word.

The nature of Holiness, wherein it consisteth, according to the idiome of Scripture, being thus found out and cleared, that which was aimed at in this inquisition, to wit, what the same meaneth by to sanctifie, and to be sanctified, will be no hard matter to resolve. For sanctity and to sanctifie being Conjugates or Denominatives, as Logicians call them; the one openeth the way to the knowledge of the other. If therefore sanctity or Holiness be a condition of discretion and distinction from other things, as we have shewed it to be; then to sanctifie must either be to put a thing into that state, which we call, to consecrate; or if it be such already, to use and do unto it as becomes the sanctity thereof: that is, habere cum discrimine, to put a difference between it and other things by way of excellency, or in a dignifying wise, by appropriating and severing it in the use thereof from things of ordinary and common rank; or, which is all one, to use it singularly, appropriately, and, in a word, uncommonly. For not to use it so, it being such, were to abuse it, which the Scripture calls to prophane; to sanctifie and to prophane being opposites. Whence Ezek. 22. 26. to prophane is expounded by not putting a difference: The Priests (saith the Lord) have violated my Law, and have prophaned my holy things; they have put no difference between the holy and prophane.

This to be to sanctifie, all the places almost which I have alledged out of the Law for the notion and nature of sanctity do apparently proclaim: for the one is so nearly linked to the other, that they could not well be separated. Thus was Israel, God's holy people, to sanctifie themselves by a discriminative manner of living or usance, because the Lord their God had discriminated or separated them from other people. So Lev. 20. 24, 25, 26. I am the Lord your God, which have separated you from other people. Ye shall therefore put difference between clean beasts and unclean, and between unclean fowles and clean: And ye shall not make your souls abominable by beast or by fowl, or by any any manner of living thing that creepeth on the ground, which I have separated from you as unclean. But ye shall be holy unto me; for I the Lord am holy, and have severed you from other people, that ye should be mine.

Matth. 6. 9.
Luke 11. 2.

After the same manner were the Holy Oyntment and the Holy Perfume or Incense to be sanctified by a discriminative, singular, appropriate use of them, and not to be used as other Oyntments and Perfumes: to wit, the one not to be poured upon mans flesh, nor the other used for mans smelling unto; yea none of the like composition to the one or the other to be made for any prophane or common use, upon pain of his being cut off from his people who should dare to do it. That is, not the particular or Individuum only, but even the whole kind of that composition was to be accounted sacred: otherwise this caution needed not; since for the Individual, all sacred things ought to be appropriate and incommunicable in their use.

And to this notion it is not altogether improbable but the Apostle may allude, 1 Cor. 11. 29. when he expresseth the prophanation of the Holy Supper in coming to it, and using it as a common banquet, by μὴ διακρίνειν σῶμα τὸ Κυρίου, not differencing the Lord's body; that is, not sanctifying it, or using it as became so holy a thing.

HITHERTO I have considered the words of my Text apart: but now let us put them again together, and see How the Name of God ought to be sanctified in the manner now specified, both in it self, and in the things which it is called upon; as in the beginning I distinguished. For the better understanding of which, we are to take notice of a twofold Holiness; one Original, Absolute, and Essential in God; the other Derived or Relative in the things which are His, properly (according to the use of the Latin) called Sacra, Sacred things. Both these have their several and distinct Sanctifications belonging unto them. For whatsoever is Holy, ought to be sanctified, according to the condition and proportion of the Holiness it hath.

To speak of them distinctly. The first, Original or Absolute Holiness, is nothing else but the incommunicable Eminency of the Divine Majesty, exalted above all, and divided from all other ἀξιώματα or Eminencies whatsoever. For that which a man takes to be, and makes account of as, his God, (whether it be such indeed, or by him fancied only) he ascribes unto it, in so doing, a condition of Eminency above, and distinct from all other Eminencies whatsoever, that is of Holiness. Hence it comes that we find the Lord the God of Israel, and the only true God, in Scripture so often styled Sanctus Israelis, the Holy One of Israel, that is, Israel's most Eminent and Incommunicable One, or, which is all one, His God: as namely Psal. 89. 18. The Lord is our defence, the HOLY ONE of Israel is our King. Isay 17. 7. At that day shall a man look unto his Maker, and his eyes shall have respect to the HOLY ONE of Israel. Habak. 1. 12. Art not thou from everlasting, O Lord my God, mine HOLY ONE? Agreeably whereunto the Lord is said also now and then to swear by his HOLINESS, that is, by Himself: as in the Psalm before alledged v. 35. Once have I sworn by my HOLINESS, that I will not lie unto David, &c. Amos 4. 2. The Lord God hath sworn by his HOLINESS, that lo, the dayes shall come upon you that he will take you away with hooks, &c. According to this sense I suppose also that of Amos 8. 7. is to be understood; The Lord hath sworn by the Excellency of Jacob (that is Jacob's most Eminent and Incommunicable One, or by Jacob's HOLY ONE) Surely I will never forget any of their works, &c. For indeed the Gods of the Nations were not properly and truly Holy, because but partially and respectively only; forasmuch as the Divine eminency which they were supposed to have was, even in the opinion of those who worshipped them, common to others with them, and so not discriminated from, nor exalted above all: But the God of Israel was simply and absolutely such, both in himself and to them-ward who worshipped him, as who might acknowledge no other; and therefore κατ' ἐξοχήν, and by way of distinction from all other Gods, called Sanctus Israelis, The Holy One of Israel; that is, that sole absolute and only incommunicable One, or ἀκοινώνητος Ὄνομα (as the Author of the Book of Wisdoms calls him, chap. 14. 21.) That God exalted above all, and divided from all, without pareil; there being no other such besides him. *There is none holy as the Lord, (saith Hannah) for there is none besides thee; [Lxx. * none Holy besides thee;] neither is there any Rock like our God.* Wherefore it is to be observed, that although the Scripture every where vouchsafes the Gentiles Demons the name of Gods; yet it never, I think, calls them Holy Ones, as indeed they were not. Thus you see that as Holiness in general imports a state of eminency and separation; so this of God, as I have described it, disagrees not from that general notion, when I affirm it to consist in a state of peerless or incommunicable Majesty: for that which is such, includes both the one and the other. But would you understand it yet better? Apply it then to his

See Isay. 24.
14.
Micah 4. 3.

1 Sam. 2. 2.
* ἐκ ὧν ὁ γίγος πλάττει οὐκ.

his Attributes whereby he is known unto us, and know that The Lord is Holy, is as much as to say, He is a Majesty of peerless Power, of peerless Wisdom, of peerless Goodness, and so of the rest. Such a one is our God, and such is his Holiness. Math. 6.9.
Luke 11. 2.

Now then to sanctify this peerless Name or Majesty of his must be by doing unto him according to that which his Holiness challengeth in respect of the double importance thereof: namely, to serve and glorify him, because of his Eminency; and to do it with a singular, separate, and incommunicated worship, because he is Holy. Not to do the former is Irreligion and Atheism, as not to acknowledg God to be the Chief and Sovereign Eminency; not to observe the second is Idolatry. For as the Lord our God is a singular and peerless Majesty, distinguished from and exalted above all things and eminencies else whatsoever; so must his Worship be singular, incommunicable, and proper to him alone. Otherwise, (saith Joshuah to the people) Ye cannot serve the Lord. Why? For (saith he) He is an Holy God, He is a jealous God, Josh. 24. 15. (that can endure no corival,) He will not forgive your transgressions nor your sins. If ye forsake the Lord and serve strange gods, &c.

Whence in Scripture, those who communicate the Worship given unto him with any besides him, or together with him, by way of Object, that is, whether immediately or but mediately, are deemed to deny his incomparable Sanctity, and therefore said to prophane his Holy Name. See Ezek. 20. 39. and chap. 43. 7, 8. Levit. 18. 21.

In a word; All that whole immediate Duty and Service which we ow unto God, whether inward or outward, contained under the name of Divine Worship, (when either we confess, praise, pray unto, call upon or swear by his Name) yea all the Worship both of men and Angels, is nothing else but to acknowledg in thought, word and work, this peerless preeminence of his Power, of his Wisdom, of his Goodness and other Attributes, that is, His Holiness; by ascribing and giving unto him that which we give and ascribe to none besides him, that is, to sanctify his most Holy Name. This is that the Holy Ghost would teach us, when describing how the Seraphims worship and glorify God, Esa. 6. 3. he brings them in crying one unto another, Holy, Holy, Holy is the Lord God of hosts, the whole earth is full of his glory; that is, Sanctifying him. From whence is derived that which we repeat every day in the Hymne, To thee all Angels cry aloud, the heavens and all the powers therein; To thee Cherubim and Seraphim continually do cry, Holy, Holy, Holy Lord God of Sabaoth; Heaven and earth are full of the Majesty of thy Glory.

And because the pattern of God's holy worship is not to be taken from Earth, but from Heaven; the same Spirit therefore in the Apocalyps expresseth the Worship of God in the New Testament with the same form of hallowing or holiying his Name which the heavenly Host useth. For so the four Animalia, representing the Catholick Church of Christ in the four quarters of the world, are said when they give glory, honour and thanks to him that sitteth upon the throne and liveth for ever and ever, to do it by singing day and night this Trisagium, Holy, Holy, Holy Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come: that is, the sum of all that they did was but to agnize his Sanctity or Holiness, or, which is all one, to sanctify his holy Name. When therefore the same four Animalia are afterwards brought in chanting, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing; and again, Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power be unto him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever: all is to be understood as comprehended within this general Doxologie, as being but an exemplification thereof; and therefore the Elogies or blazons mentioned therein, to be taken, according to the style of Holiness, in an exclusive sense, of such prerogatives as are peculiar to God alone. Apoc. 4. 18.
Ch. 5. 12.
V. 13.

And according to this notion of sanctifying God's Name which I contend for, would the Lord have his Name sanctified, Esa. 8. 12, 13. when he saith, Fear ye not their Fear (that is, the Idolaters Σεβάσματα or Gods; for so Fear here signifies, to wit, the thing feared) neither dread ye it: but sanctify the Lord of Hosts himself, and let him be your Fear, and let him be your Dread, that is, your God. As Gen. 31.
42. 53.
Psal. 76. 11.
So the Chal-dee uses their

Again chap. 29. 23. They shall sanctify my Name, (saith he) even sanctify the Holy One of Jacob, and shall fear the God of Israel. The latter words shew the meaning of the former. לְהַלְלֵהוּ and more than once renders יְהוָה the name of God
by it.

The like we have in the first Epistle of S. Peter chap. 3. vers. 14, 15. ἵνα φοβηθῆτε τὸν Κύριον (i. Gentilium) μὴ φοβηθῆτε, μὴ δὲ ταραχθῆτε, &c. Fear ye not their Fear, nor be in dread thereof: (that is, Fear not nor dread ye the Gods of the Gentiles which persecute you) But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts, that is, Fear and worship him

Matth. 6. 9.
Luke 11. 2.

him with your whole hearts. For that this passage (howsoever we are wont to expound it) ought to be construed in the same sense with that of Esay 8. before alledged, and the words to be rendered suitably, I take it to be apparent for this reason, because they are verbatim taken from thence; as he that shall compare the Greek words of S. Peter with the Lxx. in that place of Esay, will be forced to confess.

Besides this evident and express use of the word sanctifie, in the notion of religious and holy worship and fear of the Divine Majesty, there is yet another expression sometimes used in Holy Scripture which implieth the self-same thing; that, namely, to worship God with that which we call holy and divine worship, is all one with to agnize his holiness, or to sanctifie his Name. Those speeches, I mean, wherein we are exhorted to worship the Lord, because he is Holy. As Psal. 99. 5. Exalt ye the Lord our God, and worship at his foot-stool; for he is Holy. Again, in the end of the Psalm, Exalt the Lord our God, and worship at his holy hill; for the Lord our God is Holy. The same meaning is yet more emphatically expressed by those that sing the Song of victory over the Beast, Apoc. 15. 3, 4. *Great (say they) and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of Nations. Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorifie thy Name? ὅτι μόνος * ΑΓΙΟΣ,* (for that I believe is the true reading, not ὁσῖος) thou only art Holy; therefore all the Nations shall come and worship before thee: that is, they shall relinquish their Idols and plurality of Gods, and worship thee as God only. For this was the Doctrine both of Moses in the Old Testament, and of Christ Jesus the Lamb of God in the New; That one God only, that made the heaven and the earth, was to be acknowledged and worshipped, and with an incommunicable worship. In respect whereof, as I take it, these Victors are there said to sing the Song of Moses, and the Lamb, that is, a gratulatory Song of the worship of one God, after that his * Ordinances were made manifest. For otherwise the Ditty is borrowed from the 86. Psalm, the 8, 9, and 10. verses, where we read, Among the gods there is none like unto thee, O Lord, neither are there any works like unto thy works. All Nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O Lord, and shall glorifie thy Name. For thou art great, and dost wondrous works: Thou art God alone; that is, Thou only art Holy. Compare Jer. 10. ver. 6, 7.

* So Editio Complut.
Andreas, &
Exempl. 15.

* διγαίωματα, jura.

I have one thing more to adde before I finish this part of my Discourse, lest I might leave unsatisfied that which may perhaps seem to some to weaken this my explication of the sanctification of God's Name. For the word, to sanctifie, or be sanctified, is sometimes used of God in a more general sense than that I have hitherto specified, namely, as signifying any way to be glorified, or to glorifie; as when he saith, He will be sanctified in the destruction of his enemies, or in the deliverance of his people, and that before the Heathen, and the like; that is, he would purchase him glory, or be glorified thereby. I answer, It is true, that to be sanctified is in these passages to be glorified; but yet alwayes to be glorified as God, and not otherwise. Namely, when God by the works of his Power, of his Mercy, or Justice extorts from men the confession of his great and holy Godhead, he is then said to sanctifie, or make himself to be sanctified amongst them, that is, to be glorified and honoured by their conviction and acknowledgment of his Power and Godhead. For although men may be also said to glorifie, or purchase honour unto themselves, when by their noble acts they make their abilities and worth known unto the world: yet, for such respect, to be said to be sanctified, is peculiar unto him alone whose Glory is his Holiness, that is, unto God.

T H U S we have learned How the Name or Majesty of God is to be sanctified personally or in it self; which is the chiefest thing we pray for, and ought so to be in our endeavour; namely, To worship and glorifie him incommunicably, according to his most eminent and unparallel'd Holiness: and so, O Lord, Hallowed be thy Name. But there is another sanctification or Hallowing of God's Name yet behind, which must be joyned therewith; which is, To sanctifie him also in the things which have his Name upon them, that is, are separate and dedicate to his service, or, in a word, which are His, namely, by a peculiar relation. For otherwise it is true, The whole earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof, the World and those that dwell therein. But there are somethings His not as other things are, and so as they are no longer Ours; such as according to the style of Scripture (as I have already noted) are said to be called by his Name, or to have his Name called upon them. These are things sacred. Therefore I told you before of a twofold sanctity or Holiness: the one Original, Absolute, and Essential in God; the other Derived or Relative, in that which is set apart to be in a peculiar and appropriate manner His. For whatsoever belongeth unto him in this manner, is divided from other things with preeminence, whether they be Things or Persons which are so separated.

separated. For in such separation we shewed the nature of sanctity in general to consist. Now as the Divine Majesty it self is separate and holy; so know, it is a part of that honour we owe unto his most Sacred Name, that the Things whereby and where-with he is served should not be promiscuous and common, but appropriate and set apart to that sacred end. It is an honour which in some degree of resemblance we afford unto Kings, Princes, and other persons of dignity, (of infinite less eminency than God is) to interdict the use of that to others which they are wont to use; sometimes the whole kind, sometimes the individual only. As we know in former times, to wear purple, to subscribe with the Ink called Encaustum, of a purple colour, and other the like, which the diligent may find were appropriate to the use of Kings and Emperors only. In the Book of the Kings we read of the King's Mule, so appropriate to his use, as to ride upon him was to be made King, 1 Kings 1. 33, 44. In the Book of Esther, Chap. 6. 8. of the Horse that King Ahasuerus used to ride upon, put in the same rank with the Crown and royal apparel, which none but the King might wear. And of individual Utensils thus appropriated, and as it were dedicated to the alone use of persons of eminency, our own times want not examples. Whence natural Instinct may seem to prompt unto us, that such appropriation is a testimony of honor and respect. Sure I am, that Almighty God hath revealed it to be a part of that Honor we owe unto him. Thus all the Utensils of the Tabernacle and Temple were sacred and set apart to that use; and not the Utensils of the Altar only, but even the Instruments of Musick, which David ordained to praise the Lord with in the Temple, were not common, but consecrated unto God for that end: whence they are called, 1 Chron. 16. 42. כלי שיר האלהים, Instrumenta musica Dei, the musical Instruments of God, that is, sacred ones, and 2 Chron. 7. 6. כלי-שיר יהוה, the musical Instruments of the Lord. Agreeably whereunto those who sung the fore-alleged song of victory over the Beast are said to have had in their hands αὐλὰς τοῦ Θεοῦ, the harps of God, that is, not prophane or common, but sacred Harps, the Harps of the Temple; for there they sung this their Anthem, standing upon the great Laver or Sea of glass which was therein. Matth. 6. 9.
Luke 11. 2.
Apoc. 15. 2.

Nay, our Blessed Saviour, Mark 11. 16. would not suffer a prophane or common vessel to be so much as carried through his Father's House, accounting it as great a prophanation as to buy and sell there. And yet was not this abuse (which is a thing well to be marked) within those Septs of the Temple which the Jews accounted sacred, but in the outmost Court called Atrium gentium & immundorum, the place whither, together with such as were unclean, the Gentiles and uncircumcised were admitted to pray; as that of the Prophet cited by our Saviour, rightly rendred, intimates, My house shall be called a house of Prayer, to (or for) ALL NATIONS. Consider Esay 56. 6, 7. This Court therefore the Jews made no other account of than as of a prophane place: but our Saviour proved by Scripture, that this Gentiles Oratory was also part of his Father's house, and accordingly not to be prophaned with common use. Lastly, There was never any age of the Christian Church (till of late) wherein it was not commonly believed, that God was to be honoured by such appropriation or consecration as we speak of; that is, that God's Name was in this manner to be sanctified. But are there any (will you say) now that deny it? Yes, there are some in our age so far carried away into a contrary extreme to that they flie from, that they hold no oblation or consecration of things unto God by the devotion of men in the New Testament, whether of Utensils, Goods, Times, or Places, ought to be esteemed lawful; but that all distinction between sacred and prophane in external things by virtue of such consecration (excepting only the Sacraments) is flat superstition. Yet to him that seriously considers it, it cannot chuse, methinks, but seem strange and absurd to affirm, (as this assertion doth,) that men now in the time of the Gospel are exempted and freed from agnizing God to be Lord of the creature, by giving some part thereof unto him; than which no part of Divine Worship is more natural, and which hath been used by mankind ever since the beginning of the world. Yea, in the state of Paradise, among all the Trees in the Garden, which God gave man freely to enjoy, one Tree was Noli me tangere, and reserved to God as Holy, in token he was Lord of the Garden. So that the first sin of Mankind, for the species of the fact, was sacrilege, in prophaning that which God had made holy.

They say, It is true, that in the Old Testament this way of honouring and acknowledging God was warranted by the Divine Law; but in the New we find no precept given concerning it, nor confirmation of that which was before. Now God is not

Matth. 6. 9.
Luke 11. 2.

* Mat. 5. 17.

* According as in that Matth.
22. 40. On these two Commandments [ viz. To love God above all, and our neighbour as our selves ]
hang all the Law and the Prophets; and in that Luke 16. 29. They have Moses and the Prophets.

not to be worshipped with any worship but what he hath himself prescribed in his Word. I answer, What though there be no particular precept in the New Testament for this, no more than for divers other duties which a Christian is bound to? yet if a general warrant be, the particular needs not. But our Saviour saith in his Gospel, in that Evangelical Sermon he preached upon the Mount, that he came not to dissolve the Law and the Prophets, but to fulfil and perfect them: Think not (saith he *) that I am come to dissolve the Law and the Prophets, [ that is, to take away the obligation of that Rule of the duty of man to God and his neighbour, given first by Moses in the Law, and afterwards repeated and inculcated by the Prophets; for so Prophets are here to be * understood, and not of predictions ] ἀλλὰ πληρῶσαι, but to fulfil them, that is, to supply, accomplish, or perfect those Rules and Doctrines of Just and Unjust contained in them, by a more ample interpretation, and other improvement befitting the state of the Gospel. For surely this must be the meaning of this speech of our Saviour, if we be more willing ( as we should ) to take a sense from Scripture, than to bring one to it. Doth not the whole context following evince it? Indeed the Law, that is, the Legal Covenant or Covenant of works, ( as Law is oft taken in the New Testament ) together with all the Rites depending thereon, is dissolved by the coming of Christ; and a better Covenant with new Rites established in stead thereof: but the Law, that is, the Doctrine and Rule of life, given by God, contradistinct from those ordinances which were only appendages of that Covenant, ( though these were also in some sense perfected, by bringing the truth and substance in stead of the figure and shadow thereof ) is not disannulled, but confirmed and perfected by him, in such manner as became the condition of the Covenant of the Gospel. For that this confirmation is not to be restrained to the Decalogue only, is manifest, because our Saviour in the following words insists upon other Precepts besides it. If it be said, they are reducible thereto; this will not serve the turn, for so are all the rest of God's Commandments. Unless therefore it can be shewn, that to honour God by an oblation of his creature is no part of the Law here confirmed by our Saviour, let no man be so daringly bold as to exempt himself and others from the obligation thereof; unless he means to be one of them of whom our Saviour speaks immediately, saying, Who-soever therefore shall break one of the least of these Commandments, and shall teach men so to do, ( mark it ) he shall be called ( i. he shall be ) the least in the Kingdom of heaven. The word is λύω, that is, loose, or dis-bind, as he doth both, that abrogates, and that observes it not; much more he that affirmeth it unlawful to be observed.

Nay, how dare we dis-bind or loose our selves from the tye of that way of agnizing and honouring God, which the Christian Church from her first beginnings durst not do? Irenæus, witness of that age which next succeeded the Apostles, is plain. Lib. 4. c. 34. *Offerre oportet Deo (saith he) primitias creaturæ ejus; sicut & Moses ait, Non apparebis vacuus ante conspectum Domini Dei tui. — Et non genus Oblationum reprobatur est: oblationes enim & illic, ( sc. in V. T. ) oblationes autem & hinc; sacrificia in populo, sacrificia & in Ecclesia: sed species immutata est tantum; quippe cum jam non à servis, sed à liberis offeratur. Unus enim & idem Dominus; proprium autem character servilis oblationis, & proprium liberorum, uti & per oblationes ostendatur indicium libertatis. It behoveth us (saith he) to offer unto God a present of his creature; as also Moses saith, Thou shalt not appear before the Lord thy God empty. — For offerings in the general are not reprobated: there were Offerings there, ( viz. in the Old Test. ) there are also offerings here in the Church: but the specification only is changed; forasmuch as offerings now are not made by bond, but free-men. For there is one and the same Lord still; but there is a proper character of a bond or servile offering, and a proper character of free-mens, that so even the offerings may shew forth the tokens of freedom. — Now where in Scripture he believed this doctrine and practice to be grounded, he lets us know in the 27. chap. of the same Book: *Et quia Dominus naturalia Legis, per quæ homo justificatur, ( quæ etiam ante legislationem custodiebant qui fide justificabantur, & placebant Deo ) non dissolvit, sed extendit, sed & implevit, ex sermonibus ejus ostenditur. That is, That our Lord dissolved not, but enlarged and perfected the natural precepts of the Law, whereby a man is just ( which also, before the Law was given, they observed who were justified by faith, and pleased God, ) is evident by his words. Then he cites some of the passages of that his Sermon upon the Mount, Mat. 5. 20. And a little after addes; *Necesse fuit auferre quidem vincula servitutis quibus jam homo assueverat, & sine vinculis sequi Deum; superextendi verò decreta libertatis, & augeri subjectionem quæ est ad Regem, ut non retrorsus quis renitens indignus appareat ei qui se liberavit. — Et propter hoc Dominus, pro eo quod est, Non mœchaberis, nec concupiscere præcepit;

præcepit; & pro eo quod est, Non occides, neque irasci quidem; et pro eo quod est, Decimare, omnia quæ sunt pauperibus dividere. That is, It was needful that those bonds of servitude which man had before been inured to should be taken off, that so he might without Gyves follow God; but that the laws and ordinances of freedom should be extended, and his subjection to the King encreased, lest that drawing backward he might appear unworthy of him that freed him.— And for this reason our Lord, in stead of, Thou shalt not commit adultery, commands not so much as to lust; in stead of, Thou shalt not kill, not so much as to be angry; in stead of, To Tithe, to distribute all we have to the poor, &c. All which, saith he, in the same place, are not solventis Legem, sed adimplentis, & extendentis & dilatantis, not of one that dissolves the Law, but fulfils, extends and enlarges it: alluding still to that in our Saviour's Sermon upon the Mount.

Matth. 6.9.
Luke 11. 2.

Besides, those who are acquainted with Antiquity can tell, that the Primitive Christians understood the holy Eucharist to be A commemoration of the Sacrifice of Christ's death upon the Cross, in an oblation of Bread and Wine. 'Tis witnessed by the Fathers of those first Ages generally. Whereupon the same Irenæus also affirmeth, that our Saviour by the institution of the Eucharist had confirmed Oblations in the New Testament: Namely, to thanksgive or bless a thing in way to a sacred use, he took to be an offering of it unto God. And was not David's Benediction and thanksgiving at the preparation for the Temple and Offertory? Where note well, That as he, upon that occasion, blessed the Lord, saying, Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory — all that is in heaven and earth is thine, thine is the Kingdom — Both riches and honour come of thee — Ergo, because all things come of thee, of thine own have we given thee: so do Christ's redeemed, in their Evangelical Song, Apoc. 5. ascribe no less unto him, saying, v. 12. Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing. Yea, the 24. Elders, which are the Christian Presbytery, expressing (ch. 4. 11.) the very argument and sum of that Hymnologic which the Primitive Church used at the offering of Bread and Wine for the Eucharist, worship God, saying, Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory, and honour, and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are, and were created.

1 Chron. 29.
11, &c.

TAKING therefore for granted that which the Practice of the Church of God in all ages, yea, I think, I may say the Consent of mankind from the beginning of the world, beareth witness to; that among those duties of the Sanctification of God's Name, wherewith his Divine Majesty is immediately and personally glorified, (of which I have before spoken) this is one, and a principal one, to agnize and confess his peerless Sovereignty and dominion over the creature, by yielding him some part thereof toward his worship and service, of which we renounce the propriety our selves; and that accordingly there are both Things and Persons now in the Gospel (as well as were before the Law was given) in this manner lawfully and acceptably set apart and separated, by the devotion of men, unto the Divine Majesty, and consequently relatively Holy (which is nothing else but to be God's by a peculiar right:) I say, that these are likewise to be done to according to their degree of sanctity, in honour of him whose they are: not to be worshipped with divine worship, or the worship which we give unto God, communicated to them; (far be it from us to defer to any creature the Honour due unto the Divine Majesty, either together with him, or without him;) but yet habenda cum discrimine, to be regarded with a worthy and discriminative use, that is, used with a select and differing respect from other things: as namely, if Places, not as other places; if Times, not as other times; if Things by way of distinction so called, not as other things; if Persons set apart unto the service and worship of God, neither to be used by others, nor they to carry themselves in their fashion of life, as other persons, (for that which in other things sacred is their use, in persons sacred is their conversation, demeanour or carriage of themselves;) But all to be sanctified with a select, appropriate, or uncommon usage; that as they are God's by peculiar relation, and have his Name called upon them; so to be separate, as far as they are capable, from common use, and imployed as instruments and circumstances of his worship and service: which is the highest and most singular honour that any creature is capable of. Nay, (as I have said before) even this is to the honour of God, That as himself is that singular, incommunicable and absolutely Holy One, and his service and worship therefore incommunicable; so should that also which hath his Name thereon, or is consecrated to his service, be in some proportion incommunicably used, and not promiscuously and commonly, as other things are. They are the words of

C

Maimonides

Matth. 6.9.
Luke 11. 2.

Maimonides the Jew, but such as will not misbecome a Christian to make use of, concerning that Law, Levit. 5. 15. If a soul commit a trespass, and sin through ignorance in the holy things of the Lord; then he shall bring unto the Lord for his trespass a Ram, &c. "Behold, saith he, how great weight there is in the Law touching sacrilegious transgression. And what though they be wood and stone, and dust and ashes? when the Name of the Lord of all the world is called upon things, they are sanctified (that is, made holy.) And who so useth them to common use, he transgresseth therein; and though he do it through ignorance, he must needs bring his atonement, Yea, it is a thing worthy to be taken special notice of, that that so presumptuous and most dreadfully vindicated sin of Korah, Dathan, Abiram and their company, in offering Incense unto the Lord, being not called thereunto, did not discharge their Censers of this discriminative respect due unto things Sacred. For thus the Lord said unto Moses, after that fire from heaven had consumed them for their impiety, Speak unto Eleazar the Son of Aaron the Priest, that he take up the Censers out of the burning, and scatter thou the fire yonder; for they are hallowed: The Censers of these Sinners against their own souls; let them make them broad plates for a covering of the Altar: for they offered them before the Lord, therefore they are hallowed, or holy.

Numb. 16. 37.
38.

Now that by this discriminative use or sanctification of Things sacred the Name of God is honoured and sanctified, according to the tenor of our petition, is apparent, not only from Reason, which tells us that the honour and respect had unto ought that belongs unto another, because it is his, redounds unto the owner and Master; but from Scripture, which tells us that by the contrary use of them his Name is profaned. Hear himself, Lev. 22. 2. Speak unto Aaron (saith he) and his sons, that they separate themselves from the Holy things of the children of Israel, and that they prophane not my Holy Name in the things which they hallow unto me. Also in the Chapter next before, v. 6. the Priest that should not discriminate himself according to those singular observations or differing rules there prescribed him, is said to prophane the Name of his God. Again, Ezek. 22. 26. when the Priests profaned God's holy things, by putting no difference between the Holy and Profane; I (saith the Lord) am profaned amongst them. Likewise chap. 43. 7. Together with other abominations there mentioned, the Lord saith, that his Holy Name had been polluted, or profaned, by the carcases of their Kings, that is, of Manasseh and Amon, buried in the King's Garden hard by the walls of the Temple: for so by the Hebrews and others that place is understood. See 2 Kings 21. 18, 26. By the pollution of the Temple the Lord esteemed his own Name profaned. Take in also, if you will, that of Malachi ch. 1. where the Lord saies of those who despised and dishonoured his Table or Altar, by offering thereon for sacrifice the lame, blind, and sick, which the Law had made unclean and polluted, that they had profaned his Holy Name. But if the Name of God be profaned by the disesteem and misusage of the things it is called upon; then surely it is sanctified when the same are worthily and discriminatively used, that is, as becometh the relation they have to him.

I HAVE already specified the several Kinds of sacred things which are thus to be sanctified: yet lest something contained under some of them might not be taken notice of by so general an intimation, it will not be amiss a little more fully and particularly to explicate them than I have yet done. Remember therefore that I ranged all sacred things under four heads. First, of Persons Sacred; such as were the Priests and Levites in the Old Testament, and now in the New the Christian Clergy or Clerus, so called from the beginning of Christian Antiquity, either because they are the Lord's κληρονόμιον or Portion, which the Church dedicateth unto him out of her self, (namely, as the Levites were an offering of the Children of Israel, which they offered unto him out of their Tribes,) or because their inheritance and livelihood is the Lord's portion. I prefer the first; yet either of both will give their Order the title of Holiness, as doth also more especially their descent which they derive from the Apostles, that is, from those for whom their Lord and Master prayed unto his Father, saying, Father, ἀγίασον αὐτοὺς ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ σου, [ἐν for eis] Sanctify them unto, or for, thy Truth: thy Word is Truth; that is, Separate them unto the Ministry of thy Truth, the word of thy Gospel, which is the truth and verification of the promises of God. It follows, As thou hast sent me into the world, so have I also sent them into the world, (this is the key which unlocks the meaning of that before and after.) And for them I sanctify my self, that they might be sanctified for thy Truth; that is, And forasmuch as they cannot be consecrated to such an Office without some sacrifice to atone and purifie them, therefore for their consecration to this holy function of ministration of the new Covenant, I offer

John 17. 17.

V. 18.

V. 19.

my

my self a Sacrifice unto thee for them, in lieu of those legal and typical ones wherewith Aaron and his sons first, and then the whole Tribe of Levi, were consecrated unto thy service in the old. An Ellipsis of the first Substantive in Scripture is frequent. So here ἀληθεία only is put for διακονία τῆς ἀληθείας, Truth, for the Ministry of Truth.

Matth. 6. 9.
Luke 11. 2.

Now that the Christian Church (for of the Jewish I shall need say nothing) hath alwayes taken it for granted, that those of her Clergy ought, according to the separation and sanctity of their Order, to be distinguished and differenced from other Christians, both passively in their usance from others, but especially actively, by a restrained conversation and peculiarness in their manner of life, is manifest by her ancient Canons and Discipline. Yea, so deeply hath it been rooted in the minds of men, that the Order of Church-men binds them to some differing kind of conversation and form of life from the Laity; that even those who are not willing to admit of the like discrimination due in other things, have still in their opinions some relick thereof remaining in this, though perhaps not altogether to be acquitted of that imputation which Tertullian charged upon some in his time, to wit, Quum excellimur & inflamur adversus Clerum, tunc unum omnes sumus, tunc omnes Sacerdotes; quia Sacerdotes nos Deo & Patri fecit. Quum ad perequationem Discipline Sacerdotalis provocamur, depouimus insulas, & impares sumus. When we vaunt and are puffed up against the Clergie, then we are all one, then we are all Priests; for he made us Priests to God and his Father. But when we are called upon to equal in our lives the example of Priestly Discipline, then down go our Mitres, and we are another sort of men.

De Morogama cap. 12.

Another sort of things Sacred which I named, was Sacred Places, to wit, Churches and Oratories, as the Christian name Κυριακά implieth them to be, that is, the Lord's. A third, Sacred Times, that is, dedicated and appointed for the solemn celebration of the worship of God, and Divine duties: such are with us (for those of the Jews concern us not) Κυριακαὶ ἡμέραι, our Lord's dayes, with other our Christian Festivals and Holy-dayes. Of the manner of the discrimination from common, or sanctifying both the one and the other, by actions some commanded, others interdicted to be done in them, the Canons and Constitutions of our Church will both inform and direct us. For holy Times and holy Places are Twins, (Time and Place being, as I may so speak, pair-circumstances of action;) and therefore Lev. 19. 30. and again 26. 2. they are joyned together, tanquam ejusdem rationis, Keep my Sabbaths, and reverence my Sanctuary.

The fourth sort of Sacred things is of such as are neither Persons, Times nor Places, but Things in a special sense, by way of distinction from them. And this sort containeth under it many particulars, which may be specified after this manner.

1. Sacred Revenues of what kind soever: which in regard of the dedication thereof, as they must not be prophaned by sacrilegious alienation, so ought they to be sanctified by a different use and imployment from other Goods; namely such a one as becometh that which is the Lord's, and not man's. For that Primitive Christian Antiquity so esteemed them, appears by their calling them τὰ κυριακά, as they did their Place of Worship κυριακὴν, and their Holy day κυριακή all of the Lord, as it were Christening the old notion of Sacred by a new name. So Can. Apostol. XL. Manifesta sint Episcopis res propriae (si quidem res habet proprias & manifesta sint τὰ κυριακά, i. res Dominice— Let it be manifest what things are the Bishop's own, (if he have any things of his own,) and let it be manifest what things are the Lord's. Author constitut. Apost. Lib. 2. c. 28. al. 24. Episcopus ne utatur τοῖς κυριακοῖς, Dominicis rebus, tanquam alienis aut communibus, sed moderatè— Let not the Bishop use the things that are the Lord's, as if they were another's or as if they were common, but moderately and soberly. See also Balsamon in Can. 15. Concilii Ancyran. and the Canon it self.

2. Sacred Utenfils, as the Lord's Table, Vessels of ministration, the Books of God, or Holy Scripture, and the like. Which that the Church, even in her better times, respected with an holy and discriminative usance, may be learned from the story of that calumnious crimination devised by the Arrian Faction against Athanasius, as a charge of no small impiety, namely, that in his Visitation of the Tract of Mareotis, Macarius one of his Presbyters, by his command or instinct, had entered into a Church, of the Miletian Schismatics, and there broken the Chalice or Communion-Cup, thrown down the Table, and burnt some of the Holy Books. All which argues that, in the general opinion of Christians of that time, such acts were esteemed prophane and impious; otherwise they could never have hoped (as they did) to have blasted the reputation of the holy Bishop by such a slander.

Touching the Books of God, or Holy Scripture, (which I referred to this Title) especially those which are for the publick service of God in the Church, I adde

Matth. 6. 9.
Luke 11. 2.

this further; That under that name I would have comprehended the senses, words and phrases appropriated to the expression of Divine and Sacred things; which a Religious ear cannot endure to hear abused with prophane and scurrilous application.

Malachi. 1. 6, 8,
12, 14.

3. Under this fourth head of Things sacred I comprehend sacred Acts; such as are the Acts of God's holy worship and administration of his Sacraments. For albeit these Acts are duties of the first and personal Sanctification of God's Name, whereof the immediate object is God; yet are the Acts themselves sacred things, and therefore have some sanctification due to them also, as other sacred things have: of which although it be most true that the unfeigned devotion of the Heart (as before him who alone knoweth the Hearts of the children of men) be the main and principal requisite; yet unless, even in the outward performance, they be for the manner and circumstances discriminated from common acts by a select accommodation befitting their holiness, their sanctification is defective, and by such defect, if voluntary, God's Name is prophaned, even then when we are worshipping him. How much more when our carriage therein cometh short even of that wonted reverence wherewith we come before an earthly Potentate? May not God here justly use the same expostulation with us, that he did with those in the Prophet Malachi, who presented themselves before him with such an offering as was, in regard of the blemishes, unworthy of and unbefitting so great a Majesty, and therefore to be accounted rather an affront than an act of honour and worship? Ye have, saith he, despised and prophaned my Name — Offer it now unto thy Governour; will he be pleased with thee, or accept thy person? — yet I am a great King, saith the Lord of hosts. And this is the document or lesson which this place naturally and unavoidably ministrereth to us; That to come before the Divine Majesty with less reverent and regardful deportment than we do before earthly Kings and Potentates, is to despise and prophane his holy Name. And not that, which some would shelter under this Text, and lean too much upon; namely, That the Acts of God's external worship ought to be wholly conform to the use of the semblable actions performed unto men, and not differ from them; and upon this ground charge the Christian Liturgies with absurdity in their forms of praying and praising God with responsals, singing by turns, and speaking many together. For this principle is directly repugnant to the nature of sanctification, which consists in discrimination and difference. And therefore, though the material of our gestures and other expressions, vocal or visible, be borrowed from the use and custom of men; yet for the formality of them, not only they may, but ought to be differenced from them. Moreover, touching this reproof of the Prophet, take notice that it is grounded upon the Law, Levit. 22. where we are taught, that when that is not observed concerning the Rites of God's service which the sanctity of them requireth, as in other particulars, so in this of a not defective or unblemished offering, his Name is thereby prophaned. See verse 32. with the rest of the Chapter foregoing it. And if so, then by the contrary it is sanctified.

Lastly, Unto this head of sacred Acts I reduce Oaths and sacred Covenants, that is, such as are made either with God, or between men, God's Name being called upon; which therefore 1 Sam. 20. 8. are styled Covenants of the Lord. For that the observance due touching both is a sanctifying of them, as things upon which the Name of the Lord is called, is apparent; forasmuch as when they are violated by falsehood they are said to be prophaned, as Levit. 19. 12. Psalms 55. 20. Jer. 34. 15, 16.

Thus, together with my Explication of these several sorts of sacred Things, I have briefly and in general pointed at that also wherein the proper Sanctification of each consisteth: which though far short of such a tractation as the matter requireth; yet if it may serve only but to give occasion to others, who are better able, to bend their thoughts upon this Argument (which perhaps the Times call for,) I shall fully attain the end I aimed at. For mine own part, to descend to particulars would be a task too high for me, and (as I suspect) not very acceptable. For it is ten to one (if the grounds I have laid be true) but that the most of us would be found faulty in some things, and some of us in all. Well, the summ of my argumentation hath been this; Is there any thing in the New Testament God's by a peculiar right? To say there is not, is absurd, and against the perpetual tradition of Christianity. If there be, then it is holy; if holy, then to be sanctified; if sanctified, then to be discriminated in the use and respect thereof from that which is of common condition.

NOW out of this Discourse which I have hitherto made you may see and take notice, that (contrary to the vulgar opinion) the Prohibition of Idolatry, and the discriminative minative observance of things sacred, not to prophane them by a promiscuous and common use, are derived both of them from one and the same principle, namely, God's Incommunicableness, which derives a shadow and resemblance upon the things which have his Name called upon them, to wit, a state of appropriateness and singularity. Wherefore the Apostle, Rom. 2. 22. not without good reason, compares together the transgressions of the one and the other kind, as parallel sins or sins of affinity: Thou that hatest Idols, (saith he) dost thou commit Sacrilege? Where by sacrilege understand not only the usurpation of things sacred, but the violation of that which is sacred in general. And it is as if he had said, Thou hast mended the matter well indeed; for still thou dost against the same principle. For it is one of the exemplifications of that he saith in the beginning of the Chapter: He that judgeth or condemneth another, and doth the same or the like himself, is inexcusable. By this it appears how much they are mistaken who, under pretence of avoiding Idolatry and Superstition, cannot endure that any distinction should be made between things sacred and common. Is not this to unhallow God's Name one way, that so we might not prophane it another? Far be it from me to be a patron of Idolatry or Superstition in the least degree: yet I am afraid lest we, who have reformed the worship of God from that pollution, (and blessed be his name therefore,) ἀμετεία τ' ἀβολαχῆς, as S. Basil speaks, that is, by bending the crooked stick too much the other way, have run too far into the contrary extreme, and taken away (some of us) all difference in a manner between sacred and prophane; and by this our transgression in doing God's work made our selves lyable to that upbraid of the Apostle, Tu qui idola abominaris, sacrilegium admittis? Thou that abhorrest Idols, dost thou commit Sacrilege? that is, prophanest thou God's Name by violating that which is sacred?

Matth. 6. 9.
Luke 11. 2.

Let no man think it strange or incredible that such an enormity should be committed, or an occasion at least given thereof, in the manage of so holy and glorious a work; seeing the experience of all ages sufficiently witnesseth how prone the nature of man is, in flying one extreme, to run too far towards the other. Why then should we think it unlikely, or rather not think it very likely, that we also may have miscarried in the same manner? unless we will arrogate unto our selves that privilege of infallibility and freedom from error, which we condemn as intolerable presumption in our Adversaries.

Besides, it is to be taken notice of, because of the prejudicate misprision of many to the contrary, That the measure of Truth and Falshood, Best and Worst, is not the greater or lesser distance from Popery, (forasmuch as Popery also containeth much of Christianity;) nor that which is most destructive of the Man of Sin, always most warrantable and safe to be embraced. If it were, there be some in the world (whose religion we would be loth to admit of) that would be found more orthodox and better reformed Christians than any of us all.

Nay, give me leave, without offence, for the better awakening of some out of their deafness to whatsoever else may be said to this purpose, to propound such a Demand as this; Who knoweth whether this transgression I speak of be not a main and principal ingredient of that guilt which the Divine Majesty admonisheth us to take notice of in this his so long and so severe visitation of our neighbours and brethren? whether he doth not visibly, or, if some passages be considered, almost vocally, upbraid them, Thou that hatest Idols, dost thou commit Sacrilege? I know right well, that rashly to assign the particular causes of God's judgments, without rule or precedent of Scripture, is a sin of presumption, and a bold intrusion into God's secrets; and therefore I affirm not, but demand only, whether there be not here some cause which may minister such a suspicion. But whatsoever it be, the compassion of their woful affliction calls upon me rather to pray for them, than to follow this harsh and unpleasant passage any further. Only thus much, If that which the Apostle saith in particular of the things which befel the Israelites, God's first people, in the Wilderness, These things happened unto them for ensamples, and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come, if this be to be extended also unto those punishments and their analogy which befel them afterwards; then may perhaps two things further not unreasonably be enquired into. First, For what other sins it is remembered in Scripture that God gave his people, during that his first Covenant, (especially after they came to dwell in their own Land) under the sword of an external enemy, or his worship thereby at any time to be troden under foot, besides these two, Idolatry, and Prophanation of that which was holy, or sacrilege. Examples of the first who knows not? Of the second, see the Story of Achan, Josh. 7. of Eli's sons, sons, 1 Sam. 2. the punishment of the Sacrilege of the seventh or Sabbatical year, 2 Chron. 36. and the parallel places; for by the Law every seventh year, not only the whole Land, but all servants and debts were holy unto the Lord, and therefore to be released, Lev. 25. 2, 4. Dent. 15. Exod. 21. Secondly, What was that Transgression, after the return from Babylon, mentioned in that Prophecie of Antiochus Epiphanes, Dan. 8. 12. for which it is there foretold, that An host should be given him against the daily Sacrifice, and that it should cast down the truth unto the ground, and practise and prosper. Perhaps the Story in the 2, 3, and 4. Chap. of the second Book of Maccabees will tell us.

1 Cor. 10. 11.

Matth. 6. 9.
Luke 11. 2.

To that which is commonly alledged, That such distinction and reverent regard of things Sacred as we contend for, opens a way for Idolatry; I answer, No otherwise than the eschewing of Idolatry may also, through the perverseness of men, be made a bridge to prophaneness, that is, by accident, not from its own towardness, but our distemper. Otherwise this Discrimination or Distinction, if we would understand or heed the ground thereof, prompts the clean contrary. For we should reason thus: If the things which are God's, eo nomine, in that name and because they are His, are therefore to be held segregate in their use; then surely God himself, who is the Fountain of Holiness, ought to have a prerogative of segregation in the most eminent and absolute manner; namely, such an one, as that the worship due unto him must not be communicated with any thing else besides him. And indeed, unless both be done, God's Name is neither fully nor rightly sanctified.

AND here I should now make an end, but that there is one thing yet behind of principal consequence, which I have deferred hitherto, because I could not elsewhere bring it in conveniently without somewhat disturbing the coherence of my Discourse. There is an eminent species or kind of Sanctification which I may seem all this while to have neglected, forasmuch as it seemeth not to be comprehended under this notion of discretion and separation, wherein I place the nature of Holiness; and that is Sanctification, or Holiness of life. To which I answer, That all notions of sanctity and Sanctification in Scripture are derived from discretion and separation, and that this now mentioned is likewise derived thence. For it is to be reduced to the Sanctification of Persons Sacred and set apart unto God. By which though in the strict and proper sense are intended only Priests and such as minister about Holy things; yet in a larger sense, and, as it were, by way of resemblance, the whole body of the People of God are a Royal Priesthood, and * Holy Nation, which the Almighty hath selected unto himself out of the rest of the world, and set apart to serve him in a peculiar and different manner from the rest of men: For you have heard it is a requisite of that which is Holy, to be used in a peculiar and singular manner, and not as things common. Hence it is that the observation of that peculiar and different form of life which God hath commanded those whom he hath called and set apart from the world unto himself, in Scripture carries the name of Holiness or sanctity, (especially in the New Testament) that is, of such as becometh those that are Holy; according to that, Be ye Holy, as I am Holy. And here I might have a large field of discourse, to shew how the Name of God is sanctified by the lives of his Children, when they * conform not themselves to the fashions of the world, but as the Apostle speaks, are crucified thereto. and keep themselves unspotted from the pollutions and vanities thereof.

But this I leave to be supplied by your meditations, according to the general intimation given thereof.

* Hence in the Creed the Church is called Holy ἁγία, the Holy Catholick Church.

* Rom. 12. 2.
Jam 4. 4.
1 John 2. 15.
1 Pet. 4. 2, 3.
Gal 6. 14.
Jam. 1. 27.
1 John 3. 3.
1 Pet. 1. 15.
Eph. 1. 4. 17. to
verse 25.

DISCOURSE III.

ACTS 17. 4.

There associated themselves to Paul and Silas of the worshipping Greeks a great multitude.

PAUL and Silas preaching in the Jewish Synagogue at Thessalonica, and proving out of the Scriptures that Messiah or Christ was to suffer, and to rise again from the dead, and that Jesus was that Christ; it is said, that some of them which heard, believed; and that there associated themselves to them a great multitude καὶ συνεβόμουν ἐκείνους of the worshipping Greeks. Of these σεβόμενοι there is elsewhere mention in the Acts of the Apostles more than once; but what they were our Commentators do not so fully inform us; nor can it be understood without some delibation of Jewish Antiquity. The explication whereof will give some light not to this passage only, but to the whole Story of the Primitive Conversion of the Gentiles to the Faith, recorded in that Book.

We must know therefore, that of those Gentiles which embraced the worship of the God of Israel, (commonly term'd Profelytes) there were two sorts. One of such as were circumcised, and took upon them the observation of the whole Law of Moses. These were accounted as Jews, (to wit, facti, non nati, made, not born so) bound to the like observances with them, conversed with as freely as if they had been so born; neither might the one eat, drink, or keep company with a Gentile more than the other, lest they became unclean. They worshipped in the same Court of the Temple where the Israelites did, whither others might not come. They were partakers with them in all things, both divine and humane. In a word, they differed nothing from Jews, but only that they were of Gentile race.

This kind the Jewish Doctors call גרי צדק, Profelytes of Righteousness, or גרי ברית, Profelytes of the Covenant, namely, because they took upon them the sign thereof, Circumcision. In the New Testament they are called simply Profelytes, without addition. Of which Order was Uriah the Hittite, Achior in the Book of Judith, Herod the Idumean, Onkelos the Chaldee Paraphrast, and many others both before and in our Saviour's time.

But besides these there was a second kind of Gentiles, admitted likewise to the worship of the true God, the God of Israel, and the hope of the life to come; which were not circumcised, nor conformed themselves to the Mosaical rites and ordinances, but were only tied to the observation of those Precepts which the Hebrew Doctors call The Precepts of the sons of Noah; namely, such as all the sons of Noah were bound to observe.

These Precepts are in number Seven, recorded in the <sup>a</sup> Talmud, <sup>b</sup> Maimonides and others, under these following titles. First, the precept of עבודה זרה, to renounce Idols and all Idolatrous worship. Secondly, ברכת השם, to worship the true God, the Creator of Heaven and Earth. Thirdly, שפיכות רמים, Blood-shed; to wit, to commit no Murther. Fourthly, גילוי עריות, detectio nuditatum, not to be defiled with Fornication, Incest, or other unlawful conjunction. Fifthly, גזל, Rapine, against Theft and robbery. Sixthly, רינים, concerning administration of Justice. The seventh, אכילת חלב, Membrum de vivo; so they call the Precept of not eating the flesh with the blood in it, given to Noah when he came out of the Ark; as Maimonides expressly expounds it, and adds besides; Whosoever shall take upon him the observation of the seven precepts of the sons of Noah, he is to be accounted אחד מן הצדיקים one of the pious men of the nations of the world, and shall have a portion in the world to come. Note that he saith [ one of the pious men of the nations of the world, or of the pious Gentiles, ] for this kind were still esteemed Gentiles, and so called, because of their uncircumcision; in respect whereof (though no Idolaters) they were, according to the Law, unclean, and such as no Jew might converse with: wherefore they came not to worship into the Sacred Courts of the

<sup>a</sup> Gemara Sanhedrin, in Perik
<sup>b</sup> ארבע מיתות
Melachim c. 9.
Vide Schick de Jure Regio Hebræorum, p. 128, 129.

Acts 10. 28.
& ch. 11. 3.

Acts 17.4.

De bello Ju-daico lib. 6.
ca. 6. Grac. 15.

the Temple, whither the Jews and circumcised Profelytes came; but only into the outmost Court, called Atrium Gentium & immundorum, the Court of the Gentiles and of the unclean, which, in the second Temple, surrounded the second or great Court, whereinto the Israelites came, being divided there-from by a low wall of stone made battlement-wise, not above three Cubits high, called (saith Josephus, from whom I have it) in the Hebrew Dialect Γεισος, in the Greek Θρίγκος, that is, Lorica; close by which stood certain little pillars, whereon was written in Greek and Latin letters, Μη δὲν ἀλλόφυλον εἰσὶν τὸ ἀγίον παρῆναι, In atrium sanctum transire alienigenam non debere, That no alien or stranger might go into the inner or holy Court. And this, I make no question, is that which S. Paul, Ephes. 2. 14. alludeth unto, when he saith, that Christ had broken down the μεσότοιχον τῆ φραγμῆς, the partition-wall, (namely, that Lorica which separated the Court of the Gentiles from that of the Circumcision) and so laying both Courts into one, hath made the Jews and Gentiles Intercommunioners; whereby those that were sometime far off, were now made nigh, and as near as the other, unto the Throne of God. But in Solomon's Temple this Court of the Gentiles seems not to have been, but in the second Temple only; the Gentiles formerly worshipping without at the door, and not coming within the Septs of the Temple at all.

See Levit. 17.

This second kind of Profelites the Talmudists call גרי שער, Profelytes of the Gate, or גרים תושבים, Profelyte-inhabitants; namely, because they were under the same condition with those Gentile-strangers which lived as Inquilini in the Land of Israel. For all Gentiles dwelling within the Gates of Israel, whether they were as servants, taken in war, or otherwise, were bound to renounce their false Gods, and to worship the God of Israel: but not to be circumcised, unless they would: nor farther bound to keep the Law of Moses than was contained in those Precepts of the sons of Noah. These are those mentioned (as often elsewhere in the Law, so) in the fourth Commandment, by the name of the stranger within thy gates: whereby it might seem probable, that the observation of the sabbath-day (so far as concerneth one day in seven) was included in some one or other of those Precepts of the sons of Noah, namely, in that of worshipping for their God the Creator of Heaven and earth, and no other; whereof this consecration of a seventh day, after six days labour, was a badge or livery; according to that, The sabbath is a sign between me and you, that I Jehovah am your God: because in six dayes the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea and all that in them is; and rested the seventh day. See Exod. 31. 16, 17. Ezek. * 20. 20. But this obiter and by the way. From the example of these Inquilini, all other Gentiles, wheresoever living, admitted to the worship of the God of Israel upon the same termes, were called גרי שער, or גרים תושבים, Profelyti Porte, or Profelyti inquilini; of which sort there were many in all Cities and places of the Gentiles where the Jewes had Synagogues and used to frequent the Synagogues with them, (though in a distinct place) to hear the Law and the Prophets read and expounded.

* See Discourse
XV.

But in the New Testament they are found called by another name, to wit of Σεβόμενοι or Worshippers, so often mentioned (though not observed) in the Acts of the Apostles. For first, these are those meant in that of Acts 17. 4. alledged at my entrance into this Discourse, where it is said that τῶν Σεβομένων Ἑλλήνων πολὺ πλῆθος, A great number of the worshipping Greeks believed, and adhered to Paul and Silas; which the Vulgar rightly translateth, de colentibus Gentilibus multitudo magna, a great multitude of the worshipping Gentiles, taking the name of Greeks here, as elsewhere in the New Testament, to be put for Gentiles in general. And this place will admit of no evasion: For that they were Gentiles, the name of Ἑλλήνων betokeneth expressly, being given them by way of distinction from the Jews then and there present also.

That they were worshippers of the true God, the God of Israel; their coming into the Synagogue, their name Σεβόμενοι, their capableness of S. Pauls discourse, (which was to prove out of the Scriptures, that Messiah was to suffer death, and that Jesus was he) argue sufficiently, yea abundantly. For who could have profited by such a Sermon as this, but those who already had knowledge of the true God, and believed the reward of the life to come? This place therefore may serve as a Key to all the rest of the places in this Book where these Σεβόμενοι are mentioned.

To that in the same Chapter, ver. 17. where it is said that S. Paul in the Synagogue at Athens διελέγετο τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις καὶ τοῖς Σεβομένοις, discoursed to the Jews and the worshippers.

To that in Acts 16. 14. where S. Paul preaching the Gospel in the Jews Proseucha or Oratory at Philippi, a woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the City Thyatira, Σεβομένη τῷ Θεῷ, a Profelyte-worshipper, was converted unto the faith, and baptized with all her household.

In

In like manner, to that in Acts 18. 4. when S. Paul is said at Corinth to have reason'd in the Synagogue every Sabbath, and to have persuaded the Jews and the Greeks: Acts 17. 4. For these Greeks were Σεβόμενοι, what did they in the Synagogue else so regularly every Sabbath-day? True, the name of Σεβόμενοι is here wanting; but it presently follows, when the Jews opposed Paul, (there testifying Jesus to be the Christ) and blasphemed, that he shook his raiment, and said, Your bloud be on your own heads: from henceforth I will go to the Gentiles. And he departed thence, saith the Text, and entered into the house of one Justus, Σεβομένου τ' Θεόν, a Gentile-worshipper, whose house joyned hard to the Synagogue.

But above all, that narration Acts 13. deserves our consideration and attention. There vers. 43. it is said, that S. Paul having preached the Gospel in the Jews Synagogue at Antioch of Pisidia, there followed him πολλοὶ τῶν Ἰουδαίων καὶ Σεβομένων Προσηλύτων, many of the Jews and worshipping Profelytes: and v. 42. that when the Jews were gone out of the Synagogue, the Gentiles, that is, the Σεβόμενοι, besought the Apostles that the same things might be preached unto them the next Sabbath; which being accordingly done, and many of the other Gentiles (who were not Σεβόμενοι) upon the fame of such a new Doctrine unwontedly assembling with them, it is said, that the Jews when they saw the multitude, were filled with envy, contradicted and blasphemed, v. 45. that then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, it was necessary that the word of God should first be spoken unto you; but seeing you put it from you, and judge your selves unworthy of eternal life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles: for so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, I have set thee to be a light to the Gentiles, &c. v. 46, 47. that when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of God; καὶ ὅτι εὐσεύσαν ὅσοι ἦσαν τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, and there believed as many as were τεταγμένοι to eternal life, v. 48. that is, the Σεβόμενοι, who were already in procinctu and in the posture to eternal Life. The Jews blasphemed, the rest of the Gentiles were incapable, only the Σεβόμενοι, (who were already Candidati vite aeternae, having been instructed in the worship of the true God, and hoping for the reward to come) they believed. Yet perhaps not all of them neither, (the words require not * so much, but that none but such:) And it follows, v. 50. that the Jews found out some Σεβομένας γυναῖκας καὶ εὐχόμενας, worshipping women, such as were of fashion, (who yet perhaps had not been at the Apostles Sermon,) by whose means they stirred up the chief men in the City, and raised persecution against Paul and Barnabas. This I take to be the true and genuine meaning of this passage, upon which no charge of Pelagianisme can be fastned; nor needeth it any spinous Criticisms for its explication. The use of the word τάττω, de acie & collocacione militum, de ascriptione in ordinem vel classem, as it relates to an army, the disposing or marshalling of souldiers, the being listed or enrolled into such a rank or company, (in which signification the Passive is most frequent) is well enough known. * Accord-

Besides, it will not be impertinent, as a Mantissa to these quotations for Σεβόμενοι, to note That the same persons are otherwise (namely twice) characterised by the title of φοβούμενοι τ' Θεόν, those that fear God. As first of Cornelius, concerning whom there is no question but he was a Gentile-worshipper, the Text saith, * There was a man in Cæsarea, called Cornelius, a Centurion of the Italian Band. Εὐσεβὴς καὶ φοβούμενος τ' Θεόν, i. e. Θεὸν Ἰσραήλ, a pious man, and one that feared God, (i. e.) the God of Israel. Again in that 13. of the Acts (whereon we have dwelt so long) S. Paul speaking at first to that mixt multitude assembled in the Synagogue, consisting partly of Jews and partly of καὶ τῶν Σεβομένων Προσηλύτων of the worshipping Profelytes, he compellates them both distinctly in these words, v. 16. Ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται, καὶ οἱ φοβούμενοι τ' Θεόν, ἀκούσατε, Ye men of Israel, and ye that fear God, give audience. By the former meaning the Jews; by the latter, the Σεβόμενοι or Gentile-worshippers.

Of this kind of Converts (as I have in part already intimated) were in our Saviour and his Apostles time very many in every Nation and Citie where the Jews lived and had their Synagogues; yea far more in number than of that other sort of Pro-

* For ὅσοι is often put for οἱ, and the sense then but indefinite.

* Εὐσεβὴν τάττω εἰς τὰς βολομένης, Xenophon. In eam classem me ascribo. Plutarch. in Solone. Αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ αἰῶνι πάντων με εἰδὼ τάττει, In pauperum ordinem se redigit, inter pauperes se numerat. Τάσσεται εἰς μάχην dicuntur milites, unde καὶ τεταγμένοι appellanται: τάσσεται εἰς ἀνδραγαθίαν in numerum virorum ascribi. Compare the 1 Cor. 16. 15. εἰς διακονίαν τοῖς ἀγίοις ἑταζαν ἑαυτοὺς They set themselves to the Ministry of the Saints. * Acts 10. 1, 2.

phelytes

Acts 17.4.

Profelytes which were circumcised. The reason being, because it was the more easie condition, and not so prejudicial to their outward liberty as the other; inasmuch as they might notwithstanding still live and converse with their friends, kindred and Countrey-men, bear office and enjoy honours among them, (as Naaman the Syrian did, who was of this kind,) which the other might not do.

* For since then, the Devil hath been God's Ape.

Acts 10. 2.

These impediments being out of the way, The hope of the Resurrection from the dead, and the Reward of the life to come, were powerful Inducements to draw many to the worship of that God, who only among the Gods * at that time promised this reward to such as worshipped and served him, and no other: which was the bait wherewith the Jews allured them; and that to their own no small emolument, this kind, as it were to recompence their want of Circumcision, seeming to have been very bountiful towards their Nation; as may be gathered both from Cornelius, who is said to have given much alms to the people, (namely of the Jews;) and from the Story of that Centurion, Luke 7. 4, 5. whom the Jews besought our Saviour so instantly for, alledging, that he loved their Nation, and had built them a Synagogue, and therefore deserved that favour they sued for on his behalf.

NOW, out of this Discourse, besides the clearing of the passages afore-mentioned, we may learn two things: One, How so many of the Gentiles, by the preaching of the Apostles, could so soon and so readily be converted to the Faith of Christ; It was because they had already embraced the Principles which led thereunto. For we are to take notice, that the foundation of the Church among the Gentiles was laid of these Σεβόμενοι, who had already embraced the worship of the true God, had knowledge of his Promises, believed, and hoped for the life to come. For was not S. Peter (to whom the Instructions for this Embassage were first given) sent first to Cornelius a Centurion, a Gentile of this order? wherefore? but that this might be for a pattern for them, with what kind of men they were first to deal in this great work; namely with such as were idonei Auditores Evangelii, fit and capable hearers of the Gospel; those which were puri puti Gentiles, mere Gentiles, being not so, as who knew nothing of the Principles requisite thereto. This will appear, if we consider well the tenour of the Apostles Sermons to such Gentiles as they converted; which we shall observe to presuppose that they already knew the true God, and the promise of Eternal life to such as worshipped him; and so had no more to learn but the way and means now revealed by God for attainment thereof, which was by the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Acts 15.

The other thing we may learn is, What was the true state of the Question which the Apostles met to decide in the Council at Jerusalem; Whether the Gentiles which believed in Christ were to be circumcised or not, and so bound to keep the whole Law. It was this, to resolve (that, whereas all such as embraced the worship of the God of Israel, conformed to one of these two kinds of Profelytes) to whether of them the Gentiles which had or should receive the Gospel of Christ, were to conform themselves; whether to the Profelytes of the Covenant, or to the Σεβόμενοι and Profelytes of the Gate. S. Peter standing up in the Council, demonstrates it to be the will of God that they should conform to the latter, and not to the first; and that upon this ground, Because that Cornelius, the first Christianed Gentile, unto whom himself was sent by Divine Commission, was no circumcised Profelyte, but a Profelyte of the Gate, or a Σεβόμενος, a worshipper only; yet received he no Commission to circumcise him: yea the Holy Ghost, as he was Preaching, fell upon him and his household being uncircumcised, as it did upon those of the Circumcision; whereby it appeared that God would have the rest of the Gentiles which embraced the Faith, to be after the pattern of Cornelius, and to have no more imposed upon them than He had. And accordingly the Council defines, *That no other burden should be laid upon them, but only to abstain from pollutions of Idols, from blood, from things strangled, and from fornication, and (as some Copies * have it) ὅσα αὐτὸν μὴ δεῖλωσιν ἑαυτοῖς γενέσθαι, ἑτέροις μὴ ποιεῖν, not to do that to others, which they would not should be done to themselves; that is they should as Σεβόμενοι observe the Precepts of the sons of Noab, which here [by a ἡμέτερα ὁδός] are briefly reckoned up.*

* Together with Irenaeus twice Lib. 3. cap. 12. Cyprian. Lib. 3. Testimon. ad Quirinum in fine.

Μόνον τῷ Θεῷ δόξα.

DISCOURSE IV.

2 PETER 2. 4.

For if God spared not the Angels which sinned, [ἀλλὰ σερᾶις ζόφου ταρ-ταρώσαι, παρέδωκεν εἰς χεῖσιν τετηρημένους] — but cast them down to Hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto Judgment, &c. so we translate it :

To which of S. Peter answers that of S. Jude, ( as almost that whole Epistle doth to this ) verse 6. And the Angels which kept not their first estate, [ or principality, ] but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the Judgment of the great Day.

Hese two places are brought to prove, That the Devils, or Evil spirits, are now in Hell, before the Day of Judgment : Which I cannot see how it can possibly stand with the rest of the Scripture, which testifies every where that they have yet their mansion in the Air, and here about the Earth, where they tempt, seduce, and do all the mischief they can to mankind : hence their Chieftain Satan is styled The Prince of the power of the Air, that is, of the Aery Dominion or Principedom. Therefore Ephes. 2. 2. hither they were with their Prince exiled from Heaven, and no further, nor shall be until the Day of Judgment. And of this I shall speak at this time : First, to clear these Texts, which seem to make for the contrary ; secondly, to enquire what was the opinion of the Ancients about this point.

As for this place of S. Peter, and that imitation thereof in the Epistle of S. Jude, I can believe the translation of neither. Piscator ( not conceiving how that of S. Jude ( especially because of the word [ αἰδίοις ] eternal ) could be reconciled with other Scripture, and Experience which shews that the Evil spirits are not yet bound with eternal chains, having so much liberty of gadding about ) supplies in the Text vinci- endos, as if there were an Ellipsis, reading it thus, Judicio magni illius Dicit vinculis eternis (vinciendos) reservâsse ; He hath reserved them ( to be bound ) in eternal chains at the Judgment of the great Day.

In that of S. Peter, if I understand him, he takes σερᾶις ζόφου not for Dativus instru- menti, with chains of darkness, but as Dativus acquisitionis, for chains of darkness ; and construes it with παρέδωκεν, as if it were, He delivered them for chains of dark- ness ; namely, supposing a trajection of the words.

But for my part I take both σερᾶις ζόφου in S. Peter, and δεσμοῖς αἰδίοις in S. Jude, to be neither of them Dativus Instrumenti, but both Acquisitionis or Finis, and governed the one of τετηρημένους, and the other of τετήρηκεν . that is, σερᾶις to be put for εἰς σερᾶις, and δεσμοῖς for εἰς δεσμούς . — As in the Hebrew, the preposition ך serves both for the preposition eis and for the Dative Case, whose propriety the style of the Greek Testament every where imitates, and why not in this ? σερᾶις therefore and δεσμοῖς are here לְמוֹסָרִים, not בְּמוֹסָרִים ; for ( not, with ) chains. Nay, among the Greek Grammarians we find observed, that the Dative Case is sometimes put for the Accusative with the preposition eis . as in this example, ὁρμαῖ διὰ τῷ ἀέρι τῇ πόλει ; that is, eis πόλιν . much more in the sacred Greek, which so frequently imitates the Hebrew Construction.

Next for the word ταρταρώσας in S. Peter, it is ἀπαξ λεγόμενον, but once used, and so not bound by any use or example to the signification which we here give it, to wit, casting down to hell. I would therefore render it, ad pœnas tartareas damnavit, he hath adjudged them to hellish torments, to wit, thus, Angelos qui peccaverunt, cum ad
tartari supplicium damnavisset, catenis caliginis servandos tradidit ad Diem Judicii ; Ha- ving adjudged the Angels that sinned to hell-torments, he delivered them to be kept or re- served

2 Pet. 2. 4.

served (in the fiery region, as in a prison) for chains of darkness at the Day of Judgment. For καὶ οὗτοι Judgment here is ἡμετέρα κρίσις: the Day of Judgment, as S. Jude hath it: So also Matth. 12. 42. The Queen of the South shall rise in Judgment with this Generation, that is, in or at the Day of Judgment. Or if I would render it, not casting down to hell, but casting down to hell-ward, so the meaning in both places will be, That the wicked Angels were cast down from Heaven to this lower Orb, there to be reserved for chains of darkness at the Day of Judgment: Which sense the ninth verse of this Chapter of S. Peter plainly intimates by way of reddition; Novit Dominus pios in tentatione eripere, The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly in temptation, as he did Noah and Lot; Injustos vero in diem Judicii cruciandos servare, But to reserve the unjust unto the Day of Judgment to be punished, as he doth the wicked Angels. Moreover verse 17. where the same hellish darkness is spoken of, it is said to be reserved for the wicked, οἱ δὲ ζόφοι τῆς σκότης εἰς αἰῶνα τετήρηται, to whom that hideous darkness is reserved for ever; whence it is probable that S. Peter, in the foregoing passage of Angels, referred also those chains of darkness to reserving, and not to delivering; that is, not that the evil Angels were now already delivered to chains of darkness, but reserved for them at the Day of Judgment.

Ephel. 2. 2.

AND thus much for clearing of the words of these two parallel Texts. Now what hath been anciently the current opinion about this point? And first, for the Jews, it is apparent to have been a Tradition of theirs, That all the space between the Earth and the Firmament is full of Troops of Evil spirits and their Chieftains having their residence in the Air; which I make no doubt but S. Paul had respect to, when he calls Satan the Prince of the power of the Air. Drusus quotes two Authors, one the Book called מנחה חרשה, another one of the Commentators upon Pirke Aboth, who speak in this manner; Debet homo scire & intelligere, à terra usque ad firmamentum omnia plena esse turmis & præfectis, &c. A man is to know and understand, that all from Earth to the Firmament is full (and no place is empty) of Troops of Spirits together with their Chieftains and such as are Præpositi; all which have their residence and fly up and down in the Air: some of them incite to peace, others to war; some to goodness and life, others to wickedness and death. By Præpositi, I suppose, he means such among the Spirits as are set as Wardens over several charges, for the managing of the affairs of mankind subject to their power. This was the Opinion of the Jews, which they seem to have learned by Tradition from their ancient Prophets; for in the Old Testament we find no such thing written, and yet we see S. Paul seems to approve it.

Now for the Doctors of the Christian Church, S. Hierome upon the sixth of the Ephesians tells us, that their Opinion was the same; 'Tis the opinion of all the Doctors, (saith he) that the Devils have their Mansions and residence in the space between the heaven and the earth. And that the Fathers of the first 300 or 400 years nor did, nor could, hold the evil Angels to have been cast into Hell upon their sin, is evident by a singular Tenet of theirs. For Justin Martyr, one of the most ancient, hath this saying; That Satan before the coming of Christ never durst blaspheme God, and that (saith he) because till then he knew not he should be damned. The same is approved by Irenæus (lib. 5. cap. 26.) Præclare (saith he) dixit Justinus, quod ante Domini adventum Satanas nunquam ausus est blasphemare Deum, quippe nondum sciens suam damnationem: Post adventum autem Domini, ex sermonibus Christi & Apostolorum ejus discens manifestè quoniam ignis æternus ei præparatus sit; — per hujusmodi homines blasphemat eum Deum qui judicium importat. It was a worthy saying of Justin, That Satan before the coming of our Lord never durst blaspheme God, as not till then knowing he should be damned: But after the coming of our Lord, he clearly understanding by the Discourses of Christ and his Apostles that everlasting fire was prepared for him — by these men (Irenæus means those Hereticks who blasphemed the God of the Law) he blasphemeth that God who brings that punishment upon them. Eusebius (lib. 4. Hist. Cap. 17.) cites the same out of both, with approbation: So doth Oecumenius upon the last Chapter of the first of S. Peter. Epiphanius against Heresie 39. gives the same as his own assertion, almost in the same words with Justin and Irenæus, though not naming them. Οὐδ' αὐτὸ πρὸ τῆς τῆς Χρυστοῦ παρουσίας ἐτόλμησεν εἰς τὸ ἑαυτὸν δεσπότην φθύνειν ἀβλασφημίᾳ τινα λόγον, &c. Before the coming of Christ the Devil did not dare to speak a blasphemous word against his Lord; for being in expectation of the coming of Christ, he imagined he should obtain some mercy. I will not enquire how true this Tenet of theirs is, but only gather this, that they could not think the Devils were cast into Hell before the coming of Christ: For then how could they but but have known they should be damned, if the execution had already been done upon them?

2 Pet. 2. 4.

Saint Augustine, as may seem, intending to reconcile these places of Peter and Jude with the rest of Scripture, is alledged to affirm, that the Devils suffering some Hell-like torment in their Aiery Mansion, the Air may in that respect in an improper sense be called Hell. But that the Devils were locally or Actually in Hell, or should be, before the Day of Judgment, it is plain he held not; and that will appear by these two passages in his Book de Civitate Dei. First, where he saith, Dæmones in hoc quidem aere habitant, quia de Cæli superioris sublimitate dejecti, merito irregressibilis transgressionis, in hoc sibi congruo velut carcere prædammati sunt. Lib. 8. Cap. 22. The Devils indeed have their habitation in this Air; for they being cast out of the highest heaven, through the due desert of their unrecoverable apostasy and transgression, are fore-condemned and adjudged to be kept in this Aiery region, as in a prison very congruous and fit for such transgressors. The other (in the same Book, chap. 23.) where he expounds that of the Devils * Matth. 8. Art thou come to torment us before the time? that is, (saith he) ante tempus Judicii, quo æternâ damnatione puniendi sunt, cum omnibus etiam hominibus quorum societate detinentur; before the time of the last Judgment, when they are to be eternally punished, together with all those men who are entangled in their society.

* Videtur etiam Origenes in Numer. cap. 22. Non enim dicit Deus Dæmonum genus ante tempus damnare; Scimus enim & ipsi Dæmones, quia tempus eorum præfens hoc seculum continent: Propterea & Dominum rogabant, ut non torqueret eos ante tempus, &c. Et ob hoc neque Diabolus removit à principatu hujus seculi, &c.

The Divines of latter times, the School-men and others, to reconcile the supposed Contrariety in Scripture, divide the matter; holding some Devils to be in the Air, (as S. Paul and the History of Scripture tell us,) some to be already in Hell, (as they thought S. Peter and S. Jude affirm'd:) which opinion seems to be occasioned by a Quære of S. Hieron's upon the sixth of the Ephesians, though he speaks but obscurely, and defines nothing. But what ground of Scripture or Reason can be given, why all the Devils which sinned, should not be in the same Condition? especially that Satan, the worst and chief of them, should not be in the worst estate, but enjoy the greatest liberty? It follows therefore that these places of S. Peter and S. Jude are to be construed according to the sense I have given of them; namely, That the evil Spirits which sinned, being adjudged to Hellish torments, were cast out of Heaven into this lower Region, there to be reserved, as in a prison, for chains of darkness at the Day of Judgment.

DISCOURSE V.

I COR. 4. 1.

Let a man so account of us as of the Ministers (ὐπηρετάς) of Christ, and Stewards of the Mysteries of God.

Man would think at first sight, that this Scripture did exceedingly warrant our use of the word Minister in stead of that of Priest, and leave no plea for them who had rather speak otherwise. Howsoever I intend at this time to shew the contrary, and (even out of this Text,) that we have very much swerved herein from the Apostles language, and abuse that word to such a sense as they never intended, nor is any where found in Scripture. I favour neither superstition nor superstitious men; yet truth is truth, and needful to be known; especially when ignorance thereof breedeth error and uncharitableness. My Discourse therefore shall be of the use of the words Priest and Minister; wherein shall appear how truly we are all Ministers in our Apostle's sense, and yet how abusively and improperly so called in the ordinary and prevailing use of that word.

I will begin thus. All Ecclesiastical persons or Clergy-men may be considered in a Threefold relation: First, to God; secondly, to the People; thirdly, one toward another. In respect to God, all are Ministers of what degree soever they be; because they do what they do by commission from him, either more or less immediate: for a Minister is he qui operam suam alicui, ut superiori aut domino, præbet, who serves another as his superior or Master. In respect of the People all are Bishops, that is, Inspectores or Overseers, as having charge to look unto them. But lastly, compared

D

1 Cor. 4. 1.

compared one to another, he whom we usually call Bishop is only Overseer of the rest, Inspector totius Cleri. Deacons are only Ministers to the rest, Ministri Presbyterorum & Episcoporum: and in that respect have their name Διάκονοι.

There are properly but two Orders Ecclesiastical, Presbyteri & Diaconi: the one the Masters, Priests; the other the Ministers, Deacons. The rest are but diverse degrees of these Two. As Bishops are a degree of Presbyters of divine ordinance, to be as Heads, Chiefs, and Presidents of their Brethren: So Sub-deacons, Leſſors, and indeed any other kind of Ecclesiastical Ministers, whether in Ecclesia or Foro Ecclesiastico (I mean whether they attend divine Duties in the Church, or Jurisdiction in Ecclesiastical Courts) are all a kind of Deacons, being to the Presbyters, either single or Episcopal, as the Levites were to the sacerdotes, in the Old Testament, namely, to minister unto or for them. Thus when we say, Bishops, Presbyters and Deacons, we name but two Orders, yet three Degrees.

These grounds being forelaid and understood.

I.

I affirm, first, That Presbyters are by us unnaturally and improperly called Ministers either of the Church, or of such or such a Parish: we should call them, as my Text doth, Ministers of God, or Ministers of Christ, not Ministers of men.

First, Because they are only God's Ministers, who sends them; but the People's Magistri, to teach, instruct and oversee them. Were it not absurd to call the Shepherd the Sheeps Minister? If he be their Minister, they surely are his Masters. And so indeed the People by occasion of this misappellation think they are ours, and use us accordingly. Indeed we are called Ministers, but never their Ministers; but, as you see here, God's Ministers, Christ's Ministers, who imployeth us to dispense his Mysteries unto his Church.

There are Three words in the New Testament translated Minister, Διάκονος, Υπηρέτης, Λειτουργός: the first is most frequent; but not one of them is given to the Apostles, in the whole Scripture, with relation to the Church or People: you shall never find them called Διάκονοι, or Υπηρέται τῇ Εκκλησίᾳ, Ministers of the Church, which is so frequent with us, but Ministers of God, 2 Cor. 6. 4. 1 Thess. 3. 2. Ministers of Christ, as in my Text, and 2 Cor. 11. 23. Col. 1. 7. Ministers of Jesus Christ, 1 Tim. 4. 6. or Ministers of that which they minister, as Ministers of the New Testament, 2 Cor. 3. 6. Ministers of the Gospel, Ephes. 3. 7. Coloss. 1. 23. But not Ministers of them to whose behoof they minister. Yet might this speech, Minister of the Church, if rightly construed, be admitted; namely, if it be spoken by an Ellipsis, for Minister of God for and over the Church: so the Apostle Coloss. 1. 7. A faithful Minister of Christ for you, that is, Christ's Minister, not theirs; yet not for Christ, but for them. But those who use this speech commonly mean otherwise.

Hebr. 1.

Secondly, Angels are called ministering spirits, but not our Ministers, but God's Ministers to us-ward, or for our behalf: So Ministers of the Gospel, not the People's or Congregation's Ministers, but God's Ministers for their behoof.

Thirdly, This speech [Minister of the Church, or, of this or that Church] is so much the more incommodious, because it hath begotten (as incommodious and unapt speeches do) an erroneous conceit, not only among the vulgar, but some of better understanding; namely, That a Minister is not lawfully called, unless he be chosen by the People, because he is their Minister, and so to be deputed by them. And indeed if he be their Minister in proper relation, they are his Masters, and so it is good reason they should appoint him, as Masters do those who are to serve them: But if in proper relation they are God's Ministers, and not theirs, (though for them) then God is to appoint them, or such as he hath put in place to do it. It is an erroneous conceit that some maintain, That the power of sacred Order and of the Keys is given by God immediately to the Body of the Congregation; and that they depute him who is their Minister, to execute the power which is originally in them: That power is conferred by God immediately to those who are Bishops and Pastors, and by and through them belongs to the whole Body, and no otherwise. Sed tantum potuit incommodi sermonis usus.

* Viz. esse Dominum
minam.

Some perhaps will object against my whole Assertion that of S. Paul, 2 Cor. 4. 5. *We preach not our selves, but Christ Jesus * the Lord, and our selves your servants for Jesus sake*: If the Apostles were the Churches servants, why not their Ministers? I answer, the Apostle says not they were the Corinthians servants, but that he had made himself so, in his Preaching to them. So he says expressly, 1 Cor. 9. 19. For though I be free from all men, yet I have made my self a servant to all, that I might gain the more. Yet he confesses the Corinthians began to vilifie him for this condescend, condescend, 2 Cor. 11. 7. Have I committed an offence in abasing my self that you might be exalted, because I have preached unto you the Gospel of God freely? This was that wherein he carried himself toward the Corinthians as a Servant, but to other Churches he did not so. It would be a strange assertion to say the Apostle were the Corinthians Servant in a proper relation: we know he says, Gal. 1. 10. If I pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ; and Rom. 6. 16. Know ye not that to whom ye yield your selves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey?

1 Cor. 4. 1.

I come now to a second Assertion, which is, That howsoever any Ecclesiastical person may be rightly called a Minister, (so it be in a proper relation to Godward,) yet the word Minister is again most unfitly used by us for a name of distinction of one Ecclesiastical Order from another: as when we call those which are Presbyters, Ministers, by way of distinction from Deacons; for so we speak Ministers and Deacons, in stead of Priests and Deacons.

2.

The reason we thus speak is to avoid the name Priest, which we conceive to signify Sacerdos, that is, one that sacrificeth, such as were those in the Law: But our Curates of holy things in the Gospel are not to offer Sacrifice, and therefore ought not to be called sacerdotes, and consequently not Priests. This is the reason. But if it be well examined, Priest is the English of Presbyter, and not of sacerdos; there being in our Tongue no word in use for sacerdos: Priest, which we use for both, being improperly used for a sacrificer; but naturally expressing a Presbyter, the name whereby the Apostles call both themselves and those which succeed them in their charge. For who can deny that our word Priest is corrupted of Presbyter? Our Ancestors the Saxons first used Preoster, whence by a farther contraction came Preste and Priest. The high and low Dutch have Priester, the French Prestre, the Italian Prete; but the Spaniard only speaks full Presbytero.

But, to come more near the point, our men in using the word [Minister] for a distinctive name in stead of Priest, incur four Solecisms; I mean, when we use the word Minister (not at large, but) for a distinction from the Order of Deacons, saying Ministers and Deacons.

First, We run into that we sought to avoid. For we would avoid to call the Presbyters of the Gospel by the name of the sacrificers of the Law; and yet run into it in such sort, that we style those of the Gospel by the Legal name, and those of the Law by the Evangelical name. The Hebrew calls them of the Law Cohanim, of כהן, which properly signifies to minister, and thence comes the Greek word κοινω, and διακονέω: but we call those of the Gospel Cohanim, when we style them Ministers. On the contrary, the Apostles style those of the Gospel, Presbyteri; but we transfer that name to those of the Law, when we call them Priests. This is counterchange;

Incidit in Scyllam qui vult vitare Charybdim.

Secondly, It is a confusion or Tautology, to say Ministers and Deacons, that is, Ministers and Ministers; for Deacon [Διάκονος] is, in Greek, a Minister; the one is Minister in Latin, the other in Greek: as if one should say, Homo and ἄνθρωπος, or Diluvium and Cataclysmus, and think so to distinguish things of several natures or conditions.

Thirdly, We impose upon that Order a name of a direct contrary notion to what the Apostles gave them: The Apostles gave them a name of Eldership and Superiority in calling them Presbyteri; we of Inferiority and Subordination in calling them Ministri. The Jews had no name more honourable than that of Elders, πρεσβύτεροι, for so they called their Magistrates: so we read of Elders of the people, and Elders of the Priests and Levites, meaning the chief in both sorts. This honourable name the Apostles gave as a name of distinction to the Evangelical Pastors; whereby they dignified them above those of the Law, whose name in the Hebrew (as I said before) is but a denomination of Ministry: And we have rejected the name of Dignity, of Fathership, of Eldership; and assumed in stead thereof a name of under-service, of subjection, of Ministry, to distinguish our Order by: I say, to distinguish our Order; for in a general sense and with reference to God, we are all his Ministers; and it is an honour unto us so to be, more than to be other mens Masters, as our Apostle in my Text intimates.

Fourthly, In the Reformed Churches beyond the Seas there is a worse Solecism by reason of this misapplied speech. They have a kind of Officers who are the Pastors assistants in Discipline, much like to our Church-wardens; these they call Elders, we style them Lay-Elders: These are but a kind of Deacons at the most, and of a new erection too; and yet these are dignified by the name of Elders and Presbyters, who are indeed but Deacons or Ministers; and the Pastor himself is called a Minister, who in the Apostles style is the only Presbyter or Elder. For so they speak, The Minister and his Presbyters or Elders.

1 Cor. 4. 1.

To conclude, it had been to be wished that those whom the term of Priest displeased, as that which gave occasion by the long abuse thereof to fancy a Sacrifice, had rather restored the Apostolical name of Presbyter in the full sound, which would have been as soon and as easily learned and understood as Minister, and was no way subject to that supposed inconvenience. But the mis-application of the word [ Presbyter ] in some Churches to an Order the Apostles called not by that name, deprived those thereof to whom it was properly due. Howsoever when they call us Ministers, let them account of us as the Ministers of Christ, and not of men: not as deputed by the Congregation to execute a power originally in them, but as Stewards of the Mysteries of God.

DISCOURSE VI.

S. JOHN 10. 20.

He hath a Devil, and is mad.

It is a matter of greater moment than perhaps every man thinks of, under what notions Things are conceived, and from what property or Character the Names we call them by are derived. For hereby not seldom it comes to pass, that the same things, presented to us under different notions, and names derived therefrom, are not taken to be the same they are: Even as he that meets a man well known unto him, in an exotick disguise or antick habit, takes him to be some other, though he knew him never so well before. For example; a man would wonder that a Comet, (as we call it) being so remarkable and principal a work of the Divine power, and which draws the eyes of all men with admiration towards it, should no where be found mentioned in the Old Testament: neither there where the works of God are so often recounted to magnifie him, (whenas Hail, Snow, Rain and Ice, works of far less admiration, are not pretermitted;) neither by way of allusion and figured expression, in the Prophets predictions of great calamities and changes, whereof they were taken to be presages; especially when we see them borrow so many other allusions both from heaven and earth to paint their descriptions with. Should a man therefore think there never appeared any of them in those times or to those Countries? It is incredible: Or that the Jews were so dull and heedless as not to observe them? That is not like neither. What should we say then? Surely, they conceived of them under some other notions than we do, and accordingly expressed them some other way. As what if by a Pillar of fire, such a one perhaps as went before the Israelites in the Wilderness? Or by a Pillar of fire and smoke? as in that of Joel 2. 30. I will shew wonders in the heavens, and in the earth, Blood and Fire and Pillars of smoke: Or by the name of an Angel of the Lord, (whereby no doubt they are guided?) according as it is said of that Pillar of Fire which went before the Israelites, that the Angel of God, when they were to pass the Red Sea, came and stood between them and the Egyptians, when that Pillar did so. And who knows whether that in the 104. Psalms, v. 4. may not have some meaning this way? He maketh his Angels spirits (or winds,) and his Ministers a Flame of fire, to wit, because they are wont to appear in both. It comes in, in the Psalms, among other Works of God, in a fit place for such a sense, both in regard of what goes before and follows after. These, I say, or some of these may be descriptions of those we call Comets; which because they are disguised under another notion, and not denominated from Stella or Coma, hence we know them not.

Exod. 14.

Now to come toward my Text; alike instance to this I take to be that of the Demoniacs so often mentioned in the Gospel. For I make no question but that now and then the same befalls other men whereof I have experience my self, to wit, to marvel how these Demoniacs should so abound in and about that Nation, which was the People of God; (whereas in other Nations and their writings we hear of no such;) and that too, as it should seem, about the time of our Saviour's being on on earth only, because in the time before we find no mention of them in Scripture. The wonder is yet the greater, because it seems notwithstanding all this, by the Story of the Gospel, not to have been accounted then by the people of the Jews any strange or extraordinary thing, but as a matter usual; nor besides is taken notice of by any forein Story. John 10. 20

To meet with all these difficulties, (which I see not how otherwise can be easily satisfied) I am perswaded (till I shall hear better reason to the contrary,) that these Dæmoniacks were no other than such as we call Mad-men and Lunaticks, at least that we comprehend them under those names; and that therefore they both still are, and in all times and places have been, much more frequent than we imagine. The cause of which our mistake is that disguise of another name and notion than we conceive them by; which makes us take them to be diverse, which are the same.

That you may rightly understand this my Assertion (before I acquaint you with the Reasons which induce me thereunto) you must know, That the Masters of Physick tell us of two kinds of Deliration or alienation of the Understanding. One ex vi morbi, that, namely, which is from or with a Fever, called Delirium or Phrenitis (the latter being a higher degree than the former:) Another kind sine Febre, when a man, having no other disease, is crazed and disturbed in his wits.

And this they say is either simple dotage, proceeding from some weakness of the Brain or Intellective faculty; or Melancholia and Mania, which they describe and distinguish thus: Both of them to be when the Understanding is so disturbed, that men imagine, speak, and do things which are most absurd and contrary to all reason, sense, and use of men: but their difference to be in this, that Melancholia is attended with fear, sadness, silence, retiredness, and the like Symptoms; Mania with rage, raving and fury, and actions sutable; which is most properly styled Madness. Now when I say that those Dæmoniacks in the Gospel were such as we call Mad-men, understand me to mean not of Deliration ex vi morbi, or of simple dotage, but of those two last kinds, Melancholici and Maniaci; whereunto add morbis Comitialis or falling sickness, and whatsoever is properly called Lunacy.

Such as these, I say, the Jews believed (and so may we) to be troubled and acted with evil Spirits, as it is said of saul's Melancholy, that an evil spirit from the Lord troubled him; and therefore, passing by all other Causes or Symptoms, they thought fit to give them their Name from this, calling them בעלי שדים or Δαιμονιζόμενοι. An occasion of the more frequent use of which expression in our Saviour's time and the ages immediately before him than formerly had been, may seem to have been given by the Sect of the Sadducees, which, after the time of Hyrcaus, had much prevailed, and affirmed (as S. Luke tells us) that there was no Resurrection, neither Angel, nor Spirit. To affront and cry down whose error, it is like enough the Pharisees, and the rest of the right-believing Jews who followed them, affected to draw their expressions (wheresoever they could) from Angels and Spirits; as presently they did, in the * Acts, when S. Paul awakened their faction in the Council, saying, I am a Pharisee, and the son of a Pharisee, &c. We find no evil, say they, in this man; but if a spirit or an Angel hath spoken unto him, let us not fight against God. Acts 23. 9.

Having thus sufficiently stated and explicated my Assertion; now you shall hear what grounds I have for the same. First, therefore, I prove it out of the Gospel it self, and that in the first place from this Scripture which I have chosen for my Text, Δαιμόνιον ἔχει, καὶ μαίνεται, He hath a Devil, and is mad. Where I suppose the latter words to be an explication of the former. Secondly, I prove it out of Matth. 17. 14, 15. where it is said, There came to our Saviour a certain man kneeling down to him, and saying, Lord, have mercy on my son, ὅτι σεδανιάζεται, because he is Lunatick and sore vexed: for oft-times he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water. That this Lunatick was a Dæmoniack, it is evident both out of the 18. verse of this Chapter, where it is said, Our Saviour rebuked the Devil, and he departed out of him, and the child was cured from that very hour: as also out of the 9. of the Gospel of S. Luke, v. 39. where it is said of the self-same person, Lo, a spirit taketh him, and he suddenly crieth out, and it teareth him that he foameth again, and bruising him, hardly departeth from him. By comparing of these places, you may gather what kind of men they were which the Scripture calls Δαιμονιζόμενοι, Dæmoniacks.

Now I come to other Testimonies. And first, take notice that the Gentiles also had the like apprehension of their Mad-men, whence they called them Larvati and Cerviti: where Larvati is as much as Larvis, id est, Demonibus, ac: so Festus, Larvati, saith he, furiosi & mente moti, quasi Larvis exterriti. And for Cerviti, they were so called, quasi Cereriti, hoc est, à Cerere percussit. And therefore you may remember that when Menæchmus in Plautus feigns himself mad, and talks accordingly; the Physician who was sent for to cure him asks the old man who came to fetch him, whether he were Larvatus or Cerritus. If the Gentiles thought thus of their Mad-men, should we think it strange the Jews should? I could tell you here, that the Turks conceit of their Mad-men is not unlike this; but that they suppose the Spirit that works in them to be a good rather than an evil one. But I let this pass.

John 10. 20.

My next Testimony shall be out of Justin Martyr, who in his second Apology ad Antoninum, to prove (at least to a Gentile) that the Souls of men have existence and sense after death, brings for an Argument their Necromancy and their callings up the spirits of the deceased, together with other the like, and in the last place this of Dæmoniacks; whereby his description of them, we may easily gather what kind of people they were which were so taken to be. They also (saith he) which are seized upon by the spirits of the deceased (for such were these Dæmonia taken to be) and are cast and tumbled upon the ground, οὗς δαίμοι ολόπῃς καὶ μαινόμεναι καλεῖσι πάντες, which all call Dæmoniacks and Mad-men. Δαιμονόληπτοι therefore and μαινόμενοι were all one, as men then conceived. Note here, that these Δαιμόνια were taken to be the souls of men deceased, and that not among the Gentiles only, but (as may seem) among the Jews also. For Josephus in his seventh Book De Bello Judaico, Chap. 25. mentioning these Δαιμονιζόμενοι upon occasion of a certain Herb supposed to be good for them, saith expressly by way of Parenthesis, ταῦτα δ' (scil. Δαιμόνια) πονηρῶς ἔστιν ἀνθρώπων πνεύματα τοῖς ζῶσιν εἰσδύμενα, these Dæmonia are the spirits or souls of the worst sort of men deceased, which are gotten into the bodies of the living. I tell not this with a meaning to avouch it for true; but only that you might understand how Justin Martyr's argument proceeds, to prove that Souls have existence after Death, from the Dæmoniacks.

My last proof is taken from those Energumeni (which are all one with Δαιμονιζόμενοι) so often mentioned in the Church-Liturgies, in the ancient Canons, and in other Ecclesiastical writings, many Ages after our Saviour's being on earth; and that, not as any rare and unaccustomed thing, but as ordinary and usual. They were wont to send them out of the Church when the Liturgy began; as they did the Pœnitentes, Auditores, and Catechumeni, which might not be partakers of the Holy Mysteries. If those were not such as we now-a-days conceive of no otherwise than as Mad-men, surely the world must be supposed to be very well rid of Devils over it hath been; which for my part I believe not. Nay, that these Energumēnoi possessed with the Devil, or Δαιμονιζόμενοι Dæmoniacks, were such as I speak of, Balsamon and Zonaras both in their Scholia upon the Canons of the Church will, I think, inform us: For, to reconcile two Canons concerning these Energumēni or possessed, which seem contradictory; * one (called of the Apostles) in these words, Ἐάν τις δαίμονα ἔχῃ, μὴ γι ἐξῶ κληρικός, ἀλλὰ μὴδὲ τοῖς πιστοῖς συνευχέσθω. If any hath a Devil, or is mad, let him not be made a Clergy-man, nor let him be admitted to pray with the faithful; another of Timotheus sometime Patriarch of Alexandria, speaking thus, Ἐάν τις δαίμονι ζῆται, ὀφείλει μεταλαμβάνειν τῶν ἁγίων μυστηρίων, If any of the faithful be a Dæmoniack, he ought to partake of the holy Mysteries: To reconcile these, I say, they affirm the former (which admits them not,) to be meant <sup>a</sup>περὶ τῷ διανεκῶς or <sup>b</sup>δὲ ὅτε μαινόμεναι, of him that is continually and always mad, namely, <sup>c</sup>ἵνα μὴ φαυλά τινα καὶ ἄσεμνα διαπραττόμενοι, &c. lest one so affected should, either by some indecent actions and foul miscarriages of his own, or by his dæmoniacal clamours, disturb the people of God and the Church-service; but that of Timotheus, that admits them, to be understood περὶ τῷ ἐκ διαλείματος μαινόμεναι, of him that is mad but by fits, and hath his Lucida intervalla. And thus I have acquainted you with what I have observed to confirm me in this opinion, and make no doubt but there are more passages yet to be found this way than I have met with.

* Can. Apost. LXXIX.

<sup>a</sup> Balsamon in Can.
<sup>b</sup> Zonar. in Can.
<sup>c</sup> Balsamon.

Vide Chrysostomi epistol. περὶ Σταγίειον δαιμονίωντα.

Eum omnino affectum videbis prout quos nos Melancholicos appellamus. Vide eundem de precibus in Ecclesia pro Energumēnis; Hom. 4, & 5. de Incomprehensibili Dei natura, versus finem, inter Sermones ad Pop. Antioch.

DISCOURSE VII.

PROVERBS 21. 16.

The man that wandreth out of the way of understanding, shall remain in the Congregation of the Dead, בקהל רפאים, in coetu Gigantum.

IT is a question sometimes moved amongst Divines, and worth resolving, How and by what name the Place and condition of the damned (which in the Gospel is called Gehenna) was termed or expressed in the Old Testament before the Captivity of Babylon, and whilst the first Temple stood. For presently after the Return the afore-mentioned name Gehenna began to be frequented: as appears both by the second of *Esdra*s, the Chaldee Paraphrast, and other Jewish writings, where that name is often found; as also by the Gospel, where our Saviour useth it as then vulgarly known amongst the Jews. But it is as certain that before the Captivity or second Temple (for so the Jews call the time of their state after their return) this name was not in use: both because it is no where to be found in the Canonical Scriptures of the Old Testament, which were all written within that time; and especially, because the ground and occasion thereof was not till about that time in being, which was the pollution of the valley of the sons of Hinnom, or Tophet, by King Josiah, and the dreadful execution of divine vengeance in that Place: Hence it became to posterity to be a Name of execration, and applied to signify the Place of eternal punishment.

For this valley of Hinnom (Gehinnom, or, as afterward they pronounced it, Gehenna) was a valley near Jerusalem, in a place whereof called Tophet the Children of Israel committed that abominable Idolatry, in making their Children pass through the fire to Moloch; that is, burnt them to the Devil. For an eternal detestation whereof King Josiah polluted it, and made it a place execrable, ordaining it to be the place whither dead Carcasses, Garbage, and other unclean things should be cast out: for consuming whereof, to prevent annoyance, a continual fire was there burning. Yea, not man only, but the Lord himself as it were consecrated this place to be a place of execration, by making it the field of his vengeance both before and after. For first, this was the place where the Angel of the Lord destroyed the host of Sennacherib King of Assyria, and where one hundred and eighty thousand of their Carcasses were burnt, according to that, Esay 30. 31. Through the voice of the Lord shall the Assyrian be beaten down. V. 33. For Tophet (this was a place, I told you, in the valley of Hinnom) is ordained of old; yea for the King it is prepared: he hath made it deep and large, the pile thereof is fire and much wood, the breath of the Lord like a stream of brimstone doth kindle it. This was also the place where the Idolatrous Jews were slain and massacred by the Babylonian armies when their City was taken, and their Carcasses left, for want of room for burial, for meat to the fowls of heaven and beasts of the field; according to the word of the Lord by the Prophet Jeremy, in his seventh and nineteenth Chapters, The Children of Judah have built the high places of Tophet, which is in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to burn their sons and daughters in the fire, which I commanded them not, neither came it into my heart. Therefore behold, the daies come, saith the Lord, that it shall be no more called Tophet, nor the valley of the son of Hinnom, but the valley of slaughter: For they shall bury in Tophet till there be no place. And the carcases of this people shall be meat for the fowls of heaven and the beasts of the field, and none shall fray them away.

Je. 7. 31, 32, 33, and ch. 19. v. 4, 5, 6.

Hence, as I said, this place being so many wayes execrable for what had been done therein, especially having been as it were the gate to eternal destruction, by so remarkable judgments and vengeance of God there executed for sin, it came to be translated to signify the Place of the damned, as the most accursed, execrable, and abominable place of all places; the invisible valley of Hinnom. For such was the property of the Jewish Language, to give denominations unto things unseen from such such analogical and borrowed expressions of things visible. By all which it is apparent that this notion of that name took its beginning after the Captivity and was not in use before.

Prov. 21. 16.

Still therefore we are left to seek, by what other name and under what other notion this place of the damned was expressed before the word Gehenna or Gehinnom came to be used. I answer, out of my Text, it seems to have been called Domus or Cætus Gigantum. Vir qui erraverit à via intelligentiæ, in Cætu Gigantum commorabitur, The man that wandreth out of the way of understanding, shall remain in the congregation of the Giants; in the Hebrew כְּהַר רְפָאִים in Cætu Rephaim, which word [ Rephaim ] properly signifies Giants, and to that sense is alwayes rendred by the Seventy, γίγαντες, γίγαντες, τιτᾶνες, or ἀσέλᾶς though we and the later Interpreters, both in this and some other places, take it for manes or mortui, the Souls of the deceased: but the ancient, I think, deserve the more credit, especially it being confessed that the word elsewhere so signifies. In Cætu Gigantum therefore, that is, of those Giants and Rebels against God of whom we read Gen. 6. those mighty men and men of renown of the old World, whose wickedness was so great in the earth, that it repented and grieved God he had made man; and to take vengeance upon whom he brought the general Deluge upon the earth, and destroyed both man and beast from the face thereof. Vir qui erraverit à via doctriinæ [ intelligentiæ, ] The man that wandreth out of the way of understanding, shall go and keep them company; that is, go to that accursed place and condition which they are in.

1. That this construction of Cætus Rephaim is not improbable, may appear, First, by the gloss of Rabbi Solomon upon this Text, In Cætu Rephaim, that is, saith he, כְּהַר גְּהֵנֹם, In Cætu Gehenna. This notion therefore is not altogether new.

2. Secondly, it is strengthened by comparing with other places of Scripture where the like expression is used; as twice more in this Book of the Proverbs. First, Chap. 2. 18. where we read according to the Vulgar, Domus mulieris alienæ inclinata est ad mortem, & ad inferos semitæ ipsius, The house of the strange woman inclineth unto death, and her paths unto Hell. Here for ad inferos, unto Hell, the Hebrew hath אֶל רְפָאִים, to the Giants; and the Seventy render it with an Exegetis, ἔστω παρὰ τῷ ἁδὲν μετὰ τῶν γίγαντων τὰς ἀβύσσους αὐτῆς, She hath put, or set, her paths in Hades, or Hell, with the Giants. Again, Chap. 9. 17, 18. Aquæ furtivæ dulciores sunt, & panis absconditus suavior: Et ignoravit quod ibi sint Gigantes, & in profundis Inferni convivæ ejus: stollen waters are sweeter, and hidden bread is more pleasant: but he knoweth not (namely, he that goes in to a Strange woman) that the Giants are there, and that her guests are in the depths of Hell. Here in some Editions of the Vulgar are added these words; Qui enim applicabitur illi, descendet ad inferos; & qui abscefferit ab illa, salvabitur: For he that is joyned to her, shall go down to Hell; but he that departs from her, shall be saved. An Argument how this place hath been understood; for the meaning of both these places seems to be no other, but, that the strange woman will bring them who frequent her, to Hell, to keep the Apostate Giants company.

There is another place in the Hagiographa where these Rephaim are mentioned, to wit, Job. 26. 5, 6. which though of a more ambiguous sense and scope, yet as it is translated by the vulgar Latin (and well enough to agree with the Hebrew) seems to be no other than a description of Hell, with the former. Gigantes, saith he, gemunt sub aquis, & qui habitant cum eis: Nudus est infernus coram illo (idest, Deo) & nullum est operimentum perditioni. The meaning hereof seems to be this; The place where the old Giants mourn or wail under the waters, and their fellow-inhabitants, the rest of the damned with them, even infernus, and the place of Perdition it self, is naked and open to the eyes of God, from whom nothing is hid. Which is agreeable to that, Proverbs 15. 11. Hell and Destruction are before the Lord: how much more then the hearts of the children of men? In this place the Jews take the word Abaddon, which we render Destruction, for Gehenna; that is, Elliptically, for Beth Abaddon, the House of Destruction. And why then should not the same word be so taken in that place of Job; and Nullum est operimentum perditioni, There is no covering for Destruction, be as much as, Nullum est operimentum loco perditionis, or Gehenna, There is no covering for the House or Place of Destruction, or for Hell?

Compare with these places in the Hagiographa two in the Prophets: One in the 14. of Esay v. 9, 10. where by way of a Poetical or Prophetical hypotyposis of the destruction or fall of Babylon, the King thereof is brought in coming to the Rephaims or Giants in the other world. Hell (saith the Text) from beneath is moved for thee, to meet thee at thy coming: it stirreth up the Rephaims for thee, even all the chief ones of the the earth. And they shall say unto thee, Art thou also become weak as we? art thou become like unto us?

Prov. 21. 16.

The other is the 32. of Ezekiel, concerning the fall of Egypt, where their slain are bestow'd in like manner in the nethermost parts of the earth, with the Gibborim; which signifies not only mighty men, but Giants, and so is rendred in this place by the Seventy*. And thus much from comparison of places of Scripture.

Ver. 18. & 21.

* οι γίγαντες.

A third Argument to make this notion probable which I have represented, is this; Because all the expressions almost in Scripture whereby this place of eternal punishment is represented, relate and allude to some places or Stories remarkable for God's exemplary vengeance executed upon sinners. As that of Gehenna to the notorious Judgments of God in the valley of the sons of Hinnom, for Idolatry and Blasphemy: that of the Lake of fire and brimstone, so often mentioned in the Apocalyp's, to the Lake Asphaltites, the lasting monument of those showers of fire and brimstone from heaven, wherewith Sodom and Gomorrab with the rest of the Cities of the Plain perished for their abominable Lusts. Our Saviour's expression in his sentence of condemnation [Go ye cursed into everlasting fire, prepared for the Devil and his Angels] seems to relate to the punishment of the Apostate-Angels, who for their rebellion were delivered unto chains of darkness against that great day.

And was not the destruction of the old world by the general Deluge of water as famous as any of these? yea, not to be parallel'd by any but that second Deluge of fire at the last Judgment? How improbable is it then, that this should not lend a denomination to the place or state of eternal punishment as well as the rest?

Nay, which is more, S. Peter in his second Epistle and second Chapter recites these last three together, as if they had been intended as Patterns of the eternal Judgment and punishment of sinful men. V. 4. For (saith he) if God spared not the Angels that sinned, but cast them down to Hell, and delivered them to chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment; 5. and spared not the old world, but saved Noah the eighth person, a Preacher of righteousness, bringing in the Flood upon the world of the * ungodly, (that is, of the Rephaim; for so the Seventy sometimes turn it;) 6. And turning the Cities of Sodom and Gomorrab into ashes, condemned them with an overthrow, making them an Ensample or Pattern (mark it well) μελλόντων ἀσεβῆν, (i. e.) τὴν ποταμῶν τῶν μελλόντων ἀσεβεῖν, of the punishment of such as should after live ungodly; (Hence, as I told you, was the Lake Asphaltites, or the Lake of fire and brimstone, borrowed by S. John for a denomination of Hell) 7. And he delivered just Lot, vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked: (If God did this) 9. He knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of Judgment, to be punished. Ye see the application or reddition; and accordingly how prone the destruction of the world of the Rephaim or ungodly by the Deluge is to give denomination to the punishment of Hell, as well as the other two.

* ἀπὸ τῶν.

And now, I suppose, you look for my Application and putting of the whole Text together; which I shall dispatch quickly, but wish it may be laid to heart often. He that goeth astray from the way of understanding, that is, He that wandreth from the Law and Discipline of God: (for that indeed is the true Wisdom, Timor Domini principium sapientiae, The fear of God is the prime Wisdom, (that's the meaning) or, to speak after our Academical notion, the chief Philosophy; whence, through all this Book of the Proverbs, the wicked man who hath no skill in this Divine Philosophy or Discipline of God, goeth for a Fool, and so is called) must one day go even to his Fellow-giants; who, as Baruch says in his third Chapter, v. 28. were destroyed because they had no wisdom, and perished through their own foolishness. Vir qui erraverit à via Doctrinae, in Coetu Gigantum commorabitur. Are there then any of these Fools amongst us, who profess the study of wisdom, but who shake off the yoke of Discipline, giving themselves to debauched courses, and neglecting the fear of the Lord? Here they may see whither they must one day go; even to those Rephaims of the old World, whose true sons they are, that is, unto the place of everlasting punishment: From which God deliver us.

DISCOURSE VIII.

GENESIS 49. 10.

The Scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor a Law-giver from between his feet, until SHILOH come, and unto him shall the gathering of the People be, וְלוֹ יִקְרָה עַמִּים

It is a Propheſie of the coming of Chriſt and the time thereof; namely, when the Scepter ſhould depart from Judah, then ſhould the coming, reign and Scepter of Meſſiah begin, and not till then: the end of the one ſhould be the beginning of the other. Whence ariſeth our Demonſtration againſt the Jew; If the Scepter be already departed from Judah, as we know it is many hundred years ſince, then muſt Chriſt needs be come. For the Scepter was not to depart from Judah, nor a Law-giver from between his feet, until Shiloh came.

For, that Shiloh here is the name of Meſſiah, appears by the ſubjunction annexed, that the People or Nations (for it is עַמִּים in the plural number) ſhould be gathered, or be obedient, unto him: Ergo, He is to be a King of the Nations; and who ſhould this be but Chriſt?

That the ancient Jews ſo underſtood it, appears by all the three Targums or Chaldeę Paraphraſts. The Targum called of Jeruſalem renders expreſſly, Until the time when מלכה משיחא King Meſſiah ſhall come. Jonathan, Until the time when Meſſiah ſhall come, a little one of his ſons, that is, of Judah's ſons; which one of the late Rabbies (ſaith Euxtorf) expounds, Rex Meſſiah, qui venit ex David, &c. The King Meſſiah, who came of David, who was the leaſt among the ſons of Jeſſe his father. Onkelos, Until Meſſiah come, whoſe is the Kingdom. Likewise in their Talmud, Shiloh is reckoned among the names of Meſſiah.

Thus we and the ancient Jews agree about the aim and purport of this Scripture. But we Chriſtians believe further, that it is long ſince fulfilled; howſoever for the very Point of Time when this Scepter departed from Judah, we vary in our opinions. Some will have it to have been when Pompey firſt brought the Jewiſh State under the Roman ſubjection. Others a little after, when Herod, an Idumean ſtranger, yet formerly incorporated into the Jewiſh State and blood, was by the Romans inveſted to be their King, and the Haſmonean or Maccabean race (which till then had born the chief rule) by him extinguiſhed. Others, not till the deſtruction and final diſſolution of the Jewiſh State by Titus.

Theſe are principal moments of time to be pitched upon. But againſt the firſt, the ſubjecting of the Jewiſh State to the Romans, is objected, Firſt, That it anticipates the time of Chriſt's birth too much, being ſixty years before it. Secondly, That it might as well be affirmed, that the Scepter departed from Judah, when Nebuchadnezzar carried them captive to Babylon, or when they were ſubject to the Perſian and Greek Monarchies, as when they were made ſubject to the Romans.

Againſt the ſecond, of Herod, lies the ſame exception that did againſt the former, That it was too early, being thirty years and more before the birth of Chriſt; and more than twice as much more before his Paſſion and Aſcenſion, at what time he began his Kingdom. Secondly, That under the reign of Herod the Scepter of Judah might ſeem rather to be advanced than departed, forasmuch as they had then a King of their own reigning over them; and though not of Jewiſh original, yet a Proſelyte, and ſo one of their own body. And if the Scepter were departed from Judah, becauſe one not of their own Tribe had the ſovereign rule over them; why was it not departed all the time the Haſmonean or Maccabean families, who were Levites, reigned? No man would ſay that the Scepter were departed from Poland, though the Polanders ſhould chuſe a Swede, a German, or a Frenchman for their King: So neither from Judah, though a Levite, or Idumean Proſelyte were their Prince.

Againſt the laſt point of time, the diſſolution of the Jewiſh State by Titus, is excepted, excepted, That it is as much too long after either the Nativity or the Passion of Christ, as the other two were before it, to wit, seventy years after the one, and near forty after the other. Gen. 49. 10.

I mean not to enlarge my self any further, in acquainting you with each particular passage agitated concerning these differing opinions, or alledged in the disputing of them; lest I should confound rather than instruct the yonger sort, who I desire might have some smack of these speculations betimes, lest all their life-time after they neglect them, as many do. I have therefore selected only so much as I thought requisite for the understanding of what I aim at, which is, to shew you such a construction of these words, with but a little alteration of the common translating, as, being admitted, will leave no more place for those difficulties wherewith this Question is entangled.

FOR the handling whereof, I will divide the remainder of my Discourse into these two parts: First, I will unfold the words of my Text which seem to have any difficulty or obscurity in them; secondly, I will apply them to the time wherein they were fulfilled.

For the first; I begin with the word Scepter: which is not to be restrained to Kingly Dominion only, but signifies any Power or Majesty of Government, under what form or name soever; whereof a Rod or Staffe was anciently the ensign; whence every Tribe is called שבט (by the word here used) as being united together under one staffe or power of Government. The meaning therefore is not, that Judah should never cease from having a King, or being a Kingdom; but that it should not cease from being a State, a body Politick, or Common-wealth, having a power of Government and Jurisdiction within it self, until Messiah came: wherefore the Seventy here for Sceptrum or שבט, translate "Ἀρχων a Ruler, not βασιλεὺς a King; Οὐκ ἐκλείψει, say they, Ἀρχων ἐκ Ἰουδα, There shall not fail a Ruler from Judah. For it is certain that Judah was so far from being a continued Kingdom until Messiah should come, that there was no Kingly Royalty in that Tribe for more than two third parts of that time, namely, not till David, nor after Zedekiah, saving that of the Maccabees (who were Levites) and of Herod (by original an Edomite,) which both put together will not make eighty years; yet were they never without some Ruler or Rulers of their own all that time.

The next word I consider is Law-giver; which it will not be hard to understand, if we mark well what is implied by Scepter: for מַחֲזִיק, the word here translated Law-giver, signifies not only a maker of Laws, but qui jus dicit, he that exerciseth Jurisdiction; and so differs not much from the former, if they be not altogether Synonymous.

As for the phrase, from between his feet, it means nothing else but of his posterity: for so the Scripture modestly expresseth the place of generation; as it doth also by the word ירך, the thigh. For where we read in Genesis 46. 26. and again in Exodus 1. 5. All the souls that came out of the loins of Jacob, were seventy souls, in the Hebrew it is, All the souls that came out of his thigh: whence, by the way, you may observe the occasion of that Fable, that Bacchus or Dionysius was born ex femore Jovis, out of Jupiter's thigh, which according to the Oriental expression (whence that whole story of Bacchus came) implied no more than that he was Jupiter's son; but the Greeks, not understanding the meaning, converted it into that Fable which you all know.

Now for the word Shiloh, if we derive it as I think we should, it will signify a Peace-maker, or Saviour, of the verb שָׁלַח, which signifies Tranquillus, Pacificus, or salvus fuit. And if the Masorites had so pleas'd, they might have pointed it שִׁלְה, which was the name of the eldest son of Judah that surviv'd; in the Hebrew Etymology can signify nothing else but Peaceable or Peace-maker. And whether the Patriarch Jacob, or the holy Ghost directing him, might not chuse this name before any other, to design Messiah in this Prophecy, in respect of the allusion it had to one of Judah's sons, I will not affirm, but leave to your better consideration. Others, following the Jewish Rabbies, go farther about, to bring the word Shiloh to signify Filius ejus, his son, that is, Judah's; construing the Prophecy thus; The Scepter shall not depart from Judah, till his son (namely, Messiah) come. For ה they will have put for the affix Van, as sometimes it is elsewhere; שִׁי to be for שִׁלְה, secundina, (that wherein the Infant is wrapped in the womb) and so by a Metonymie to signify here the Child it self. In a word, they will have שִׁלְה to be for שִׁלְהוֹ, secundina ejus; and that to mean Filius ejus. But this, methinks, is somewhat too ambiguous, and therefore less probable: but let every one follow his own judgment.

AND now I am come to the Application, to shew at what Point of Time this Prediction

Gen. 49. 10.

Prediction was fulfilled. To make the way plain whereunto, I must first alter a little the construction of the remaining words, namely, And unto him shall the gathering of the People, or the Nations, be. For here the word [shall, or shall be] is not in the Hebrew, but added in translating, and so may be left out; the words in the Original being only, וְלִי יִקְרָה עַמִּי Et ei aggregatio, or obedientia, populorum, And to him the gathering, or the obedience, of the people. I construe therefore the word כִּי or Until ἀπὸ κοινῆς, as common to this with the former sentence, namely thus; The Scepter shall not depart from Judah, &c. until shiloh come, and the gathering of the people be to him; that is, Until Messiah come, and the People or Nations be gathered unto him, the Scepter shall not depart from Judah, &c. Where note, that two things are specified to come to pass before the Scepter depart from Judah, or Judah ceases from being a Commonwealth: First, The coming of Christ or shiloh into the world; Secondly, The gathering of the Nations or Gentiles unto him. For I construe the word Until, as I told you, as common to both sentences, Until shiloh come, and, Until the Nations be gathered unto him.

And now methinks, your thoughts might almost prevent me in designing the Time when this Prediction was fulfilled. Namely, neither when the Jews came first under the Roman subjection; for then shiloh was not yet come: nor under Herod, or (as some will) seven years after him, when, his son Archelaus being banished, Judaea was reduced into a Province; for though Christ was then born, to wit, in the end of Herod's reign, yet were not the Nations or Gentiles yet gathered unto him. But at the destruction of the Jewish State by Titus, when both these things were come to pass, (Christ being come, and the Gentiles converted unto his obedience,) then did the scepter depart from Judah, and they cease from being any more a Commonwealth.

Ch. 24. 14.

That this is the true Application of this Prediction, besides the evidence of the Event, appears by our Saviour's Prophecy of this Destruction of the Jewish State in the Gospel of S. Matthew; where, after he had named some other things to precede it, he adds this for the last Sign, And this Gospel of the Kingdom (saith he) shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all Nations, and then shall the End come, that is, the end of the Jewish State. When the Gentiles, by the preaching of the Apostles, should be gathered unto Christ, then should the Jewish Church and Commonwealth be utterly dissolved; which till then had continued united under some Polity and form of Government from its first beginning. For so it pleased the wisdom of Almighty God, when he would reject the Jews, not to dissolve their State, till he had created him anew among the Gentiles.

DISCOURSE IX.

PSALM 8. 2.

Out of the mouth of Babes and Sucklings thou hast ordained strength, because of thine Enemies; that thou mightest quell the Enemy and the Avenger.

THESE words are alledged by our Blessed Saviour, Matth. 21. 16. and three more of the verses following this by S. Paul, to prove that Christ must reign till he had subdued all his enemies under his feet: As Heb. 2. 6. &c. fully; v. 4. What is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him? 5. For thou hast made him little lower than the Angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honour. 6. Thou hast made him to have dominion over the works of thine hands; thou hast put all things under his feet. Again, 1 Cor. 15. 24. Christ (saith he) shall deliver up the Kingdom to God the Father, when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power. 25. For he must reign till he hath put all enemies enemies under his feet. 26. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is Death. 27. For he hath put all things under his feet. This is the quotation; for it follows presently, When he saith, All things are put under him, it is manifest that he is excepted which did put all things under him. Psalm. 8. 2.

How principal a part of the Argument of this Psalm, what is in these two places cited by S. Paul contains, every man may see that reads and compares them. But how it should be consonant to the meaning of the Psalm, seems very difficult to apprehend. For he that reads the whole Psalm, would think it were nothing else but a description of Man's excellency, whom God had made next to the Angels in Dignity, and given him dominion over all things he had made. For so after those words, Thou hast put all things under his feet, it follows immediately, All sheep and oxen, yea and the beasts of the field, the fowls of the Air, and the fishes of the Sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the Sea. But what is the dominion over these to subduing of Enemies, which the Apostle cites it for? or how is that which is a description of man-kind in general, a Prophecy of Christ in special?

Some therefore, as in other citations of the Old Testament, so here also, betake themselves to the covert of an Allusion; namely, That the Apostle only borrows the words of the Psalmist, to express his own, and not the Psalmist's meaning. But howsoever this may have place in some other allegations of the Old Testament, which are for Illustration or Exornation only; yet when the Testimony is brought for proof and Demonstration, as this is, it can in no wise be admitted. For how can that Testimony be of force to conclude any thing, where not the Author's meaning is brought, but his words only made use of? Others therefore say, That whatsoever is spoken of the Dignity and Excellency of Man in general, is to be understood by way of eminency of Christ, the chief of the sons of men. This indeed is something, but not enough. For what is the Dignity of man in regard of his Dominion and Lordship over the creature, to conquering and subduing of Enemies? which is that the Apostle seeks to demonstrate thence.

Well, to hold you no longer in suspense, the Key of the interpretation of this Psalm, and the ground of S. Paul's accommodation of that passage [ Thou hast put all things under his feet ] to Christ's victory, is to be sought in the words I have now chosen; Out of the mouth of Babes and Sucklings, &c. which being first alledged by our Saviour in the Gospel, in defence of that acclamation given unto him by his followers, Hosanna, (that is, save now) to the son of David; (which the Pharisees thought too high an attribute to be deferred to flesh and blood) this application thereof by Christ himself gave the Apostle good warrant to interpret the Psalm as he did, and to ground a Demonstration thereon.

I shall therefore divide my Discourse into two parts: First, I will shew the meaning of the words as they stand in the Psalm; and secondly, make it appear that our Saviour in the Gospel cites them according to that meaning.

The whole drift therefore of the Psalm is to praise and glorify God for the dignity wherewith he hath invested Man: What is man (saith he) that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him? For thou hast made him a little (or not much) lower than the Angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honour. This glory and honour is exemplified in two particulars: First, in that God hath ordained Man, even that weak and feeble creature, Man, to subdue and conquer his Enemies; which is that my Text expresses in the words before named, Out of the mouth of Babes and Sucklings thou hast ordained strength, because of thine Enemies, that thou mightest quell the Enemy and the Avenger. Secondly, in that he hath made man the Lord of all his Creatures; Thou hast made him (saith he) to have dominion over the works of thine hands: then follows, as it were the summing up of both, In a word, Thou hast put all things under his feet. For having ordained him both the Champion to conquer thine Enemies, and made him at his Creation the Lord and Ruler of the works of thine hands, Quid reliquum est? what honour couldst thou have given him which thou hast not? Lord, (therefore) what is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him? Where is to be observed, that the Corollarie, Thou hast put all things under his feet, comes in before his time, namely, before the description of this exemplification of man's dominion over the creature was fully ended; as if the Prophet out of admiration, could hold no longer from telling us the sum of that Dignity wherewith man was invested. Thou hast made him (saith he) to have Dominion over the works of thine hands, and so, one way or other, Thou hast put all things under his feet. Then follows the other part of the Description,

Psal. 8. 2.

All sheep and Oxen, over these thou hast made him have Dominion, the Beasts of the field, the Fowls of the Aire, and the Fishes of the Sea: whereas in direct order it should have stood thus; Thou hast made him have Dominion over the works of thine hands, over all sheep and Oxen, the Beasts of the Field, and Fowls of the Air, and Fishes of the Sea; and so in the upshot, Thou hast put all things under his feet.

For this last particular of man's Dignity, to have Dominion over the Creatures, it is so plainly and evidently intended in the Psalm, that I shall need speak no more of it: I return therefore to the former, to make it clear also, That God ordained man, not only to exercise Dominion over the visible creatures, but to be the Champion to conquer and subdue his Enemies: Which is the drift of the words I have chosen for my Text.

Out of the mouth of Babes and Sucklings (saith he) that is, of Mankind, who springs from so weak and poor a beginning as of Babes and Sucklings; namely, out of the mouths of Babes, not in sensu composito, but diviso, of such whose condition is to be Babes and Sucklings: Not that they should exercise this strength he speaks of, to quell the Enemy and the Avenger, while they were Babes; but that this power should be given to such whose condition was to be such. And this is marvellous enough, that God should advance so weak a creature, and of so despicable a beginning, to such a power, as to grapple with the Enemy and overcome him. But behold, there is yet something more admirable, namely, that this should not be done by the strength of his Arm, but by the breath and power of his Mouth; Out of the mouth of Babes and Sucklings thou hast ordained strength, because of thine Enemies, &c. What Enemies? Thine, saith the Psalmist, and such too as are Ultiores, Avengers, the Enemies of both God and Mankind. And who are those but Satan and his Angels, those Principalities and Powers of the Air, those Κοσμοκράτορες, and Rulers of the Darknes of this world, as S. Paul speaks? For when Mankind is the one party, what can the other be but some Power that is not of Mankind? Besides, who are the Enemies both of God and Mankind but these? and of mankind especially; I will put Enmity (saith God to the Serpent) between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: hence he is called satan, the Adversary or Fiend, and the Enemy κατ' ἐχθρὴν. Behold I give you power, (saith our Saviour to the seventy Disciples, Luke 10. 19.) to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the Enemy; Your Adversary the Devil (saith S. Peter.) And this is he (as I conceive) who is here called the אויב ומתנקם the Enemy and the Avenger; man's tormentor: which words being found again in the 44. Psalm v. 16. may, for ought I know, by warrant of this place, be taken for the same Enemy, and the usual distinction altered, and the place read thus, By reason of the Enemy and the Avenger, all this (to wit, the Calamity and confusion he spake of before) is come upon us; that is, by the malice of Satan. Now that such Enemies as these should be subdued by an Arm, yea, by a Mouth of flesh, is a thing which might justly make the Prophet cry out, Lord, what is man, &c.

1 Ep. 5. 8.

Now that this which I have given is the true meaning of this place, may be gathered from S. Paul's inculcating the word Enemy, when (1 Cor. 15. 24. &c.) he demonstrates out of this Psalm, that Christ, before the end, shall abolish πᾶσαν ἀρχὴν, καὶ πᾶσαν ἐξουσίαν, καὶ δύναμιν, all rule, and all authority, and power; For he must reign, saith he, till he hath put all Enemies under his feet: The last Enemy which shall be destroyed is Death: and then he alledges for his proof that Corollary in this Psalm, For he hath put all things under his feet. But in all this Psalm there is no mention of Enemies, or subduing them, but only in the Verse I have in hand; which unless it be thus expounded, S. Paul's allegation from hence will be too narrow to prove what he intendeth.

HAVING thus cleared the words I chose for my Theme, I shall not need spend much time to shew you how directly and literally the purport of them was fulfilled in our Blessed Saviour's Incarnation: You have, in part, heard such Scriptures already as do evince it. The sum is this: The Devil by sin brought mankind under thralldom, and became the Prince of this world, himself with his Angels being worshipped and served every where as Gods; and the service and honour due to the great God, the Creator of heaven and earth, cast off and abandoned: and all this to receive at last, for reward, eternal woe and everlasting death. To vanquish and exterminate this Enemy, and redeem the world from this miserable thralldom, the Son of God took upon him, not the nature of Angels, (which might have been the Enemies matches) but the nature of weak and despicable Man, that grows from a babe and suckling. Who (saith Esay, in that famous Prophecy of Messiah) hath believed

believed our report? and to whom is the Arm of the Lord revealed? (namely, that works such powerful things by weak means: ) For he shall grow [בִּינוֹק] as a tender plant or sucker; (it is the very word here used in my Text for a sucking child, and translated by the Seventy ως παιδίον) and as a root out of a dry ground, that is, a small and little one. Psal. 8. 2.
Chap. 53. 1, 2.

This is that whereof S. Paul discourses so divinely in the Epistle to the Hebrews: To which of the Angels said he at any time, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool? For unto the Angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak: but unto him of whom it is said, What is man, that thou art mindful of him, &c? Again, We see Jesus, who was made little lower than the Angels, (that is, was made man, that's the meaning) for the suffering of death, crowned with Glory and Honour: what can be so plain as this? It is the Son of man by whom in part we are, and more fully shall be, delivered out of the hands of our enemies, that we might serve the true God without fear; as Zachary says in his Benediculus. It is the Son of man that delivered us from the power of darkness, Col. 1. 13. The Son of man, that spoiled Principalities and Powers, and made a shew of them openly, Col. 2. 15. It was no Angel that did all this, but the Son of man; even as was prophesied from the beginning, when the Devil first got his Dominion, that the seed of the Woman should break the serpent's head. Heb. 1. 13.
Chap. 2. v. 5.
V. 6.
V. 9.
Luke 1. 74.

Nor is this all; For this Son of man enables also other Sons of men, his Disciples and Ministers, to do the like in his name. The seventy Disciples in the Gospel returned with joy, saying, Lord, even the Devils are subject to us through thy name: Yea, not these only, but as many as fight under his Banner against these Enemies have promise they shall at length quell and utterly subdue them; yea, at that great Day shall sit with their Lord and Master, to judge and condemn them. Do ye not know, saith S. Paul, that the Saints shall judge the world? know ye not that we shall judge Angels? Luke 10. 17.
1 Cor. 6. 2, 3.

Lastly, This victory, as for the event, so for the manner of achieving it, is agreeable to our Prophecy: Forasmuch as Christ our General nor fights nor conquers by force of Arms, but by the power of his Word and Spirit, which is the power of his Mouth, according to my Text, Out of the mouth of Babes, &c. Hence, in the * Apocalyps, Christ appears with a sword going out of his mouth: In the 2 Theff. 2. 8. it is said, He shall consume that wicked one (that is, Antichrist) with the Spirit of his mouth: Esay prophesies, Chap. 11. 4. that the Branch of Jesse should smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips should slay the wicked; that is, he does all nutu & verbo, by his word and command, as God made the world: By the word of the Lord were the Heavens made, and all the Host of them by the breath of his mouth, Psal. 33. 6. So doth Christ vanquish his enemies, and enable his Ministers to vanquish them, Verbo & spiritu oris, by his Word and the Spirit of his mouth, according to that Hof. 6. 5. I have hewed them by my Prophets, and slain them by the words of my mouth. * Chap. 1. 16.
& chap. 19.
15, 21.

I come now to the Second thing I propounded; namely, to shew that our Saviour in the Gospel, when he cited this place, alledged it for and according to this, and no other, meaning. The Evangelist relates it thus; When the chief Priests and Scribes saw the wonderful things that Jesus did, and the children in the Temple crying, and saying, Hosanna to the Son of David; they were sore displeased, and said unto him, Hearest thou what these say? how they ascribe the power of salvation (which is God's peculiar) to thee who art a Son of man? Is that solemn acclamation of Save now, wherewith we are wont to glorify God, fit to be given to thee? Our Saviour answers, Yes; For have ye not read, (saith he) Out of the mouth of Babes and sucklings thou hast ordained strength? Consider what that means: You will wonder perhaps, that a thing so plain could be taken in a differing meaning; for it is commonly supposed to be alledged only to prove that children should glorify Christ, whilst the great ones of the world despised him. And there are two things which have occasioned this mistake, and drawn the sense awry. The first is, because the Seventy (according to which the Evangelist reads this place) in stead of strength translate here αἶνον praise, Out of the mouth of Babes and sucklings thou hast ordained praise. Secondly, because those that made this acclamation are said to have been παῖδες Children, When they saw the wonderful things which Jesus did, καὶ τὸς παῖδας καὶ ἄρτους ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, and the Children crying in the Temple. To the first I answer, Our Saviour alledged not the words of the Psalm in Greek, but in Hebrew; where it is נַחַץ, Strength, which is the constant signification thereof through the whole Bible, and never Praise: nor do the Seventy themselves ever translate it otherwise, save, as it seems, in this place. But whatsoever the use of the word αἶνος be otherwise, it must be here Matth. 21.
15, 16.

Pfal. 8. 2.

1.

2.

3.

4.

Mark 11. 9.

Luke 19. 37.

* V. 39.

Christ calls his Disciples παῖδες

John 21. 5.

regulated by the Hebrew verity, according to which our Saviour alledged it, and must signifie not simply Praise, but Robur prædicandum, or Robur laude dignum, Robur celebrandum, Strength worthy to be celebrated or praised, or the like. To the second, That they are called παῖδες Children who made this acclamation of Hosanna to our Saviour, I answer, Be it so; yet I am sure they were no Babes and Sucklings, but of reasonable years: How then would our Saviour's quotation have in such a sense been pertinent? Besides, Young children are not properly called παῖδες, but παῖδια. Again, the Pharisees found no fault with the speakers, but with the thing spoken, which they thought too much for a man; and therefore our Saviour, when he alledged this Scripture, answered to that, and intended not to apologize for the speakers. Fourthly, In all reason, those who cried here Hosanna in the Temple, were the same company that brought him crying Hosanna all the way thither: But these (saith S. Mark) were of the multitude which followed him; as S. Luke, of the multitude of the Disciples; who also tells us, that the * Pharisees, who were offended thereat, bad him rebuke his Disciples. Παῖδες therefore here signifies either Christ's Disciples, or the retinue which followed him, and brought him up thither as a King: Take which you will, you shall not fasten upon παῖδες any notion other than usual. I shall not need to tell you, that the Disciples of the Prophets are called the Sons of the Prophets, that is, οἱ υἱοὶ προφητῶν παῖδες; or that Herod's Courtiers, Matth. 14. 2. are termed his παῖδες. He said τοῖς παισὶν αὐτοῦ, This is John the Baptist, &c.

DISCOURSE X.

ZACHARIAH 4. 10.

These Seven are the eyes of the Lord, which run to and fro through the whole earth.

It is hard to keep a mean; which as it appears in many things else, so in the Doctrine and Speculation of Angels, whereunto men were heretofore so much addicted, as they pursued it not only to vain and ungrounded Theories, but even to Idolatry and Superstition. There were in the Apostles times who intruded into things they had not seen: There were then who beguiled men with a voluntary humility in worshipping of Angels, Col. 2. 18. What after-times brought forth, I shall not need speak.

That ancient and high-soaring (though counterfeit) Dionysius describes the Hierarchy of Angels as exactly as if he had dwelt amongst them, delivering unto us nine Orders of them out of nine words, found partly in the Old, partly in the New Testament; Seraphims, Cherubims, and Thrones; Powers, Hosts, and Dominions; Principalities, Arch-angels, and Angels; and tells us the several natures, distinctions, and properties of them all. Whereas it cannot be shewn out of Scripture, either that some of these names concur not, (as Angels not to be a common name to all the rest, especially to comprehend Arch-angels) or that these are denominations of the natures of Angels, and not of their offices and charges only: yet have these nine Orders passed for current through so many Ages of the Church.

But we, who together with divers Superstitions have justly rejected also these vain and ungrounded curiosities, are fallen into the other extreme, having buried the Doctrine of Angels in silence, making little or no enquiry at all, what God in his Word hath revealed concerning them: which yet would make not a little for the understanding of Scripture, wherein are so many passages having reference to them, and therefore questionless something revealed concerning them.

I shall not therefore do amiss, if I chuse for my Discourse at this time a particular of that kind which Dionysius in all his Speculations hath not a word of, and yet seems to have strong footing in Scripture: It is this.

The

Discourse X. The number of Seven Arch-angels asserted from Scripture. 41

The Jews have an ancient Tradition, that there are seven principal Angels which minister before the Throne of God, and are therefore called Arch-angels; some of whose names we have in Scripture, as Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, and in the second Book of * *Esdra*s mention is made of Jeremiel the Arch-angel. This Tradition we shall find recorded in the Book of Tobit (whose antiquity is before the Birth of our Saviour:) For there the Angel who in the shape of Azariah had accompanied his son into Media, when he discovers himself, speaks in this manner, I am Raphael, one of the seven Angels which stand and minister before the Holy Blessed One, (that is, God.) The Greek hath οἱ προστάται αἱρεται τὰς προσευχὰς τῷ ἁγίῳ, &c. which present the Prayers of the Saints, and go in and out before the Glory of the Holy One. But neither S. Hierome, who translated it out of the Chaldee, nor the ancient Hebrew Copy set forth by Paulus Fagius, (and in likelihood translated out of the same Chaldee Original) hath any such matter, but read as I first quoted. And therefore it seems to be an addition, or liberty of the greek Translator, who thought their Ministry to consist in presenting the Prayers of the Saints, and so translated accordingly.

This Tradition is farther testified by Jonathan ben Uzziel the Chaldee Paraphrast, Gen. 11. 7. where the Lord's words, spoken in the plural number, Go to, let us go down, and let us confound their language, are paraphrased in this manner: The Lord spake unto the seven Angels which stand before him, Go to now let us go down, &c. Whether rightly or fitly in this place, it matters not: the Testimony is sufficient for the Jewish Tradition of seven Arch-angels that stand before the Throne of God.

This Tradition Junius saith is Magical, and not a little triumphs therein, as an undoubted Argument to evince the Book of Tobit not to be Canonical. But what so ever the Book of Tobit be, I hope to shew this Tradition to have firm ground and footing in Scripture, and not so rashly to be rejected.

The chief and most clear place is this I have now read, which gives us to understand that these seven Angels were represented by that Candlestick of seven Lamps which continually burned in the Temple, before the Veil, over against the Mercy-seat, which was the Throne of God. For in the beginning of the Chapter the Prophet being shewed this seven lamped Candlestick in a Vision, and two Olive-branches on each side ministering oyl to the Lamps thereof; the Angel asketh him (ver. 5.) if he knew what these meant. The Prophet answers, No, my Lord. Then the Angel, discoursing a little by way of Preface, tells him what they were; These seven, saith he, that is, the seven Lamps, are the seven Eyes of the Lord, which run to and fro through the whole earth; that is, those seven Vigils, or prime Ministers of his Providence, the seven Arch-angels. As for the two Olive-trees on each-side, These are, saith he, the two anointed ones, which stand before the Lord of the whole earth, (v. 14.) that is, Zorobabel and Jesua, the Prince and Priest of that time; which should be God's two Instruments on earth, whereby his Church (signified by the Candlestick) should be re-established, and his Temple builded: and that not by force or strength, (as he saith in his Preface v. 6.) but by the spirit of God working with them; as the Olive-trees here conveyed oyl to the Candlestick, not after a natural and usual, but a supernatural and secret manner. This interpretation of the latter hath the suffrage of the best Expositors, both Jews and Christians; and so I shall need say no more of it, but betake my self to make good the first, concerning the words I chose for my Text, That those seven Eyes of God, signified by the seven Lamps, are seven Angels.

That this is so, I prove out of two places of the Apocalyps derived from hence; where as well the seven Lamps before the Throne, as the Lamb's seven Eyes, are said to be the seven Spirits of God: I saw (saith S. John Ch. 4. 5.) seven Lamps before the Throne, which are the seven Spirits of God. And again, Ch. 5. 6. I saw in the midst of the Throne, and of the four Beasts, (as we translate it) and of the four and twenty Elders, a Lamb, as if he had been slain, having seven horns, and seven eyes, which are the seven Spirits of God sent forth into all the earth. Here, first, we have Zacharie's very words, seven eyes sent forth into all the earth: secondly, that these seven eyes are the seven Spirits of God: thirdly, that these seven Spirits were represented by the seven Lamps burning before the Throne. If this be not sufficient to make my interpretation of Zacharie's good, I know not what can be. For who can now but think that the Jews derived their Tradition of these seven Angels from this place of Zachary, and the Apocalyps from them both?

And that indeed the Jews supposed some such thing meant by the seven Lamps in the Temple, appears by the report of Josephus, though depraved and fashioned unto the capacity of the Gentiles. For he tells us (both in his Antiquities, Zach. 4. 10.

* Chap. 4. 36.

Et respondit

Jonathan

Arch-angelus,

&c.

Chap. 12. 15.

Vol. Cy. 4.

adversus

Jerosol. 20

lib. 1. in Pf.

129. vel 130.

Angeli dicitur

tur etiam in de Zach. 4. 10.

magis in Ps.

Phil. in Lib.

de Sennacherib.

Vide & 2

Chron. 16. 9.

Zach. 4. 10.

* Antiq. 3.
cap. 7.

1 Rom. 15.

Rev. 1. 4, 5.

Heb. 4. 14.

1 Tim. 5. 21.

Lib. 3. cap. 7. and in his De Bello Judaico, Lib. 6. cap. 6. Gr. 18<sup>a</sup>. ) that the Seven Lamps signified the seven Planets, and the most holy place within the veil, ( Antiq. l. 3. cap. 5. ) the Heaven of God or Heaven of Glory; and that therefore the Lamps stood * slope-wise, as it were to express the obliquity of the Zodiack. Now it is true that the Jewish Astrologians, favouring of Gentilisme, make these Seven Angels the Prefects of the Seven Planets; which they seem to have learned in part from the Greek Philosophy: which conceit, howsoever it be vain and groundless, yet may be as a Key to understand the meaning of this of Josephus. And one thing more; If the visible things of God may be learned, as S. Paul says, from the Creation of the world, why may not the Invisible and Intelligible World be learned from the Fabrick of the Visible? the one (it may be) being the Pattern of the other. But to let this pass, and return again to the Apocalyps:

Where concerning the places alledged, there may be two things objected. First, That the seven spirits there mentioned are, and may be, expounded of the Holy Ghost, thus represented in respect of those seven-fold (that is, manifold) Graces he communicates unto the Church. I answer, that many indeed have so taken it: but, besides the uncouthness of expressing one Spirit by seven, there is a reason in the Text why they cannot be so taken; namely, because not only the seven Lamps are said to be those seven spirits of God, but the seven eyes and seven Horns of the Lamb also to be the same. Now it will be very hard and harsh to make the Holy Ghost the Horns and Eyes of Christ, as he is the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world, that is, as he is Man: Above Angels indeed the Man Jesus is exalted, and that too for the suffering of death, that is, as the Lamb; but not above the Holy Ghost. This made not only Drusus, but even Beza himself, in his Notes upon this place to affirm, it could not be meant of the Holy Ghost, but of Seven created Spirits.

A second scruple is, How (if they be created Spirits) John could pray for Grace and Peace from them: Grace be unto you, (saith he) and peace from him which is, which was, and is to come; and from the seven spirits which are before his Throne, and from Jesus Christ the faithful witness, &c. Would he pray for Grace and Peace from Angels? I answer, Why not? For first, He praies not to them; but unto God, unto whom such votes are tendered. Secondly, He praies for Grace and Peace from them, not as Authors, but as the Instruments of God in the dispensation thereof. Are they not λειτουργικά πνεύματα ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of Salvation? And, if it be no Idolatry to pray unto God to give Grace and Peace from the outward Ministry of his Word; no more is it to pray unto him for it from the invisible Ministry. For certainly it is lawful to pray unto God for a blessing from an Instrument, which he is wont to give us by an Instrument. Secondly, It may be said, it being a Salutation, that the words [ Grace and Peace ] need not be taken in that special and strict sense, but in the large and general, wherein Grace sounds favour at large, and Peace all manner of prosperity. In which sense no man will deny but the blessed Angels have an interest in the dispensation of the favours and blessings of God to his Church; and so God may be prayed to to give them, as he is wont, by their Ministry. Grace and Peace from him which is, which was, and is to come, as the Author and Giver; and from the Seven Spirits, as the Instruments; and from Jesus Christ, as the Mediator.

There is yet one place more in the Apocalyps to confirm this Tradition, Chap. 8. 2. I saw, saith S. John, τὰς ἑπτὰ Ἀγγέλους οἱ ἑνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ ἑστῆκασιν, the Seven Angels which stood before God. Is not this as plain as Tobit? Why should then the one be accounted Magical rather than the other?

I add moreover, that these Angels are those שריים הראשונים, Principes primarii or chief Princes, mentioned in the 10. of Daniel 13. Michael one of the chief Princes (saith the Angel there) came to help me: Now Michael, we know, is one of the Arch-angels; and why therefore may not these chief Princes be those Ἀγγελοι ἀλεκτοί, whereof S. Paul speaks in his adjuration to Timothy? I charge thee (saith he) before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Elect Angels; not the good Angels at large, but those Angeli eximii, the Seven Arch-angels which stand before the Throne of God.

And it may, not without reason, be conjectured, that those Seven chief Princes famed in the Persian Monarchie took their beginning from hence; namely, that Daniel (who in respect of his account for wisdom, and of his power under Darius the Mede, had a main stroke in the moulding and framing the Government of that that State) caused the Persian Court to resemble that of Heaven, ordaining seven chief Princes to stand before the King. Of which we find twice mention in Scripture: as in the Book of Esther, where they are recorded by name, and styled the seven Princes of Media and Persia, who saw the King's face, and sate first in the kingdom: and in the Commission granted to Ezra by Artaxerxes, Ezra 7. 14. they are called the King's seven Counsellors; Forasmuch as thou art sent by the King, and his seven Counsellors, &c. And, it may be, the Church of Jerusalem, when they chose seven Deacons to minister unto their Bishop, had an eye the same way.

HITHERTO of the Number of these Arch-angels; now a word or two of their Office. And that is, First, to be the universal Inspectors of the whole world, and the Rulers and Princes of the whole Angelical host: which appears in that they are called Principes primarii, ראשונים chief Princes, and Αρχάγγελοι Arch-angels (i.) ἄρχοντες ἁγίων Ἀγγέλων, Chief of the Angels: their universal jurisdiction is meant by the words [sent forth into the whole world,] whereas the rest are limited to certain places. Secondly, to have the peculiar Charge and Guardianship of the Church and affairs thereof, whilst the rest of the world, with their Politics, Kingdoms and Governments, is committed to the care of * subordinate Angels, who, according to their several charges, may seem to carry those names of a Thrones, Principalities, Powers and Dominions. That the charge of the Church, quà talis, belongs thus peculiarly and immediately to the seven Arch-angels, may appear by S. John's saluting the Churches with a Benediction of Grace and Peace from their ministry; and the typing of them by the seven Eyes and Horns of the Lamb, as Powers which the Father, since he exalted Him to be Head of his Church, hath annexed to his Jurisdiction. Hence it comes to pass, that we find these Angels peculiarly, both before and in the Gospel, to have been employed about the Church-affairs. In the Old Testament, the Angel Gabriel (one of the seven) revealed to Daniel the time of the restoration of the Jewish State, and coming of Messiah: and the Angel Michael (one of the chief Princes) was his assistant, when he strengthened Darius the Mede who founded the Monarchy which should restore them, and is in special termed (Dan. 12. 1.) the Prince that stood for Daniel's people. In the Gospel, we find the same Angel Gabriel employed both to Zachary and the Blessed Virgin with the Evangelical Tidings; and that Zachary might take notice that he was one of the seven, he says unto him, I am Gabriel that stand in the presence of God. Likewise in the Churches combat with the Dragon, Apocal. 12. 7, &c. Michael and his Angels are said to be her Champions, and in her quarrel to have cast the Dragon and his Angels down to the Earth. And in this Prophecy of * Zachary it is said, that these seven eyes of the Lord took care of one stone, which Zorobabel laid for the foundation of the Temple; and therefore the work could not be disappointed, but should certainly at length be finished. So as by this time we may guess the meaning of that which Hananî the Seer told King Asa (2 Chron. 16. 9.) The Eyes of the Lord (that is, these Seven Eyes) run to and fro through the whole Earth, to shew themselves strong in the behalf of those whose hearts are perfect towards him.

Zach. 4. 10.
Chap. 1. 14.

* Clemens Alex. Strom. lib. 7. Οὐ πῶς ἐστὶν (scil. Filius Dei) ὁ διδῶν καὶ τοῖς ἑλλήσι φιλοσοφίαν διὰ τῶν ὑποδεστέρων Ἀγγέλων, εἰσι δὲ συνδιανενομένοιαι περὶ τὰς θεῖας τε καὶ ἀνθρώπων Ἀγγελίας καὶ ἐθνῶν. Νοτῶν διὰ τῶν ὑποδεστέρων Ἀγγέλων, by the subordinate Angels. Vide & Clementem Romanum Epist. ad Corinth. ubi citat Deut. 32. 8, 9. secundum versionem ἑβραίων LXX. ἐξουσίαν θεῖα ἐθνῶν κατ' ἀειδιῶν Ἀγγέλων Θεῶν· qui non בני ישראל, sed בני שרי אר, legisse videntur. Vide & Irenaeum, l. 3. cap. 12.

a Origen seems to acknowledge but four Orders, Θεζουροι, Κουετόντες, Ἐξουσία, Ἀρχαί· Contra Cel. l. 4.

Luke 1. 19.

* Chap. 3. 9.

DISCOURSE XI.

S. MARK II. 17.

Is it not written, My House shall be called a House of Prayer
καὶ τοῖς ἔθνεσι to all [the] Nations?

HEY are the words of our Blessed Saviour, when he cast the Buyers and Sellers and Money-changers out of the Temple, and forbid to carry any vessels through it. Concerning which story it is worth observation, that our Saviour whilst he was upon earth never exercised any Kingly or coactive Jurisdiction, but in vindicating his Father's House from prophanation. And this he did two several times: Once at the first Passover, after he began his Prophecie, whereof you may read John 2. 14, &c. and now again at his last Passover, when he came to give his soul a sacrifice for sin. This is that which S. Mark relates in this place, as do also two other of the Evangelists, S. Matthew and S. Luke. The vindication of God's House from Prophanation (how little account soever we are wont to make thereof) was with our Blessed Saviour Alpha and Omega, the first and last of his care; ubi incipit, ibi desinit. The consideration of which, how momentous it is, I leave to your selves to judge. Thus much by way of Preface.

Matth. 21. 13.
Luke 19. 46.

NOW for understanding the words I have chosen, I will divide my Discourse into a Question and an Observation. The Question is, In what part of the Temple this Market was kept. A thing not commonly by Expositors enquired after, much less defined. The Observation is, That this fact of our Saviour more particularly concerns us of the Gentiles than we take notice of.

I. For the first, [In what part of the Temple this Market was kept;] The Jews Religion and scrupulosity to keep their Temple from prophanation was such as might seem to make this story incredible. Those who were so chary that no uncircumcised or unclean person should come therein, who trod the pavement thereof with so much religious observance and curiosity, who would not suffer (as Josephus relates) any other building, no not the Palace of Agrippa their King, to have any prospect into it, lest it should be polluted by a prophane look; how unlikely is it they would endure it to be made a place of buying, selling, and bartering, yea a Market for sheep and oxen, as John 2. 14. it is expressly said to have been? Neither will it serve the turn to excuse it by saying, it was to furnish such as came thither with offerings: For the sheep and oxen, whilst they were yet to be bought to that purpose, were not sacred, but prophane; and so not to come within the sacred limits. You see the difficulty.

Antiq. l. 20. c. 7

But I answer, that this Market was kept in the Third or Gentiles Court, which was the outmost of the Temple. For the Temple in our Saviour's time had Three Courts, each surrounding one another. First, the inmost or Priests Court, wherein stood the Temple and the Altar of burnt-offering: Into this none but the Priests and Levites came. Secondly, the middle or great Court, which surrounded that of the Priests: whereinto the Jews of all sorts and circumcised Profelytes came to worship. Without this was a third Court for the Gentiles, which surrounded the Israelites Court, as that did the Court of the Priests. The two first Courts they accounted sacred, calling them τὸ Ἅγιον into which therefore none might enter but such as were circumcised and clean according to the Law. The third was without the sacred limits, and so accounted prophane and common: which may be learned out of Josephus, who tells us of certain little pillars or columns, placed by the Lorica or septum, which severed this Court from the rest, whereon was inscribed in Greek and Latin, Μὴ δὲν ἀλλόφυλον εἰς τὸς τῷ Ἁγίῳ παρεῖναι, In Atrium sanctum transire alienigenam non debere, That no stranger pass within the sacred limits; τὸ δὲ δεύτερον ἱερόν, saith he, Ἅγιον ἐκαλεῖτο, for the second part of the Temple was called Holy; implying that the Outmost was not so.

Lib. 5. de
Bello Jud. cap.
5. Gr. 13.

Into this Court therefore, which had no legal sanctity and was without the sacred limits, the Gentiles were admitted, and had their station, together with such of the Jews as were in their uncleanness; further they might not go. By Gentiles here I mean mean

mean such, which though uncircumcised, yet worshipped the God of Israel, and were called Σεβόμενοι. For (as I have told you * heretofore) the Jews had two sorts of Profelytes which worshipped their God and frequented his Temple. One of such as were circumcised, and took upon them the observation of the whole Law of Moses: These were accounted as Jews, bound to the same observances, and partakers of the same priviledges with them; they worshipped together in the same Court, and differed nothing from Jews, but that they were not so born. But besides these, there was a second sort of Gentiles which embraced the worship of the God of Israel and the hope of the life to come, which were not circumcised, nor conformed to the Ordinances of the Mosaical Law; but were tied only to the observation of those commandments which the Jewish Doctors call * The Precepts of the Sons of Noah. Of this Order was Cornelius and divers other mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles, where they are known by the name of Σεβόμενοι or Worshippers: and though they were true worshippers, yet were they still but Gentiles, and such as no Jew might converse with; as we see in the example of Cornelius. These were those that came no further than the Outmost Court, not accounted within the limits of the τὸ Ἅγιον or Sacred Septs; as themselves were accounted Unclean, because Uncircumcised, and so no members of the Commonwealth of Israel.

Mark 11.17.

* See Discourse 3.

* See the Seven Precepts of the Sons of Noah, in Discourse 3.

In this Court therefore the Jews made no scruple of doing prophane and secular acts, being in their opinion no better than a common place. Nay, it is very probable, that to shew their despiency of the poor Gentiles, (according to that in the Apocalyps, ἐξω οἱ κύνες, without are Dogs) and to pride themselves in their prerogative and discretion from them, they affected to have such acts there done. And hence it came to pass that they permitted a Market of Oxen and Sheep, Doves and other barmery, to be kept there, for the use of the Temple and those who came thither to worship. And thus the poor Gentiles or Σεβόμενοι were stabled amongst Oxen, Sheep, and stalls of Money-changers, and in that tumultuous place fain to offer up their devotions and prayers unto the most High God whom they had chosen.

Rev. 22.15.

But our Blessed Saviour, who came to redeem not the Jews only, but the Gentiles also, and to make them a principal part of his fold, would not suffer them to be thus neglected; but in this act of his gave them a prælude of his further favour intended toward them: and he that was to vindicate their Souls from death, and take away the * partition-wall between them and the Jews, first vindicates their Oratory from prophanation; alledging for his warrant this place of the Prophet Esaï concerning the same Oratory, My House shall be called a House of Prayer πᾶσι τοῖς ἔθνεσι. He did not say, My Father's House is holy; for the Jews would soon have replied, that the Gentiles Court was without the sacred limits: But, It is written, saith he, My House shall be called a House of Prayer for all the Nations; Ergo, The place of Prayer for all Nations is a part of my Father's House. If my Father's House, then holy, and not to be thus prophaned. For whatsoever is his, is holy; Relative Holiness being nothing else but the peculiarity a thing hath to God-ward. Of this if any man doubt, that Quotation by S. Luke concerning that which first openeth the womb, will put him out of doubt. For whenas the Law saith, Every male that openeth the womb is mine, (that is, the Lord's;) S. Luke utters it, chap. 2. v. 23. Every male that openeth the womb shall be called Holy unto the Lord: Ergo, To be the Lord's and to be Holy, are Synonyma's.

* Ephes. 2.14.

Though therefore the Gentiles Court had no sanctity of legal distinction, yet had it the sanctity of peculiarity to God-ward, and therefore not to be used as a common place. The Illation proceeds by way of Conversion; *My House shall be called the House of Prayer to * all Nations or People*; Ergo, The House of Prayer for all Nations is my Father's House. And the Emphasis lies in the words [πᾶσι τοῖς ἔθνεσι] which our Translators were not so well advised of, when, following Beza too close, they render the words thus, My House shall be called of all Nations the House of Prayer; as if the Dative Case here [τοῖς ἔθνεσι] were not Acquisitive, but (as it is sometimes with passive verbs) in stead of the Ablative of the Agent, for παρὰ τῶν ἔθνων. Which sense is clean from the scope and purpose of the place whence it is taken; as he that compares them will easily see, and I shall make fully to appear in the next part of my Discourse, which I tendred by the name of an Observation.

* 1 Kings 8. 41, 42, 43.

To wit, That this fact of our Saviour more particularly concerns us of the Gentiles than we take notice of. Namely, we are taught thereby what reverent esteem we ought to have of our Gentile Oratories and Churches; howsoever not endued with such legal sanctity, in every respect, as was the Temple of the Jews; yet Houses of Prayer as well well as theirs. This Observation will be made good by a threefold Consideration: Mark 11.17. First, of the Story, as I have related it; secondly, from the Text here alledged for warrant thereof; and thirdly, from the circumstance of Time.

II.

1. For the Story, I have shewed it was acted in the Gentiles Court, and not in that of the Jews; because it is not credible that was thus prophaned. It cannot therefore be alledged, that this was a place of legal sanctity; for according to legal sanctity it was held by the Jews as common: only it was the place for the Gentiles to worship the God of Israel in; and seems to have been proper to the second Temple, the Gentiles in the first worshipping without at the Temple-door in the holy Mountain only.

2. Secondly, The place alledged to avow the Fact speaks expressly of Gentile-worshippers; not in the words τοῖς ἔθνεσι only, but in the whole body of the context. Hear the Prophet speak, Esay chap. 56. ver. 6, 7. and then judge: The sons of the stranger, that joyn themselves to the Lord to serve him, and to love the Name of the Lord, to be his servants, every one that keepeth the Sabbath from polluting it, and taketh hold of my Covenant, (namely, that I alone shall be his God;) Even them will I bring to my holy Mountain, and make them joyfull in my House of Prayer; their burnt-offerings and sacrifices accepted upon mine Altar. Then follow the words of my Text, For my House shall be called (that is, shall be; it is an Hebraism) a House of Prayer for all People.

What is this but a Description of the Σεβόμενοι or Gentile-worshippers? And this place alone makes good all that I have said before, viz. That this vindication was of the Gentiles Court: Otherwise the allegation of this Scripture had been impertinent; for the Gentiles (of whom the Prophet speaks) worshipped in no place but this. Hence also appears to what purpose our Evangelist expressed the words [πᾶσι τοῖς ἔθνεσι,] namely, as that which shewed wherein the force of the accommodation to this occasion lay; which the rest of the Evangelists omitted, as referring to the place of the Prophet whence it was taken; those who heard it being not ignorant of whom the Prophet spake.

3. Thirdly, the circumstance of Time argues the same thing; if we consider that this was done but a few days before our Saviour suffered, to wit, when he came to his last Passover. How unreasonable had it been to vindicate the violation of Legal and typical sanctity, which within so few days after he was utterly to abolish by his Cross; unless he had meant thereby to leave his Church a lasting lesson, what reverence and respect he would have accounted due to such places as this was which he vindicated?

DISCOURSE XII.

S. JOHN 4. 23.

But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in Spirit and Truth: For the Father seeketh such to worship him.

Jud. 9. 7. The Evangelist here calls it Sichar, ver. 5 alias Shechem, or Sichem.

THEY are the words of our Blessed Saviour to the Woman of samaria, who perceiving him by his discourse to be a Prophet, desired to be resolved by him of that great controverted point between the Jews and Samaritans, Whether Mount Garizim, by Sichem, (where the samaritans sacrificed) or Jerusalem, were the true place of worship. Our Saviour tells her, that this Question was not now of much moment: For that the hour or time was near at hand, when they should neither worship the Father in Mount Garizim, nor at Jerusalem. But that there was a greater difference between the Jews and them than this of Place; namely, even about That which was worshipped: For ye (saith he) worship that ye know not; but we (Jews) worship that we know. Then follow the words premised, But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in Spirit and Truth.

It

It is an abused Text, being commonly alledged to prove that God now in the Gospel either requires not, or regards not External worship, but that of the Spirit only: John 4.23. and this to be a characteristical difference between the worship of the Old Testament and the New. If at any time we talk of external decency in rites and bodily expressions as fit to be used in the service of God, this is the usual Buckler to repel whatsoever may be said in that kind. It is true, indeed, that the worship of the Gospel is much more spiritual than that of the Law: But that the worship of the Gospel should be only spiritual and no external worship required therein, (as the Text according to some mens sense and allegation thereof would imply,) is repugnant not only to the practice and experience of the Christian Religion in all Ages, but also to the express Ordinances of the Gospel it self. For what are the sacraments of the New Testament? are they not Rites wherein and wherewith God is served and worshipped? The consideration of the holy Eucharist alone will confute this Gloss: For is not the commemoration of the Sacrifice of Christ's death upon the Cross unto his Father, in the Symbols of Bread and Wine, an external worship? And yet with this Rite hath the Church in all Ages used to make her solemn address of Prayer and Supplication unto the Divine Majesty, as the Jews in the Old Testament did by Sacrifice. When I say, in all Ages, I include also that of the Apostles: For so much S. Luke testifieth of that first Christian society, Acts 2.42. Ἦσαν ὃ προσηκόντων τῇ κλάσει τῶ ἀγίου, καὶ ταῖς προσευχαῖς, They continued in breaking of Bread, and in Prayers.

As for bodily expressions by gestures and postures, as standing, kneeling, bowing, and the like; our Blessed Saviour himself lift up his sacred eyes to heaven when he prayed for Lazarus; fell on his face, when he prayed in his agony. S. Paul (as himself saith) bowed his knees to the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ: He and S. Peter, and the rest of the Believers, do the like more than once in the Acts of the Apostles. What was Imposition of hands but an external gesture in an act of invocation for conferring a blessing? and that perhaps sometimes without any vocal expression joyned therewith. Besides, I cannot conceive any reason why, in this point of Evangelical worship, Gesture should be more scrupled at than Voice. Is not confessing, praising, praying, and glorifying God by Voice, an external and bodily worship, as well as that of Gesture? why should then the one derogate from the worship of the Father in Spirit and Truth, and not the other? To conclude, There was never any society of men in the world that worshipped the Father in such a manner as this interpretation would imply: and therefore cannot this be our Saviour's meaning, but some other. Let us see if we can find out what it is. Eph. 3.14.

There may be two senses given of these words; both of them agreeable to Reason and the analogy of Scripture: let us take our choice. The one is, That to worship God in Spirit and Truth, is to worship him not with Types and shadows of things to come, as in the Old Testament, but according to the verity of the things exhibited in Christ; according to that, The Law was given by Moses, but Grace and Truth came by Jesus Christ. Whence the Mystery of the Gospel is elsewhere by our Saviour, in this Evangelist, termed Truth, as Chap. 17. ver. 17. and the Doctrine thereof, by S. Paul, the word of Truth: See Ephes. Chap. 1. ver. 13. Rom. 15. 8. The time therefore is now at hand, said our Saviour, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father no longer with bloody Sacrifices, and the Rites and Ordinances depending thereon; but in and according to the verity of that which these Ordinances figured. For all these were Types of Christ, in whom, being now exhibited, the true worshippers shall henceforth worship the Father. John 1.17.

This sense hath good warrant from the state of the Question between the Jews and Samaritans, to which our Saviour here makes answer: which was not about worship in general, but about the kind of worship in special, which was confessed by both sides to be tied to one certain place only; that is, of worship by Sacrifice and the appendages; in a word, of the Typical worship proper to the first Covenant, of which see a description Heb. 9. This Josephus expressly testifies, Lib. 12. Antiq. cap. 1. speaking of the Jews and Samaritans which dwelt together at Alexandria: * They lived, saith he, in perpetual discord one with the other, whilst each laboured to maintain their Country customs: those of Jerusalem affirming their Temple to be the sacred place whither sacrifices were to be sent; the Samaritans, on the other side, contending they ought to be sent to Mount Garizim. For otherwise, who knows not that both Jews and Samaritans had other places of worship besides either of these? namely their Proseucha's and Synagogues, wherein they worshipped God, not with internal only, but external worship; though not with Sacrifice, which might be offered but in one place only. And this also may * Περὶ ἀλλήλους ἐπὶ ἀλλήλων
ἔσσαν.

John 4.23.

John 2.19, 21.

may seem to have been a Type of Christ as well as the rest, namely, that he was to be that one and only Mediator of the Church, in the Temple of whose sacred body we have access unto the Father, and in whom he accepts our service and devotions: according to that, Destroy this Temple, and I will rear it up again in three days: He spake, saith the Text, of the Temple of his Body. This sense divers of the Ancients hit upon. Eusebius Demon. Evang. Lib. 1. Cap. 6. Οὐ διὰ συμβόλων καὶ τύπων, ἀλλ', ἣ φησιν ὁ Σωτήρ, ἐν πνεύματι καὶ ἀληθείᾳ. Not by Symbols and Types, but, as our Saviour saith, in Spirit and Truth. Not that in the New Testament men should worship God without all external services: For the New Testament was to have external and visible services as well as the Old, but such as should imply the verity of the promises already exhibited, not be Types and shadows of them yet to come. We know the Holy Ghost is wont to call the figured Face of the Law the Letter, and the Verity thereby signified, the Spirit. As for ἐν πνεύματι καὶ ἀληθείᾳ, in Spirit and Truth, both together, they are ἀπαξ λεγόμενοι, but once found in holy Writ; to wit, only in this place: and so, no light can be borrowed by comparing of the like expression any where else to expound them. Besides, nothing hinders but they may be here taken one for the exposition of the other; namely, that to worship the Father ἐν πνεύματι, is the same with to worship him ἐν ἀληθείᾳ.

Verse 24.

But howsoever this exposition be fair and plausible, yet, methinks, the reason which our Saviour gives in the words following should argue another meaning. God (saith he) is a Spirit; therefore they that worship him, must worship in Spirit and Truth: But God was a spirit from the beginning: If therefore for this reason he must be worshipped in Spirit and Truth, he was so to be worshipped in the Old Testament as well as in the New.

* Chap. 17.

Let us therefore seek another meaning: For the finding whereof, let us take notice that the Samaritans, at whom our Saviour here aimeth, were the off-spring of those Nations which the King of Assyria placed in the Cities of Samaria, when he had carried away the Ten Tribes captive. These, as we may read in the * second Book of the Kings, at their first coming thither worshipped not the God of Israel, but the gods of the Nations from whence they came: wherefore he sent Lions amongst them, which slew them. Which they apprehending, either from the information of some Israelite, or otherwise, to be because they knew not the worship of the God of the Country, they informed the King of Assyria thereof, desiring that some of the captiv'd Priests might be sent unto them, to teach them the manner and rites of his worship; which being accordingly done, they thenceforth (as the Text tells us) worshipped the Lord, yet feared their own Gods too, and so did ἀμικτὰ μίγνυναι, as S. Chrysostome speaks, mingle things not to be mingled.

In this medley they continued about three hundred years, till toward the end of the Persian Monarchy. At what time it chanced that Manasse, brother to Jaddo the High Priest of the returned Jews, married the daughter of Sanballat then Governour of Samaria: for which being expelled from Jerusalem by Nehemiah, he fled to Sanballat his Father in Law; and after his example many other of the Jews of the best rank, having married strange wives likewise, and loth to forgo them, betook themselves thither also. Sanballat willingly entertains them, and makes his son-in-Law Manasse their Priest. For whose greater reputation and state, when Alexander the Great subdued the Persian Monarchy, he obtained leave of him to build a Temple upon Mount Garizim, where his son-in-Law exercised the office of High Priest. This was exceedingly prejudicial to the Jews, and the occasion of a continual Schism, whilst those that were discontented or excommunicated at Jerusalem were wont to betake themselves thither: Yet by this means the Samaritans (having now one of the sons of Aaron to be their Chief Priest, and so many other of the Jews, both Priests and others, mingled amongst them) were brought at length to cast off all their false gods, and to worship the Lord the God of Israel only. Yet so, that howsoever they seemed to themselves to be true worshippers, and altogether free from Idolatry; nevertheless they retained a smack thereof, inasmuch as they worshipped the true God under a visible representation, to wit, of a Dove, and circumcised their Children in the name thereof, as the Jewish Tradition tells us; who therefore always branded their worship with עבירה or spiritual Fornication: Just as their predecessors, the Ten Tribes, worshipped the same God of Israel under the similitude of a Calf.

י"ע, id est, Cultus externus; sic Idolatriam appellam.

This was the condition of the Samaritan Religion in our Saviour's time: and if we weigh the matter well, we shall find his words here to the woman very pliable to be construed with reference thereunto. You ask, saith he, of the true place of worship, ship, whether Mount Garizim, or Jerusalem: which is not now greatly material; forasmuch as the time is at hand when men shall worship the Father at neither. But there is a greater difference between you and us than of Place, though you take no notice of it; namely, even about the Object of worship it self: For ye worship what ye know not, but we (Jews) worship what we know. How is that? Thus; Ye worship indeed the Father, the God of Israel, as we do; but you worship him under a corporeal representation; wherein you shew you know him not: But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in Spirit and Truth. In Spirit, that is, conceiving of him no otherwise than in Spirit; and in Truth, that is, not under any corporeal or visible shape: For God is a Spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in Spirit and Truth; ἀνεπαύτως καὶ ἀληθῶς, not fancying him as a Body, but, as indeed he is, a spirit. For those who worship him under a corporeal similitude, do believe him: according as the Apostle speaks, Rom. i. 23. of such as changed the glory of the Incorruptible God into an Image made like to corruptible Man, Birds or Beasts; They changed, saith he, the truth of God into a lie, and served the creature, παρὰ τὴν ἑликаρτίαν, juxta Creatorem, as or with the Creator who is blessed for ever, v. 25. Hence Idols in Scripture are termed Lies; as Amos 2. 4. Their Lies have caused them to erre, after which their Fathers walked: The Vulgar hath, Seduxerunt eos Idola ipsorum, Their Idols have caused them to erre. And Esay 28. 15. We have made Lies our refuge. And Jer. 16. 19, 20. The Gentiles shall come from the ends of the earth, and shall say, Surely our Fathers have possessed (the Chaldee hath פלח have worshipped) a lie; vanity, wherein there is no profit. Shall a man make Gods unto himself, and they are no Gods?

John 4. 23.

Jer. 3. 10.

This therefore I take to be the genuine meaning of this place, and not that which is commonly supposed against external worship; which I think this Demonstration will evince: To worship what they know, (as the Jews are said to do) and to worship in Spirit and Truth, are taken by our Saviour for one and the same thing, (else the whole sense will be inconsequent:) But the Jews worshipped not God without Rites and Ceremonies, (who yet are supposed to worship him in Spirit and Truth;) Ergo, To worship God without Rites and Ceremonies, is not to worship him in Spirit and Truth, according to the meaning here intended.

See the Homily against the peril of Idolatry. p. 3. where the Text is peculiarly applied against worshipping of God in an Image.

DISCOURSE XIII.

S. LUKE 24. 45, 46.

Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures: And said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day.

OUR Blessed Saviour, after he was risen from the dead, told his Disciples, not only that his Suffering of death and Rising again the third day was foretold in the Scriptures, but also pointed out those Scriptures unto them, and opened their understanding, that they might understand them; that is, he expounded or explained them unto them: Certain it is therefore, that somewhere in the Old Testament these things were foretold should befall Messiah. Yea S. Paul, 1 Cor. 15. 3, 4. will further assure us that they are; I delivered unto you, saith he, first of all, that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures: And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures. Both of them therefore are somewhere foretold in the Scriptures; and it becomes not us to be so ignorant as commonly we are, which those Scriptures be which foretell them. It is a main point of our Faith, and that which the Jews most stumble at, because their Doctors had not observed any such thing foretold of Messiah. The more they were ignorant thereof, the more it concerns us to be confirmed therein. I thought good therefore to make this the Argument of my Discourse at this time, to inform both you and my self where these things are foretold, foretold, and, if I can, to point out those very Scriptures which our Saviour here expounded to his Disciples.

Which that I may the better do, I will make the words fore-going my Text to be as the Pole-star in this my search: These are the things (saith our Saviour) which I spake unto you while I was yet with you, That all things must be fulfilled which were written in the Law of Moses, and in the Prophets, and in the Psalms concerning me. Then follow the words I read, Then opened he their understanding, &c. These two events therefore, of Messiah's death and rising again the third day, were foretold in these Three parts of Scripture, In the Law of Moses or Pentateuch, in the Nebiim or Prophets, and in the Psalms; and in these Three we must search for them. And first for the First, That Messiah should suffer death.

I. This was fore-signified in the Law or Pentateuch, First in the story of Abraham, where he was commanded to offer his son Isaac, the son wherein his seed should be called, and to whom the promise was entailed, That in it should all the Nations of the world be blessed. What was here acted else but the Mystery of Christ's Passion? to wit, That the promised seed should make all the Nations of the world blessed, by becoming a sacrifice for sin? which that it might be the more evident, the Place is also designed, the region of Mount Moriah; there Abraham was bid to offer his son Isaac, even where Messiah, who was then in the loins of Isaac, was one day to be offered upon the Cross.

The Second prediction in the Law of Messiah's suffering death, was by the slaying of Beasts, for atonement of sin, in their Sacrifices; which were nothing else but shadows and representations of that Offering upon the Cross which Messiah was one day to make of himself for the sins of the world. Which Mystery of the end of those Legal sacrifices was shewed in the former story of Abraham's offering Isaac: For when he had now brought his son to the place appointed, and had built an Altar, and was now ready to slay him, as he was commanded; the Angel of the Lord stayed his hand, and shewed him a Ram caught in a thicket by the horns; which Ram Abraham took, and offered for a burnt-offering in stead of his son; to signify, that the offering of the Blessed seed was yet to be suspended, and that God in the mean while would accept the offerings of Bulls and Rams, as a pledge of that expiation which the Blessed seed of Abraham in the loins of Isaac should one day make.

2. And thus much for the Law. Now I come to the Prophets, wherein I find Three evident Prophecies, That Messiah should suffer death. The first is that famous one, the 53. of Esay, the whole Chapter through; I will not repeat it all, but some two or three passages thereof. Verse 5. He was wounded, saith the Prophet, for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed. Ver. 7. He was oppressed, he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; he was brought as a Lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth. Ver. 8. He was cut off out of the land of the living; for the transgression of my people was he stricken. Now that this Prophecy was one of those by which the Apostles used to prove this Verity, appears by the story of the conversion of the Eunuch, Acts 8. unto whom Philip coming, whilst he was in his Chariot, reading this place of Scripture, and he thereupon asking Philip, of whom the Prophet spake these words; the * Text tells us, that Philip began at the same Scripture, and preached unto him Jesus.

The Second place in the Prophets which foretells That Christ should suffer, is that in the ninth of Daniel, who pointing out the time of Messiah's coming by Seventy weeks, limits his count, not at his Birth, but at his Suffering, as the most principal moment of his story. From the going out of the commandment, saith he, to restore and build Jerusalem, unto Messiah the Prince, shall be seven weeks, and sixty two weeks — And after sixty two weeks shall Messiah be cut off. What can be more plain than this?

A Third place in the Prophets is to be found Zachary 12. 10. where, at the time when the Jews shall be converted, Christ is brought in speaking in this manner; I will pour out, saith he, upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and supplication, and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced. Hence it follows, that the Jews should have pierced Messiah before they received him to be their Redeemer. And that this place also was one of those applied by the Apostles to this purpose, appears by S. John's twice alledging it: Once in his Gospel, when a Souldier with a Spear pierced our Saviours side; Then, saith he, was fulfilled that Scripture which saith, They shall look upon him whom they pierced: Again, in the beginning

Luke, 24. 45.

I.

Gen. 22. 18.

* Verse 35.

Verse 25. 26.

John 19. 37.

ginning of his Revelation, Behold (saith he) he cometh in the clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him. Luke 24.45.

Now for the Third division of Scripture, the Psalms, the chief, at least, and principal place there which I dare warrant is that of the 16. Psalm, v. 9, 10. quoted both by S. Peter and S. Paul in the Acts of the Apostles: My flesh shall rest in hope; For thou wilt not leave my soul in the grave, neither suffer thine Holy One to see corruption. For David, as S. Peter and S. Paul say, was buried, and his body saw corruption; therefore it cannot be spoken of him, but of Messiah in the person of David, as a Type in whose loyns Messiah was. Now then if Messiah's body were to be laid in the grave, it follows he was to die, and to be in the state of the dead.

AND thus I have done the First part of my task, and proved That Messiah was to suffer death, according to the Scriptures, namely, foretold in that Threefold division of Scripture mentioned here by our Saviour, the Law, the Prophets, and the Psalms. Now I come to prove the other part, That it behoved him also to rise again the third day, according to the Scriptures.

And this was first foreshewn in the same story of Isaac, wherein his sacrifice or suffering was acted. For from the time that God commanded Isaac to be offered for a burnt-offering, Isaac was a dead man; but the third day he was released from death. This the Text tells us expressly, that it was the third day when Abraham came to Mount Moriab, and had his son, as it were, restored to him again; which circumstance there was no need nor use at all to have noted, had it not been for some Mystery. For had there been nothing intended but the naked story, what did it concern us to know whether it were the third or the fifth day that Abraham came to Moriab, where he received his son from death? Now, that I have not misapplied this figure, S. Paul is my witness, who expressly makes this release of Isaac from slaughter a figure of the Resurrection: For thus he speaks of this whole story, Hebrews 11. 17, 18, 19. By faith Abraham when he was tried, offered up Isaac; and he that had received the promises, offered up his only-begotten Son, Of whom it was said, That in Isaac shall thy seed be called: Accounting that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure. I.

The same was foreshewed by the Law of Sacrifices, which were to be eaten before the third day; some Sacrifices were to be eaten the same day they were offered, but those which were deferred longest, as the Peace-offerings, were to be eaten before the third day. The third day no sacrifice might be eaten, but was to be burnt: If it were eaten, it was not accepted for an atonement, but counted an abomination: namely, to shew that the Sacrifice of Messiah, which these Sacrifices represented, was to be finished the third day by his rising from the dead; and therefore the Type thereof determined within that time, beyond which time it was not accepted for atonement of sin, because then it was no longer a Type of him.

Thus far the Law. As for the Prophets, I find no express Prediction in them for the time of Christ's rising (For that of the case of the Prophet Jonah, I take to be rather an Allusion than a Prophecy:) only in general, That Christ should rise again, is implied both in that famous Prophecy of Esay the 53. and that of Zachary 12. In the former, forasmuch as it is said, that after he had made his soul a sacrifice for sin, he should see his seed, and prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord should prosper in his hand: And again, that the Lord should divide him a portion with the great, and that he should divide the spoil with the strong, because he had poured out his soul unto death: Which argues that he should not only live again, but be victorious after he had died. In that of Zachary it is said, the Jews should look upon, or see, him whom they had formerly pierced; and, that in that day he would pour upon them the spirit of grace and supplication: therefore he was to live again after they had pierced him. 2.

I come to the Psalms, where not only his Rising again is prophesied of, but the Time thereof determined; though at first sight it appears not so: namely, in that fore-aldged passage of the sixteenth Psalm, Thou wilt not leave my soul in Hell, nor suffer thine Holy One to see corruption. All men shall rise again, but their bodies must first return to dust, and see corruption. But Messiah was to rise again before he saw corruption: If before, then the third day at farthest; for then the Body naturally begins to see corruption. This may be gathered by the story of Lazarus in the Gospel, where Jesus commanding the stone to be rolled from his Grave, * Martha his sister answered, Lord, by this time he stinketh; for he hath been dead four days. Also by that Rule given by the Masters of Physick, That those who die of the Apoplexie, suffocation of the Mother, or like sudden deaths, should not be buried till seventy two hours were past; 3.

Luke. 24. 45.

past; because within that time they might revive; and Examples are given of those who have done so. They give also a reason of it in nature: Because, say they, in that time the Humors of the Body make their revolution; the Phlegm in one day or twenty four hours, the Choler in two days or forty eight hours, the Melancholy in three days, which is seventy two hours; and this to be the reason why an Ague founded in an inflammation of Phlegm returns every day, an Ague which comes from Choler every other day, an Ague from Melancholy every third day. Now if a Body may be kept so long unburied, it is supposed it may continue so long uncorrupted; (namely where a corruption is not begun before death, as in some diseases) but longer it will not continue. When therefore it is so often inculcated in the New Testament, that our Saviour should rise again the third day; the Holy Ghost, in so speaking, respects not so much the number of days, as the fulfilling of Scripture, That Messiah's body should not see corruption, but should rise before the time wherein dead bodies begin to corrupt: and indeed our Saviour rose again within forty hours after he gave up the Ghost, and was not two full days in the grave. Therefore, if there be any other Scripture which implies Messiah should rise before his Body should see corruption, that Scripture, whatsoever it be, shews he should rise again within three days.

DISCOURSE XIV.

EXODUS 4. 25.

Then Zipporah took a sharp stone, and cut off the fore-skin of her Son, and cast it at his feet, and said, כִּי חַתָּן רָמִים אֶתָּה לִי. Sponsus sanguinum tu mihi es.

HEN; that is, when she saw the Angel of the Lord ready to kill Moses her husband in the Inne, because his son was not circumcised; she took a sharp stone, (צֶרֶךְ) that is, she took a knife, which, according to the custom then, was made of stone sharpened. This we may learn out of Joshuah 5. 2. where the Lord says to Joshuah, Make thee חֲרִיבוֹת צֶרֶם, (sharp knives, say we) according to the Hebrew, knives of stones, and circumcise again the children of Israel. The Chaldee Paraphrast hath, Make thee sharp razors: the Septuagint, μαχαίρας πετρίνας stone-knives.

Thus far all is clear; but for the rest we are to seek: First, on whom the fault lay, and what was the reason of this omission of Circumcision: then, who and what is meant, when it is said, she cast, or made the fore-skin to touch his feet: and above all, what is meant by Sponsus sanguinum.

Zipporah is commonly reputed to have been a perverse and froward woman; and Moses, the meekest man on earth, to have had that mishap in his choice which many a good man hath. The reason, because she not only hindered her child from being circumcised, out of some nicety and averfation thereof, as a cruel Ceremony: but also, when she saw there was no remedy, but she must do it to save her husband's life, yet she did it with an upbraiding indignation, telling him, that he was a bloody husband, who must have such a thing done unto his poor child. But I see no ground either for the one, or the other.

For that the Circumcision of the child was not deferred out of any averfation of hers of that Ceremony, may be gathered, First, because she was a Midianitess, and so a daughter of Abraham by Keturah, and therefore well enough acquainted with and inured to that Rite, which not only her Nation, the Midianites, but all the Nations descended of Abraham observed; as may be seen in the Ismaelites or Saracens, who learned not this Ceremony first from Mahomet, but retained it as an ancient custom of their Nation. Secondly, She had suffered already her elder son Gershom to be circumcised; wherefore then should we think she was averf from the circumcision of this? For that this child, for whom Moses was now in danger, was Eliezer his youngest son, it cannot be denied; forasmuch as it is evident that Moses at this time was the Father of two sons, which, by reason (as may seem) of this disturbance he he sent back with his wife unto her Father Jethro, as we may read in the 18. Chapter of this Book. By which it may be gathered, that the cause of this omission of Circumcision was not any averseness in Zipporah from that Rite; but rather, because they were in their journey when the child was born; and so having no convenient time or place to rest in till the wound might be healed, and thinking it might endanger the infant's life, to be tossed up and down whilst the wound was green, in so long and tedious a voyage, they resolved to defer the circumcision. And that Zipporah was delivered of this child when they had begun this journey for Egypt, may be gathered by this, because Moses, before God's sending him, hath but one child mentioned, namely Gershom: For what reason can be given, why, if Eliezer had been then born, he should not have been mentioned also? But howsoever this case of travel afterward excused the Israelites in the Wilderness, for deferring the circumcision of their children then; yet could it not excuse Moses here, in regard it was necessitas accersita, he being not forced to take his wife and children with him, (especially his wife being in that case) but might have sent her and them back presently to her Father; as upon this admonition he did. Nor was it indeed fit, when God sent him upon such a business, to carry such an encumbrance with him.

Thus have we freed Zipporah from the first charge, of being the cause of this omission out of any averseness to the Divine Ordinance. Now I come to shew likewise, that the words she spake at the time of circumcision, Sponsus sanguinum tu mihi es, were no words of upbraiding indignation to her husband, (as I supposed) but have a far other meaning.

For I believe not she spake these words to Moses, but to her Child whom she circumcised, as the Formula then used in Circumcision; namely, that as the fore-skin fell down at her Child's feet, (not Moses, or the Angel's feet) she pronounced the Verba solennia, the solemn formal words then in use, Tu mihi sponsus sanguinum.

My Reasons are, First, Because a Husband is not wont to be called sponsus after the wedding solemnity is past; nor can there any such example be shewn in Scripture: Ergo, it is not like that Zipporah, after she was the mother of two children, should say to her Husband, sponsus sanguinum tu mihi es.

Secondly, Because חתן, the word here translated sponsus, properly signifies Gener, a Son-in-law, and sponsus only by way of equivalence or coincidence, (because to be made Son-in-law to the Parents, is by being the daughter's sponsus.) My meaning is, that חתן, the word used, signifies not the relation of the Bridegroom to his Bride; but his relation to his Bride's Parents, by taking their daughter to wife. And therefore in the whole Scripture we shall never find it relatively used, or with an affix, but only in respect to the wives Father or Mother. And of the same condition is the word כלה which we often by equivalence translate a Bride, but properly signifies Nurus, a daughter-in-law. Wherefore we shall never find the Bridegroom calls the Bride his כלה, nor the Bride the Bridegroom her חתן, or that they are called so by others; but only the Husband his Father and Mother-in-laws חתן, and the Wife her Father and Mother-in-laws כלה. In a word, there is no word in the Hebrew Tongue which signifies a Bridegroom and Bride, as they stand in relation each to other, but as to each others Parents only. Whence it is remarkable that in the Canticles, when this relation comes to be expressed on the Bride's behalf, it is always done by addition of the word אחותי, that is, my sister, as אחותי כלה, the Callah or Nurus my sister, which we translate by equivalence, Soror mea sponsa, my sister, my spouse. Now if this be true, I see not how Zipporah could call Moses here her חתן, by saying to him חתן sanguinum tu mihi es: For she should have called him her Son-in-law, and not her Husband: Ergo, She spake the words to the Child, and not to Him.

Thirdly, For a farther probability hereof, the Jewish Rabbins tell us, מנהג חתן הנשים לקרא לכן כאשר ימול חתן, That it was the custom of women to call their child when he was circumcised, חתן, (the word here turned sponsus.) So Aben Ezra upon this place. Rabbi Levi, חתן in principio connubii vocatur, &c. In the beginning of marriage he is called חתן that is promised or contracted to another: Thence is the word translated and borrowed to signify the beginning of other things; as when the Infant newly circumcised is called by the women חתן, for then the child begins first to be initiated in the service of God. The like hath Rabbi David Kimchi in his Lexicon, who conjectures withal, that חתן should have some signification of causing new joy, and thence to be used both at the day of Marriage, and day of Circumcision.

Fourthly, From this custom to call a child at his circumcision חתן, with the Arabians (who are of Abraham's posterity, and still use, and anciently used, this Rite)

Exod. 4.25.

Chatan is to circumcise, Chiten Circumcision, מחתן Machtun, circumcised, as is ordinarily to be seen in their Translation of the New Testament. Whence comes this, but from the manner of calling a child חתן when he was circumcised? (Even as we, because a child in Baptism is made a Christian, use the word Christen for to Baptize, and Christened for Baptized.) And Zipporah was an Arabiss, and the Arabian tongue of near affinity with the Hebrew.

• Verse 25.

Fifthly, This exposition is agreeable to the following words *, וַיִּרְפּוּ מִמֶּנּוּ אִזּוֹ, אִמְרָהּ חַתָּן רָמִים לְמִיּוֹלוֹת, And he let him go, when she had said, Sponsus sanguinum, hoc est, circumcissionis; that is, The Angel let Moses go, as soon as those solennia verba, Sponsus sanguinum, were out of Zipporah's mouth. So the Vulgar rightly translates it; Et dimisit eum, postquam dixerat, Sponsus sanguinum, ob circumcissionem. For אִזּוֹ is here (as elsewhere) for מֵאִז, extunc, ab eo tempore, postquam, from the time, after that, not simply tunc, then, as we translate it. Namely, as the destroying Angel, Exod. 12.23. when he saw the blood of the Paschal Lamb upon the lintels and side-posts of the Israelites doors, passed by them, and destroyed them not: So the Angel here, when he saw the blood of the Circumcision upon Moses his child, let Moses go, and slew him not. In these words, if you mark it, the Holy Ghost expounds what Zipporah meant by those words, Sponsus sanguinum, that is, Sponsus circumcissionis: Et dimisit eum postquam dixit, חַתָּן רָמִים לְמִיּוֹלוֹת, Sponsus sanguinum, id est, circumcissionis. But if Sanguis here be Circumcision, and so Sponsus sanguinum be Sponsus Circumcissionis, then are not these words spoken of or to Moses, but unto the Child.

HAVING thus proved what I took in hand, That these words were not spoken by Zipporah to Moses, but as solennia verba in that Case to her Child whom she circumcised; it remains, I should now tell you how they are so construed. I say therefore, Tu mihi sponsus sanguinum, in Zipporah's meaning, is as much as sis mihi initiatus circumcissione, Be thou my Blood-son, or the like. It is well known how Tropically those words of relation of kindred, Father, Mother, sister, Son, are used in the Hebrew Tongue; and son, besides other notions, to be often the circumlocution of our vox concreta; as Filius percussione, the Son of striking, is he that is stricken, or, worthy to be beaten; Filius fœderis, the Son of the Covenant, is he that is in Covenant, or, to whom the Covenant belongs; Filius mortis, the Son of death, he that is condemned to die, or worthy of death; and the like. And why may not then חַתָּן רָמִים, Gener sanguinum, that is (as the Holy Ghost expounds it) circumcissionis, be as much as circumciscus, and Gener sanguinum tu mihi es (for so I told you חַתָּן signifies) be as much as, I pronounce thee circumcised? As if the circumcised person, by being married to Circumcision, were made the Circumciser's Son-in-law, and Circumcision's Bridegroom; as Es, or Sis, mihi in generum, desponsatus circumcissioni, Now thou art, or Be thou, my Son-in-law, being espoused to Circumcision.

Or if Blood or Circumcision note the Instrument, the Formula may be thus explicated; That the person circumcised becomes God's Son-in-law, as being wedded and joyned to his Church by the Blood of Circumcision, as with a Ring: and then the pronoun mihi must not be taken relatively to Zipporah, as before, but efficienter only in this sense, Per me factus es gener Deo per sanguinem circumcissionis, By me thou art made God's Son-in-law by the blood of Circumcision; or Feci te generum Deo, I have made thee God's Son-in-law; or, (if you like better the notion of Sponsus) I have espoused thee to the Church of God, by this rite of Circumcision; or, Thou art, or, Be thou, espoused to the Church of God, &c. Thus, as you see, may the Formula be either way explicated to one and the same sense. But the first I like the best, because of mihi the relative to Zipporah, Tu mihi in generum es, desponsatus circumcissioni, Now thou art my Son-in-law, being espoused to Circumcision.

Now lastly, to free my Interpretation from novelty, the sense I have given of these words is that which both the Septuagint and the Chaldee Paraphrast directly aim at: the Paraphrast expounding it thus, In sanguine circumcissionis istius datus est sponsus, or gener, mihi; the Septuagint, as we now read, thus, Ἐστὶ τὸ αἷμα τὸ περιτομῆς τῷ πατρὶ μου, Stetit sanguis circumcissionis filii mei: where the Text is corrupted, and I believe the Septuagint translated not Ἐστὶ, but Ἐστῶ, Sit hic sanguis circumcissionis Filii mei; a Periphrastical, but evident sense, with the change of one letter only.

From the sense of this place thus proved, I will point at two Observations, and so conclude.

The

Thus in Dent. 25. 2.
בן הכות is by the LXX.
rendred ἀξίος
παις.

The First is, That it is lawful to use some fitting form of words in the exhibition of a Sacrament, though not expressly ordained by God at the institution thereof; as appears by this Form that Zipporah used, no doubt ex more, according to the custom then, whatsoever the Form were after that time.

Exod. 4. 25.

The Second is, That the neglect of the Circumcision of a child then, and so consequently of Baptizing it now, makes not so much the Child as the Parents liable to the wrath of God: As here the Angel sought not to kill the Child, who was uncircumcised, but Moses the Father, who should have circumcised it. Both which Observations I mean to amplify no farther, but leave them to your exacter meditations; and so I conclude.

DISCOURSE XV.

EZEKIEL 20. 20.

Hallow my Sabbaths; and they shall be a sign between me and you, to acknowledge that I Jehovah am your God.

HIS Commandment, with the End thereof, the Lord bids Ezekiel tell the Elders of Israel, that he gave it to their Fathers in the Wilderness. And it is recorded in the Law; so that I might have taken it thence: But I rather chose to make these words in Ezekiel my Text, as expressed more plainly, and so a Comment to those in the Law. The place there is Exod. 31. 13. where this which my Text containeth is expressed thus, Verily my Sabbaths ye shall keep; for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations, to acknowledge that I Jehovah am your sanctifier, that is, your God; as the expression in Ezekiel tells us: For to be the Sanctifier of a People, and to be their God, is all one: whence also the Lord is so often called in Scripture the Holy One of Israel, that is, their Sanctifier and their God.

That which I intend at this time to observe from these words is, the End why God commanded this Observation of the sabbath to the Israelites; to wit, That thereby, as by a symbolum or Sign, they might testify and profess what God they worshipped. Secondly, out of this ground to shew How far, and in what manner, the like Observation binds us Christians, who are worshippers of the same God whom the Jews worshipped, though not under the same relation altogether wherein they worshipped him.

All Nations had something in their Ceremonies whereby they signified the God they worshipped. So in those of the Celestial Gods, (as they termed them,) and those which were Deified souls of men, were differing Rites, whereby the one was known from the other: Those Gods which were made of men, having Funeral rites in their services, as Cognisances that they were souls deceased; and each of them some imitation of some remarkable passage of the Legend of their lives, either of some action done by them, or some accident which befel them; as in the ceremonies of Osyris and Bacchus is obvious to any that reads them. And indeed it is a natural Decorum for servants and vassals, by some mark or cognisance to testify who is their Lord and Master. In the Revelation, the worshippers of the Beast receive his mark, and the worshippers of the Lamb carry his mark and his Father's in their Fore-heads. Hence came the first use of the Cross in Baptism, as the mark of Christ, the Deity to whom we are initiated; and the same afterwards used in all Benedictions, Prayers and Thanksgivings, in token they were done in the name and merits of Christ crucified: So that in the Primitive Church this Rite was no more but that wherewith we conclude all our Prayers and Thanksgivings, when we say, Through Jesus Christ our Lord and saviour; though afterward it came to be abused, as almost all other Rites of Christianity, to abominable Superstition.

To return therefore unto my Text. Agreeably to this Principle, and this Custom of all Religions, of all Nations, of all Vassals, the Lord Jehovah, Creator of Heaven

Ezek. 20. 20.

ven and Earth, ordained to his people this Observation of the sabbath-day, for a sign and Cognisance that he should be their God, and no other. It is for a sign, saith he, between me and you, that I Jehovah am your God. And besides in the place I quoted before, the 31. of Exod. 16, 17. are these words; The children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath, to observe the Sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual Covenant. It is a sign between me and the children of Israel for ever: for in six dayes the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested: As if he had said, It is a Sign that the Creator of heaven and earth is your God.

But for the more distinct understanding of this signification, we must know that the sabbath includes two respects of time: First, the quotum, one day of seven, or the Seventh day after six days labour; Secondly, the designation or pitching that Seventh upon the day we call saturday. In both, the sabbatical observation was a sign and profession that Jehovah, and no other, was the God of Israel: the first, according to his attribute of Creator, the second, of Deliverer of Israel out of Egypt. For by sanctifying the seventh day, after they had laboured six, they professed themselves vassals and worshippers of that only God who created the Heaven and the Earth, and having spent six days in that great work, rested the seventh day; and therefore commanded them to observe this sutable distribution of their time, as a badge and livery that their Religious service was appropriate to him alone. And this is that which the Fourth Commandment in the reason given from the Creation intendeth, and no more but this.

But seeing they might profess this acknowledgment as well by any other six dayes working, and a seventh's resting, as by those they pitched upon, there being still (what six dayes soever they had laboured, and what seventh soever they had rested) the same conformity with their Creator; let us see the reason why they pitched upon those six dayes wherein they laboured, for labouring dayes, rather than any other; and why they chose that seventh day, namely saturday, to hallow and rest in, rather than any other.

Exod. 14. 24.
27, 30.

And this was, that they might profess themselves servants of Jehovah their God in a relation and respect peculiar and proper to themselves; to wit, that they were the servants of that God which redeemed Israel out of the Land of Egypt and out of the house of bondage: and upon the morning-watch of that very day which they kept for their sabbath, he overwhelmed Pharaoh and all his Host in the Red Sea, and saved Israel that day out of the hand of the Egyptians. This I gather from the repetition of the Decalogue, Deut. 5. where that reason from the world's Creation (in the Decalogue given at Horeb) being left out, Moses inserts this other of the Redemption of Israel out of Egypt in stead thereof; namely, as the reason why those six dayes rather than any other six for work, and that seventh day rather than any other seventh for rest, were pitched upon, as Israel observed them. Remember, saith he, V. 15. thou wert a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence, through a mighty hand and a stretched-out arm: Therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath-day: Namely, not for the quotum of one day of seven, (for of that another reason was given, the example of God in the Creation) but for the designation of the day.

But whether this day were in order the seventh from the Creation or not, the Scripture is silent; for where it is called in the Commandment the seventh day, that is in respect of the six dayes of labour, and not otherwise: and therefore, whensoever it is so called, those six dayes of labour are mentioned with it. The seventh day therefore is the seventh after the six dayes of labour, nor can any more be inferred from it: the example of the Creation is brought for the quotum, one day of seven, as I have shewed, and not for the designation of any certain day for that seventh. Nevertheless, it might fall out so, by disposition of Divine Providence, that the Jews designed Seventh day was both the seventh in order from the Creation, and also the day of their deliverance out of Egypt. But the Scripture no where tells us it was so, (howsoever most men take it for granted) and therefore it may as well be not so. Certain I am, the Jews kept not that day for a Sabbath till the raining of Manna: For that which should have been their sabbath the week before, had they then kept the day which afterward they kept, was the fifteenth day of the second moneth; and which day we read, in the 16, of Exod. that they marched a wearisome march, and came at night into the wilderness of Sin, where they murmured for their poor entertainment, and wished they had died in Egypt: that night the Lord sent them Quails, the next morning it rained Manna, which was the sixteenth day, and so six dayes together; the the seventh, which was the twenty second day, it rained none, and that day they were commanded to keep for their sabbath. Now if the twenty second day of the moneth were the sabbath, the fifteenth should have been, if that day had been kept before; but the Text tells us expressely, they marcht that day: and, which is strange, the day of the moneth is never named, unless it be once, for any station but this where the Sabbath was ordained; otherwise it could not have been known that that day was ordained for a day of rest, which before was none. And why might not their day of holy rest be altered, as well as the beginning of the year was*, for a memorial of their coming out of Egypt? I can see no reason why it might not, nor find any testimony to assure me it was not.

Ezek. 20. 20.

Numb. 10.

* Exod. 12. 2.

And thus much of the Jews Sabbath, How and wherein it was a Sign whereby they professed themselves the servants of Jehovah, and no other God.

Now I come to the Second thing I propounded, to shew How far, and in what manner, the like observation binds us Christians.

II.

I say therefore, that the Christian, as well as the Jew, after six dayes spent in his own works, is to sanctifie the seventh, that he may profess himself thereby a servant of God, the Creator of Heaven and Earth, as well as the Jew. For the quorum therefore, the Jew and Christian agree; but in designation of the day they differ. For the Christian chuseth for his Holy Day that which with the Jews was the First day of the week, and calls it Dominicam the Lord's Day, that he might thereby profess himself a servant of that God who on the morning of that day vanquished Satan, the spiritual Pharaoh, and redeemed us from our Spiritual thralldom, by raising Jesus Christ our Lord from the dead, begetting us, in stead of an earthly Canaan, to an inheritance incorruptible in the Heavens. In a word, the Christian, by the day he hallowes, professes himself a Christian, that is, as S. Paul speaks, To believe on him that raised up Jesus from the dead. So that the Jew and Christian both, though they fall not upon the same day, yet make their designation of their day upon the like ground: the Jews, the memorial-day of their deliverance from the temporal Egypt and temporal Pharaoh; the Christians, the memorial-day of their deliverance from the spiritual Egypt and spiritual Pharaoh.

Rom. 4. 24.
1 Pet. 1. 4.

But might not (will you say) the Christian as well have observed the Jewish for his seventh day, as the day he doth? I answer, No; he might not: For in so doing he should seem not to acknowledge his Redemption to be already performed, but still expected. For the deliverance of Israel out of Egypt by the Ministry of Moses was intended for a Type and pledge of the spiritual deliverance which was to come by Christ: their Canaan also, to which they marched, being a Type of that Heavenly inheritance which the redeemed by Christ do look for. Since therefore the Shadow is now made void by the coming of the Substance, the Relation is changed, and God is no longer to be worshipped and believed in as a God fore-shewing and assuring by Types, but as a God who hath performed the Substance of what he promised. And this is that which S. Paul means, Colossians 2. 16, 17. when he saith, Let no man judge you [henceforth] in respect of a Feast-day, New-moon, or Sabbath-dayes: Which were a shadow of things to come, but the body is of Christ.

DISCOURSE XVI.

I COR. II. 5.

Πᾶσα γυνὴ προσευχομένη ἢ προφητεύουσα ἀκατακαλύπτῃ τῇ κεφαλῇ, καὶ αἰσχύνει τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτῆς. Every woman praying or prophefying with her head uncovered, dishonoureth her head.

HAVE chosen this of the woman, rather than that of the man going before it, for the Theme of my Discourse; First, Because I conceive the Fault, at the reformation whereof the Apostle here aimeth, in the Church of Corinth, was the women's only, not the men's. That which the Apostle speaks of a man praying or prophefying, being by way of supposition, and for illustration of the unseemliness of that guise which the women used. Secondly, Because the condition of the Sex in the words read, makes something for the better understanding of that which is spoken of both; as we shall see presently.

The Discourse I intend to make upon the Text shall consist of these two parts. First, of an Enquiry, What is here meant by Prophefying, a thing attributed to women, and therefore undoubtedly some such thing as they were capable of. Secondly, What was this Fault, for matter and manner, of the women of the Church of Corinth, which the Apostle here reproveth.

I.

To begin with the First, and which I am like to dwell longest upon: Some take Prophefying here, in the stricter sense, to be foretelling of things to come, as that which in those Primitive times both men and women did, by the pouring out of the Holy Ghost upon them; according to that of the Prophet Joel, applied by S. Peter to the sending of the Holy Ghost at the first promulgation of the Gospel, I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh, and your sons and daughters shall prophefy, and your young men shall see visions. And that such Prophetesses as these were those four Daughters of Philip the Evangelist, whereof we read Acts 21. 9.

Joel 2. 28.
Acts 2. 17.

Others take Prophefying here in a more large notion, namely, for the gift of interpreting and opening Divine mysteries contained in Holy Scripture, for the instruction and edification of the Hearers; especially, as it was then inspired and suggested in extraordinary manner by the Holy Spirit, as Prophecy was given of old; according to that of S. Peter, Prophecy came not in old time by the will of man, but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. So because many in the beginning of the Gospel were guided by a like instinct in the interpretation and application of Scripture, they were said to Prophefy. Thus the Apostle useth it in the fourteenth Chapter of this Epistle, where he discourses of spiritual Gifts, and before all prefers that of Prophecy; because he that Prophefeth (saith he) speaketh unto men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort.

2 Pet. 1. 21.

1 Cor. 14. 3.

Verse 34, 35.

But neither of these kinds of Prophecy suits with the person in my Text, which is a woman. For it is certain the Apostle speaks here of Prophefying in the Church or Congregation; but in the Church a woman might not speak, no not so much as ask a question for her better instruction, much less teach and instruct others, and those men. This the Apostle teacheth us in this very Epistle, Chapter the fourteenth, even there where he discourseth so largely of those kinds of Prophecy. Let your women (saith he) keep silence in the Churches: For it is not permitted unto them to speak, ἀλλ' ὑποτάσσεται, but to be subject. And if they will learn, let them ask their husbands at home. Again in 1 Tim. 2. 11, 12. Let the woman learn in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence.

Note here, that to speak in a Church-Assembly, by way of teaching or instructing others, is an act of superiority, which therefore a woman might not do; because her sex was to be in subjection, and so to appear before God in garb and posture which consisted therewith; that is, she might not speak to instruct men in the Church, but to God she might.

To

To avoid this difficulty, ſome would have the word προφητεύουσα, in my Text, to be taken paſſively, namely, for to hear or be preſent at Prophecy, which is an acception without example either in Scripture or any where elſe. It is true, the Congregation is ſaid to pray, when the Prieſt only ſpeaks; but that they ſhould be ſaid to preach, who are preſent only at the hearing of a Sermon, is a Trope without example. For the reaſon is not alike: In prayer the Prieſt is the mouth of the Congregation, and does what he does in their names, and they aſſent to it by ſaying Amen. But he that preaches or propheſies, is not the mouth of the Church, to ſpeak ought in their names, that ſo they might be ſaid to ſpeak too; but he is the mouth of God ſpeaking to them. It is not likely therefore that thoſe who only hear another ſpeaking or propheſying to them, ſhould be ſaid προφητεύειν to propheſy; no more, as I ſaid, than that all they ſhould be ſaid to preach, who were at the hearing of a Sermon.

What ſhall we do then? Is there any other acception of the word [Propheſying] left us, which may fit our turn? Yes, there is a Fourth acception, which, if it can be made good, will ſute our Text better (I think) than any of the former; to wit, that Propheſying here ſhould be taken for praiſing God in Hymns and Pſalms: For ſo it is fitly coupled with praying; Praying and Praiſing being the parts of the Chriſtian Liturgie. Beſides, our Apoſtle alſo in the fourteenth Chapter of this Epiſtle joyns them both together; I will pray (ſaith he) with the ſpirit, and will pray with underſtanding alſo: I will ſing with the ſpirit, and I will ſing, that is, propheſie, with underſtanding alſo. For, becauſe Prophets of old did Three things; firſt, foretel things to come; ſecondly, notifie the will of God unto the People; and thirdly, utter themſelves in Muſical wiſe, and, as I may ſo ſpeak, in a Poetical ſtrain and compoſure: hence it comes to paſs that to propheſie in Scripture ſignifies the doing of any of theſe Three things, and amongſt the reſt, to praiſe God in Verſe or Muſical compoſure.

This to be ſo as I ſay, I ſhall prove unto you out of two places of Scripture: and firſt out of the firſt of Chronicles, Chap. 25. where the word Propheſie is three ſeveral times thus uſed. I will alledge the words of the Text at large, becauſe I cannot well abbreviate them. Thus therefore it ſpeaks; Verſ. 1. *Moreover, David and the Captains of the Hoſt ſeparated to the ſervice of the ſons of Aſaph, and of Heman, and of Jeduthun, who ſhould propheſie with Harps, with Pſalteries, and with Cymbals: and the number of the men of Office, according to their ſervice, was, 2. Of the ſons of Aſaph; Zaccur, and Joſeph, and Nethaniah, and Aſarelah, the ſons of Aſaph, under the hands of Aſaph, which propheſied according to the order of the King. 3. Of Jeduthun; the ſons of Jeduthun, Gedaliah, and Zeri, and Jeſhaiah, Haſhabiah, and Mattithiah (and Schimei) ſix, under the hands of their father Jeduthun, who propheſied with a Harp, to give thanks and to praiſe the Lord. Lo here, to propheſie, and to give thanks (or confeſs) and to praiſe the Lord with ſpiritual ſongs, made all one. Nor needs ſuch a Notion ſeem ſtrange, whenas even among the Latins the word Vates ſignifieth both him that foretels things to come, and a Poet; for that the Gentiles Oracles were given like- wiſe in Verſe: And S. Paul to Titus calls the Cretian Poet, Epimenides, a Prophet; as one, ſaith he, of their own Prophets ſaid,* Κρητες αει ψευται, κακα ερετα, γαρτες αργαι.

And the Arabians (whoſe language comes the neareſt both in words and notions to the Hebrew) call a chief Poet of theirs (Princeps omnium Poetarum (ſaith Erpenius) quos unquam vidit mundus) Mutenabbi, that is, Prophetizans, or the Prophet κατ' ἐξουσιαν.

Now then if Aſaph, Jeduthun and Heman propheſied, when they praiſed God in ſuch Pſalms as are entituled unto their ſeveral Quires, and as we find them in the Pſalm-Book; (for know that all the Pſalms entituled To the ſons of Korah, belonged to the Quire of Heman who deſcended from Korah) why may not we, when we ſing the ſame Pſalms, be ſaid to propheſie likewise? namely, As he that uſeth a prayer compoſed by another, prayeth; and that according to the ſpirit of him that compoſed it: ſo he that praiſeth God with theſe ſpiritual and prophetical compoſures, may be ſaid to propheſie according to that ſpirit which ſpeaketh in them.

And that Almighty God is well pleaſed with ſuch Service as this, may appear by that one ſtory of King Jehoſaphat, in the ſecond of Chronicles, who when he march- ed forth againſt that great confederate Army of the children of Ammon, Moab, and mount Seir, the Text tells us, that having conſulted with his people, he appointed ſingers unto the Lord, that ſhould praiſe the Beauty of holineſs, as they went out before the Army; and to ſay, Praiſe the Lord, for his mercy endureth for ever; (that is, they ſhould ſing the one hundred and ſixth Pſalm, or one hundred and thirty ſixth Pſalm, which begin

1 Cor. 11. 5.

Verſ. 15, 15.

Expende etiam
2 Chron. 29.
30. & cap. 35.
15.

Tit. 1. 12.

2 Chron. 20.
21.

1 Cor. 11. 5.
Ver. 22.

in this manner, and were both of them not unfit for fuch an occafion.) And when they began to fing and praife, (faith the Text) the Lord fet ambufhments againft the children of Ammon, Moab, and Mount Seir, which were come againft Judah; and they were fmitten.

1 Sam. 10. 5.
10.

A fecond place where fuch kind of Prophefies and Prophefying as we fpeak of are mentioned, is that in the ftory of Samuel, in the ftory of Saul's election, where we read, that when he came to a certain place called The Hill of God, he met a company of Prophets coming down from the Highplace, (or Oratory there.) with a Pfalltery, and a Tabret, and a Pipe, and a Harp before them; and they prophefied, and he with them.

Their Instruments argue what kind of Prophecy this was, namely, Praifing of God with fpiritual fongs and melody: In what manner, is not fo eafie to define or fpecifie; but with an extemporary rapture, I eafily believe. And if we may conjecture by other examples, One of them fhould feem to have been the Praecentor, and to utter the Verfe or Ditty; the reft to have answered τα ἀκροτελεύτια, the extremes or laft words of the Verfe: For after this manner we are told by Philo Judæus, that the Effeni (who were of the Jewifh Nation) were wont to fing their Hymns in their Σευνεία or worshipping-places. And after the felf-fame manner, Eufebius tells us, did the Primitive Chriftians; having in all likelihood learnt it from the Jews who'e manner it was. The fame is witneffed by the Author Constitutionum Apoftolicarum, in his fecond Book and fifty feventh Chapter, where defcribing the manner of the Chriftian Service, after the reading of the Leffons of the Old Testament, (faith he) ἀντιφωνοῦντες.

Note, to fing.
i. alternis cho-
ris, and to anfwer ἀπεκτινάζοντες, are diverfe.

ἑτέρους τι τῆς τοῦ Δαβὶδ ψαλλέτω ὑμνοῦ, καὶ ὁ λαὸς τὰ ἀκροτελεύτια ὑποψαλλέτω. Let another fing the Pfalms of David, and the people fuccinere, or anfwer. τα ἀκροτελεύτια, (i. e.) ἀκρὰ τῶν εἰχών, the extremes of the verfes. Some footfteps of which Custom remain ftill with us, (though perhaps in fomewhat a different way,) when in thofe fhort Verfcles of Liturgie, being Sentences taken out of the Pfalms, the Prieft fays or fings the firft half, and the People anfwer the latter, quafi, τα ἀκροτελεύτια. As for ex-ample, in that taken out of Pfalm 51. 15. the Prieft fays, O Lord, open thou our lips; the People or Chorus answers, And our mouth fhall fhew forth thy praife. But whatfoever the ancient manner of answering was, thus much we are fure of, That the Jews in their Divine Lauds were wont to praife God after this manner, in Antiphons or Refponfories; as (to let pafs other Testimonies, and the ufe of their Synagogues to this day derived from their Anceftors) we may learn by two fpecial Arguments. One from the Seraphims finging, Eſay 6. 3. where it is faid that the Seraphims cryed one unto another, ſaying, Holy, Holy, Holy Lord God of Hofts, the whole Earth is full of his Glory. Note, They cryed one unto another. Secondly, from the ufe of the Hebrew verb עָנָה, which in the proper and native fignification thereof being to anfwer, is alfo ufed for to fing: as in Pfalm 147. 7. where we tranſlate, Sing unto the Lord with thanksgiving, ſing praife upon the Harp unto our God; in the Hebrew it is עָנָה. Anfwer unto the Lord in thanksgiving, ſing praife upon the Harp unto our God. And Eſay 27. 2. In that day ſing ye unto her, a vineyard of red wine: in the Hebrew, עָנָה-לָהּ Anfwer ye unto her. And Numbers 21. 17. in Iſrael's ſong of the Well, Spring up, O Well, ſing unto it: in the Hebrew it is, עָנָה-לָהּ Anfwer unto it. And Moſes ſpeaking of thoſe that were worshipping the golden Calf, Exodus 32. 18. It is not the voice of them that ſhout for maſtery, nor the voice of them that cry for being overcome; but the noiſe of them that ſing do I hear: In the Hebrew, קוֹל עָנָה the voice of them that anfwer one another. And ſoin other places. But to put all out of doubt, look Ezra 3. 11. where it is expreſſly ſaid, The Levites, the ſons of Aſaph, ſung together by courſe, in praifing and giving thanks unto the Lord, Becauſe he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever. Hence was derived the manner of Praying and Praifing God in the Chriftian Service, alternis, in a Mulical way, and, as it were, by way of prophefying and verſifying; even though we do but ſpeak it only; as you know the Poet ſayes, — Amant alterna Camæna. Thus I have taken occaſion fomewhat to enlarge upon this particular; that we our ſelves might the better underſtand the reaſon of what we do, and what precedents and whole example we follow therein. And thus much of Prophefying.

I COME now to the Second thing I propounded to ſpeak of; namely, What was that Fault among the Corinthians which the Apoſtle here taxeth. For the right underſtanding whereof, I ſay two things. Firſt, For the Offenders, that they were the women, and not the men: That which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh concerning men, being by way of ſuppoſition only, and to illuſtrate his Argument againſt the uncomely guiſe of the women, à pari. This appears, becauſe his Concluſion ſpeaks of women only, and nothing at all of men. Secondly, For the quality of the Fault, it was this;

That

That the women at the time of praying and prophefying were unveiled in the Church; notwithstanding it was then accounted an unseemly and immodest guise for women to appear open and bare-faced in publick. How then, will you say, should it come to pass that Christian women should so much forget themselves, as to transgress this Decorum in God's House and Service, which they observed elsewhere? I answer, From a phantastical imitation of the manner of the She-Priests and Prophetesses of the Gentiles, when they served their Idols; as their Pythia, Bacchæ or Menades, and the like; who used, when they uttered their Oracles, or celebrated rites and sacrifices to their Gods, to put themselves into a wild and extatical guise, having their faces discovered, their hair disshevelled and hanging about their ears. This these Corinthian women (conceiting themselves when they prayed or prophefied in the Church, to be acting the parts of She-Priests, uttering Oracles like the Pythia or Sibylla, or celebrating sacrifice as the Menades or Bacchæ) were so fond as to imitate (as that sex is prone to follow the fashion) and accordingly cast off their veils, and discovered their faces immodestly in the congregation, and thereby (as the Apostle speaks) dishonoured their heads, that is, were unseemly accoutred and dressed on their head.

Which he proveth by three Arguments. Partly from Nature, which having given women their Hair for a covering, taught them to be covered, as a Sign of subjection; the manner of this covering being to be measured by the custome of the Nation. Partly by an Argument à pari, from men; for whom, even themselves being Judges, it would be an uncomely thing to wear a veil, that is, a womans habit: so, by the like reason, was it as uncomely and absurd for a woman to be without a veil, that is, in the guise and dress of a man. And howsoever the Devils of the Gentiles sometimes took pleasure in uncomeliness and absurd garbs and gestures; yet the God whom they worshipped, and his holy Angels who were present at their devotions, loved a comely accomodation, agreeable to Nature and Custome, in such as worshipped him. For this cause therefore (saith he*) ought a woman to have a covering on her Head, because of the Angels. Lastly, he concludes it from the Example and Custome both of the Jewish and Christian Churches; neither of which had any such use, for their women to be unveiled in their sacred assemblies: If any man (saith he*) be contentious, (that is, will not be satisfied with these reasons) let him know that we (that is we of the Circumcision) have no such custome, nor the Churches of God. For so, with S. Ambrose, Anselme, and some of the Ancients, I take the meaning of the Apostle to be in those words.

Thus you have heard briefly, What was the Fault of these Corinthian Dames, which the Apostle here taxeth. From which we our selves may learn thus much, That God requires a decent and comely accomodation in his House in the act of his worship and service: For if in their habit and dress, surely much more in their gestures and deportment, he loves nothing that is unseemly in the one or in the other: Which I doubt some of us, at least of the younger sort, are not so observant of in this place as we should; and therefore with those whom it concerns would amend it. And thus I conclude my Discourse.

DISCOURSE XVII.

TITUS 3. 5.

Διὰ λουτρῶν παλιγγευσίας, καὶ ἀκακιστικῆς Πνεύματος ἁγίου.

By the washing of Regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost.

THESE words (as it is easie to conceive upon the first hearing) are spoken of Baptism; of which I intend not by this choice to make any full or accurate Tractation, but only to acquaint you (as I am wont) with my Thoughts concerning two Particulars therein, both of them mentioned in the words of my Text: One, from what propriety, analogy, or use of Water, the washing therewith was instituted for a Sign of new Birth, according as it is here called λουτρὸν παλιγγευσίας, the washing of regeneration: The other, What is the proper Counter-type, or thing which the Water figureth in this Sacrament.

I will begin with the last first, because the knowledge thereof must be supposed for the explication and more distinct understanding of the other. In every Sacrament, as ye well know, there is the outward Symbole or Sign, Res terrena; and the Signatum figured and represented thereby, Res celestis. In this of Baptism, the Sign or Res terrena is Washing with water. The Question is, what is the Signatum, the invisible and celestial thing, which answers thereunto. In our Catechetical explications of this Mystery, it was wont to be affirmed to be the Bloud of Christ; namely, That as Water washeth away the filth of the Body, so the Bloud of Christ cleanseth us from the guilt and pollution of Sin. And there is no question but the Bloud of Christ is the Fountain of all the grace and good communicated unto us, either in this or any other Sacrament or Myltery of the Gospel. But that this should be the ἀντίστοιχον, the Counter-part or thing figured by the Water in Baptism, I believe not; Because the Scripture, which must be our guide and direction in this case, makes it another thing, to wit, the Spirit or Holy Ghost; this to be that whereby the Soul is cleansed and renewed within, as the Body with Water is without. So saith our Saviour to Nicodemus, John 3. 5. Except a man be born of Water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God. And the Apostle, in the words I have read, parallels the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost, as Type and Counter-type: God (saith he) hath saved us (that is, brought us into the state of salvation,) by the washing of regeneration, and the renewing of the Holy Ghost; where none, I trow, will deny that he speaks of Baptism. The same was represented by that Vision at our Saviour's Baptism, of the Holy Ghost's descending upon him, as he came out of the water, in the similitude of a Dove: For I suppose that in that Baptism of his, the Mystery of all our Baptisms was visibly acted; and that God sayes to every one truly baptized, as he said to him, (in a proportionable sense) Thou art my Son, in whom I am well pleased.

Vid. Constitut.
Apost. l. 2. cap.
35. Gr. 23.

Esay 44. 3.

And how pliable the Analogy of Water is to typifie the Spirit, well appears by the figuring of the Spirit thereby in other places of Scripture. As in that of Esay, I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour my Spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine off-spring; where the latter expounds the former. Also by the discourse of our Saviour with the Samaritan woman John 4. 14. Whosoever (saith he) drinketh of the water that I shall give him, shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a Well of water springing up to everlasting life. By that also, John 7. 37. where on the last day of the great Feast Jesus stood and said, If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink: He that believeth on me, as the Scripture saith, (that is, as the Scripture is wont to express it, for otherwise there is no such place of Scripture to be found in all the Bible,) out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. But this (saith the Evangelist V. 39.) he spake of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive.

Nor did the Fathers or ancient Church, as far as I can find, suppose any other Correlative to the Element in Baptism but this; of this they speak often, of the

Bloud

Bloud of Christ they are altogether silent in their Explications of this Mystery. Many are the Allusions they seek out for the illustration thereof, and some perhaps forced; but this of the Water signifying, or having relation to, the Bloud of Christ, never comes amongst them: which were impossible, if they had not supposed some other thing figured by the Water than it, which barred them from falling to that conceit.

The like silence is to be observed in our Liturgy, where the Holy Ghost is more than once parallel'd with the Water of Baptism, washing and regeneration attributed thereunto; but no such notion of the Bloud of Christ. And that the opinion thereof is novel, may be gathered, because some Lutheran Divines make it peculiar and proper to the followers of Calvin.

Whatsoever it be, it hath no foundation in Scripture: and we must not of our own heads assign significations to Sacramental types without some warrant thence. For whereas some conceive those two expressions of παντισμοῦς or sprinkling of the bloud of Christ, and of our being washed from our sins in (or by) his bloud, do intimate some such matter; they are surely mistaken. For those expressions have reference not to the Water of Baptism in the New Testament, but to the rite and manner of sacrificing in the Old; where the Altar was wont to be sprinkled with the bloud of the sacrifices which are offered; and that which was unclean, purified with the same bloud: whence is that elegant discourse of S. Paul (Heb. 9.) comparing the Sacrifices of the Law with that of Christ upon the Crols as much the better. And that whereas in the Law, χεδὸν ἐν αἵματι πάντα καθαρίζεται, Almost all things were purified with bloud, V. 22. so much more the bloud of Christ, who offered himself without spot to God, cleanseth our consciences from dead works, V. 14. But that this washing, that is, cleansing by the bloud of Christ, should have reference to Baptism; where is that to be found? I suppose they will not alledge the water and bloud which came out of our Saviour's side, when they pierced him; for that is taken to signifie the Two Sacraments ordained by Christ, that of Bloud the Eucharist, of Water Baptism; and not both to be referred to Baptism. I adde (because perhaps some mens fancies are corrupted therewith,) that there was no such thing as sprinkling, or παντισμοῦς, used in Baptism in the Apostles times, nor many ages after them; and that therefore it is no way probable that παντισμοῦς αἵματος Χριστοῦ, Sprinkling of the Bloud of Christ, in S. Peter, should have any reference to the Laver of Baptism.

Let this then be our Conclusion; That the Bloud of Christ concurs in the Mystery of Baptism by way of efficacy and merit, but not as the thing there figured; which the Scripture tells us not to be the Bloud of Christ, but the Spirit.

AND so I come to my other Quere, From what property or use of Water, the washing therewith is a Sacrament of our new Birth: for so it is here called the washing of regeneration; and our Saviour saies to Nicodemus, Except a man be born of Water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God. For in every Sacrament there is some analogy between what is outwardly done and what is thereby signified; therefore in this. But what should it be? It is a thing of some moment, and yet in the Tractates of this Mystery but little or seldom enquired after; and therefore deserves the more consideration. I answer, This analogy between the Washing with water and Regeneration lies in that custome of washing Infants from the pollutions of the womb when they are first born. For this is the first office done unto them when they come out of the womb, if they purpose to nourish and bring them up. As therefore in our natural birth the Body is washed with water from the pollutions wherewith it comes besmeared out of the matrix; so in our second birth from above, the Soul is purified by the Spirit from the guilt and pollution of sin, to begin a new life to God-ward.

The analogy you see is apt and proper, if that be true of the custome, whereof there is no cause to make question. For the use at present, any man (I think) knows how to inform himself. For that of elder times, I can produce two pregnant and notable testimonies; one of the Jews and people of God, another of the Gentiles. The first you shall find in the sixteenth Chapter of Ezekiel, where God describes the poor and forlorn condition of Jerusalem when he first took her to himself, under the parable of an exposed Infant. As for thy nativity saith he in the day thou wast born, thy navel was not cut, neither wast thou washed in water, to supple thee; thou wast not salted at all, nor swaddled at all; no eye pitied thee, none to do any of these things unto thee, to have compassion on thee; but thou wast cast out in the open field, to the loathing of thy person, in the day that thou wast born. Here you may learn what was wont to be done unto Infants at their nativity, by that which was not done to Israel, till

Titus 3.5.

1 Pet. 1. 2.
Apoc. 1. 5.

Ezek. 16. 4, 5.

Titus 3. 5.

God himself took pity on her; cutting off the navel-string, washing, salting, swadling. Upon this place S. Hierome takes notice (but scarce any body else, for ought I can yet find) that our Saviour, when speaking of Baptism he sayes [Except a man be born of Water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God] alludes to the custome here mentioned of washing Infants at their nativity.

The other Testimony (and that most pertinent to the application we make) I find in a story related by Plutarch in his Questiones Romanae, not far from the beginning, in this manner: Among the Greeks, if one that were living were reported to be dead, and funeral obsequies performed for him; if afterward he returned alive, he was of all men abominated as a prophane and unlucky person; no man would come in his company, and (which was the highest degree of calamity) they excluded him from their Temples and the Sacrifices of their Gods. It chanced that one Aristinus being fallen into such a disaster, and not knowing which way to expiate himself therefrom, sent to the Oracle at Delphos, to Apollo, beseeching him to shew him the means whereby he might be freed and discharged thereof: Pythia gave him this answer,

Ὅσα περὶ ὧν ληχέεσι γυνὴ τίχεται τελέται,
Ταῦτα πάλιν τελέσαντα θίειν μακάρεσι θεοῖσι.
What women do, when one in childbed lies,
That do again, so maist thou sacrifice.

Aristinus rightly apprehending what the Oracle meant, offered himself to women, as one newly brought forth, to be washed again with water. From which example it grew a custome among the Greeks, when the like misfortune befel any man, after this manner to expiate them. They called them Hysteropotmi, or Postliminio nati. How well doth this besit the Mystery of Baptism! where those who were dead to God through sin are, like Hysteropotmi, regenerate and born again by Water and the Holy Ghost.

These two passages discover sufficiently the analogy of the washing with water in Baptism to Regeneration or New birth; according as the Text I have chosen for the scope of my Discourse expresseth it: namely, That washing with water is a Sign of spiritual Infancy, forasmuch as Infants are wont to be washed when they come first into the world.

Esay 7. 14, 15.

Hence the Jews, before John the Baptist came amongst them, were wont by this rite to initiate such as they made Proselytes, (to wit,) as becoming Infants again, and entring into a new life and being, which before they had not. That which here I have affirmed will be yet more evident, if we consider those other rites anciently added and used in the celebration of this Myltery, which had the self-same end we speak of, viz. to signifie spiritual Infancy. I will name them, and so conclude. As That of giving the new-baptized milk and honey, ad Infantandum, as Tertullian speaks, ad infantie significationem, so S. Hierome, because the like was used to Infants new-born; according to that in the 7. of Esay, of Immanuel's infancy, A Virgin shall conceive and bear a son: Butter and honey shall he eat, that he may know to refuse evil and chuse good. Secondly, That of salt, as is implied in that of Ezekiel, Thou wast not washed with water, nor salted with salt. Thirdly, That of putting on the white garment, to resemble swadling. All these were anciently (especially the first) used in the Sacrament of our spiritual birth, out of reference to that which was done to Infants at their Natural birth. Who then can doubt but the principal rite of washing with water (the only one ordained by our Blessed Saviour) was chosen for the same reason, to be the element of our initiation; and that those who brought in the other, did so conceive of this, and from thence derived those imitations?

DISCOURSE XVIII.

JOSHUA 24. 26.

And Joshua took a great stone, and set it up there (viz. in Sichem) under the Oak which was in the Sanctuary of the Lord: Alii, by the Sanctuary. Heb. במקדש

THE Story whereupon these Words depend is this: Joshua a little before his death assembled all the Tribes of Israel at shechem or sichem, there to make a solemn Covenant between them and the Lord, To have him alone for their God, and to serve no other Gods besides him: Which they having solemnly promised to do, saying, The Lord our God will we serve, and his voice will we obey; Joshua for a testimony and monument of this their stipulation, erects in the place a great Stone or Pillar under an Oak which was by (or, as the Hebrew hath it, in) the Sanctuary of the Lord. Of this Oak, or rather collectively Quercetum or Oaken-holt, of sichem, is twice mention made elsewhere in Scripture. For this was the place where Abram first sat down, and where the Lord appearing unto him, he erected his first Altar in the Land of Canaan, after he came out of Haran thither, as we read Gen. 12. 6. in these words, And Abram passed through the Land unto the place of Sichem, unto the Oak or Oak-grove of Moreh, where the Lord appeared unto him, saying, Unto thy seed will I give this Land: and there he builded an Altar unto the Lord who appeared unto him. And what place more fit for Abraham's posterity to renew a Covenant with their God, than that where their God first made his Covenant with Abraham their Father? Again, it was this place where, in the after-times of the Judges, one hundred and seventy years after the death of Joshua, the Sichemites made Abimelech, the base son of Jerubbaal or Gideon, King, as we read Judg. 9. 6. that all the men of Sichem gathered together, and all the house of Millo, and went and made Abimelech King, by the Oak of the Pillar which was in Sichem. The words are אֵלֶּן מִצֶּבֶן, even the Oak where Joshua (here in my Text) set up this great Stone for a witness to Israel. For the word אֵלֶּה here, and אֵלֶּן or אֵלֶּן in the other two places, signifie one and the same thing, to wit, either an Oak, Terebinth, or some other kind of Tree; as the Seventy perpetually render them.

Yea, that of Judges must of necessity so be rendred, by comparing it with this of my Text, to which it hath reference. Nevertheless our last Translation in the first of these places, Gen. 12. concerning Abram, chose rather (I know not wherefore) to follow S. Hierome, who follows not himself, and translates it a Plain, not an Oak, to wit, the Plain of Moreh? by which Translation the identity of that place with the other two, where it is translated Oak, is obscured and made the less observable. If there be any difference between the words אֵלֶּן and אֵלֶּה, it should rather be this, that אֵלֶּה should signifie a Tree, and אֵלֶּן a Grove, Holt or Wood of such Trees; as the Seventy in that place of the ninth of Judges have expressly rendred it, namely, Βαλανώτη ἢ ἑσσεως ἐν Σικίμοις, the Quercetum, Oak-toft or Holt of Sichem. And so, I believe, it ought to be understood in the other places, that is, to be taken collectively; of which we shall hear more hereafter.

But this is no great matter of difficulty; that which follows is, namely, How this Oak, or Oaken-holt, of sichem is said here in my Text to have been in (for the Hebrew is במקדש) or by, the Sanctuary of the Lord. For how comes the Sanctuary of the Lord to be at sichem, whenas the Tabernacle and the Ark of the Testimony were at shiloh, there set up by Joshua himself, and so remained (as the Scripture * else-<sup>31.</sup> where tells us) until the time of the Captivity of the Land? which without question<sup>31.</sup> was not till after Joshua was dead and buried, and is usually understood of that time<sup>1 Sam. 4.</sup> when the Ark was taken captive by the Philistines. And yet is not only here a Sanctuary mentioned at sichem, but in the beginning of the Chapter, the Elders and Officers of the Tribes are said, upon Joshua's summons, to have presented themselves <sup>Jef. 24. 1.</sup> there before the Lord; which speech useth to imply as much.

Jof. 24. 26.

Deut. 16. 21.
22.

If we say the Ark of God was taken out of its place at shiloh, and brought to sichem by the Levites, upon occasion of this general Assembly; yet the difficulty will not be removed. For first, How could the Ark alone give denomination to the place where it stood, to be called the Sanctuary of the Lord; Or secondly, If the Altar were there with it, how was the Law of God observed, which saith, Thou shalt not plant a Grove of any trees (or any tree) near unto the Altar of the Lord thy God, which thou shalt make thee; Neither shalt thou set up a Pillar, which the Lord thy God hateth: whenas here are both, an Oak or Quercetum in the Sanctuary of God, and a Pillar or Statue erected under it? Thirdly, This Sanctuary, whatsoever it was, must be something which had a constant and fixed station, and was not temporary and mutable; and that, because the Oak, under which this Pillar was erected by Joshua, is here designed and pointed out by it as by a constant and standing mark: else to what purpose had it been to sign out the Oak by it, if it were such as would be here to day and not to morrow?

For these reasons it appears that this Sanctuary could not be the Tabernacle where the Ark and Altar for Israel were, but that it was something else: And what that should be, is to be enquired.

I answer, It was a Proseucha or praying-place, which the Israelites (at least those of Ephraim, in whose lot it was) after the Countrey was subdued unto them, had erected in that very place at Sichem where God first appeared to Abram, and where he built his first Altar after he was come into the Land of Canaan; the place where God said unto him, Unto thy seed will I give this Land.

For the understanding whereof, you must take notice, that the Jews besides their Tabernacle or Temple, which was the only place for sacrifice, had (first or last) two sorts of Places for religious duties; the one called Proseucha, the other Synagogues. The difference between which was this: Proseucha was a plot of ground encompassed with a wall or some other like mound or inclosure, and open above; much like to our Courts: the use properly for Prayer, as the name Proseucha importeth: A Synagogue was edificium tectum, a covered edifice, as our Houses and Churches are, where the Law and Prophets were read and expounded, and the people instructed in divine matters; according to that Acts 15. 21. Moses of old time hath in every City them that preach him, being read in the Synagogues every Sabbath-day. From whence also you may gather, that Synagogues were within the Cities, as Proseucha's were without; which was another difference between them, as you shall hear confirmed.

That Proseucha's were such places as I have described them to be, I prove out of a notable place of Epiphanius, a Jew bred and born in Palestine; who in his Tract against the Massalian Hereticks, after he hath told us that the Massaliani built themselves τινάς οἰκας ἢ τόπους πλατείς, φόρων δ' ἰχθυ, &c. certain houses or large places, like the ancients places of market, which they called Proseucha; he goes on thus, And that the Jews of old (as also the Samaritans) had certain places without the Cities for prayer, which they call'd Proseucha's, appears out of the acts of the Apostles, where Lydia a seller of purple is said to have met with the Apostle Paul, and to have heard him preaching in that place, of which the Scripture saith, ἔδρακε τόπος προσευχῆς ἐν, it seemed to be a place of prayer, (of which I shall say more anon:) He goes on still, There is also at Sichem (saith he) which is now called Neapolis, above a mile without the City a Proseucha or place of prayer, like a Theatre, which was built in the open air, and without a roof, by the Samaritans, who affected to imitate the Jews in all things. Out of these words you may collect every part of my Description. First, That Proseucha were out of the Cities in the fields. Secondly, that they were φόρων δ' ἰχθυ, like the Ancients Fora or places of market, and ἐν ἀέρι καὶ ἀστέφῳ, under the open air, and without roof, such as the Courts of the Temple also were, whither the people came to pray; so that they were as it were a kind of disjoyned and remoter Courts unto the Temple, whither they turned themselves when they prayed in them. Thirdly, That they were ordained for places of Prayer. All these are in this passage of Epiphanius; and moreover, that such a one was in his time remaining at Sichem, the place my Text speaks of, there erected by the Samaritans, in that, as in all things else, imitators of the Jews. What better Testimony could be desired?

These Proseucha's of the Jews, both name and thing, were not unknown to the Poet Juvenal; when describing in his third Satyre in what manner proud and insolent fellows in the City of Rome used, in their drunken humours, to abuse and quarrel with those they met in the streets in the night-time, whom they took to be of mean condition, he brings them in speaking thus, Ede ubi consistas; in qua te quero Proseucha?

Where

The like he hath a few lines after of the Sa-maritani; τὴ ἰσάειν ἱερὰ θεῶν ἐκείνη οὐκ ἔστι τὸ
ἐν ἀέρι καὶ ἀστέφῳ.

Where dwell you? in what Proseucha should I seek or enquire for you? intimating that he was some poor fellow, either that dwelt in an house that could not keep out wind and weather, but was like a Jew's Proseucha, all open above; or he alludes to the banishment of the Jews out of Rome by Domitian, in his own time, and then fresh, as who had no where else to bestow themselves but in their Proseucha's out of the City; or who used to assemble in the Proseucha's. According to some of these senses is Juvenal to be understood.

Jos. 24. 26.

For that the Jews had Proseucha's about the City of Rome, appears by Philo Judæus in his Delegatione ad Caium, where commending the clemency and moderation of Augustus Cæsar, he saith, ἡπίστατο καὶ τὰς προσευχὰς ἔχοντας, καὶ συνιόντας εἰς αὐτὰς, καὶ μάλιστα ταῖς ἑβραϊαῖς ἐβδόμας, That he knew the Jews of Rome had their Proseucha's, and that they used to assemble in them, especially on the Sabbath-days; and yet never molested them, as Caius did. The same Philo mentioneth Proseucha's elsewhere; though it be not to be dissembled, that he seems to comprehend Synagogues also properly so called under that name, as being better known to the Gentiles, who called both by that name. Josephus in his Life tells us of a Proseucha at Tiberias in Galilee, in these words, Κατὰ τὴν ἑπόμεναι ἡμέραν πάντες συνάγονται εἰς τὴν Προσευχήν, On the next day, which was the Sabbath-day, the whole people were gathered together in the Proseucha; which is (saith he) μέγιστον οἶκον, πολλὸν ὄχλον ὅπως ἐξάδει δύναμις, a large edifice, fit to receive a great multitude. He afterward tells us of a publick fast and supplication appointed to be had the Monday following in the Proseucha, whither himself and others assembled ποιῆν τὰ νόμιμα, &c. to perform their devotions.

Vide de Vita
Mosis, lib. 3.

In the New Testament the name of Synagogue is frequent, but that of Proseucha seldom; whence may be conjectured that both are comprehended under that name, as in Philo both are termed Proseucha. Yet once or twice, as learned Interpreters think, we read of Proseucha's in the New Testament. As namely, Acts 16. 13. (which Epiphanius even now alledged to that purpose) where S. Luke tells us, that S. Paul being come to Philippi in Macedonia on the Sabbath-day, they went out of the City to a river side, ὃ ἐνομιζέτο προσευχὴ εἶναι, where there was taken to be a Proseucha, or where was famed to be a Proseucha; προσευχὴ ἐνομιζέτο εἶναι, will bear both. The Syriack hath, Quia ibi conspiciebatur Domus orationis; the Arabick, Locus orationis. For if προσευχὴ were taken here for Prayer it self, as if the sense were, where Prayer was used to be made, it should rather have been said, ὃ ἐνομιζέτο προσευχὴ γινέσθαι, and not εἶναι. Yet, if it were so taken, it would still argue no less than that there was here an appointed place for Prayer, and that out of the City; which is all one as to say, there was a Proseucha. So I take προσευχὴ, in the 16. verse of the same Chapter, where it is said, It came to pass, πορευομένων ἡμῶν εἰς προσευχὴν, as we went to the Proseucha; especially since we read not in the Text that S. Paul went thither to pray, but to preach, where he deemed there was an assembly that day according to custom: And we sat down. (saith S. Luke) and spake unto the women which were come together there.

A second place where a Proseucha is mentioned in the New Testament, may be that Luke 6. 12. where it is said, that our Saviour went out into a Mountain to pray, and continued all night, ἐν τῇ προσευχῇ τῷ Θεῷ, in Proseuchâ Dei, in an Oratory or Prayer-house of God; so Drusus thinks προσευχὴ is here to be taken, for a place, and the Article helps the sense: Otherwise it seems an odd and unaccustomed expression for ἐν τῇ προσευχῇ τῷ Θεῷ to mean in Prayer made unto God. And why should it not be as likely that our Saviour might sometimes pray in their Proseucha's, as teach in their Synagogues.

Thus we have seen the Testimonies for Proseucha's, their use, and difference from Synagogues. Now for Synagogues, the common opinion is, that they were not before the Captivity of Babylon; and that Necessity first taught the Jews the use of them in that Captivity, which afterward they brought with them at their return into their own Country. The reason why men so think is, I suppose, the absolute silence of them in Scripture until the time of the second Temple. But though the name were not, it is possible the thing might be. Howsoever, because it is most received, that they were not, we will let it pass for current. But as for Proseucha's, such as we have described them, none, that I know, have affirmed or determined ought of their antiquity; it may be, not taken it into consideration, either because they had no occasion to think of any such matter, or because they confounded them altogether with Synagogues.

The matter therefore being yet free and undecided, I will make bold to affirm, That if Synagogues were not, yet Proseucha's, that is, open places for Prayer, were a long long time before the Captivity, yea even from the days of Joshua the son of Nun : And though the Jews had, or were to have, but one Altar or place of Sacrifice, that namely which the Lord should chuse to place the Ark of his Covenant there, the Tabernacle or Temple ; yet had they other places for devotion and religious use.

Jof. 24. 26.

And that this Sanctuary of God, here mentioned in my Text, at Sichem ( which was a Levitical City ) was such a one, my reasons are these. First, Because it is incredible, that the Israelites having but one Temple for the whole Nation, whereat they were bound to appear, and those the males only, but thrice a year, should have no other Places of Prayer nearer their dwellings whither they might resort on Sabbath-days ; the Temple or Tabernacle being from some of them above an hundred miles distant at the least. Secondly, Because ( as I have already shewed ) this Sanctuary at Sichem could not be the Tabernacle ( which was then at Shiloh, not at Sichem ) and yet must have some stable and fixed place, because the situation of the Oak is designed by it : yea must have been still there, when this story of Joshua was written ; which is thought to have been long after his death : surely this Chapter was written after it, where both his death and burial are recorded. Wherefore to say the Ark was brought thither upon this occasion, will not serve turn. Thirdly, This place should be a Proseucha, because of that circumstance of Trees growing in it ; which, as it proves it not to have been the Tabernacle, ( where no such thing was lawful to be ) so seems it to be a Characteristical note of a Proseucha.

For though it were not lawful to have Trees near the Altar of God, that is, in or about the Court of the Tabernacle ; yet was it not so with Proseucha's, yea they seem to have been ordinarily garnished and beset with them. This may be gathered from a passage of Philo Judæus, where relating the barbarous outrage of the Gentiles at Alexandria against the Jews there dwelling, in the time of Caius, τῶν προσευχῶν, saith he, τὰς μὲν ἐν ἐνδορτόμῳ, τὰς δ' αὐτοῖς θεμελίοις κατέσκαψαν, Of some of the Proseucha's they cut down the Trees, others they demolished to the very Foundations. Mark here, ἐν ἐνδορτόμῳ τὰς Προσευχὰς, They dis-tree'd the Proseucha's.

The same is implied by that of the Poet, speaking of a Jewish Wizard or Fortune-teller, — conducta sub arbore conjux. And Juvenal in his sixth Satyr,

*Arcanum Judæa tremens mendicat in aurem,
Interpres legum Solymarum, magna sacerdos
Arboris, ac summi fida internuncia cæli.*

Interpres legum Solymarum, that is, of Moses Laws ; magna sacerdos Arboris, because of the Trees in their Proseucha's or Places of worship. The same appears also out of those Verses of his third Satyr, complaining that the once sacred Grove of Fons Capenus, where Numa used to meet with the Goddess Ageria, was then let out to the beggarly Jews for a Proseucha, and that every Tree ( such were the times ) must pay rent to the people ; by which means the Woods, which formerly had been the habitation of the Muses, were become dens for beggarly Jews to mutter their Orizons in. Hear his words :

*Hic ubi nocturnæ Numa constitnebat amice,
Nunc sacri Fontis nemus & delubra locantur
Judæis ; quorum cophinus sænumque supellex.
Omnis enim populo mercedem pendere jussa est Arbor, & ejectis mendicat sylva Camenis.*

a Pl. d. 52. 8. 1 am like a green olive-tree in the House of God. Is not
House of God here a Proseucha ?
b Which seems to be the reason why these three places are called by the LXX.
1 Sam. 7. 16.
τόπου ἡγιασμένων, sanctified places,
though in the Original there be no such thing. 'Tis worth the observing.

Whence comes this connexion between Jews and <sup>a</sup> Trees, but from their having Trees in their Proseucha's ? unto which their situation without the Cities conduced ; as also it did for privacy and retirement.

Thus you see how well the description and mark of a Proseucha agrees to this Sanctuary in my Text. And that the Jews had many other such in other places, as well as at Sichem, even in those elder times, as at <sup>b</sup> Mispeh, Bethel, and Gilgal, I make little doubt ; which we read to have been places of Assembly of the people, and the two last sanctified of old by Divine apparition, as Sichem was. Of Mispeh the Author of the first of Maccabees, chap. 3. vers. 46. if I understand him, testifieth as much, when he tells us, that whilst the holy City lay desolate, and the Sanctuary was trodden down by the tyranny of Antiochus Epiphanes ; Judas Maccabeus, and those of the people which adhered unto their God, assembled together at Maspha, to make there their supplications unto their God, ὅτι τὸ πρῶτον προσευχῆς αἱ Μάσφα τὸ πρότερον τῷ Ἰσραὴλ, because at Maspha, or Mispeh, had been a place of prayer in former time for Israel ; as much as to say, there had been a Proseucha of old. And do we not read in that story of the Benjamitical war in the Book of Judges, that the Tabernacle being at

at Shiloh, (as appears by the last Chapter) yet (in the Chapter going before) it is said, that the whole Congregation of Israel was gathered together, as one man, unto the Lord in Misphah; and that in vers. 26. is mention made of an House of God there, where the people prayed and fasted? True, it is said the Ark of the Covenant was upon that extraordinary occasion brought thither; but it being certain, out of the next Chapter, that the Tabernacle was still at Shiloh, this House of God could be none of it. Nay, perhaps, we may hence learn, that when the Ark upon occasion of such a general and extraordinary assembly was to be removed, they used to bring it to such places as these, which were as holy Courts ready prepared for it; and that then it was lawful, but not else, to sacrifice in them.

Jos. 24. 26.
Chap. 20. 1.

Of these Courts for prayer we may understand that also in Psalms 74. 7. They have cast Fire into thy Sanctuary, they have burnt up all the Conventicula Dei in the Land, namely, in the captivity by Nebuchadnezzar, who destroyed both their Temple and their Proseucha's. For we understand it of the persecution of Antiochus, as some do; it must then follow, that some Canonical Scripture was written after Malachi and the ceasing of Prophecy, that is, in the time of the Maccabees; which will not easily be granted: Besides that we read not that Antiochus cast any fire into the Temple. Now if it speak of the vastation by Nebuchadnezzar, then had the Jews before that time, not only a Sanctuary for sacrifice, but also מוֹעֲדֵי אֵל, Conventicula Dei, that is, either Proseucha's, or Synagogues; for either will serve my purpose.

But now you will say, What profit is there of this long Discourse? were it so, or were it not so, as I have endeavoured to prove, of what use is the knowledge thereof to us? Yes, to know it was so, is useful in a threefold respect.

First, for the right understanding of such places of the Old Testament, where a House of God and Assembling before the Lord are often mentioned there, where neither the Ark of the Covenant, nor the Tabernacle at such time were: as (besides the places before alledged) we read in 1 Sam. 10. 3. of Saul's meeting with three men going up to God to Bethel, and in verse 5. of a place called The Hill of God, whence a company of Prophets came from the high place there, prophesying with a Tabret, Pipe, and Harp before them: in neither of which places can we find that ever the Tabernacle was. And as for the Ark, we are sure it was all this time at Kiriath-jearim, till David solemnly fetcht it thence: and if at any time the Ark might (as now it was not) be transferred to any of them upon occasion of some general Assembly of the Nation, that so they might have opportunity to ask counsel of the Lord, and offer Sacrifice; yet were they not the ordinary station thereof.

Secondly, we may learn from hence, That to have appropriate places set apart for Prayer and Divine duties, is not a Circumstance or Rite proper to Legal worship only, but of a more common nature: Forasmuch as though Sacrifices, wherein the Legal worship (or worship of the old Covenant) consisted, were restrained to the Ark and Tabernacle, and might not be exercised where they werenot; yet were there other places for Prayer besides that; which are no more to be accounted Legal places, than bare and simple Prayer was a Legal duty.

Lastly, we may gather from this Description of Proseucha's, which were as Courts encompassed only with a wall or other like enclosure, and open above, in what manner to conceive of the accommodation of those Altars we read to have been erected by the Patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in the Book of Genesis; namely, That the ground whereon they stood, was fenced and bounded with some such enclosure, and shaded with Trees, after the manner of Proseucha's; as we may read expressly of one of them at Beerseba, That Abraham there planted a Grove, and called upon the Name of the Lord, the everlasting God. Yea, when the Tabernacle and Temple were, the Altar of God stood still in an open Court; and who can believe that the place of those Altars of the Patriarchs was not bounded and separated from common ground? And from these patterns in likelihood, after the Altar for sacrifice was restrained to one only place, was continued still the use of such open places or Courts for Prayer, garnished with Trees, as I have shewed Proseucha's to have been.

Gen. 21. 33.

DISCOURSE XIX.

I TIM. 5. 17.

Let the Elders that rule well be counted worthy of double Honour ; especially they that labour in the Word and Doctrine.

I.

HERE are two things in these words to be explicated : First, What is meant here by Elders ; Secondly, What is this double Honour due unto them. For the first, Who are meant by Elders, there is no question but the Priests or Ministers of the Gospel of Christ were contained under this name : for so the New Testament useth the word Πρεσβύτερος or Presbyter for the Ministers of the Word and Sacraments in the Gospel ; whence cometh the Saxon word Priester, and our now English word Priest. And the Ancient Fathers thought these only to be here meant, and never dreamed of any others. But in our time those who obtrude a new Discipline and Government upon the Church, altogether unknown and unheard of in the ancient, will needs have two sorts of Elders or Presbyters here understood : one of such as preach the Word and Doctrine, whom they call Pastors ; another of Lay-men, who were neither Priests nor Deacons, but joyned as Assistants to them in the exercise of Ecclesiastical Discipline, in admonitions and censures of manners, and ( in a word ) in the execution of the whole power of the Keys.

These our Church-men call Lay-Elders, and the Authors of this new device, Presbyterians. These Presbyters or Elders they will have meant in the first words, οἱ καλῶς προεστῶτες πρεσβύτεροι, Elders that rule, or govern, well, whom therefore they call Ruling Elders ; the other whom they call Pastors, to be described in the latter words, they who labour in the Word and Doctrine, whom therefore they distinguish by the name of Teaching Elders.

This is their Exposition, and this Exposition the ground and foundation of their new Discipline : but none of the Fathers which have commented upon this Place, neither Chrysostome, Hierome, Ambrose, Theodoret, Primasius, Oecumenius, or Theophylact, ( as they had no such, so ) ever thought of any such Lay-Elders to be here meant, but Priests only, which administered the Word and Sacraments.

But how ( will you say then ) is this Place to be understood, which may seem, as they alledge, to intimate two sorts of Elders, some that ruled only, others that laboured also in the Word and Doctrine ? The Divines of our Church, who had cause, when time was, to be better versed in this question than any others, have given divers Expositions of these words ; none of which give place to any such new-found Elders as these Fantors of the Presbyterian Discipline, upon the sole Authority of this one place, have set up in divers forein Churches, and would have brought into ours. I will relate Four of the chief of these Expositions, to which the rest are reducible.

I.

The First is grounded upon the use of the Participle in the Greek tongue, which is often wont to note the reason or condition of a thing, and accordingly to be resolved by a causal or conditional Conjunction. According whereunto this Text [ Οἱ καλῶς προεστῶτες πρεσβύτεροι, duplici honore digni habeantur ( or dignentur, ) μάλις αὖ οἱ κοπιῶντες ἐν λόγῳ καὶ διδασκαλίᾳ, ] is to be resolved thus ; Elders or Presbyters that rule or govern their Flocks well, let them be accounted worthy of double honour, and that chiefly in respect or because of their labour in the Word and Doctrine. And so this manner of speech will imply two duties, but not two sorts or Orders of Elders ; and that though this double Honour be due unto them for both, yet chiefly and more principally for the second, their labour in the Word and Doctrine. And this way goes S. Chrysostome and other Greek Writers.

2.

A Second Exposition is taken from the force and signification of the word κοπιῶντες, which signifies not simply πνεῖν, to labour, but to labour with much travel and toil ; for κόπος is derived from κόπτομαι, vexor, laboribus & molestiis premor, and so properly signifies molestiam & fatigationem ex labore, wearisom and painful labour. Thus the the meaning will be, Let Elders that do bene præsidere, that is, govern and instruct their Flock well, be counted worthy of double Honour; especially such of them as take more than ordinary pains in the Word and Doctrine. Or thus; Let the Elders that discharge their office well, be, &c. especially by how much the more their painfulness and travel shall exceed in preaching the Word and Doctrine, &c.

1 Tim. 5. 17.

Thus we have seen two Expositions of these words, neither of them implying two sorts or Orders of Presbyters, but only distinguishing several offices and duties of the same Order, or implying a differing merit in the discharge of them. But if they will by no means be persuaded but that two sorts of Elders are here intimated, let it be so; two other Expositions will yield them it: but so as will not be for their turn; for their Lay-Elders will be none of them.

The first is this, That the Apostle should speak here of Priests and Deacons, considering both as Members of the Ecclesiastical Consistory or Senate, which consisted of both Orders, and in that respect might well include them both under the name of Elders; it being a common notion in Scripture to call the Associates of a Court of Judicature by that name: Senatus in Latin hath its name à senibus, i. senioribus, of Elder-ship, and is as much to say as Πρεσβυτέριον. According to this supposal the Apostle's words may have this construction; Let the Elders which rule well, whether Priests or Deacons, be counted worthy of double Honour, but more especially the Priests, who, besides their government, labour also in the Word and Doctrine. Now what can be opposed against such an Exposition, I see not. For it is not improbable but the Apostle should make provision as well for the maintenance of Deacons as of Priests, seeing he omits it not of Widows in the verse going next before this. But unless he includes them under the name of Elders, he makes no provision for them at all. Besides, this is not the only place (some think) where Deacons are comprehended under the name of Elders: For the Council of Hierusalem, Acts 15. 23. where they inscribe their Synodical Epistle thus, The Apostles, and Elders, and Brethren, to the Brethren which are of the Gentiles in Antioch, &c. may seem to comprehend the Deacons under the name of Elders or Presbyters; otherwise they should omit them, which without doubt were part of the Council.

There is another Exposition which allows also of two sorts of Elders to be here implied, but makes them both Priests; namely, That Presbyters or Priests in the Apostle's time were of two sorts: One of Residentiaries and such as were affixed to certain Churches, and so did προϊστάσθαι, præsidere Gregi, govern and instruct their Flock; Another of such as had no fixed station, or charge over any certain place, but travelled up and down to preach the Gospel where it was not, or to confirm the Churches where it was already preached; such, namely, as are elsewhere known by the names of Evangelists and Doctors or Prophets: That these were those οἱ κοπιῶντες ἐν λόγῳ καὶ διδασκαλίᾳ, that labour'd in the Word and Doctrine, spoken of here by the Apostle: That both these sorts of Presbyters were to be counted worthy of double Honour, as well οἱ καλῶς προσεστώτες, those that ruled well, as those that travelled up and down to preach the Gospel, οἱ κοπιῶντες ἐν λόγῳ καὶ διδασκαλίᾳ: but especially these latter, because their pains were more than the others. This is confirmed from the use of the word κοπιᾶν, which in Scripture signifies not only corporal labour, as may appear in many places, but seems to be used by S. Paul even in this very sense we have now given; as 1 Cor. 15. 10. where he says, comparing himself with the other Apostles, περισσώτερον αὐτῶν πάντων ἐκοπίασα, I have travelled up and down more than they all, as is manifest he did.

These are the principal Expositions given by the Writers of our Church, upon this passage of Scripture which is the foundation and only place whereon they build this new Consistory, and are so much in love with it. But this being capable, as you see, of such variety of Exposition, how much too weak and insufficient it is to establish any such new Order of Elders, never heard of in the Church from the times of the Apostles until this last age, any man may judge.

But give me leave to propound a Fifth Exposition, which shall be more liberal to them than any of those yet given: For it shall yield them all they so eagerly contend for to be implied in this Text, namely, That there are not only two sorts of Elders here implied; but also that the one of them are Lay-Elders, such as have nothing to do with the administration of the Word and Sacraments. What would they have more? Yet they will be never the nearer for this concession. For the Lay-Elders we grant here to be implied, may be no Church-Officers, but the Civil Magistrates, which in Scripture-language we know are called Elders: as when we read of the Elders of Israel, of the the Elders of Judah, of the Elders of the Priests, and Elders of the People, of Priests and Elders, and the like. According to such a notion the words may be construed by way of Transitus à thesi ad hypothesein, as Rhetoricians call it, to wit, in this manner; Cum omnes Seniores, sive Reipublicæ sive Ecclesiæ, or, Cum omnes Seniores, etiam Reipublicæ (i. Civiles) qui bene præsident, duplici honore dignandi sunt, tum maxime Seniores Ecclesiastici, qui laborant in verbo & Doctrina; As all Elders, whether of the Commonwealth, or of the Church, that rule well, are to be accounted worthy of double Honour; so especially the Elders of the Church, that labour in the Word and Doctrine: or thus, Let all Elders that govern well, of what sort soever, be counted worthy of double Honour, especially the Elders of the Church which labour in the Word and Doctrine. Is not this good sense? and doth not the Apostle in the beginning of this very Chapter use the name Elder in the larger and more general sense, when he says, Rebuke not an Elder, but exhort him as a Father, and the younger men as Brethren; the Elder women as Mothers, the younger as Sisters? why may he not then do so here? And doth not S. James in his last Chapter v. 14. call the Ministers of the Word and Sacraments ῥητορες ἐκκλησίας Elders of the Church, as it were in distinction from ῥητορες ἐκ πολιτείας Elders of the Commonwealth?

1 Tim. 5. 17.

But it will be objected that this Exposition is too ambitious, because it makes the Apostle to prefer the Elders of the Church before the Elders of the Commonwealth, that is, the Priest before the Civil Magistracy, when he says, that as all Elders, whether of Church or Commonwealth, are to be accounted worthy of double Honour, so especially those Elders which labour in the Word and Doctrine; which are the Presbyters of the Church. But here know that the name of Elder is never given in Scripture to the Supreme Magistracy, but to the Subordinate only; and why the Ministers of the Word and Doctrine should not be accounted as worthy of double Honour as they, or more worthy, I know not; especially if S. Paul here says it. Sure I am, this Objection is not sufficient to refute my Interpretation.

Thus I thought good to acquaint you how many ways this place may be expounded, without importing any such new Elders, (neither Priests nor Deacons) as they would impose upon us for Church-Officers by the sole authority thereof. For though this Disciplinary controversy of our Church, stirred up by the admirers of the Genevian platform, were in the heat before our time; yet the Sect is not yet dead, but ready upon every occasion to surprise such as they find unarmed or not fore-warned.

U.

AND thus having informed our selves who they are which are here termed Elders, come we now to see also, What is that Honour which is due unto them; which was the Second thing I propounded: διπλὴν τιμὴν ἀξιόωσαν, Let them be accounted (saith the Apostle,) worthy of, or. Let them be deign'd, double Honour. That by Honour here is meant honorarium stipendium or a tribute of maintenance, is manifest by the following words which the Apostle brings to inforce it: For the Scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the Ox that treadeth out the corn; and, The labourer is worthy of his hire. Who sees not what these proofs infer? The first of them he alledges also in the same argument, 1 Cor. 9. 9. where he adds, Doth God take care for Oxen? V. 10. Or saith he it altogether for our sakes? (ours namely who preach the Gospel,) For our sakes, no doubt, this is written: that he which plougheth, should plough in hope; and he that thresheth in hope, should be partaker of his hope. The case is plain; 'Tis an Hebrew notion, To bring honour, that is, To pay tribute, or bring a present: as Apocal. 21. 26. Οἱ ἔθνη καὶ δόξα: καὶ ἡ τιμὴν αὐτῶν εἰς αὐτήν, They shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it, to wit, the new Jerusalem. And thus much of the word Honour.

But what is meant by double Honour? Some (as among the Fathers S. Ambrose) will have this double Honour to be Honour of Maintenance, and Honour of Reverence: But because the Apostle's proofs here infer only Maintenance, I take it to be meant in this place only of it. And as for double, there seems to be an allusion to the right of the First-born, to whom at first the office of Priesthood belonged in their Families, and into whose room the Levites were taken, and whom the Presbyters of the Gospel now succeed: As therefore they had a double portion among their Brethren; in like manner should the Presbyters of the Gospel be counted worthy of double Honour.

And if you will admit of that construction of these words which I gave in the Fifth place, namely, to comprehend as well the Elders of the Commonwealth as the Elders of the Church, (That both were to be accounted worthy of double Honour, but especially those of the Church who labour in the Word and Doctrine,) it will agree yet far better;

ter ; because both the one and the other succeed in the place of the First-born, to whom belonged both to be Priests and Civil Governours in their Tribes and Families. 1 Tim. 5. 17.

Yet howsoever the ancient Christians were wont in their Agapes or Love-Fests to give their Presbyters a double portion, κατὰ τὸ πρῶτον, with some reference to this Text, as appears by Tertullian : nevertheless, I think double Honour is not here to be so precisely taken, but only to note a liberal and ingenuous maintenance, such as might set them above the vulgar ; as the First-born by their double portion were preferred above the rest of their Brethren.

But I have not yet done with the word τιμὴ. For from this that the Apostle here styleth the Priest's maintenance Honour, it followeth, That the Priest's maintenance is not to be esteemed of the nature of Alms, as some would have it ; but is a Tribute of Honour, such as is given by an inferior to his Superior. For Alms and Honour the one respecting those to whom it is given, as miserable ; the other, as honourable : I mean, if Alms be taken, as we use the word, for a work of mercy. From the same ground also it follows that the Priest's maintenance is no ordinary mercenary wages, but such as is given by way of Honour, as well as of Reward. For such as is given to ordinary work-men is Reward and Wages only, and not a Testimony or Tribute of Honour : But that which is due to the Priest, as you see, is τιμὴ Honour, namely, of the same nature with that which is given to Princes and Magistrates by those which are under them. For as the Ministers of the Gospel are in the nature of Presbyters or Elders unto the people over whom they are set ; so is their maintenance from them such as is suitable to the condition and Dignity of an Elder ; that is to say, not a common Wages, which the Superior often gives to his inferior or servant, but Honorarium or τιμὴ Honour.

Nec bene conveniunt, nec in una sede morantur,

AND thus I have done with the Explication of my Text : The Application whereof shall be according to the * present Occasion which this Day requires at our hands. You see by the Discourse we have made, and the Text expounded unto you, That to give maintenance to the Ministers of the Gospel is a duty commanded by God, and therefore a work acceptable unto him ; And so consequently and à pari, to endow Seminaries and make provision for the training up of such as are destined to that Office. For so in the Old Testament, not only the Levites who ministered were partakers of the Tithes, but their Children also who were brought up thereto. Now if any people in the world have cause to bless God for Examples of such Piety, we have ; whose two Universities, for the goodly structures of Colledges, liberal and rich endowments, have no parallel in the Christian world. It is the confession of a Foreigner, a man of fame and note in his time, Unum ipsorum Collegium superat vel decem nostra, nec credo simile aliquid in toto terrarum orbe aut esse aut fuisse. As therefore they have honoured us ( for so, you see, the Apostle calleth such Bounty ) so are we bound ( next after our thankfulness to Almighty God ) to honour them. The first and chiefest part whereof is, to use their Bounty according to their pious intendments, and to approve our selves worthy to partake thereof ; than which no greater honour can be done them : But this concerneth us at all times. The next is, to remember them all with their due praise and honour ; which is our duty at this time.

* Viz. The Commemoration of the Colledge-benefactors.

DISCOURSE XX.

ACTS 2. 5.

And there were [κατοικοῦντες] sojourning at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every Nation under Heaven.

Verse 9, 10, 11.

At the Feast of Pentecost, when that wonder hapned of the Holy Ghost's descent upon the Apostles in the likeness of Fiery tongues, there were present at Jerusalem (as the story a little after my Text informs us) men of several Nations, as Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and dwellers in Mesopotamia, Judea and Cappadocia, Pontus and Asia, Phrygia and Pamphylia, Egypt and the parts of Lybia about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, (or stranger-Romans) both Jews and Profelytes, Cretes and Arabians. All these, upon the noise of this strange accident, came together unto the place, and were confounded, hearing them every man speaking in his own language wherein he was born.

Many, when they read this story, suppose the people here mentioned, the most of them, to have been Gentiles; and some Expositors cannot be excused from this mistake. For the more clear discerning whereof, and their better information who may perhaps be overtaken with the same error, I have made choice of the words before read for the argument of my present Discourse; which tells us in exprefs terms, That these Parthians, Medes and Elamites, these Mesopotamians, Cappadocians, and the rest after mentioned under those National names, were Israelites or Jews of the dispersion, Jews born in Parthia and Media, Jews of Elam or Persia, Mesopotamian Jews, and so the rest of the Countries there named; all of them of the Circumcision: For so saith my Text beginning to speak of them, There were sojourning, or (if you will) dwelling, at Jerusalem, Jews of every Nation under Heaven, that is, of every Nation where the Jews were dispersed.

This is yet further confirmed by S. Peter's speech unto them; as when having cited the words of the Prophet Joel, verse the 22. he saith unto them, Ye men of Israel, hear these words: Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you, &c. v. 23. Him being delivered by the determinate counsel and fore-knowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain. Men of Israel, and such as had slain their Messias; surely those were no Gentiles.

Verse 37.

Verse 38.

Verse 39.

Likewise when at the hearing of this they were pricked in their hearts, he saith unto them, Repent, and be Baptized every one of you in the Name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins. For the Promise is made unto you and your Children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord shall call. The Promise, saith he, is made unto you and your children; were these then any others than Jews or Israelites, of the seed of Abraham?

Verse 41.

Lastly, we find that of these Parthians, Medes and Elamites, and of the rest named with them, there were added unto the Church by this Sermon of S. Peter three thousand souls: But it is certain that Cornelius the Centurion was the first Gentile that was converted unto the Faith: Therefore these first Converts were no Gentiles. Perhaps you will say, They were Profelytes of these several Nations, and therefore called Jews. I say, Not so neither; because Profelytes are by name rehearsed among them, when it is said of those Roman advena, (verse the tenth) that they were Jews and Profelytes; Ergo, the rest were Jews by race, and not by Religion only. But what need I to have heaped together all these proofs, when my Text alone is sufficient to evince it?

I come now therefore to a more particular illustration thereof, according to what I have thus in general premised. And first, for the word κατοικοῦντες, which I translate sojourning, rather than dwelling, (for so I understand it, that they were not proper dwellers, but such as came to worlhip at Jerusalem from those far Countries at the Feasts of the Passover and Pentecost, and so had been continuing there some good time;)

time; ) 'Tis true, that in the usual Greek οἰκέω and κατοικέω signifie a durable mansion: but with the Hellenists, in whose Dialect the Scripture speaketh, they are indifferently used for a stay of a shorter or a longer time, that is, for to sojourn, as well as to dwell; as these two examples out of the Septuagint will make manifest. One in Genes. 27. 44. where Rebecca says to her younger son Jacob, Son, arise, and flee unto Laban my brother to Haran, καὶ οἰκησὺ μετ' αὐτοῦ ἡμέρας τινάς, and tarry with him a few days, until thy brother's fury turn away: οἰκεῖν is here to tarry but a few days. Another is in 1 Kings 17. 20. where Elijah cries unto the Lord, saying, O Lord my God, hast thou also brought evil upon the widow, μεθ' ἧς ἐγὼ κατοικῶ μετ' αὐτῆς, with whom I sojourn, by slaying her son? here κατοικεῖν is to sojourn only. In a word, οἰκέω and κατοικέω answer to the Hebrew verb שָׁבַד, which signifies any stay or remaining in a place.

Acts 2. 5.

Next for the persons here specified, Jews out of every Nation under Heaven; for the right understanding thereof we are to know, That before this last Dispersion of the Jews by the Romans, after their Temple and City were destroyed by Titus (which at the time of this story was not, nor many years after it,) there had been already two Captivities and great Dispersions of that Nation, besides some smaller scatterings. The first was of the Ten Tribes, by Salmanasser King of Assyria, who is said to have planted them in Halab and Habor, by the river of Gozan, and in the Cities of the Medes; and these never (I mean any considerable part of them) returned to dwell again in their own Country: of these therefore (at least chiefly) we are to understand those to have been which the story here calls Parthians, Medes and Elamites; Elamites, that is, Persians, of the Province Elymais. For in those Countries which these names comprehend were the Ten Tribes placed by the Assyrian, and there still dwelt and thereabouts in our Saviour and his Apostles time, and long after. S. Hierome upon those words Joel 3. 6. The children of Judah and the children of Jerusalem have ye sold unto the Grecians, (which he understands of the Captivity by Vespasian and Titus) tells us thus much; Filii (saith he) Juda & Jerusalem, nequaquam Israel & decem Tribuum, quæ usque hodie in Medorum urbibus & montibus habitant; The children of Judah and Jerusalem, not of Israel and the Ten Tribes, which even to this day have their habitation in the Cities and Mountains of the Medes. The second Captivity was by Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon, of the Two Tribes, Judah and Benjamin, more than a hundred years after that of the Ten. Now a good part of these at seventy years end returned again, under Cyrus and his Successors, to dwell again in their own Land, re-edified the Temple and City of Jerusalem, and re-erected their Commonwealth, which continued till our Saviour's time and a little after. Notwithstanding all those that were Captives in Babylon returned not; no, it may be not much more than the half of them; certain it is, that a great number of them stayed there still, those especially which were rich and well accommodated, having no mind to stir: whence in our Saviour's and the Apostles times there were an innumerable company of them in those parts, where they flourished with Academies and Schools, and had Doctors not inferior to those of Jerusalem it self. Yea from them proceeded the Chaldee Paraphrase, and that great Doctor and Patriarch of Rabbies, R. Hillel. Of these therefore we have reason to think were those which are here enumerated by the name of Dwellers in Mesopotamia, οἱ κατοικοῦντες τὴν Μεσοποταμίαν. Where note by the way, that οἱ κατοικοῦντες τὴν Μεσοποταμίαν are comprehended in the number of those whom my Text saith were κατοικοῦντες ἐν τῇ Ἱερουσαλὴμ. which confirms my interpretation, that κατοικοῦντες there signifies sojourning, and not dwelling, for that they could not be said to dwell in both places.

De bello jud.
l. 2. c. 16. Gr.

These two Dispersions beyond the River Euphrates, how numerous they were in our Saviour's and the Apostles times, we may gather from those words of King Agrippa, in Josephus, in that Oration he made unto the Jews before that fatal siege, dissuading them from rebelling against the Romans, their party being too much too weak to maintain themselves against that mighty Empire. Τίνας ἔν ἐπὶ τὸν πόλεμον ἐκ τῆς αἰκίας, &c. What associates (saith he) will you have from some Country not inhabited, to aid you against the Romans? For all those that at this day dwell in any part of this world that is inhabited, are Romans. Except some of you hope for help from beyond Euphrates, thinking that your Countrymen in * Adiabene will help you. He goes on, But they are more wise than to engage themselves rashly in so dangerous a war: Nor would the Parthians suffer it, if they should be sounwise as to appear in such a quarrel. Mark then, that they were under the dominion of the Parthians. Josephus himself testifieth as much in his Prologue to his De Bello Judaico; where he informs us, that that History of his he

* Adiabene is a part of Assyria.

Acts 2.5.

had first penned τῇ πατρίᾳ γλώσσῃ in his own Country language, for the use of those of his Nation in the East : which he thought good also to publish in Greek, for the better information of the Greeks and Romans concerning the true gests of that war. Ἀποπὼν ἡγήσαμην, &c. For I could not (saith he) but judge it to be very unbecoming, and no way commendable, for me to take all that pains only for the Parthians, Babylonians, and the remotest Arabians, as also those of our Nation inhabiting beyond Euphrates, together with those of Adiabene ; that these through my writings should be made acquainted with the true account of both the rise and end, as also the main occurrences and chief events, of that War : and to take no care at all to inform and undeceive the Grecians and such of the Romans as were not in the War ; who being abused by the false reports or the flatteries of others, know very little of the true Story of these affairs. Observe here the rehearsal of his Nation ; Parthians, Babylonians, Arabians, the Mesopotamian Jews or those beyond Euphrates, and those of Adiabene. Besides he tells us in the same place, That the Jews believed that all those of their Nation, even those who dwelt beyond Euphrates, would have joyn'd with them in their rebellion against the Romans.

Besides these two Captivities by Salmanassar and Nebuchadnezzar, the first whereof never returned again into their own Land, and the second but in part, there happened a third Captivity and Dispersion in the days of Ptolemaus Lagi, one of the Greek Kings reigning in Egypt ; who surprizing the City of Jerusalem, carried many of the People of the Country, of the off-spring of those who returned from Babylon, Captives into Egypt, planting them at Alexandria and the places thereabouts ; whom many others followed of their own accord, partly allured by the King's favour, who gave them equal priviledges with those of Alexandria, and partly by the fertility of the Country : so that this Colony became a very great one. These were called Hellenists, because they spake the Greek tongue, and used the Translation of the Septuagint ( which was made in Egypt ) in their Synagogues.

1 Pet. 5.13.

Of these three principal Dispersions came those lesser scatterings in all parts of the Roman Empire and elsewhere. From that of Babylon and Mesopotamia was spread that of Pontus, Gallatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia, to which S. Peter, as an Apostle of the Circumcision, writes his two Epistles : which may be gathered, because in his first Epistle he salutes them from Babylon which was their Metropolis. The Church, saith he, at Babylon, elected together with you, saluteth you ; that is, the Church of the Circumcision there. From those of Alexandria and Egypt were derived those plantations in Libya and Cyrene, and all other Hellenists whatsoever in several parts of the Roman Empire. Add to these, that many of those of Judea it self, that could not live well at home, upon some occasion or other, either alluring them or constraining them, seated themselves abroad among the Gentiles and in their Cities, being together with themselves under the same Dominion of the Romane Empire. Inasmuch that King Agrippa, in that fore-mentioned Oration of his before that last siege, dissuading them of Judea from rebelling against the Romans, in regard of the evil they might bring thereby, not upon themselves only, but upon their whole Nation wheresoever living among the Gentiles, sticks not to say, Οὐ γὰρ ἔστιν ἡ οἰκουμένης δῆμος, ὃ μὴ μοιᾶν ἡμετέραν ἔχων, For there is no people in the whole world, which hath not some part of ours dwelling amongst them. Marvel not therefore that S. Luke says in my Text, Jews of every Nation under Heaven.

James 1.1.

All this is confirmed out of the New Testament it self ; forasmuch as before the last Captivity by Titus ( which was not till almost forty years after our Saviour's Ascension ) and whilst their Commonwealth in the holy Land was yet standing, we read that almost in every City of the Gentiles, whither the Apostles came to preach the Gospel, they found Jews with their Synagogues in them. To which add that S. James directs his Epistle, To the twelve Tribes scattered abroad, or, as the Greek hath it, ταῖς δωδεκα φυλαῖς ταῖς ἐν τῇ διαπορᾷ. as I have also before noted that S. Peter doth his unto the Dispersion of Asia.

This is that I had to speak for the illustration of this Story and Text ; out of which, besides the right understanding of Scripture, whereto it conduceth, you may observe these four things.

First, The wisdom and providence of Almighty God, in so ordering the first publication of the Gospel, that the same thereof, and of that convincing Miracle which gave authority thereunto, might be carried unto all Nations by so many both ear and eye-witnesses of the same, as those Jews were.

Secondly,

Secondly, A probable reason why the Apostles were so ignorant at the first, as they seem to have been, that the Gospel was to be preached unto the Gentiles, notwithstanding our Saviour's Commission unto them, Go preach this Gospel unto all Nations. For it may be, they thought this Command might be satisfied in preaching the Gospel to those of the Circumcision only, which were of every Nation under Heaven. Acts 2.5.
2.

Thirdly, The Elogium here given to those who made conscience (as we speak) or Religion, to come unto the House of God to worship; they were ἄνδρες ἐνλαβεῖς. so saith my Text, There were sojourning in Jerusalem Jews, devout men, &c. For there appears no other respect why they are so called, but because they came so long a journey to worship God in his House or Temple at Jerusalem. 3.

Fourthly, The blessed opportunities and means for Salvation which they meet with which come thither to worship. For had those Jews staid at home, as the rest of their brethren did, they had not been partakers of such a blessing, nor witnesses of so wonderful a Miracle for confirmation of their faith, as now they were. 4.

DISCOURSE XXI.

I COR. 9. 14.

Even so hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the Gospel, should live of the Gospel; ἐκ τῆς Ἐταπτελίου ζῆν.

Y purpose in chusing this Text is not to make the maintenance of the Ministry under the Gospel the direct aim of my Discourse, but only to enquire what is meant by the last words, ἐκ τῆς Εὐαγγελίου ζῆν. Which that we may the more readily and certainly find, let us examine and consider a little of the Protasis, whereof the words I have now read are the Apodosis. Know ye not, saith the Apostle, that [οἱ τὰ ἱερὰ ἐργαζόμενοι] those that minister about holy things, [ἐκ τῆς ἱερᾶς ἐδίουσι] do eat of the holy thing, or (as we turn it) of the things of the Temple; and [οἱ τῷ θυσιαστικῷ προσεδρεύοντες] they which wait at the Altar [τῷ θυσιαστικῷ συμμερίζονται] are fellow-sharers with the Altar? [Οὕτω] So hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the Gospel, should ἐκ τῆς Εὐαγγελίου ζῆν.

Here, οἱ τὰ ἱερὰ ἐργαζόμενοι, those who were employed about holy things, are the Levites, who lived ἐκ τῆς ἱερᾶς, of the holy thing, or (if you had rather it should be a Substantive) of the Temple, that is, of that which belonged thereto, namely, of the Tithes which belonged to the Temple, but were no offering of the Altar: οἱ τῷ θυσιαστικῷ προσεδρεύοντες, they who did incumbe or assidere altari, wait at the Altar, were the Priests, whose proper office it was to offer sacrifices thereon, and had part of the same for their proper maintenance, as the * breast and right shoulder before it was burnt, and after so much as was * reserved from burning; so they did τῷ θυσιαστικῷ ἐὶς συμμερίζεσθαι, as the Apostle speaks, they were fellow-sharers with the Altar; the Altar having one part of the Offering, they another. * Levit 7.31.
* Num. 18.9.

Thus, you see, the Apostle in both sutes the maintenance with the Office. The Office of the Levites was τὰ ἱερὰ ἐργάζεσθαι, to be employed about holy things; their maintenance, τὸ ἱερὸν, the holy thing, or the revenue of the Temple; ἐκ τῆς ἱερᾶς ἐδίουσι, they eat of the ἱερὸν. The Office of the Priests, τῷ θυσιαστικῷ προσεδρεύειν, to wait at the Altar; their maintenance, τῷ θυσιαστικῷ συμμερίζεσθαι, to share with the Altar. Now then must not the Apodosis answer the Protasis? what manner of similitude, what analogy will there be else? Ergo, as καταγγέλλειν τὸ Εὐαγγέλιον to preach the Gospel is the Office of the Ministers of the Gospel, so is their maintenance noted by ἐκ τῆς Εὐαγγελίου ζῆν. Those therefore who so interpret these words, as if Εὐαγγέλιον in the last place were taken in no other sense than it was in the first, namely, to note the Function or Calling of the Ministers, (as if the sense were no other, but that the Ministers of the Gospel, whose Calling it is to preach the Gospel, should get their living by their Calling of preaching the Gospel) make S. Paul the Author of a lame and inconsequent Similitude, whose Apodosis answers not unto his Protasis. For what a Οὕτω, what an [ Even so ] or analogy would this be? The Levites lived of the Holy portion or revenue of the Temple as their ὀψώνιον or wages; Even so the Ministers of the Gospel must live by their Calling and Function. The Priests were maintained out of the share they had of the Offerings of the Altar; Even just so the Ministers of the Gospel must live by their Function of Preaching the Gospel. May not any one see that the Apodosis answers not the Protasis? For that speaks of the wages, this of the service for which the wages is due. Well therefore, as in the Protasis the wages was compared with the work, so must it be in the Apodosis too; and consequently ἐκ τῆς Εὐαγγελίου ζῆν must here express the wages, as τὸ Εὐαγγέλιον καταγγέλλειν doth the work.

1 Cor. 9. 14.

But now here is the Quere; If ἐκ τῆς Εὐαγγελίου ζῆν note not the Function, but the wages and maintenance due to the Evangelick Ministers; in what notion then is Εὐαγγέλιον here to be taken, and how to be expounded? * Oecumenius would have Εὐαγγέλιον in this last place to signify οἱ τῷ Εὐαγγελίῳ πεπιστευκότες, the believers of the Gospel Εὐαγγελιστῆς; and the meaning to be, That those who preach the Gospel should be maintained by those which believe the Gospel. But this would make our Apodosis to answer the Protasis little better than the former: For that speaks of the wages and maintenance of the Levites and Priests, not a word of the maintainers. * Be- lides, to speak properly, 'tis not true, that the people maintain the Ministers; they are not their Ministers, but God's; and he maintains them out of his own revenue, and not at mens charges. Quis militat suis stipendiis? (saith our Apostle, at his entrance upon this Argument) Who goeth to war at his own charges? Now I ask, Cujus stipendiis militat, qui militat? nonne Imperatoris? At whose charges is it that any one goes to war? is it not at the Sovereign's charges? To which purpose note also by the way, that it is not said here (as we translate it) So hath God ordained, that those which preach the Gospel, should live of the Gospel: but, So hath God appointed, or given order to those that preach the Gospel, that they should live of the Gospel; that is, Non dicit, Dominum mandasse aliis ut eos alerent, sed mandasse ipsis ut ex Evangelio viverent. But to return again to the interpretation of Εὐαγγέλιον, which others therefore had rather take here for τὰ τῆς Εὐαγγελίου, for that which in the Gospel is consecrate to God: viz. As the Priests and * Levites had their maintenance out of that which was offered unto God in the Law; so God had ordained that the Ministers of the Gospel should be maintained of that which is consecrate to him in the Gospel. And this sense is straight and good.

But what need we flie to a Trope, when the natural sense of the word Εὐαγγέλιον will serve our turn, yea do it much better? For howsoever in the New Testament it most commonly signifies good tidings; yet, in other Greek Writers, the more usual signification in the singular number is δῶρον ὑπὲρ ἀγαθῆς ἀγγελίας, premium quod datur latum afferenti nuncium, the gift or reward wont to be given for good tidings. Homer (Odyss. 14.) brings in Ulysses in a poor traveller's disguise, stipulating with his servant Eumæus, what his reward should be for the good news he promised to tell him of his Master's life and speedy return: Εὐαγγέλιον δέ μοι ἔστω, let this be my Εὐαγγέλιον or Reward, saith he; χλαῖνα, χιτῶν, καὶ ἑμάτα καλά, A cloak, a coat, and other good garments. To whom Eumæus answers, ὦ γέρον, ἔτ' ἂρ' ἐγὼν εὐαγγέλιον τόδε τίσω,

οὐτ' Ὀδυσσεύς ἐτιοῖκον ἔλευσται.

Neither am I able to give such an Εὐαγγέλιον, or Reward, neither will Ulysses ever come home again. Plutarch (in his De gloria Atheniensium) relates, that the Lacedaemonians to one that brought them tidings of the victory at Mantineæ, having been no actor, but a spectator only, sent, for an εὐαγγέλιον, only a dish of meat from one of their common suppers called Phiditia: the words are, εὐαγγέλιον ἐκ Φειδίτις κρέας ἀπέ- σπειλαν. The same Author (within three or four lines after) affirms that Historians, who relate and describe Battels and Victories in such perspicuous styles, deserve an εὐαγγέλιον or Reward from those who first read them: And (in his Demetrius) he tells, that when one Aristodemus brought news to King Antigonus of a notable victory his party had obtained against Ptolemæus Lagi, but put the King first in great perplexity, by discovering nothing, either by word or countenance, what his tidings were, till he came to the King's presence, then saying, Χαῖρε, βασιλεῦ Ἀντίγονε, &c. Hail King Antigonus, we have overcome King Ptolemy at Sea: The King answered, Welcome, Aristodemus; but because thou hast kept us so long in suspense and perplexity, thou shalt suffer some punishment for the pain thou hast put us to; βραδίων γὰρ ἀπολήψῃ τὸ εὐαγγέλίου, for it shall be the later before thou receive the reward of thy good tidings. Which is a sufficient testimony both of the use of the word, and the custom. Cicero (in one of his Epistles Ad Atticum) useth the plural number: O suaves Epistolas tuas, (saith he) uno tempore mihi datas, duas! quibus εὐαγγέλια quæ reddam, nescio; deberi quidem planè fateor: O thy sweet and most acceptable Letters, received both at the same time! for the which I know not what grateful returns to make, though I am very sensible they deserve the best.

1 Cor. 9. 14.
Ad Attic. l. 2.
ep. 12.

Besides, in the plural number [εὐαγγέλια] it signifies a sacrifice for good tidings. Hence Plutarch (in his Phocion) hath εὐαγγέλια θύειν. Isocrates (in Areopagitico) ἐπὶ τοσαύταις πράξεσιν εὐαγγέλια μὴ δὲ τῆς τεθύκαμυς, ob tot successus his quidem sacrificavimus εὐαγγέλια. Xenophon (in his Hellanica) ἔθυσ τὰ εὐαγγέλια. To conclude; it is apparent by these examples, that Εὐαγγέλιον signifies a gift or tribute due for good tidings; whether as an offering to the Gods, the Authors; or as a reward to men, the messengers and bringers.

Now the most Blessed and Happy tidings that ever came to the ears of the sons of men, is Salvation by Jesus Christ our Lord; whereof his Priests and Ministers are the daily messengers. Is there not then an Εὐαγγέλιον due for this? And is not this that our Apostle meaneth when he saies here, Even so the Lord hath ordained, that they who preach the Gospel, should ἐκ τῇ εὐαγγελίῳ ζῆν. So that which was required only for acknowledgment of the Divine Dominion under the bondage of the Law, is now turned into the nature of an εὐαγγέλιον in the liberty of the Gospel; I mean, that which we offer now unto God for the maintenance of the Evangelical Ministry, and other uses of his service. The sense is most fit and agreeable, and makes the Apostle's expression (if so understood) passing elegant.

But you will say, What probability is there the Apostle should use Εὐαγγέλιον in this notion? For though prophane Authors do so, yet the Scripture's meaning, both here and elsewhere, is to be measured by its own Dialect. Have therefore the Hebrew, the Chaldee, the Septuagint any such notion as this? I answer, Yes, all three of them. For in the Hebrew, בְּשֵׂרָה, the only word for good tidings, signifies also Premium boni nuncii, a reward for good tidings. Yea, being not above five times found in the old Testament, Schindler will have it thrice taken in that signification; and twice will be easily yielded him. Likewise in the Chaldee, כְּסוּרָא and כְּשׁוּרְתָא signify as well the one as the other, both nuncium and nuncii premium, good tidings and a reward for good tidings. As for the Seventy, the word εὐαγγέλιον is but thrice found with them, and once so apparently in this signification, as leaves no place for contradiction. It is 2 Sam. 4. 10. where they have, ὃ ἔδει με δῶναι εὐαγγέλια, Cui oportuit me dedisse Evangelia. They are the words of King David, when Rechab and Baanah brought Ishbosheth's head unto him; When one told me, saith he, Behold, Saul is dead, (thinking he had brought good tidings) I took hold of him, and slew him in Ziklag, when I should have given a reward for his tidings. The Hebrew word rendered here Reward for good tidings is בְּשֵׂרָה: the Seventy, as I said before, have δῶνα εὐαγγέλια: the Vulgar, or S. Hierome, mercedem pro nuncio, a reward for the tidings; the Chaldee Paraphrast, מַתְנָת כְּסוּרְתָא a gift, or reward, for his tidings.

Thus you see, this notion was familiar to all the Languages that S. Paul was brought up in. Why should it then be improbable he should use it when he had occasion? And no marvel it is to be found no oftner; for, unless it be in this Chapter, in the whole New Testament the thing it self (Reward for good tidings) is never mentioned, intimated, or alluded to. How then could the word be used? But in this Chapter, methinks, I hear it used a second time, (ver. 23.) I will only propound it to your considerations, and so conclude.

The matter stands thus. S. Paul, though he received no Reward at the hands of the Corinthians for his pains in making known the glad tidings of Salvation unto them, but did it gratis to them-ward; yet he looked for an εὐαγγέλιον from God, stored up in the heavens for all his faithful messengers, and to be received at the great Day: In expectation whereof, he not only thus preached the Gospel to them freely, but endured all things, and made himself a servant to all; τὸ δὲ ποιῶ (saith he) διὰ τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, ἵνα συλχοινωσὶς αὐτῷ γένησθαι, This I do for the εὐαγγέλιον, that I might be partaker thereof with you. What εὐαγγέλιον should it be that S. Paul here aimed to be partaker of? Surely, it should seem εὐαγγέλιον here notes some Premium or Reward, even by that which immediately follows, Know ye not that they which run in a race, run all; but one receiveth the Brabeum or Prize? So run that ye may obtain. I leave it to your better meditations, and so conclude.

DISCOURSE XXII.

PSAL. 112. 6.

The Righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance.

Prov. 25. 11.

* This Discourse was delivered in the Chappel, at the Commemoration of the College-Benefactors, Anno 1634.

Word fitly spoken, saith Solomon, is like Apples of Gold in pictures of silver; that is, graceful and comely: so is a Text of Scripture fitly chosen, and rightly applied to the occasion. Such an one as I take it, is this I have now read, not chosen by me, but appointed by order to be used at these times of * Commemoration. I shall need no other Preface to commend it to your attention: Let us therefore see what is the Sense and meaning thereof.

The Righteous, that is, The Bountiful; shall be in everlasting remembrance; In remembrance with God, In remembrance with men: With God, in the world to come, and in this world; With men, How, and in what manner? These are the several Heads I shall speak of; and first of the First, the Subject, The Righteous, or the Bountiful, man.

For Righteousness in a special sense, in the Hebrew and the rest of the Oriental Tongues of kin to it, signifies Beneficence or Bounty, both the Virtue and the Work; and therefore by the Hellenists or Septuagint is it translated Ελεημοσύνη, the word so frequent in the New Testament for that we call Alms. 'Tis a known place, Dan. 4. according both to the Septuagint and Vulgar Latin, *Peccata tua * Eleemosynis redime, & iniquitates tuas misericordiis pauperum*: Where in the Original for Eleemosyna Alms is צדקה. Righteousness, as we in our English render it, Break off thy sins by Righteousness, and thine iniquity by shewing mercy to the poor. This notion of Righteousness is to be found thrice together in the 12. of Tobit. Ver. 8. Prayer (saith old Tobit there to his Son) is good with Fasting, and with Alms, and Righteousness: A little with Righteousness is better than much with unrighteousness: It is better to give Alms, than to lay up gold. 9. For Alms doth deliver from death, and shall purge away all sin, Those that exercise Alms and Righteousness, shall be filled with life. Here in the Greek copy Ελεημοσύνη and Δικαιοσύνη Alms and Righteousness are exegetically put the one to expound the other, but in the Hebrew there is but one word צדקה for them both, that being the word in that language for Ελεημοσύνη. Hence in the Syriack Translation of the New Testament Ελεημοσύνη is rendred by צדקה Justitia, And so in the Arabick. Hence Mat. 6. 1. for Take heed that you do not your alms before men, (as we read it) the vulgar Latin and some Greek Copies have, Attendite ne justitiam vestram faciatis coram hominibus, Take heed that you do not your righteousness before men; δικαιοσύνη for ελεημοσύνη. Namely as the word Charity with us, though in the larger sense it signifies our whole duty both to God and man, is restrained to signify our Liberality to the poor; so is the word Righteousness in the Oriental Languages.

If Righteousness therefore signifie Beneficence and Bounty, then is the Righteous according to this notion the Bountiful man, or as we speak the Charitable. And that it is so taken in my Text, both the general scope of the Psalm, and the connexion with the words before and after, is proof sufficient. For before goes this, * A good man sheweth favour and lendeth: he will guide his affairs with judgment: surely he shall not be moved for ever. (Then come the words of my Text) The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance. After it follows this, He hath dispersed, he hath given to the poor; his righteousness remaineth for ever: which S. Paul alledgeth 2 Cor. 9. 9. to promote their collection for the poor Saints at Jerusalem.

For illustration of this and our further information, it will not be amiss, I hope, to commend to your observation some other places of Scripture where the word Righteous is thus taken: as namely Psal. 37. 21. The wicked borroweth, and payeth not again: but the righteous sheweth mercy, and giveth. Again, Verf. 25. 26. I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging their bread. He is ever merciful, and lendeth, and his seed is blessed. Here the * Verf. 5.

Righteous

Verf. 9.

Righteous is the merciful and bountiful; to whom namely this blessing, That his seed shall not want, is proper and peculiar. The same use is, Prov. 10. 2. Treasures of wickedness profit nothing, but Righteousness delivereth from death. The same is repeated again Chap. 11. 4. Riches profit not in the day of wrath; but Righteousness delivereth from death. Where Righteousness to be taken for Alms is apparent out of Tobit 12. 9. where it is so applied and rendred, namely, Alms doth deliver from death. I could add also another place, Prov. 21. 26. but these shall be sufficient.

Psal. 112. 6.

Hence appears their error who conceive of the nature of Alms as of an arbitrary thing, which they may do if they will, or not do, without sin; as that which carries no obligation with it, but is left freely to every mans discretion. And this makes some contend so much to have the Priest's maintenance granted to be Eleemosynary, that so they might be at liberty to give something or nothing as they listed. But if that were so, yet if Alms be צדקה Righteousness in the Hebrew tongue, and the language which our Saviour spake; if our Saviour call'd them Righteousness, when he mentioned them; who dare affirm then that Righteousness implies no obligation, or that a man may leave it undone without sin?

THUS much of the Subject, The Righteous: Now I come to the Predicate, shall be in everlasting remembrance. In remembrance, I said, with God and men: With God, in the life to come, and this life. Let us see for the first, The world to come.

It is certain that at the day of Judgment we shall receive our doom according to our works of Charity and Mercy; and that of all the works that a Christian man hath done, these alone have that peculiar privilege to be then brought in express remembrance before God: Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the Foundation of the World. For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me, &c. Forasmuch as ye have done thus unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me, Matt. 25. 34, &c. What doth my Text say? The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance: God remembers our good deeds, when he rewards them, (as he doth our prayers, when he hears them.) If to remember then be to reward, an everlasting reward is an everlasting remembrance. 'Tis remarkable, that this privilege which the works of Bounty and Mercy shall have at the day of Judgment was not unknown to the Jews themselves: for so we read in the Chaldee Paraphrast upon Ecclesiastes 9. 7. עתיד מרי עלמא ונר. It shall come to pass at the day of Judgment, that the Lord of the world shall say thus openly to every righteous man then before him, Go and eat with gladness thy bread which is laid up for thee, as a reward for the bread which thou gavest to the poor and needy when they were an hungred; and drink with gladness of heart the wine which is kept for thee in the garden of Eden (or Paradise) as a reward for the wine thou gavest the poor and needy when they were athirst: for behold thy good works have found acceptance before the Lord.

The reason of this Prolation of the works of Mercy at that great day is, because all we can expect at the hands of our Heavenly Father is merely of his Mercy and Bounty: we can hope for nothing but mercy, without mercy we are undone; according to that of Nehemiah in his last* Chap. *Remember me, O Lord, concerning this, * Ver. 22. and spare me according to the greatness of thy mercy.* Now in those that are to be partakers of Mercy, the Divine wisdom requires this congruity, that they be such as have been ready to shew mercy unto others; judging them altogether unworthy of mercy at his hands, who have afforded no mercy to their brethren: For so the Scripture tells us, that they shall have judgment without mercy, that have shewn no mercy. The tenour of our Petition for forgiveness of sins, in the Lord's Prayer, runs with this condition, As we forgive them that trespass against us. And who can read without trembling the Parable of the unmerciful servant in the Gospel, to whom his Lord revoked the Debt he meant to have forgiven him, because he shewed no mercy to his fellow-servant, who owed him a far lesser Debt? Shouldst thou not, saith he, Ver. 23. have shewed compassion to thy fellow-servant, as I shewed compassion unto thee? This rule of congruity, I say, is the reason why at the day of our great account we shall be judged according to our works of mercy and bounty. To do as we would be done to, hath place not only between man and man, but between God and men.

James 2. 13.

Matt. 18.

Nor is this I speak of manifest by the Form of our last Sentence only, but by other Scriptures beside: what else means that of our Saviour, Luke 16. 9. Make unto your selves friends of the unrighteous Mammon, (that is, of these slippery and deceitful riches, for μαμωνᾶ ἀδικίας in the Scripture's Dialect is μαμωνᾶ θεού,) that when

Psal. 112.6.

Psal. 112.6.

when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting Tabernacles? Or what means that of S. Paul 1 Tim. 6. 17, 18. Charge them that be rich in this world, — that they trust not in uncertain riches, but in the living God, — That they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; Laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life? Laying up a good foundation, &c. in the Greek, Ἀποθησαυρίζοντας ἑαυτοῖς θεμελίον καλὸν εἰς τὸ μέλλον, ἵνα ὑπὸ ἀλάστονται τῇ αἰωνίῳ ζωῇ. Here it is observable, that works of Beneficence are said to be θεμελίον or the Foundation of the reward we shall receive in the life to come. If any but S. Paul had said so, we should have gone near to have excepted against it for an error. Works the Foundation of eternal life? No, that shall not need: but the Foundation of that blessed Sentence we shall receive at the last day for them; and that is evident by the form thereof, which we have alledged. Whatsoever is meant, a great privilege sure is hereby implied, that these works have above others. Where give me leave to tell you what a * late sacred Critick hath observed concerning the word θεμελίον in this place of Timothy; namely, That the signification thereof there is not Vulgar, but Hellenistical, agreeable to the use of the Hebrew word קִרְיָהּ whereto it answers; for קִרְיָהּ signifies, as it doth, Radix vel fundamentum, the root or foundation. But besides this in the Rabbinical Dialect it is used for Tabula contractus, a Bill of contract, a Bond or Obligation whereby such as lend are secured to receive their loan again. That therefore θεμελίον, which answers קִרְיָהּ in the first sense, doth answer the same likewise in the second; and accordingly the Apostle's meaning to be, That those who exercise these works of Beneficence, do provide themselves as it were of a Bill or Bond, upon which they may at that day sue and plead for the award of eternal life, Vi pacti, but not Vi meriti.

* Sam. Petit.
1 Tim. 6. 17.
See a like passage in Tobit 4. 9, or 10.
Θέμα γὰρ ἀγαθὸν θεμελίον τῆς αἰωνίου ζωῆς, &c.
the Hebrew copy set forth by P. Fagius hath מקריהם depositum.

1 Tim. 6. 19.

In the same sense he takes θεμελίον, 2 Tim. 2. 19. The foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his: And, Let every one that nameth (or calleth upon) the name of Christ, depart from iniquity. The mentioning of a Seal here, implies a Bill of contract; for Bills of contract had their Seals appendant to them; each side whereof had his Motto, the one suiting with the one party contrahent, the other with the other. That to this S. Paul alludes; God's θεμελίον, saith he, standeth sure, (that is, God's Bill of contract, or his Chirographum,) having a Seal according to the manner: the one side whereof carrieth this Motto, The Lord knoweth them that are his; the other this, Let every one that calleth upon the name of Christ, depart from iniquity.

1 Tim. 4. 8.

YOU have heard how God remembreth the Righteous, or Charitable man, in the world to come. He remembreth him also in this: For that which the Apostle saith of Godliness, that it hath the promise of this life, as well as of that to come, is most properly and peculiarly true of this Righteousness of Bounty and Mercy: other Righteousness indeed must not look for its reward till hereafter, but this is wont to be rewarded now.

Acts 10. 4. 5.

For spiritual blessings we have the example of Cornelius, who for his Alms-deeds found favour with God, to have S. Peter sent unto him to instruct him in the saving knowledge of Christ: Thy Prayers and thine Alms-deeds, said the Angel, are come up in remembrance before God, Now therefore send to Joppa, and inquire for one Simon, Peter, &c.

For Temporal blessings hear what David sayes Psal. 37. 25, 26. (quoted before) I was young, saith he, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging their bread. He is ever merciful, and lendeth; therefore his seed is blessed. This blessing is the merciful and charitable man's peculiar, that his children shall not want, who was liberal and open-handed to supply the want of others. But think not that God remembers the charitable man with a Temporal blessing in his posterity only; for he remembers him also in his own person. Thus the same David, Psal. 41. 1. Blessed is he that considereth the poor, the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble. 2. The Lord will preserve him and keep him alive, and he shall be blessed upon the earth; and thou wilt not deliver him unto the will of his enemies. 3. The Lord will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing, &c. And doth not his Son King Solomon say the same? Prov. 19. 17. He that hath pity upon the poor, lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given, he will pay him again. But this perhaps some will think may be applied to the reward in the life to come: If it be, it would much illustrate that of S. Paul's θεμελίον I now speak of, But Prov. 28. 27. is a place not capable of this exception; He that giveth to the poor, shall not lack: but he that hideth his eyes, shall have many a curse.

THUS

THUS we have seen how the Righteous man is in remembrance with God: Now let us see how the same is and ought to be in remembrance with men. And it may be inferred from the former: For why should not we remember those whom God doth? The practice in the Church of God hath been accordingly.

Psal. 112. 6.

The Jews, when they make mention of any of their deceased Worthies, are wont to do it with this Encomium, זכרנו לברכה, Let his memory be blessed: Otherwise with this, זכרנו לחיי עולם הבא, Be his memory blessed to eternity. And of their Rabbies in general, when they mention them, they say, רבותינו זכרנו לברכה, Our Rabbies, whose memory be blessed. Which encomiastical Scheme is taken from that of Solomon, Prov. 10. 7. זכר צדיק לברכה. The memory of the righteous is blessed: which therefore they sometimes use unaltered to the purpose aforesaid; sometimes with addition, as, Let the memory of the just be blessed to eternity; sometimes, Let the memory of the just and holy be with blessing. These formulae are frequent in their writings. Nor hath this commemorative Scheme been taken up by them (as some perhaps may suppose) since the coming of our Saviour, in the time of their dispersion; but was used long before, as may appear Ecclus. 45. 1. where Moses is thus remembered, Moses beloved of God and men, τὸ μνημόσυνον αὐτοῦ εἰς εὐλογίας, whose memorial is blessed. And in the next Chapter like mention is made of the Judges of Israel; namely, The Judges every one by name, whose heart went not a whoring, nor departed from the Lord. τὸ μνημόσυνον αὐτῶν εἰς εὐλογίας, Let their memory be in benediction. So of Judas Maccabeus, 1 Mac. 3. 7. He grieved many Kings, and made Jacob glad with his acts; τὸ αἰῶν τὸ μνημόσυνον αὐτοῦ εἰς εὐλογίας, His memorial is, or Let his memorial be, blessed for ever. Eccl. 45. 11.

But what is the meaning of this Formula? what is it for the memory of the righteous to be εἰς εὐλογίαν, or with blessing? The Septuagint's Translation of that Prov. 10. 7. (whence, as I told you, this Form of honourable remembrance is taken) will soon resolve us: for they, instead of the words זכר צדיק לברכה. The memory of the just is with blessing, have Μνήμη δικαίων μετ' ἐγκωμίων, The memory of the just is with praises. To make mention therefore of the righteous by way of benediction, is to praise them. For the word בָּרַךְ, or εὐλογεῖν, to bless, in Scripture hath a treble notion: First, to speak well of; secondly, to speak well for; thirdly, to do well unto. To speak well of, is to praise. So we are said to bless God, when we praise and glorify him: Psal. 103. 1, 22. & 104. 1, 35. Benedic, anima mea, Domino; Bless the Lord, O my Soul; that is, praise him. * Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; that is, praised. Bless the Lord, all ye Nations; that is, praise him: and so every where in the Psalms. The second notion, To speak well for, is to pray for. So the Priest is said to bless the people, when he prays for them: * The Lord bless you, and save you; The Lord make his holy countenance to shine upon you, and be merciful unto you. So other blessings of the like kind are prayers for those over whom they are pronounced. The third notion of blessing is To do good unto, to bestow some gift or good upon. Thus God is said to have blessed man, when he said unto him, Increase and multiply, replenish the earth and subdue it; that is, He endowed him with these gifts. In thy seed shall all the Nations of the world be blessed; that is, receive some great benefit. So God is said to have blessed the Patriarchs, when he made them to thrive, and gave them wealth and riches; according to that of Solomon, Prov. 10. 22. The blessing of the Lord maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it; namely, such as is wont to accompany riches gotten without God's blessing. Hence בָּרַכָה or Εὐλογία, Blessing, in Scripture signifies a gift or present, bounty or beneficence: The Present of cattle which Jacob provided for his brother Esau, when he went to meet him, is all that Story through call'd his Blessing: The Presents which David sent of his prey to the Elders of Judah, 1 Sam. 30. 26. are there call'd Blessings. And in the New Testament, 2 Cor. 9. the collection at Corinth for the poor Saints at Jerusalem is thrice called Εὐλογία, their blessing, which we translate Bounty. I thought good to be a little diligent in this explication, that we might be the better able to discern what kind of remembrance of righteous men deceased is commended unto us in that Scripture, The memory of the righteous is with blessing: whence not the Jew only, as you have heard, but the Christian also seem to have derived their practice in that particular, which I am now to shew. Gen. 1. 28. Gen. 22. 19. Gen. 32. 13. &c. & 33. 11. Ver. 5, 6.

For the Christian in this point hath been no whit short of the Jew, but exceeded him rather, not in the later only, but in those better and Primitive times: witness those anniversary remembrances of the Martyrs and Saints deceased; the appointing of Festival days for their memorial; the custome to assemble at their Sepulchres, Pfal. 112.6.

* Vid. Buxtorf.
Synag. Jud. c. 35
Schickard Jus
Reg. p. 170.

chres, to make Panegyrick orations in their honour; and above all, that ancient and so long-continued custome without known beginning, to commemorate at the Holy Table, when the Eucharist was celebrated, the Patriarchs, Prophets, Apostles, Evangelists, Martyrs, and Confessors: All which tended to this, That the memory of the righteous might be with blessing. In the extent of which Blessing the Christian went beyond the Jew: For of that threefold notion of Blessing I now speak of, first, to speak well of or to praise; secondly, to speak well for or to pray for; thirdly, to do well unto; the Jews seem not anciently (but only of *late) to have used any but the first in their Commemorations, namely, that of praise: But the Christian added the second of prayer and good wishes for the Saints departed, namely, for their publick acquital and consummation at the day of Resurrection: which, had it continued in the first and original meaning, could not be disliked; but having proved in time the Mother of many Superstitions and Errours, and kindled the fire of Purgatory, it was thought fit by the Authors of our Reformation to be disused, and the blessing of the Dead to be confined to that of praise only, namely, of praising and commending them, by recounting their worthy deeds; and then secondly, of praising God for them. And this is the duty we are now assembled to perform to our blessed Founders and Benefactors.

DISCOURSE XXIII.

S. MATTHEW 10. 41.

He that receiveth a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, shall receive a Prophet's reward.

OUR Blessed Saviour giving his Apostles their mission to preach the Gospel, unfurnished with outward things, and forewarning them what harsh and unkind usage they and their successors were like to find amongst men; for the better encouragement of such as should entertain and minister unto them, he pronounceth, That whosoever received them, received him; and he that received him, received him that sent him. Whereby it appeareth how honourable an office it was to afford them entertainment; and such as the noblest need not be ashamed of. But because the hope of reward is the most forcible spur to all undertakings, he addeth that too in the words of my Text; He that receiveth, saith he, a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, shall receive a Prophet's reward; that is, He that receiveth a Prophet, not for any respect, but quatenus talis, because he is a Prophet, shall have a Prophet's reward.

Which words contain in them evidently these two Propositions.

First, That there is some special and eminent degree of Reward due unto a Prophet above other men.

Secondly, That he that shall entertain a Prophet, and do any good office unto him under that name, that is, for his office sake, shall be partaker of that Reward. Of these Two I intend to treat, beginning with the First, the more general.

That there shall be differing degrees of Reward in the life to come, is evident by sundry places of Scripture. As first, from that so often iterated passage, wherein God is said to reward every man according to his works: Which not to be understood only of the differing quality of our works, good and evil, which God rewards accordingly, the one with everlasting bliss, the other with eternal fire, (as some here except,) but also of the differing works of just men compared together, is manifest by that 1 Cor. 3. 8. where the Apostle comparing his own and Apollos work together, saying, He had planted, and Apollos watered, addes, that both should receive their reward, according to their work; that is, as their work differed, so should their reward do.

In

In the second place the same is represented by that Parable, Luke 19. of the Ten servants who received of their Lord, being to go into a far Countrey, ten pounds to trade with till his return. At what time he that had increased his pound to ten pounds, was made ruler over ten Cities; he that had gained but five pounds, over five Cities; and so the rest, according as they had improved the stock given them.

A third place is that 1 Cor. 15. 41, 42. There is one glory of the Sun, and another of the Moon, and another glory of the Stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the Resurrection of the dead. Here is the full stop, and not the words to be referred to that which follows, to wit, that the body is sown in corruption, but is raised again in incorruption, as some would have them. For the Apostle speaks here of the difference of things heavenly and glorious, (One star, saith he, differs from another star in glory;) and not of the difference between glorious and inglorious, corruptible and incorruptible: For this belongs to his other similitude; There are celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial; but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another.

A fourth place is that 2 Cor. 9. 6. where the Apostle speaking of the reward of beneficence, avoucheth, that he which soweth sparingly, shall reap sparingly; and he that soweth bountifully, shall reap bountifully.

Fifthly, That speech of our Saviour to the twelve, Matt. 19. 27. imports as much; *Behold, we (saith Peter) have forsaken all, and followed thee: Ti ἀρα ἔσται ἡμῖν; what shall we have therefore? V. 28. Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed me; * ἐν τῇ παλιγγενεσίᾳ in the Regeneration or Resurrection, when the Son of man shall sit upon the throne of his Glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve Tribes of Israel.* S. Luke relates it upon another occasion; whereby it appears our Saviour uttered it more than once, Ye (saith he to the Twelve) are they which have continued with me in my temptations; therefore I appoint you a Kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me; That ye may eat and drink at my Table in my Kingdom, and sit on Thrones, judging the twelve Tribes of Israel, Luke 22. 28, &c. Whatsoever is meant by the Reward intimated in this expression, for the quality thereof, 'tis plain there is some peculiar and more eminent degree of glory here promised the Apostles, which shall not be common to others with them. First, Because it is the reward of their proper and peculiar service unto Christ, as the Text shews. Secondly, Because these twelve Thrones in regard of their number can befit no more but these twelve. Thirdly, Supposing the twelve Tribes of Israel here mentioned to be likewise in a condition of bliss and happiness, it must needs be that those who sit upon twelve Thrones to judge, that is, to govern them, must be in a higher degree of dignitie than those over whom they shall be set. Whatsoever therefore the meaning of the Reward be, thus much may be gathered from the description thereof, That there shall be differing degrees of glory in the Kingdom of Christ to come.

To conclude; it hath been the ancient and constant Tradition of the Church, testified by the unanimous consent of all the Fathers, and was never questioned by any, until that Peter Martyr in this last age first began to doubt thereof, and others since more boldly adventured to contradict it.

Their main Reasons or Objections are these two. First, That the Reward to come depends not upon the virtue or dignity of our works, but only upon the merit and satisfaction of Christ: But his merits and satisfaction are uniform and the same to all: Ergo, the Reward also which is to be given by virtue thereof shall be so. This Objection proceeds from that scrupulosity which many of ours have to admit of any relation or connexion between our Works and the Reward to come; whence also is that, that they should not be done intuitu mercedis, with an eye or respect to the Reward. Which is an Assertion repugnant to the tenour of the Scripture, where the Holy Ghost is wont to ground his Exhortations upon the hope and promise of Reward. Now what an unreasonable conceit is it to think that where wages is promised for the encouragement of the labourer, the labourer should be bound to work without having any eye or respect to his wages? But to the Objection I answer thus; That it is true, the Merits and satisfaction of Christ are the Foundation of our Reward, namely, that alone which makes our works capable thereof, without which they were not: nevertheless it is true also that our Works are the Subject of Reward; and the same Merit of Christ makes differing works capable of a different Reward.

Their other Objection hath a little more likelihood, and seems therefore somewhat more

Mat. 10. 41.

* ἐν τῇ παλιγγενεσίᾳ in the Regeneration, is not to be joynted to the foregoing words, but relates to what follows in the verse.

Mat. 10. 41.

more difficult to answer. It is taken from the Parable, Matt. 20. where the Kingdom of Heaven is compared to a Vineyard, the Master whereof went out in the morning to hire labourers, and agreed with them for a penny a day: Three hours after, or at the third hour, he went out and hired more; and so again at the sixth and ninth hours; yea at the eleventh, but an hour before Sun went down, he did likewise. And when they came all to receive their wages, he gave the last hired as much as he had agreed for with the first, to wit, every one a penny, neither more nor less. Whence it seems to follow, that the reward to come, signified by this penny, shall not be proportioned according to the difference of works, but be one and the same to all.

I answer; First, The Parable proves no more but this, That the sooner or later coming of men into the Vineyard of the Church, (for all were not to be called at one time, nor in one age) shall not make their reward greater or lesser: not that the reward shall not be different according to the diversity of our works. Secondly, I add, That this Parable hath respect to the Churches of the Jews and Gentiles not called, nor to be called, at the same time. For the Jews were hired into the Vineyard betimes in the morning, the Gentiles not till the day was far spent; yet shall they by the goodness of their heavenly Master receive the same reward of eternal life which was promised to the Jew, with whom the Covenant was first made, and who bare the heat of the day, whilst the other stood idle. Besides, in the new Vineyard of the Gospel the turn is changed; for into it (because the Jews would not) the Gentiles have first been hired, though at several hours; the Jew being not to come in until the eleventh hour; yet when Christ comes to give us wages, shall receive his penny, that is, eternal life, as well as we.

This to be the genuine scope of the Parable, may be gathered by that which is presently subjoyned by our Saviour as it were to be the Key thereof: So the last (saith he) shall be first, and the first last; πολλοὶ γὰρ εἰσι κλητοὶ, ὀλίγοι δὲ ἐκλεκτοί, for many are called, but few are chosen: which I understand thus; The last, that is, the Gentiles who came in last, shall be the first partakers of Christ's Kingdom: The Jews, who were first in Covenant, and had wrought so long before us in God's Vineyard, shall be last in the Covenant of Christ, and not converted till the fulness of the Gentiles be come in: For though many of them were invited at the first coming of Christ, yet few or none obeyed, and so the Nation became not of his peculium, but stands yet rejected; πολλοὶ γὰρ κλητοὶ, ὀλίγοι δὲ ἐκλεκτοί. To the like purpose is the same speech used by our Saviour, Luk. 13. 29, 30. They shall come, saith he, from the East, and from the West, and from the North, and from the South, and shall sit down in the Kingdom of God. And behold, there are last which shall be first, and there are first which shall be last. What means this? Out of S. Matthew 8. 11, 12. where the same passage is related, we shall hear it expounded; for there the words run thus, Many shall come from the East and West, and shall sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, in the Kingdom of heaven: But the children of the Kingdom (that is, the whole generation of Israel, who received not the Gospel at the Preaching of Christ and his Apostles, and all the generations since, who have continued in unbelief) shall be cast out into outer darkness.

Psal. 95. 7.
Heb. 3. 7.

And here by the way, because the Parable useth the notion of a Day to signify a time of many Ages, it will not be altogether unreasonable to note, that the Metaphor may appear the easier, how that the Scripture often elsewhere calls the whole time of man's pilgrimage in this world by the name of a Day. As, To day if you will hear his voice, harden not your hearts. And Heb. 3. 13. Exhort one another καθ' ἡμέραν, every day, whilst it is called to Day. Where we see Day to include every day. And I believe we are thus to understand Day in the Lord's Prayer, in that Petition, Give us this day our daily Bread; that is, the whole time we live in this world. For in stead of S. Matthew's This Day, spoken after the Hebrew notion, S. Luke hath in the same Petition, καθ' ἡμέραν, that is, every day. Therefore S. Matthew's This day must comprehend S. Luke's Every day, if the sense of the Petition in both of them be the same, as I believe it is. Nay more than this; The world to come, even seculum eternitatis, or Eternity it self, is likewise termed a Day by S. Peter, 2 Ep. 3. 18. our Lord, saith he, and saviour Jesus Christ, to whom be glory both now καὶ εἰς ἡμέραν αἰῶνος, and to the Day of Eternity. A long Day indeed. But this obiter.

Thus having cleared my Proposition in these, or in general [That there shall be differing degrees of glory in the Reward to come;] it remains that I make it good in the hypothesis concerning a Prophet; namely, That to them who instruct others in the ways and will of God, which is the Office of a Prophet, there belongs a preeminence of Reward

Reward above and besides that which is common to all Saints. This preeminence of glory the School-men term Aureola, that is, an Additament of felicity to that essential glory in the Vision of God, which they term Aurea. This Aureola or Coronet to be added to the Crown of glory, they ascribe to three sorts of persons; to Virgins, to Martyrs, and to Doctors or Prophets. The two first are out of my scope: The third, of Prophets, let us see how it is proved out of Scripture. Mat. 10. 41.

First therefore, it is apparent from my Text, He that receiveth a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, shall receive a Prophet's reward: Ergo, there is some special or peculiar Reward belonging to a Prophet, and that to an eminent one; otherwise our Saviour's speech will have no enforcement in it, as he that considers thereof may easily see.

The second is, Dan. 12. 3. where the Angel prophesying of the Resurrection to be at the end of Time, and saying, That many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt; he addes, And those that be wise (that is, have learned the true wisdom, which consists in the fear of God) shall shine as the brightness of the Firmament: but those that turn many unto righteousness, (that is, the Teachers and Instructors,) as the Stars for ever and ever. Here the difference between those that teach and are taught is as much as between the light of the Stars and the brightness of the Firmament. Some will have the whole sentence to speak of the eminency of glory laid up for Prophets, translating הַמְשֻׁכִּים in the first place not docti or intelligentes, but Doctores: The Teachers shall shine as the brightness of the Firmament; and they that turn many unto righteousness, as the Stars for ever and ever. But I have followed that interpretation which our Translators thought most likely.

Thirdly, To this eminency of glory the Angel seems also to have respect in the end of the Chapter, when he says, But go thy way, Daniel, till the end be; for thou shalt rest, and stand up in thy lot at the end of days: in sorte tua in thy lot, that is, in sorte Prophetarum in the lot of Prophets. And this perhaps may be that too which our Saviour intends, Matt. 5. 19. Qui fecerit & docuerit, magnus vocabitur (i. erit) in regno cælorum, Whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called (that is, shall be) great in the kingdom of heaven.

The reason of all this is, Because those who teach and convert others to righteousness, have an interest and a kind of title to all the good works which they shall do: How then can their Reward but be great and eminent, when not only their own works, but the works of their converts and disciples, shall be brought into their account? A matter, if we consider it, of no small encouragement and comfort unto us, whom God hath placed in this condition to be Teachers and Instructors of others, if so be we bury not our Talent in a Napkin, but employ it for the advantage of our Lord and Master. For it is not the Habit or Faculty, but the Work, which shall reap the Reward we speak of. Happy are we therefore, if we neglect not this opportunity of bliss which God hath given us.

AND thus having done with the First Proposition I undertook, I come unto the Second; which is, That he that receiveth a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, shall be partaker of a Prophet's reward. He that receives, that is, doth any good office, or deserves well of a Prophet. For this to be the meaning, may appear by that which follows; He that receiveth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man, shall receive a righteous man's reward: where righteous is to be taken by way of eminency, for one of eminent sanctity, such as among the Jews had therefore the surname of Just or Righteous; as Simeon the Just, James the Just, and other the like. Then in the next words the expression is varied; Whosoever shall give to drink to one of these little ones a cup of cold water in the name of a disciple, shall not lose his reward: whence I say we may gather what good office the word receiving (before used) intimated to us, namely, to relieve, maintain, support, and the like. He therefore that thus receives a Prophet, shall be partaker, saith our Saviour, of a Prophet's reward; that is, have an eminent reward, or of the quality of a Prophet's though himself be none. Verf. 42.

The reason is, Because he that supports and enables a Prophet for his duty, hath an interest in his work, and consequently in the reward that belongs unto it. This appears by the contrary, because he that maintains and abetts those who commit an evil act, makes himself guilty of their sin, and so of the punishment due to the same, An example whereof we have in that of the Benjamites in the Book of Judges; who by abetting the men of Gibeah, who committed that foul abomination with the Levite's Wife, made themselves guilty of their sin, and brought that hideous judgment, which at first was deserved only by a few sons of Belial, upon the Heads of the whole Tribe : It is a known story. Now it is par ratio for a man to entitle himself to anothers good works, as to his ill.

Mat. 10. 41.

BUT there is a modification in the Text, whereupon this Reward we speak of depends, otherwise not to be looked for : And that is, This good office must be done in nomine Prophetæ, in the name of a Prophet, not for any other respect, than as he is, and because he is, a Prophet : He that receiveth a Prophet in nomine Prophetæ, shall receive a Prophet's reward. Not he that receives him only for some personal or by-respect, because he is his kinsman, friend, or friend's ally ; or ( which is the ground of the most respect the Prophet gets among the most now-a-days,) because he is one of their one side and faction : but setting all such respects aside, eo nomine quia Prophetæ, with mere respect to their office and calling, or because they are ( as Valens and Valentinian in their Rescript *apud * Theodoretum* calls them ) διοικηται τῷ μεγάλῳ βασιλεῖ, Stewards of the great King of all the earth. I may tell you that this is no ordinary thing now-a-days. We may perhaps find some that can be content to make much of the Prophet for some personal qualities of his, or perhaps because he hath abilities above ordinary, or because it may be he is like to further the way they wish good luck to, or that they may gain repute among some sort of men, or for other respects of like nature : But are there many which regard them in the name of a Prophet ? How then comes it to pass that their courtesies are so appropriate to the Persons of some, that they shew no respect or esteem to the Calling in others ?

* Ecclef. hist. l. 4. c. 7.

Whence comes that Unchristian, or indeed Atheistical, language, A base Priest, A pauntry Priest ? It would never have grieved me if any other had served me thus ; but to be served thus by a base Priest, who can endure it ? Tell me in good earnest, is this to honour a Priest or a Prophet in the name of a Prophet ? or not rather point-blank unto it, to reproach and dishonour him under that reverend Name, that is, to despise and reproach the Calling it self ? For can a man honour that condition, the name whereof he thinks to be a reproach ? Is any man wont to say, A base Lord, a base Knight, A base Gentleman, A base Christian ? No : And why ? because he accounts them all Terms and Titles of Honour. Judge then by this, what account they make of God's Ambre, who turn the very Title of their Calling into a name of reproach ; and what reward by proportion they are like to merit at Christ's hands : Not a Prophet's, I am sure ; and whether a Christian's or not, themselves may judge. 'Tis often, and too often, true indeed, that for our Persons we are unworthy of any better respect ; but even then it best appears whether a man hath respect to the Calling eo nomine, when there is nothing in the Person to move him to it.

But there is another sort of men, who honour not a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, yet behind ; namely, such as rob and spoil them of their livelihood and daily bread ; and not only themselves give nothing to enable and encourage them the better to perform their Ministry, but take from them several ways that which the Piety and Bounty of their Ancestors hath allotted them : yea to many, if not to the most, no gain or theft is more sweet than that which is gotten out of the Priest's portion. But whether it will prove so at that day when the just God shall reward every man according to his works, may be greatly feared. I told you a little before that the reason why he that receives a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, shall be partaker of a Prophet's reward, is, because he that supports and enables a Prophet to do his duty, hath thereby an interest in his work, and consequently in the reward due to the same. If this be so, what can they look for, who by subtracting their daily bread from them, hinder and disable them from the free and chearful performance of their duty, by distracting them with the cares of providing for their bodily life ? Do they not derive upon themselves the guilt of whatsoever impediment comes hereby to the propagation of the Kingdom of Christ ? Shall not the loss of every Soul that perisheth for want of due provision to maintain an able Minister, be cast to their account at the last day ? I will speak nothing now of the burthen which sacrilege it self, as being a robbing of God, carries with it, ( See Prov. 20. 25. It is a snare to the man who devoureth that which is holy, and after vows to make enquiry ; ) nor of those dreadful execrations which the Donors of such things were wont antiquo ritu to lay upon the heads of all such as should divert them to prophane uses, wherewith these men willingly and wilfully involve themselves. I will, I say, not speak of these ; for the present * occasion calls upon me, and tells me that I came not hither to curse, but to bless. I therefore change my note, and say, Blessed be God our heavenly Father, who notwithstanding the malignity of many, hath not left us destitute, but but in every Age hath raised up some to shew kindness unto the Prophets, and to provide entertainment for them. Witness the goodly Buildings and liberal Endowments in our two Seminaries for the entertainment and education of Prophets and Prophets Sons: more particularly the Bounty of those Worthies the fruits of whose Piety and Devotion we our selves here assembled by the Divine goodness enjoy; Whose blessed names therefore, as their deserts challenge at our hands, let us remember with all due honour and thankfulness.

* The Commemoration of College Benefactors, Anno 1635.

After the mention of the Names of the College-Benefactors, this follows in the Authors own Manuscript.

These are the Names of our pious Founders and Benefactors: let their Memory be blessed for ever. And when Christ our Lord shall come in his Glory to render every one according to his works, and * their Bones flourish again out of Eccles. 42. 13. their graves; let all the benefit and enlargement, which shall redound to the Church of God by this their Bounty, be cast in their account; and we with them, and they with us hear that comfortable voice, Come ye blessed, inherit the Kingdom prepared from the foundation of the World.

DISCOURSE XXIV.

S. LUKE 2. 13, 14

And suddenly there was with the Angel a multitude of the heavenly Host, praising God, and saying, Glory be to God on high, (or, in the highest) and on earth Peace, Good-will towards men.

AT the Creation of the world, when God laid the foundations of the Earth, and stretched out his line thereon, the Stars of the morning (as God himself describes it, Job 38. 7.) sang together, and all the Sons of God (that is, the holy Angels) shouted for joy. This in my Text is so like it, that a man would think some new Creation were in hand; nor were it much wide of truth to affirm it: for if ever there were a day wherein the Almighty Power, the incomparable Wisdom, the wonderful Goodness of God again the second time appeared, as it did at the World's Creation; it was this day whereof S. Luke our Evangelist now treateth; when the Son of God took upon him our Flesh, and was born of a Virgin, to repair the breach between God and man, and make all things new. The news of which Restauration was no sooner heard and made known to the Shepherds by an Angel sent from heaven, but suddenly the heavenly Host descended from their celestial mansions, and sung this Carol of joy, Glory be to God on high, and welcome Peace on earth, Good-will towards men. A Song renowned both for the singularity of the first example, (for until this time, unless it were once in a Prophetical Vision, we shall not find a Song of Angels heard by men in all the Scripture) and from the custom of the Church, who afterward took it up in her Liturgy, and hath continued the singing thereof ever since the dayes of the Apostles unto these of ours. Yet perhaps it is not so commonly understood as usually said or chaunted; and therefore will be worth our labour to enquire into the meaning thereof, and hear such Instructions as may be learned therefrom. Which that we may the better do, I will consider, First, the Singers or Chaunters, The heavenly Host: Secondly, the Carol or Hymn it self, Gloria in excelsis Deo, Glory be to God on high, &c.

For the First; The Heavenly Host here spoken of is an Army of holy Angels: For the Host of heaven in the language of Scripture is twofold, visible or Invisible. The visible Host are the Stars, which stand in their array like an Army. Deut. 4. 19. Lest thou lift up thine eyes (saith the Lord there) unto heaven; and when thou seest the Sun, Moon, and Stars, even all the Host of heaven, shouldst be driven to worship and serve them. The Invisible Host are the Angels, the heavenly Guard; according to that of Micaiah, 1 King. 22, 19. I saw the Lord sitting upon his Throne, and all the Host of Heaven standing by him, on his right hand and on his left. So. Psal. 103. 20, 21. Bless the Lord ye his Angels, that excel in strength, that do his Commandments. Bless the Lord, all ye his Hosts, ye ministers of his that do his pleasure: Where the latter words do but vary that which is expressed in the former. From this it is that the Lord Jehovah, the true and only God, is so often styled the Lord or God of Sabaoth or of Hosts, that is, King both of Stars and Angels: according to that Nehem. 9. 6. Thou art God alone; — and the Host of Heaven worshippeth thee. By which Title he is distinguished from the Gods of the Nations, who were some of the Host, to wit, of the Stars, or Angels, but none of them The Lord of Hosts himself. For the same reason, and with the same meaning and sense, in the Books written after the Captivity, he is styled Deus cæli, the God of Heaven, as in Ezra, Nehemiah, Daniel; in which Books, together with the last of Chronicles, the title of Deus Sabaoth The Lord of Hosts is not to be found, but the title of Deus Cæli The God of Heaven only, which, as may seem, was taken up for some reason in stead of the other.

Luk. 2. 13, 14

Phil. 2. 10.

I.

1st ep. ver. 6.

But to return to what we have in hand: It was the Angelical Host, as ye hear, who sang this Song of joy and praise unto the most High God. And wherefore? For any restitution or addition of Happiness to themselves? No; but for Peace on Earth, and Good-will towards men. He that was now born, took not upon him the Nature of Angels, but of men: He came not into the world to save Angels, but for the salvation of men: Nor was the state of Angels to receive advancement in glory by his coming, but the state of men; and that too in such a sort as might seem to impeach the dignity, and dim the lustre of those excellent creatures; when an inferiour Nature, the nature of Man, was now to be advanced unto a throne of Divine majesty, and to become Head and King not only of men, but of the Heavenly Host it self. O ye blessed Angels! what did these tidings concern you, That ruined mankind should be restored again and taken into favour; whereas those of your own Host, which fell likewise, remained still in that gulf of perdition whereinto their sin had plunged them, without hope of mercy or like promise of Deliverance? What did it add to your eminent Dignity, the most excellent of the creatures of God, that the Nature of man should be advanced above yours? that at the Name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in Heaven, and things in Earth, and things under the Earth?

The Observation therefore which this Act of the Angels first presents unto us is, The ingenuous goodness and sweet disposition of those immaculate and blessed Spirits, in whose bosomes Envy, the Image of the Devil and deadly poison, of Charity, hath no place at all: For if any inclination to this cankered passion had been in these Heavenly creatures, never such an occasion was offered (nor greater could be) to stir it up as now. But Heaven admits of no such passion, nor could such a torment consist with the blissful condition of those who dwell therein. It is the smoke of that bottomless pit, a native of Hell, the character and cognisance of those Apostate Angels, which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, and are reserved for chains of everlasting darkness. These indeed grieve no less at the Happiness of men than the Angels joy: witness the name of their Prince Satan, which signifies the Fiend or malicious one, who out of Envy overthrew mankind in the beginning; out of Envy he and all his fellow-fiends are so restless and indefatigable to 'duce him still.

The Use of this Observation will not be far to seek, if we remember the admonition our Saviour hath given us in the Prayer left unto his Church, which is, To make the Angels the pattern of our imitation in doing the will of our heavenly Father; for so he teacheth us to pray, Let thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven; that is, Grant us O Lord, to do thy will here, as thy holy Angels do it there. And as we should imitate them in all things else, so in this affection towards the happiness and prosperity of others. And good reason, I think, if we mean at all to approve our selves unto God our Father, why we should endeavour rather to be like unto them than unto Devils. But in nothing can we be more like them than in this, to rejoyce for the good, and not repine at the happiness, of our Brethren: Hoc enim Angelicum est, This is the Character of the Angelical nature, and consequently of those who one day day shall have fellowship with them. To be contrarily affected Diabolicum est, is the badge and brand of Devils and Fiends; and those who wear their Livery, reason good they should keep them company. Let every one therefore examine his own heart concerning this point, that he may learn upon what terms he stands with God, and what he may promise himself of the Blessedness to come. Do the gifts of God, doth his favour or blessing vouchsafed to thy brother, when thou seest or hearest of them, torment and crucifie thy soul? dost thou make their happiness thy misery? is thine eye evil to thy Brother because God's is good: If this be so, without doubt thy heart is not right before God; nor doth his Spirit, but the spirit of Devils and Fiends, reign therein. But if the contrary appear in any reasonable measure, with a desire to encrease it; (for we must not look to attain the perfection of Angels in this life, but in some measure and degree only) if thou canst rejoyce at anothers good, though it concerns not thy self; the Spirit of God rests upon thee: For emulations and envyings (saith the Apostle Gal. 5. 19. &c.) are the fruits of the flesh; but the fruits of the Spirit are χαρις ὁμις and ἀγαθωσύνη, kindness and goodness: So he calls the opposite vertues to those former vices.

Luk. 2. 13, 14

But as any good that betides our brother ought to affect us with some degree of joy, and not with grief and envy; so chiefly and most of all his spiritual good, and that which concerns his Salvation, ought so to do. This was that the holy Angels praised God for in my Text, on the behalf of men, That unto them a Saviour was born, who should save them from their sins, and reconcile them unto God. Which sweet disposition of those good and blessed spirits our Saviour himself further witnesseth, when he saith, (Luke 15. 7, 10.) There is joy in heaven (namely, among the holy Angels) for one sinner that repenteth. But is there any man, will you say, such a son of Belial as he will not do this, will not imitate the holy Angels in this? Judge ye: There is an evil disease which commonly attends upon Sects and Differences in opinion, That as men are curiously inquisitive into the lives and actions of the adverse party; so are they willing to find them faulty, and rejoyce at their falls and slips, hear and relate them with delight; namely, because they suppose it makes much for their own side, that the contrary should by such means be scandalized, and the Patrons and followers thereof disreputed. But should that be the matter of our grief whereat the Angels joy, or that the matter of our joy whereat the Angels grieve? How is this to do our Father's will on earth as the Angels do in heaven? Nay, if this be not to put on the robes of darkness, and to shake hands with hellish Fiends, I know not what is. O my soul, come not thou into their secret; unto their assembly mine honour be not thou united. And thus much of our first Observation

Gen. 49. 6.

There is another Lesson yet more to be learned from this Act of the Angels; namely, That if they glorifie God for our Happiness, and the Favour of God towards us in Christ; much more should we glorifie and magnifie his Goodness our selves, to whom solely this Birth and the benefit of this Birth redounds. If they sing, Glory be to God on high, for his Favour toward men; we, to whom such Favour is shewn, must not hold our peace: for shall they for us, and not we for our selves? No, the Quire of Heaven did but set us in, we are to bear a part; and it should be a chief part, since the best part is ours. As therefore the Church in her publick Service hath ever since kept it up; so must every one of us in particular never let it go down or die in our hands.

2.

THUS much of the Quire; Now come we to the Anthem or Song it self: whose contents are two; First, The Doxology or Praise, Glory be to God on high; Secondly, A Gratulation rendring the reason thereof, Because of Peace on earth, Good-will towards men. For the conjunction & is not to be taken here for a copulative, but, as Vau is frequently in the Hebrew, for a conjunction causal, or for ⁂: Glory to God in the highest; for that there is Peace on earth, and Good-will towards men. Or, if we retain the copulative sense, yet we must understand the words following as spoken by way of Gratulation; Glory be to God on high, and welcome Peace on earth, Good-will towards men. Or both causally and gratulatorily thus, Glory be to God in the highest; for (ὁ factum bene!) there is Peace on earth, and Good-will towards men.

Ita Zonar. ad c. 74. Concl. Trullan.

To begin with the First, The Doxology or Praise; Glory be to God in the Highest: that is, Let the Angels glorifie him, who dwell on high: for ὁ ὑψίστος is to be referred to Glory, and not to God; the sense being, Glorified be God by those on high; and not, God, who dwells on high, be glorified. This may appear by the like expression in Psalm 148. 1, 2. whence this Glorification seems to be borrowed: Praise ye the Lord from the Heavens, praise him ὁ τοῖς ὑψίστοις in the highest; Praise ye him all his Angels,

Angels,

Luk. 2. 13, 14

Angels, praise ye him all his Hosts. And therefore Junius for Praise ye the Lord from the Heavens, hath Laudate eum cœlites, Praise him ye that dwell in Heaven: The Chaldee, for Praise him in excelsis, hath Praise him מְרֹמָא אֲנְגְלִי ye high Angels. In like manner here, Gloria in excelsis Deo, Glory to God in the highest, are the words of the Angelical Quire, inciting themselves and all the Host of Heaven to give glory and praise unto God for these wonderful tidings. Now therefore let us see What this Glory is, and How it is given to God.

Verse 9.

To tell you every signification of the word Glory in Scripture, might perhaps distract the hearer, but would inform him little. Nor will it be to purpose to reckon up every signification it hath, when it is spoken of God: I will therefore name only the two principal ones. And first, Glory, when it is referred to God, often signifies the Divine Presence or שְׂכִינָה, as in this Chapter a little before my Text, when it is said, The GLORY of the Lord shone round about the Shepherds, and they were sore afraid. But this is not the signification in my Text, but another which I shall now tell you. For Glory besides signifies in Scripture the high and glorious Supereminency or Majesty of God, which consisteth in his threefold Supremacy of Power, of Wisdom, and of Goodness. And as words of Eminency and Dignity with us (as Majesty, Highness, Honour, Worship) are used for the Persons themselves to whom such Dignity belongeth, (as when we say, his Majesty, his Highness, his Honour, his Worship;) so in the Scripture, and among the Hebrews, His Glory, or the Glory of the Lord, is used to note the Divine Essence or Deity it self. As in 2 Pet. 1. 17. There came a voice (saith S. Peter) from the excellent GLORY, (that is, from God the Father,) This is my well-beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. Rom. 1. 23. the Gentiles are said to have changed the GLORY of the incorruptible God into the likeness of things corruptible: As it is said (in Psal. 106. 20.) of the Israelites in the Wilderness, that they changed their * GLORY into the similitude of an Oxe that eateth grass. S. John, chap. 1. 14. of his Gospel says of the Son, We beheld his GLORY, the glory as of the only-begotten Son of God. According to which sense he is called Heb. 1. 3. The Brightness of his Father's glory, and the express Image of his person; where the latter words are an exposition of the former, Image expounding Brightness, and Person or Substance expounding Glory.

* Jer. 2. 11.

Chap. 4. 9.
Verse 11.Chap. 5. 12.
Verse 13.

If Glory therefore signifie the Divine Majesty or Greatness, to Glorifie or give Glory unto God is nothing else but to acknowledge and confess this Majesty or Greatness of His; namely, his Supereminent Power, his Wisdom, and Goodness: for in the peerless Supereminency of these Three, (under which all his other Attributes are comprehended) his Glorious Majesty consisteth. Take this withal; That all the religious service and worship we give unto God, (whether we praise him, pray, or give thanks unto him) is nothing else but the acknowledging of this Glory, either in deed or word; namely, by confessing it, or doing some act whereby we acknowledge it. To come to particulars: By our Faith we confess his Wisdom and Truth; by our Thanksgiving, his Goodness and Mercy; when we Pray, we acknowledge his Power and Dominion; and therefore the form of prayer our Saviour taught us, concludes, For thine is the Kingdom, Power, and Glory. In Praise we confess all these or any of them, according to that in the Hymn of the Church, Te Deum laudamus, Te Dominum confitemur; We praise thee, O God, we acknowledge thee to be the Lord. All which is evident by those forms of Glorification set down in the Apocalyps, which are nothing else but express and particular acknowledgements of the Greatness or Majesty of God, and his peerless prerogatives. When the four Wights are said to have given Glory, Honour and Thanks to him that sate upon the Throne; what was their Ditty but this? Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive Glory and Honour and Power; for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are, and were created. When the Lamb opened the Book with seven Seals, the Wights, the Elders, and every creature in Heaven, in earth, and under the earth, sung, Worthy is the Lamb to receive Power, and Riches, and Wisdom, and Strength, and Honour, and Blessing. And again; Blessing, Honour, Glory, and Power be unto him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever. In which we may observe the whole Glorification to consist in the acknowledgement of these Three sovereign prerogatives of the Divine Majesty, his Power, his Wisdom, his Goodness: The two first, Power and Wisdom are express; and Riches and Strength belong to Power: the third is contained in Εὐλογία, Blessing or Thanksgiving, which is nothing else but the Confession of the Divine Goodness.

Hence it is that the Septuagint and Vulgar Latine commonly render the words הוֹרָה and הוֹדָה, which signifie to praise and glorifie, ἑξομολογῆσαι, confiteor. Confite- mini Domino, quoniam bonus; quoniam in seculum misericordia ejus. Confess unto the Lord, for he is good; for his mercy is for ever. Psal. 106. 1. 107. 1. 136. 1. Confitebor tibi, Domine, in toto corde meo, quoniam audisti verba oris mei. I will confess unto thee, O Lord, with my whole heart; for thou hast heard the words of my mouth. So the Vulgar Latin in Psal. 137. Confitemini Domino, & invocate nomen ejus. Confess unto the Lord and call upon his name, Psal. 105. 1. and the like. And in the 148. Psal. 13. Confessio ejus super cælum & terram; that is, His glory is above the heaven and the earth. The Holy Ghost in the New Testament useth the same language. Matth. 11. 25. Ἐξομολογῶμαι σοι, πάτερ, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and revealed them to babes; where we have, I thank thee, O Father, Beza and Erasmus read, Gloriam tibi tribuo, I give glory unto thee; which I think is the better. So Luke 2. 38. it is said of Anna, ἀνθωμολογῆτο τῷ κυρίῳ, she confessed to the Lord, or she gave praise and thanks unto the Lord. So Heb. 13. 15. By him therefore (that is, by Christ) let us offer the sacrifice of Praise to God continually, that is, καρπὸν χειλέων ὁμολογούντων τῷ ὀνόματι αὐτοῦ, the fruit of our lips confessing to his Name. By all which it is evident, That to Praise and give Glory unto God, whether by Praise at large, or Prayer and Thanksgiving in special, is nothing else (as I have said) but to confess and acknowledge his peerless Majesty over all and in all; which the Scripture calls his Glory. And if ever there were a Work of God wherein all these peerless Prerogatives of Power, Wisdom and Goodness, all together appeared in the highest degree, it was undoubtedly in this wonderful Work of the Incarnation of the Son of God for man's redemption: well therefore might the heavenly Host sing, Gloria in excelsis Deo, Glory be to God on High; The Power, the Wisdom and Goodness of the Glorious God be acknowledged by the holy Angels and all the Host of heaven for ever and ever. This is the meaning of the Doxology.
mini

COME we now to the Gratulation, which contains the cause thereof; Glory be to God on high; for (ô factum bene! O happy news!) there is peace on earth, good-will towards men. One and the same thing two ways expressed: for it is an Apposition, or ἐξηγήσις, the latter words declaring the meaning of the former; Peace on earth, that is, Good will towards men, Εὐδοκία ἐν ἀνθρώποις. Εν for εἰς: to wit, in imitation of the Hebrew construction, where פָּצַח and רָצַח Verbs which signifie εὐδοκέω, and רָצַח the Noun signifying εὐδοκία, are construed with כִּי, which is Εν in Greek, and accordingly both the Septuagint and New Testament express the same. But the Vulgar Interpreter reads here, Pax in terris hominibus bonæ voluntatis, Peace on earth to men of good-will: as if the Greek were ἐν ἀνθρώποις εὐδοκίας, and not εὐδοκία, as now all our Copies constantly read, and I believe ever did. Yet Beza seems here to favour the Vulgar Latin, expounding Homines bonæ voluntatis Men of good-will, of those whom God wills well to, to wit, of the Elect, to whom this Peace by Christ belongeth; and from the conveniency of this sense, inclines to believe that the Greek anciently read so; quoting to this end Irenæus, Origen, and Chrysostome (as he saith) in divers places. But he trusted too much the Latin Translation of Chrysostome; for the Greek Chrysostome hath no such matter; but both in those places Beza points to, and in divers others, reads constantly ἐν ἀνθρώποις εὐδοκία, as our Copies do. And so I make no question Irenæus and * Origen did too in the Greek Originals, if we had them to look into. But the Latin Translators thought not fit to alter the words of the Hymn so ordinarily sung in the Liturgy, and so expressed it in Latin as the Latin Church used. And for the meaning, I believe the Vulgar Latin aim'd at no other sense than what the Greek implies; namely, That this Peace was no earthly Peace, but the Peace of God's good-will to man, referring the Genitive Case voluntatis, not to hominibus, but to Pax. Pax in terris: what Pax? Pax bonæ voluntatis hominibus. That which makes me think so is, because Origen, or his Translator, in the place Beza quotes for this reading, expressly expounds it so. And so there will not be a pin to chuse: save that the Greek expresseth this sense by way of Apposition, more naturally; the Latin by way of Rection, somewhat harshly; and yet perhaps the Translator thought, less ambiguously.

Well then, This Peace on earth is εὐδοκία ἐν ἀνθρώποις, God's good-will or favour to men: and God's εὐδοκία ἐν ἀνθρώποις Good-will to men is the Peace on earth the Angels gratulate; namely, the Reconciliation of God to men in Christ. For by reason of sin, Heaven and Earth, God and Man were till now at enmity: but by Christ this enmity is taken away; and man, by the forgiveness of his sin, restored unto peace and favour with God. And as by this Nativity God and Man became one Person; so by this conjunction Heaven and Earth, Angels and Men, become one Fellowship, one City

Luk. 2. 13, 14

* Origen contr. Celsum
lib. 1. p. 46.
Gr. legi
ἐν ἀνθρώποις εὐδοκίας

Luk. 2. 13, 14

City and Kingdom of God : the Kingdom of Satan, that Prince of the powers of the Air, who by reason of sin had captivated and brought under his service the whole Earth, and thereby held the same at open war and enmity with Heaven, being now by degrees to be destroyed and rooted out. And this is that admirable Mystery of our Redemption by Christ, which the Angelical Host here gratulates by the name of Peace on earth, and Good-will towards men.

* Vid. Num. 6.

26. Job. 6. 24.

Psal. 85. 7. &c.

Can. 8. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

H. 1. 1.

And that we may not doubt but we have hit the meaning, That this Peace on earth is God's Good-will to men, and therefore expounded by it; besides that in the Old Testament Peace is often taken for God's favour and mercy to men; (as in that of Esay 54. 10. The mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the Covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee:) so if we examine the use thereof in the New Testament, we shall find it in special applied to this our Reconciliation to God in Christ by remission of sin. S. Peter to Cornelius, Acts 10. 36. describes the Gospel thus, The word which God sent to the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ. And S. Paul, Col. 1. 19, 20. It pleased God the Father, that in Christ all fulness should dwell: And (having made peace through the blood of his Cross) by him to reconcile all things unto himself. What can be plainer than this? The same, as I take it, he means Eph. 2. 17. when he tells us, that Christ came to preach peace both to those that were afar off, and to them that were nigh; that is, both to Jew and Gentile. But what peace? namely, that through him we both might have access by one Spirit unto the Father. Hence the Gospel is called The Gospel of peace; and God so often in the New Testament, The God of peace, that is, of reconciliation and favour: and the Evangelical salutation is, Grace, mercy, and peace from God our Father and Jesus Christ our Lord.

Verse 18.

Acts 10. 43.

The meaning of this Angelical Gratulation being thus cleared, let us see now what may be learned and observed therefrom. Where my first Observation shall be this: S. Peter tells Cornelius, that to Christ give all the Prophets witness, that through his Name, whosoever believeth in him, shall receive remission of sins. Our Saviour after his Resurrection, expounding the Scriptures to his Apostles, says the same, Luke 24. 46, 47. Thus it is written, (saith he) and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day; And that remission of sins should be preached in his Name among the Nations. But where is this Publication of remission of sins by Christ written? for in those formal words we shall hardly find it. Let us take here the Angels Key, and we shall: for they tell us, that Peace on earth is this Good-will towards men. Now do not the Prophets speak of some Peace on earth which Messiah should bring with him when he comes? Yes surely. Well then, let us look for this Publication of remission of sins under that name, and we shall find it. Esay 9. 6. Unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his Name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The Father of eternity, The Prince of peace, (that is, of peace not between men and men, but between God and men) and of the increase of his government and peace shall be no end. Esay 52. 7. How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace, that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation, that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth! Which place S. Paul, Rom. 10. 15. interprets of the publication of the Gospel of Christ, Esay 53. 5. The chastisement of our peace was upon him; that is, he suffered for the remission of our sins. Esay 57. 19. quoted by S. Paul to the Ephesians, chap. 2. 17. Peace to him that is afar off, and to him that is near, saith the Lord, and I will heal him. Ezek. 34. 24, 25. I the Lord will be their God, and my servant David (King Messiah) a Prince among them. — And I will make a Covenant of peace with them. So Chap. 37. 26. Hag. 2. 9. The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, saith the Lord of Hosts; and in this place will I give peace, saith the Lord of Hosts. Zech. 9. 9, 10. Shout, O daughter of Jerusalem; behold, thy King cometh unto thee, — and he shall speak peace unto the Heathen, and his Dominion shall be from Sea to Sea, and from the River unto the end of the earth.

Thus much of the Use to be made of the Angels expression in this heavenly Carol: Now I shall propound to your consideration another, and that taken from the argument it self; namely, That if Almighty God, our Heavenly Father, be so graciously disposed to us-ward, as to be reconciled unto us, by forgiving us our trespasses; then ought we semblably to be reconciled to our brethren, and forgive them their trespasses, when they have wronged or offended us. Leo Serm. 6. de Nativit. Natalis Domini natalis est pacis, &c. The Birth-day of our Lord is the Birth-day of peace; and therefore let all the faithful offer up unto God their Father the united affections of peace- able-

able-spirited children. The Illation is good; we have the authority of the Apostle S. John to back it, 1 Joh. 4. 10, 11. God (saith he) so loved us, that he sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. What follows? Beloved, (saith he) If God so loved us, we ought to love one another. So say I, If God be so gracious to forgive and be reconciled to us; we ought, as it were, to ecchothis his loving-kindness, and to forgive and be reconciled one to another. Luk. 2. 13, 14

This Congruity or semblableness of our Actions and Affections one towards another with God's Favour and Mercy towards us, is the Rule and Reason not only of this, but of many other duties he requires at our hands. Thus the Jews were every seventh year to manumise their servants, as an act of Congruity and Thankfulness to God, who had delivered them, when they were servants, out of the land of Egypt and house of bondage. They were bidden to use a stranger kindly, because themselves had been strangers, and God, when they were oppressed, had been compassionate and kind towards them, and redeemed them from their thralldom. Likewise we read in the Gospel, Luke 6. 36. Be ye merciful, as your Father also is merciful: and Matth. 5. 7. Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy. In a word, God hath revealed he will shew mercy to none but such as appear before him with this Congruity. James 2. 13. He shall have judgment without mercy, that hath shewed no mercy. And therefore the tenour of our Sentence at the last Judgment runs, Come ye Blessed, and be partakers of mercy, because ye have shewed it: But, Go ye Cursed without all mercy into Hell-fire, becau'e ye have shewed no mercy.

Thus we see how God requires this Congruity in general: And as for the particular of reconcilment and forgiving our brother, it is written in capital letters, and urged in such sort as it might not unfitly be termed The Livery of Christianity. Inasmuch that if we consider it duly, it cannot but breed astonishment, that the evidence and necessity should be so apparent, and the practice, among those who look for the benefit of Christ and call upon his Name, so little regarded; whenas I dare boldly pronounce, there is no remission of sins to be looked for at the hands of God without it.

An invincible argument whereof is, That our Saviour himself, in the Prayer he hath taught his Church, hath put in a bar against asking it but upon this condition, Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us. If we ask not with this disposition, there is no promise that any such prayer shall be heard: nay our Saviour tells us in plain terms, it shall not: If (saith he) you forgive not men their trespasses, I.
no more will your heavenly Father forgive you your trespasses. Matth. 6. 15. How then can any man whose heart is fraught with malice, and meditates revenge against his brother, hear this and not tremble? Is it not a fearful thing for a man to carry in his own bosom, not only an evidence that his sins are unpardoned, but a bar too, that he cannot ask the forgiveness of them? Let no man deceive himself: Though our consciences should bear us witness of many good works we have done; reconciliations tamen contempta, nihil possumus promereri solatium, yet if we neglect to be reconciled to our brethren, we are not in a capacity to receive any comfort and mercy from God. So Chrysost. As the fifth Eph. 6. 2. Commandment is called by the Apostle the first Commandment with promise, so is this Petition for forgiveness of sins the only Petition with condition: and such a condition too as our Saviour dwells upon and enforces, when he had delivered this Form of Prayer to his Disciples: For he passes by all the rest of the Petitions, and * singles * Matth. 6. 14, 15. out this alone to comment upon, as that wherein the chiefest moment lay, and without which all our prayer would be uneffectual and to no purpose.

A further confirmation of which we have in that parable of Servus nequam, the 2.
wicked servant, Matth. 18. whom his Lord being moved with compassion, when he besought him, forgave a debt of ten thousand Talents: But he finding one of his fellow-servants which ought him an hundred pence, though he fell at his feet and besought him, yet would not hear him, but cast him into prison. Then his Lord was Verse 32. &c.
wroth, and said, O thou wicked servant! shouldst thou not have had compassion on thy fellow-servant, even as I had pity upon thee? And he delivered him unto the tormentors, till he should pay all that was due to him. The Application is terrible: so likewise, saith our Saviour, shall my heavenly Father do unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not Verse 35.
every one his brother their trespasses. We are this Servus nequam, if when our heavenly Father forgives us thousands of Talents, we stand with our brethren for an hundred pence. For there is no proportion between the offences wherewith we offend God, and the offences wherewith our brother offends us. And therefore we have no excuse, hath our brother wronged us never so often, never so much, never so haughtily: For whatsoever it be, or how unworthy or undeserved soever; our sin, our ingrati-ingratitude to Almighty God is and hath been infinitely greater, even as ten thousand Talents to an hundred pence.

Luk. 2. 13, 14

3.

* Of the Corban, see Discourse II.

To these two Testimonies add a third, and that also, as the former, out of our Blessed Saviour's own mouth: Matth. 5. 23, 24. If thou bring (saith he) thy Gift to the Altar, and there remember that thy brother hath ought against thee; Leave there thy gift before the Altar, and go thy way: first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift, τὸ δῶρον σου, the word whereby the Septuagint constantly render that which the Law calls Corban; and the Gospel concurs with them, Mark 7. 11. Κορβάν, ὃ ἐστὶ, δῶρον. Now * Corban in the Law is in special used for those Offerings which were made for atonement of Sin, as the Burnt-offering, Sin-offering, Trespass-offering, and Peace-offering, call'd Offerings by Fire or Sacrifices. So that this Precept of our Saviour's here is the same in effect with the former. When thou comest to offer an offering unto God for an atonement of thy sin, go thy way first, and be reconciled unto thy brother, for without this thy sin shall not be forgiven thee. I shall not need tell you, that now in the Gospel Christ is the Sacrifice, is the Gift, which a Christian by faith offers unto God for the propitiation of his sin; and that this Sacrifice is commemorated, sealed and communicated unto us in the blessed Sacrament of the Lord's Supper: whereby it will easily appear, how this Precept of our Saviour's, uttered after the style of the Legal worship, is applicable to the Evangelical.

Hence in the ancient Church, when they assembled to celebrate this Sacrament, the Deacon was wont to proclaim, Μὴ τις κατὰ τινός, Ne quis contra aliquem, Let no man have ought against his brother: And then, Ἀσπάζεσθε ἀλλήλους ἐν φιλήματι ἁγίῳ, Salute one another with an holy kiss: which accordingly they did, first the Bishop and Clergy, then the Laity, the men apart by themselves, and the women by themselves: and this was a profession of friendship and reconciliation, and therefore called Osculum pacis, the kiss of peace. In after-times the Priest gave this Kiss of peace unto the Deacon, and he to the chief of the Congregation, and so it was given from one to another. In stead of which at length was brought in that foolish ceremony, still used among the Romanists, for the Priest to send a little gilded or painted Table, with a Crucifix or some Saint's picture thereon, to be kissed of every one in the Church before they receive the Holy Bread; which they call the kissing of the Pax. So oftentimes profitable and useful Ceremonies degenerate into toys and superstitions. Our Church, though she useth no ceremony, retains the substance, when the Priest in his Exhortation to the Communicants saith, If any of you be in malice or envy, or any other grievous crime, bewail your sins, and come not to this holy Table: and by the Rubrick the Priest, if he knows any such, is to turn them back, unless they will be reconciled.

4.

Lastly, The necessity of this duty is testified by that pious and generally-received Custom amongst Christians, to exhort those that are dying to forgive all the world, that so themselves may find mercy and forgiveness at the hands of God. Is it needful at the hour of death, and not as needful in the time of our health? Is there no forgiveness to be expected at the hands of God without it, when we are dying; and is there while we are living? No certainly; All times are alike here; and there is no time wherein God will forgive us, unless we forgive our brother. What then remains, but that we do every day as we would do if we were to die the next? It is a blessed disposition to have a becalmed heart to those who have wronged us, and not to let * the sun go down upon our wrath; to be able to come before God with confidence, and say, Lord, forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us.

* Ephes. 4. 26.

DISCOURSE XXV.

S. MARK I. 14, 15.

Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom of God, And saying, The time is fulfilled, and the Kingdom of God is at hand; Repent ye, and Believe the Gospel.

THESE words are a Narration of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ his first beginning to preach the Gospel; which they describe 1. By the Time when, 2. By the Place where, 3. By the Summe of what he preached. 1. The Time when; After that John was put in prison. 2. The Place where; Galilee: Jesus came into Galilee, preaching, &c. 3. Lastly, The Summe of what he preached; The time is fulfilled, and the Kingdom of God is at hand; Repent ye, and believe the Gospel. In which Sermon there are also some parts to be considered, which we shall more conveniently distinguish when we come to handle it.

Mean while let us begin with the Three parts or circumstances already named, in order. And first with the First, The Time when; After that John was put in prison.

Our Saviour began not his solemn preaching till his Messenger John the Baptist, who was sent to prepare his way, was cast into prison. This circumstance is elsewhere precisely noted in the Scripture, so that we cannot doubt but there is some matter of moment therein. For * S. Matthew tells us, as S. Mark doth, Now when Jesus had heard, saith he, that John was cast into prison, he departed into Galilee: and then it follows, * From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent, for the Kingdom of God is at hand. So S. Peter Acts 10. when he came to preach the Gospel of Christ to Cornelius, was careful to mention this circumstance of Time, as well as the other of Place. The word, saith he, (V. 36, 37.) which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ, (he is Lord of all) That word (I say) you know, which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the Baptism which John preached. Loe here the Place, Galilee; and the Time, After that John Baptist had done; as in my Text. I.

All which argues this circumstance of Time to be one of the marks of the true Messiah; as namely, That this Jesus was that Lord whom they looked for, who was to send a messenger before him, the voice of a cryer in the wilderness, to usher his preaching and prepare the way of his Gospel, as was prophesied by Esay and Malachi, and the Jews at that time expected. Which was the reason of that scruple of the Disciples in the Gospel, when they saw our Saviour, and Elias, whom they supposed should be his Forerunner, appear in glory both together at his Transfiguration: Why then (say they) do the Scribes say, that Elias must come first? Our Saviour tells them, that John Baptist was that Elias the Forerunner of Messiah, according to those words of his Father Zachary, And thou child shalt be called the Prophet of the Highest; for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways; namely, (as the Angel told him) in the power and spirit of Elias. For this reason, as our Saviour was not conceived, nor born, till six months after John; so he began not his prophecy till John had done: that so the Scripture might be fulfilled, and John be his forerunner and messenger both in the one and the other. And lastly, to conclude the illustration of this circumstance, John was not only a Forerunner of our Saviour in his Nativity and Prophecy, but also in his Passion and Suffering: For so our Saviour himself expressly saith Matth. 17. 12. Elias is come, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed: even so also shall the Son of man suffer of them. Matth. 17. 12. Luke 1. 76. Verse 17.

Now for the Observation or, if you will, the Consideration I will make upon this circumstance, it shall be this: If that Messiah according to Prophecy were to have an Harbinger to prepare the way for his coming; and the Holy Ghost in the

Mar. I. 14, 15

New Testament thought this circumstance so needful to prove the verity thereof, as so curiously to note it in the history of his Nativity, Preaching, and Suffering; It would be considered, seeing the coming of Christ is twofold, First and Second, whether the same Prophecy imply not that there should be an Harbinger as well of his Second coming as of his First; as well an Elias to prepare the way for his coming in glory to judge the world, as there was at his First coming in humility to preach the Gospel and suffer for the world: An Elias, I mean, to be the Harbinger of Christ to the nation of the Jews before his Second coming, as John Baptist was at his First. For to the Jews alone is this Elias promised, and not to the Gentiles; and John Baptist (we know) the Elias of his First coming, preacht to them alone. It is well known that all the Fathers (unless S. Hierom somewhat staggered) were of this opinion: and why we should so wholly reject it as we are wont to do, I can see no sufficient reason. For if the Fathers erred concerning the person and other circumstances of this Elias, yet it follows not but the substance of their opinion might be true. As we know also they erred concerning the person, quality and reign of Antichrist; and yet for the substance the thing was true. Our Saviour rejected not the Tradition of the Scribes concerning the coming of Elias, when the Apostles objected it, though it were mingled with some fallhood; but corrected it only: for they looked for Elias the Thisbite; but our Saviour admits it only of Elias in Spirit, not of Elias in Person; so yielding it true for the substance, though erring in circumstance. So should we do in the like case. For he that throws away what he finds, because it is foul and dirty, may perchance sometimes cast away a Jewel or a piece of gold or silver: So he that wholly rejects an ancient Tenet because it hath some Error annexed to it, may unawares cast away a Truth; as this seems to be of an Elias to be the Harbinger of Christ's Second coming: and that for these Reasons.

I.

* Chap. 40. 3.

Mal 4. 1.

Verse 5.

* Verse 6.

First, Though the Prophecy of * Esaïas, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight, alledged by all the four Evangelists, and by John himself, seems applicable only to the First coming of Christ; yet the other out of Malachi (expressly quoted by S. Mark, and by our Saviour Matth. 11. 14. though elsewhere alluded unto) seems by Malachi himself to be applied not only to the First coming of Christ, but also to his Second coming to Judgment. For in his last chapter, speaking of the coming of that day which shall burn like an oven, wherein all the proud, yea and all that do wickedly, shall be as stubble; and it shall burn them up, leaving neither root nor branch, &c. he addeth, Behold, [saith the Lord] I will send you Elijah the Prophet before the coming of that great and dreadful day of the Lord; * And he shall turn [or restore] the heart of the Fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their Fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse. If we will not admit the Day here described to be the Day of Judgment, I know scarce any description of that Day in the Old Testament but we may elude. For the phrase of turning (or, as I had rather translate it, restoring, as the LXX. ἀποκαταστήσει) the heart of the Fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their Fathers; the meaning is, That this Elias should bring the refractory and unbelieving posterity of the Jewish nation to have the same heart and mind their holy Fathers and Progenitors had, who feared God and believed his promises, that so their Fathers might as it were rejoyce in them, and own them for their children; that is, he should convert them to the faith of that Christ whom their Fathers hoped in and looked for: lest continuing obstinate in their unbelief till the great day of Christ's second coming, they might perish among the rest of the enemies of his Kingdom. Therefore the son of Syrach in his praise of Elias the Thisbite paraphraseth this place after this manner, Who hast ordained (saith he) an ελεῖν or type (for so it may be turned) for the times to come, to pacify the wrath of the Lord's judgment before it break forth into fury, and to turn the heart of the Father unto the Son, and to restore the tribes of Israel, Ecclus. 48. 10. Which explication also the Angel warrenteth Luke 1. 17. in his message to Zachary concerning his son, He shall go, saith he, before the Lord in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the Fathers to the Children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just (this is in stead of reducing the hearts of the children to their Fathers) to make ready a people prepared for the Lord.

For the better understanding of this first Reason we must know, That the old Prophets for the most part spake of the coming of Christ indefinitely and in general, without that distinction of First and second coming, which we have more clearly learned in the Gospel. For this reason those Prophets (except Daniel, who distinguisheth those comings, and the Gospel out of him) speak of the things which should be at the coming of Christ indefinitely and all together; which we, who are now more fully informed by the revelation of his Gospel of this distinction of a Twofold coming, coming, must apply each of them to its proper time : Those things which befit the state of his First coming, unto it ; and such things as befit the state of his Second coming, unto his Second : and that which befits both alike, (as this of an Harbinger or Messenger ) may be applied to both. Mar. I. 14, 15

My Second Reason for the proof hereof is from our Saviour's own words in the Gospel Matth. 17. 10, 11. where his disciples immediately upon his Transfiguration asking him, saying, Why then say the Scribes that Elias must first come ? Our Saviour answers, Elias truly shall first come, & ἀποκαταστήσει πάντα and shall restore all things. These words our Saviour spake when John Baptist was now beheaded, and yet speaks as of a thing future, ἀποκαταστήσει πάντα, Elias shall come, and shall restore all things. How can this be spoken of John Baptist, unless he be to come again ? Besides, I cannot see how this Restoring of all things can be verified of the ministry of John Baptist at the First coming of Christ, which continued but a very short time, and did no such thing as these words seem to imply ; for the Restoring of all things belongs not to the First, but to the second coming of Christ, if we will believe S. Peter in his first Sermon in the Temple after Christ's ascension, Acts 3. 19, &c. where he thus speaks unto the Jews, Repent (saith he) and be converted for the blotting out of your sins, that the times of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord, And that he may send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you ; Whom the heavens must receive until the times of the Restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy Prophets since the world began. The word is the same, ἀποκαταστήσει πάντων. If the time of Restoring all things be not till the second coming of Christ, how could John Baptist restore all things at his First ? If the Master come not to restore all things till then ; surely his Harbinger, who is to prepare his way for restoring all things, is not be lookt for till then. 2.

These are the Reasons which have induced me to think, that the opinion which the Church hath held as far as I know from her Infancy, of an Elias which should be the Harbinger of Christ's second coming, hath some matter of truth in it. But that this Elias should be Elias the Thisbite who was taken up into Heaven, I confess I believe not, no more than that he should be slain by Antichrist, as some fable. For that which the Prophet saith, Behold, I will send you Elijah the Prophet, proves no more that it should be Elijah in person, than that which is said of Messiah [ And David my servant shall rule over them ] proves Christ should be David in person. It is much more like, if it be one that comes again, it should be John Baptist himself, who was the Harbinger of the First coming : That as Christ himself the Master hath two comings, so should his Harbinger have ; And as it shall be the same Christ which comes the second time that came the first, so should his Harbinger be the same. And to this both the words of the Angel to Zachary the father of the Baptist, and the words of our Saviour in the place * before quoted, would not be unliable. The second coming of Christ is the time of the Resurrection, and in that respect it would not be unsuitable for the Harbinger thereof to be one risen from the dead. But as for Elias the Thisbite's coming, I find no ground at all, but the contrary. Howsoever, though I compare probabilities, I will not determine any thing ; lest some perhaps should say, that while I reject old fables, I coin new ones. I rather conclude, with that Jewish Proverb, Cum Elias venerit, solvet nodos, When that Elias comes, he shall dissolve hard questions. Mal. 4. 5:
Ezek. 37. 24.

AND thus much of the circumstance of Time when our Saviour first began his solemn prophecy or preaching of the Gospel, namely not till his Harbinger John had done and finished his preparation. Now I come to the second circumstance, namely of the Place, which was Galilee : Jesus came into Galilee, &c. A circumstance curiously noted by all the Evangelists, That our Saviour published his Gospel in Galilee. S. Peter also in his Sermon to Cornelius stamps it with this character, The word which began from Galilee. No name of Place in the story of our Saviour's conversation on earth more frequent, more beaten upon, than this of Galilee ; nor scarce any mark more evidently demonstrates him to be the true Messiah, than this of Galilee. Yet ( which is to be admired ) no character so much neglected, or so little understood, as this of Galilee : as if we had conspired with the unbelieving Jews, and said, Can there any good come out of Galilee ? But if you please to lend me your attention, I will do my best to let you see how great a Mystery, how principal an Evidence of our Faith lies in this one so unregarded circumstance. In which Discourse I will chalk out my way in this manner: II.

First, I will describe What, and Where this Country of Galilee was.

Secondly, I will shew that our Saviour's proper and chiefest abode, his preaching and his works, were in Galilee.

K 2

Thirdly,

* and Matth.
II. 14.

Acts 10. 37.

Thirdly, ( which is the Crown of all ) That the true Messiah according to prophecy was to appear and have his chief conversation in Galilee.

Mar. 1. 14. 15

1.

* Matt. 11. 21.
1 Chap. 4. 15.

For the First, The Land of Canaan or Palestine was in our Saviour's time divided into Three principal Provinces. On the South, Judea, which contained the Lot of the two Tribes, Judah and Benjamin. In the midst was Samaria, where the Tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh anciently dwelt; but now was inhabited by the off-spring of those Nations which the King of Assyria placed in their rooms when he carried them captive. On the North was Galilee, the remotest from Jerusalem; the chiefest and fertilest part whereof towards Jordan was the land of Zebulun and Naphtali. The rest had been the habitation of the two small Tribes, Asher and Issachar. Galilee was divided into two parts, the Higher and the Lower. The Higher was for the most part thereof the Land of Naphtali, wherein ( there where it bordered upon Zebulun ) stood the rich and beautiful Capernaum, the Metropolis or chiefest City of all Galilee, situate upon the bank of Jordan upon the lake of Gennesaret or Tiberias, called the Sea of Galilee: over against which ( on the other side the water ) stood Chorazin, which our Saviour pronounced a * Woe unto. This Galilee was called || Galilee of the Gentiles: either because part of it was long and even till Solomon's time inhabited still by Gentiles; or because Solomon gave twenty cities of the same to Hiram King of Tyre, which perhaps were the same which the Gentiles till then inhabited; or lastly, because it was the outmost part of the land, and so next unto the Gentiles. The Lower Galilee contained the Tribe of Zebulun ( and also Issachar ) wherein were the cities Nazareth and Bethsaida near the sea or lake of Galilee; and Cana, where our Saviour wrought his first miracle by turning water into wine; also Mount Tabor, where he was transfigured. From Capernaum along by the sea-side, and through Bethsaida, lay the great road or way from Syria into Egypt, which is supposed to be that which the Scripture calls * the way of the sea. At the time of our Saviour's preaching and suffering, two of these three Provinces, Judea and Samaria, were governed by the Roman President, which then was Pontius Pilate; the third, Galilee, was under Herod the Tetrarch ( or Antipas ) so called because he was Prince but of the Fourth part of the Kingdom of Herod his father. This was he that beheaded John the Baptist, and was reconciled to Pilate the President of Judea when our Saviour was condemned.

2.

Thus much to shew What and Where this Region of Galilee was: Now I come to the Second thing I propounded, namely, That our Saviour's conversation, while he was upon earth, was principally and ordinarily in Galilee. First, He was both conceived and brought up at Nazareth, a City of Galilee. Secondly, When he began the solemn publication of his Gospel, he chose Capernaum, the Metropolis of Galilee, for his station, and went and dwelt there. There he chose his Disciples, namely, Galileans; which the two Angels at the time of his Ascension can witness, when they say to the Apostles, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into Heaven? and all the multitude at the Feast of Pentecost, when the Holy Ghost came down upon them, and they spake with tongues, Are not, say they, all these which speak, Galileans? From Capernaum, as from an Episcopal See, he went two several times round all the region of Galilee, teaching in their Synagogues, and preaching his Gospel in every City and Village, Matth. 4. 23. and 9. 35. The beginning of his Miracles, and the first manifestation of his glory ( as S. John speaks chap. 2. 11. ) was at Cana of Galilee; and the greatest part of the Miracles he did afterward were done in that Country. His glorious Transfiguration was upon Mount Tabor, a Mount of Galilee in the Land of Zebulun, where a voice came from heaven, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, hear ye him. In a word, our Saviour's ordinary residence was in Galilee; he came into Judea only at the Feast-times, when the whole Nation assembled at Jerusalem: during which times ( partly during his stay there, partly in his going and returning ) he did all, in a manner, that he did out of Galilee; and the last Feast he came thither, offered himself a Sacrifice upon the Cross for the sins of the whole world. Lastly, when he was risen from the dead, he appoints his Disciples to come see him in Galilee. When I am risen again, saith he, I will go before you into Galilee. And after he was so, the Angel told the women as much at his Sepulchre; and afterwards himself, Go tell my brethren ( saith he ) that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me. Only his Nativity, his Passion and Ascension were proper to Judea: his Nativity at Bethlehem, upon what occasion ye know; his Passion at Jerusalem, when he came thither to the Passover; his Ascension upon Mount Olivet, hard by Jerusalem.

Acts 1. 11.

Acts 2. 7.

Matt. 17. 5.

Matt. 26. 32.
Matth. 28. 7.

Verse 10.

And

And thus much of the Second thing I promised to shew, That our Saviour's principal conversation and abode was in Galilee: Now I come to the last, which is the Crown of all, That Messiah was, according to Prophecy, to vouchsafe his presence, and have his abode in principally in the Province of Galilee. This Prophecy is in the ninth of Esay: For the clear understanding of which, before I report it, I must premise a passage of Sacred story; namely, That the Land of Galilee, or of Zebulun and Naphtali, had the hard hap to be first in that calamity which befel their Nation by the Affyrian; For so it is written, 2 Kings 15. 29. In the days of Pekah King of Israel came Tiglath-Pileser King of Affyria, and took Jion, and Abel-Beth-Maachah, and Janoah, and Kedesh, and Hazor, and Gilead, (all these, save Janoah and Gilead, were cities of Naphtali) and Galilee, all the Land of Naphtali; and carried them captive to Affyria. By occasion of which calamity, being then newly happened, Esay comforts them with this Prophecy, that in recompence of that heavy disadvantage (above the rest of their brethren,) they should have the first and chiefest share of the presence and conversation of Messiah which was to come. As the first time (saith he) he made vile (or debased) the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali; so in the latter time he shall make it glorious. (If ye ask, Why? it follows) The way of the sea by Jordan, Galilee of the Gentiles. V. 2. The people that walked in darkness (namely, of affliction) have seen a great light; they that dwelt in the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined. V. 3. Thou hast multiplied the nation, and increased the joy thereof, &c. If ye ask, How comes this? it follows v. 6. For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his Name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The Father (or Author) of eternity, The Prince of Peace. V. 7. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his Kingdom, to order it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth even for ever: The zeal of the Lord of Hosts will perform this. This is he that should enlighten the Province of Galilee, or the land of Zebulun and Naphtali, with the glory of his presence, and make it as it were amends for what it suffered, before the rest of the Country of Israel, by the hand of the King of Affyria.

Mar. 1. 14, 15

3.

Esay 9. 1, 2, 3. &amp;c.

And if this be not a Prophecy of Christ, I know not what is. And to the same purpose I bring it, doth S. Matthew quote it chap. 4. 14, &c. upon our Saviour's going (after John was cast into prison) to dwell at Capernaum the Metropolis of Galilee, to make it the Seat of the preaching and publication of the Gospel of his Kingdom; which should have made us take more notice thereof than commonly we have done. Blind Jews that could not see it! nay, for this very reason, because he was of Galilee, they would not believe him to be the Messiah: Shall Christ come out of Galilee, say they? should not Christ come out of Bethlehem? And so he did too, and yet was by habitation and conversation a Galilean. Nay I must yet say more; even we Christians cannot altogether be excused, who by following the Jews too close, have so troubled and darkened the beginning of this Prophecy, by mis-translating and mis-distinguishing it, that when we have done, we can hardly tell how to defend S. Matthew's application thereof, much less see the evidence of so noble and clear a Prophecy. I think the devil did owe it a spite from the beginning. The Septuagint is here corrupted into pure non-sense, and so I believe was even in the Apostles times; which made S. Matthew that he could quote nothing of that first sentence, but only the names of Zebulun and Naphtali, as he may see that compares them. The Chaldee Paraphrast is as wide. How we translate of latter times, I shall not need to mention, those who are pinched therewith can tell best. For my part I am persuaded, the four or five first words, wherewith we are wont to begin this ninth Chapter, belong to the last verse of the Chapter before-going, as both the Chaldee Paraphrast and S. Jerome refer them; and that the words following begin a new Prophecy, namely, that which I have hitherto alledged for Messiah's abode in Galilee; in this manner, בְּעֵת הָרְאִשׁוֹן הָקֵל אֶרֶץ זְבֻלֻן וְאֶרֶץ נַפְתָּלִי וְהָאֲחֵרִים הַכְּבִיר According as the first time he made vile (or debased) the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali; so in the latter time he shall make it glorious. Or making בְּעֵת the supposition of the sentence thus, As the first time made vile the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali; so the latter time shall make them glorious. Or simply without comparison thus, The first time he debased the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali; but in the latter time he shall make them glorious. Then follow the words which S. Matthew quotes, The way of the sea by Jordan, Galilee of the Gentiles, &c. It seems to me to be exceeding plain, and to make the Prophecy so clear as scarce any in Scripture goes beyond it. Is not הָקֵל to make vile or base, and הַכְּבִיר to glorify or make glorious? Let him that hath skill in the language judge.

John 7. 41.

Mar. I. 14, 15 What need we then translate lightly afflicted and heavily afflicted? True, הקל hath the signification of lightness, but it is of light worth; and הכביר of weight, but (as in Piel frequently, so here) of the weight of glory; and we our selves otherwhiles translate it so. And to conclude, the Event is true and evident, That as the land of Zebulun and Naphtali had the first share in the calamity by Assyria, so had they a prerogative in enjoying the presence of Messiah.

The Observation that this circumstance of Christ our Saviour's habitation and abode suggests unto our meditation, is an Example of that rule of God's administration S. Paul speaks of 1 Cor. I. 27, &c. to make choice of the foolish things of this world to confound the wise; and of weak, base and despicable things in the world's account, to confound the mighty: That no flesh should glory before him. For Galilee and the inhabitants thereof were in respect of Judea reputed ignoble and half strangers; both because they were so far divided from Jerusalem (where the Temple of their Nation was;) and because it was not the proper and original habitation of the Tribes of Judah and Benjamin which returned from Captivity, but part of the lot of the Kingdom of the ten Tribes which Salmanasser carried away captive. Howbeit the Jews of the two Tribes after their return, especially in the prevailing times of the Maccabees, had many of them settled themselves there, and at length subdued the Gentiles there dwelling, and replenished it with their own people; yet so as many of the Gentiles dwelt still among them: In which respects they were despised of those that dwelt in Judea their native home, and accounted (though of the same Nation, yet) far less noble than themselves: Insomuch that the name of Galilean was in some sort reproachful and despicable, as we may gather even from those speeches of the Jews in the Gospel; shall Christ come out of Galilee? and, Out of Galilee ariseth no Prophet. Yet did God so order it, that Christ, the King of Israel, the great Saviour of Mankind, who was to be exalted to sit at the right hand of God, far above all principalities and powers, should be, as you see, a Galilean. And was not the rest of his breeding suitable thereunto? Who would not have looked that that glorious Son of David should have been born of the most rich and potent parentage of that line? but behold he was of the poorest and most despised. Who would not have thought but Jerusalem the Royal City had been the only fit place for his Birth? but he was born at Bethlehem, one of the least Cities of Judah. And what? in some stately and more convenient Palace there? No, in a stable, and laid in a manger. So was David, his progenitor, the youngest and most despised son of Isbah: Samuel thought that brave and goodly Eliab, the first-born, was the man surely whom God would chuse to make him King; But God had set his eye upon him whom the Father so little regarded as he could scarce think of him, even the little one which kept the sheep. Thus God derides the conceits of men.

Fools therefore that we are! why do we value those things so much which God esteems so little? We are wont otherwise to make much account of such things as Kings and Great ones have in esteem, and to think but basely of those things which they despise: why should not the Example of Almighty God bear the like sway in our judgments, to prefer what he prefers, and slight what he undervalues? Let us therefore, considering this, set our hearts and affections upon heavenly and spiritual things, and say of all the pomp and glory of this world, Vanity of Vanities, all is Vanity.

III. THUS have I spoken of the two first Particulars I propounded, the Time when, and the Place where, our Saviour began the publication of his Gospel; I come now to the Third, The summe of what he preached: and it was this, The time is fulfilled, and the Kingdom of God is at hand; Repent ye, and believe the Gospel. This was the Summe of what he preached; and it contains two parts, a Doctrine, and an Exhortation.

I. The Doctrine is, That the Time foretold by the Prophets when the Kingdom of God should begin, was come: The time is fulfilled, and the Kingdom of God is at hand. The Exhortation is, That therefore they should Repent, and believe the Gospel, or glad tidings which that Kingdom brings. I'll begin with the Doctrine, where I have two things to unfold. 1. What this Kingdom of God is. 2. What was the Time prefixt for the coming thereof, which our Saviour saith was fulfilled when he spake unto them.

For the first, The Kingdom of God is that which otherwise is called The Kingdom of Heaven. These two are both one: and therefore S. Matthew (chap. 4. 17.) when he relates this preaching of our Saviour, saith that he preached and said, Repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand; namely, the same that John Baptist his Harbinger preached before him: For the Hebrews express God by Heaven, as we may see Dan. 4.

26. where it is said to Nebuchadnezzar, that his kingdom should be restored unto him, when he should acknowledge that the heavens bear rule; that is, God the most High, who dwells in heaven. The prodigal child in the Gospel saith, Father, I have sinned against Heaven, and before thee, Luke 15. 21. So Matt. 21. 25. The Baptism of John, was it from Heaven, or from men? that is, from God, or from men? * This is the reason why the Kingdom of God and Kingdom of Heaven mean one and the same thing. Let us therefore now see what is meant by it.

Mar. 1. 14, 15

* See 1 Mac.
cab. 3. 15.
—Ecclesi.
38. 29.
Coram celo, i.
coram Deo.

This Kingdom of God or Kingdom of Heaven is the Kingdom of Messiah or Christ foretold in the Prophets; the Kingdom of that Seed of the woman which should break the serpent's head; of that seed of Abraham wherein all the Nations of the earth should be blessed. For so the Hebrew Doctors before and at our Saviour's coming had termed this Kingdom, and taught their people to look for it under that name, which they had learned out of the Prophecies of Daniel concerning it, who in chap. 2. ver. 44. describes it in this manner; In the days of these Kings or Kingdoms (that is, while the days of the four Monarchies there spoken of yet lasted) the God of heaven shall found, or set up, a Kingdom, which shall never be destroyed, nor be left unto another people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all these Kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever. In the 7 ch. ver. 13, 14. he describes it thus; I saw in the night visions, and behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of Heaven — And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a Kingdom, that all people, nations and languages should serve him: His dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his Kingdom that which shall not be destroyed. From these places the Jews called the Messiah's Kingdom the Kingdom of God, or the Kingdom of Heaven; Because in the first place it is said that the God of heaven should set up his Kingdom; and in the other places, that the Son of man (namely Messiah) should come in the clouds of Heaven. For our Saviour brought not this term or phrase with him, but found it at his coming used among the Jews; which being fitly given he approved, and so taught them the mystery of his coming in their own language. As we may see in so many Parables in the Gospel, where our Saviour sets forth the state of his Church and the members of the same continually under the name of The Kingdom of God, or The Kingdom of Heaven: The Kingdom of Heaven is like a field where a sower sowed good seed, &c. The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto leaven, &c. The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a Merchant, &c. The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a net; and such like: In all which our Saviour describes the state of his Church in that language the people were used unto, as he doth also in other of his Sermons. Hence it is that when John Baptist first, and our Saviour after him, preached, The Kingdom of heaven is at hand, the Jews wondered not at that term as at a novelty, nor ever askt what it meant; but understood it of the Kingdom of Messiah, which they had been taught to call by that name then, and is still found so called among their Rabbies and Doctors until this day, though through their unbelief they have no portion therein, but look for it still to come.

Math. 13.

The Kingdom of God or Kingdom of Heaven then is nothing else but the Church of Christ, or the Christian Church, which is no Temporal kingdom, like the kingdoms of this world which have power over the Body only, but a Spiritual kingdom which reigns over the Souls and Spirits of men. The Kingdom of God, saith our Saviour, is within you, that is, it is a kingdom of the inward man. And therefore this kingdom was not to be founded after the manner of the kingdoms of men, by great armies and field-battels; but was to subdue the nations and conquer the world by a more divine way, namely, by the power of the Word and Spirit, as we see it hath done, My Kingdom, saith our Saviour, is not of this world; that is, not from this world, or to be set up by worldly means, as other kingdoms are: For if my Kingdom (saith he) were of, or from, this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered unto the Jews: but now my Kingdom is not from hence, John 18. 36. Armies and Swords are not fit means to conquer the Souls of men; and therefore Christ was to perform his conquests by a more divine and invisible way. And as he conquered them, so he governs and keeps them in their allegiance to him, not by Garrisons and Armed Troops, but by the power of the same Word and Spirit. Lastly, as he governs his subjects, so he fights against his enemies, not as the Kings of the earth do, but by a divine and heavenly working, by divine and heavenly ministers, by the ministry of Angels,* who are all at his command. For the Enemies of his Church and Kingdom are chiefly spiritual, namely those spiritual powers, those rulers of darkness, the Devil and all his troops of Fiends, which cannot be dealt withal nor resisted after a corporal manner, but by spiritual means and spiritual

Luke 17. 21.

* Matt. 26. 53.

Mar. I. 14. 15

Gen. 3. 15.

A twofold state of Christ's Kingdom.

1 Cor. 15. 28.

Why Christ's Kingdom is called The Kingdom of Heaven, or of God.

Spiritual ministers. And though the Arms of flesh and blood are also lift up against the Kingdom of Christ, yet is it always by the instigation and under the conduct of those invisible Fiends. As for the men employed in such service, they are but the horses in the Devil's battels; the Devil and his Angels are the riders; and therefore to be repelled by a power and forces suitable unto them. In a word, the whole world by sin was become the kingdom of the Devil; Christ came to recover it from him, and to erect the Kingdom of God in place thereof. Such a kingdom therefore as the one was, such must the other be; else it should not match it, as by the tenor of the first Gospel it was to do, which saith, The seed of the Woman should break the Serpent's head.

I must add one thing more for the understanding of this Kingdom, namely, That this Kingdom of Christ which I have hitherto described hath a Two-fold state: The one Militant, consisting in a perpetual warfare and manifold sufferings; which is the present state begun at his First coming, when he ascended up into heaven to sit at the right hand of God. The Second state is a Triumphant state, which shall be at his Second appearing in glory in the clouds of heaven, at what time he shall put down all authority, power and rule, and subdue all his enemies under his feet, even death it self, (as S. Paul tells us 1 Cor. 15. 24.) and in that great Affizes of the quick and dead shall render everlasting vengeance to his enemies and those who believed not his Gospel; and give rewards of glory to his servants, who have kept their faith and allegiance to him. And that once done, and so his Conquest finished, he shall surrender up his Kingdom into the hands of his Father; that being subject to him who put all things under his feet, God may be all in all, as S. Paul tells us.

In both which estates how fitly this Kingdom is called the Kingdom of Heaven, or of God, appears in three respects. 1. Because the King thereof hath his seat and throne in heaven, where he sits at the right hand of God: 2. Because the beginning thereof is from heaven, and not from earth, or by earthly means: 3. and lastly, Because it is governed and administred by the power of heaven, and not by earthly power. Is not such a Kingdom rightly and truly called The Kingdom of heaven? Thus much I thought good to speak for the explication of this speech, The Kingdom of God, or Kingdom of Heaven, because this term is so frequent in the Gospel, and not always, or perhaps not rightly, understood. Henceforth let him that readeth, understand.

2.

NOW I come to the Second point, namely, What was the Time designed and prefixed for the coming and beginning of this Kingdom, which our Saviour saith here was fulfilled. The time, saith he, is fulfilled, and the Kingdom of God is at hand. The Time of this Kingdom was by the Prophet Daniel two ways foretold; first, generally and at large; secondly, more precisely and punctually. The general time designed was, That it should begin under and during the Fourth Kingdom, or Roman Monarchy; which at length it should utterly ruin and destroy. For Nebuchadnezzar the King of Babel had a Vision of an Image of four differing metals; The head of Gold, the arms and breast of silver, the belly and thighs of Brass, the legs and feet of Iron, but the feet mingled with clay. While he beheld this Image and surveyed it from head to foot, he saw a Stone hewn out of the mountain without hands, which Stone smote the Image (not upon the head, or breast, or belly, but) upon the Iron and Clayie feet; whereby the Image, and all his other metals being mingled with the Iron, vanished away, and became as chaff before the wind. Then the Stone which smote the Image upon the feet, became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth.

Dan 2. 32. 33.

Verf. 34.

Verf. 35.

Verf. 44.

This Vision Daniel expounded of four Gentile Kingdoms, which should succeed one another in order with great extent of dominion. The first, compared to Gold, was the Babylonian, which then reigned. The second, resembled to silver, should be the Empire of the Medes and Persians, which subdued that of Babylon. The third, figured by the Brazen belly and thighs, was the Greek, which subdued the Persian. The Iron legs (the fourth and last) was the Roman, which subdued the Greek, and so became possessed of the riches and glory of all the former three. During this last Kingdom was the Stone hewn out of the mountain, and smote the Iron feet. This Stone, saith Daniel, was the Kingdom of the God of heaven, which should be set up before the days of these four Gentile kingdoms should expire, namely under the last of them. In the days of these Kingdoms, saith he, (that is, while these times of the Gentiles dominions yet lasted) the God of heaven shall set up a Kingdom which shall never be destroyed, nor left unto another people (as each of the other were;) but shall break in pieces and consume all those kingdoms, (namely in the last, in which the other three were incorporated as it were, ) and it self shall stand for ever. For as much as thou sawest (saith he unto the King, ) that the Stone was cut out of the mountain without hands (that is, without any earthly means) and that it break in pieces the iron and the Brass, the silver and Gold mingled with it. Mar. 1. 14, 15

the

Verf. 45.

Now the Roman Empire (during which this Prophecy was to be accomplished) was in our Saviour's time come to the height and highest pitch, and to next door to a declination and downfall. But this downfall was to be wrought by the Stone, viz. the Kingdom of Christ, who should first demolish the Gods and Idols thereof, and then the State it self. The time therefore (when our Saviour spake) was fulfilled, and the Kingdom of God was at hand.

Thus you see how the Time was pointed out at large: now hear the precise and punctual Time, whereby they might know not only that the Kingdom of Messiah should be set up in the Roman Monarchy, but also in what time thereof. The Angel tells Daniel (ch. 9. 24.) That when the Temple, City and Commonwealth of the Jews (which then lay wast by the Babylonish captivity) should be restored and set up again, it should continue 490 years, or 70 times 7 years, and no more: and that before that term ended, Messiah should come and be anointed, and make atonement for sin. His words are these, Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thy holy city, to finish transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the most Holy. For understanding this reckoning, you must know, that the Jews according to the Law counted their time and years by sevens; every seventh year being a year of rest for the Land and freeing of Servants, and so called a Sabbatical year: according to which account the Angel tells Daniel that seventy of those weeks of years were allotted for the standing of their Temple and Commonwealth, when both should be restored again after the Captivity; which make in all 490 years. Now if Messiah were to appear before these 490 years were ended, it could not in likelihood be much later than this time when our Saviour published his Gospel: because within 40 years after the Temple and State of the Jews was utterly destroyed; whereby it was apparent that the 490 years were ended, and therefore the Time of Messiah's appearing past.

But Daniel yet points out the Time more nearly and punctually: For he tells us moreover that from the Edict for restoring the State of the Jews and re-building Jerusalem (which was some years after the re-building of the Temple) should be unto Messiah the Prince 62 of those weeks or sevens of years: and after those 62 seven years Messiah should be cut off. Now if we reckon this number of weeks of years from that week wherein Ezra received commission from Artaxerxes King of Persia to restore and settle the Church and State of the Jews, and Nehemiah soon after to build the walls of Jerusalem, we shall find the Time when our Saviour began this publication of his Gospel to fall out in the last week of those 62 weeks. As a woman therefore with child, when her tenth and last month is come, may truly say, Her reckoning is fulfilled, and her travail is at hand; so might our Saviour, when the last week of Messiah's weeks was begun, say, The time is fulfilled, and the Kingdom of heaven is at hand. Dan. 9. 24.
Verf. 26.

The Lesson to be learned hence is, for confirmation of our Faith against the blindness and obstinacy of the Jews, who will not believe that Jesus of Nazareth, who came at the time appointed, was their King Messiah, but look for another yet to come. O blind Miscreants! If the time of Messiah's coming were then fulfilled when our Saviour preached unto them, how are they so besotted as to look for that his coming still? Shall he come 1600 years after the time of his coming was fulfilled? Their Fathers looked for the coming of Messiah * at that time when our Saviour preached amongst them; * yea had filled all the East with the fame of their expectation; which they would never have done, had they not seen the time appointed for his coming and kingdom was to come out in that Age. Why did their Fathers never alledge against the Apostles, That the time was not yet come? Had not this been the readiest way to stop their mouths, when they told them, They had crucified their Messiah? Nay, when our Saviour made this fulfilling of the time to be the ground of his doctrine, why did not their great Doctors (their Scribes and Pharisees) oppose and gainsay it, unless they had known it to be so indeed? Nay at his blessed Birth, when the wise men came from the East to Jerusalem, saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? when Herod and all Jerusalem was troubled, when he assembled all the chief Priests and Scribes of the people about it; why did they not tell him the Time was not yet come, unless they

* Luke 2. 25,
38. ch. 19. 11.
* Joseph de bell Ind. l. 7.
c. 31. Tacit. l.
5. Hist. Sue-ton. l. 8.

Matth. 2. 1.

Mar. 1. 14. 15

they had known it had been come? But of the Time there was no question, only the Place was inquired of. In a word, All the exception the Jews could find against our Saviour, was the meanness of his Person, because he came not like a King; and the Place of his education, because he was a Galilean: But against the Time of his coming they took no exception. Nay (which is an invincible confession) the most of them at this day have no other shift but to say, That Messiah was born then, namely, before their Temple was destroyed, and lies hid all this time somewhere for their sins, but at length shall shew himself unto them.

Eph. 2. 12.

Rom. 9. 4. 5.

Let us pray unto Almighty God, that he would at length open their eyes to see him to be their King, whom they have pierced, and that there is no other to be looked for. And let us continually magnifie his goodness unto us, unto whom (being Gentiles and Aliens from the Common-wealth of Israel, a people without God in the world) he hath, nevertheless, vouchsafed this great light, and made known that Myserie which is hidden from his own people, to whom appertained the adoption, and the glory, and the Covenants, and the giving of the Law, and the service of God, and the Promises: Whose were the Fathers; and of whom, as concerning the flesh, Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. What are we, that it should please the great and mighty God to look upon such dead dogs as we are?

DISCOURSE XXVI.

S. MARK I. 15.

Repent ye, and believe the Gospel.

Hilest our Blessed Saviour preached here on earth, what else, in likelihood, could the argument of his preaching be, but the Mystery of Christian Religion, or way of attaining Salvation through himself? Accordingly this Brief of his Sermons, recorded by our Evangelist, contains no less than the sum of all Christian Divinity. For the Knowledge of the Kingdom of God, and the means how to attain to be a member, and so to have interest in the benefits and priviledges of the same, (which is Salvation) containeth the sum of all a Christian is either to know or do. The first of which (The knowledge of the Kingdom of God,) is in the first words, The time is fulfilled, and the Kingdom of God is at hand; of which I have spoken already. The second is contained in the next words, Repent ye, and believe the Gospel; of which I am to speak now.

None can be Members or Citizens of the Kingdom of God, but only those who are the Sons of God: The means to become the Sons or Children of God, is by Regeneration or New-birth. This is the Mystery our Saviour told Nicodemus of, when he came to him by night; Except a man (saith our Saviour) be born again, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God, John 3. 3. Now Regeneration, or New birth, consists of these two parts, Repentance towards God, and Faith towards Christ; according to that which the Apostle Paul told the Elders of the Church of Ephesus, Acts 20. 21. that he had testified both to Jews and Greeks, Repentance towards God, and Faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ; that is, the whole mystery of Regeneration, whereby a man becomes the Child of God, and a member of his Kingdom. Where we are to note (and it will serve us to understand these things the better) that Repentance, properly and distinctly taken, looks towards God the Father; and Faith unto Christ our Mediatour. The one is our returning unto God, from whom we are gone astray by sin: the other, the means or way of our return unto him, by Christ, without whom we can neither be reconciled to our heavenly Father, nor perform any service acceptable unto him.

These two therefore our Saviour distinguisheth, when he saith, Repent, and believe the Gospel; the one looking to his Father, the other to himself. Both joyued together make the New birth or a new man: even as in natural generation, the Soul Soul being united with the Body makes a natural man ; Repentance here being as the Body or Matter, which Faith in the Gospel of Christ inlivens and informs as a Soul. Those therefore who make Faith a part of Repentance, understand by Repentance the whole Regeneration of a sinner. Otherwise, if Repentance be taken precisely and distinctly, as it is here by our Saviour, then is not Faith a part, but a necessary concurrent of Repentance ; as the Soul is no part of the Body, but concurs therewith to the making of a Man.

Mar. 1. 15.

And thus much I held needful to speak of Repentance and Faith in general, to make my way the more straight and easie to the handling of them severally and apart ; which now I come unto. And first to begin with that which is first, Repentance.

REPENTANCE is A turning of the whole heart from Satan and Sin, to serve God in newness of life. I say, from Satan and Sin, because he that lives in Sin, serves the Devil, and belongs to his jurisdiction. And therefore in our Baptism, which is the Seal of our New birth, we profess our Repentance by renouncing the Devil and all his works ; that is, the works of Sin wherewith he is served : and then we swear fealty to God, saying, I believe in God the Father Almighty, maker of Heaven and Earth, &c.

The Definition I have given, you shall find full and whole in our Saviour's words to S. Paul, when he appeared to him going to Damascus, Acts 26. 18. as S. Paul himself reporteth them ; namely, that he would send him to the Gentiles, To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God ; that they might receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them that are sanctified. Which voice S. Paul there saith V. 19. he was obedient unto ; and thereupon went and shewed first to the Jews and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent, and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance, V. 20. The Commission therefore given him in the words aforesaid was, To preach Repentance.

And howsoever the name of Repentance be by a custome of speech restrained only to that Sorrow and Remorse for sin which is but the beginning of our Turning ; yet, if we will speak according to Scripture, ( as we must do when we expound it ) the word Μετάνοια, translated Repentance, is of a larger extent, signifying not only those pangs of Contrition wherewith Repentance begins, but the whole change and journey ( as I may so speak ) of the Soul of a sinner, leaving the service of the Devil, and turning to the service of God. For this word in the New Testament answers to that of Turning and Returning so frequent in the Old ; as appears not only by the Syriack which so renders it, but by those places in the New Testament where the one is put to explain the other ; as in that of S. Paul now quoted. And that the word, Turning, is of as large sense as I speak of, I shall need go no further for proof, than to the words of our Saviour to S. Paul even now mentioned. But this will appear better by the ensuing Discourse of the Parts of Repentance.

Repentance is more than a Sorrow for sin.

Repentance ( as any one almost may gather by the Definition given thereof ) hath two parts, according to the two terms, à quo, & ad quem ; An aversion or turning away, and A conversion or turning unto. An aversion or turning away from Satan and Sin ; that is the first part : then A conversion or turning unto God by newness of life ; that is the second part. The one is a falling off from the Creature, the other a betaking to the Creator.

The first some call Mortification, from that phrase in Scripture of Dying to sin, ( Rom. 6. 11. Col. 3. 3. ) that is, of ceasing to be the servants of sin. The second, Vivification, from that Scripture-phrase of Living to God, ( Rom. 6. 11. Gal. 2. 19. ) that is, of beginning to be to God-ward ; the first receiving virtue from Christ's death, the other from his resurrection. ) For to live, in the Scripture notion, is as much as to be ; to die, as not to be. Because therefore to turn away from Satan and Sin is to renounce them, and to be no more ( theirs ) under them ; it is called Dying to sin : and because to turn unto God by newness of life is to become his, and be that to him which before we were not ; it is called Living unto God.

See Rom. 8. 13.
Col. 3. 5.
Eph. 2. 5.
Col. 2. 13.

But the more usual name of the first part of Repentance, or the act of aversion and turning away, is Contrition ; a term borrowed from the * Old Testament. The other part is simply called Conversion unto God, ( or by some, Reformation or Newness of Life. ) I shall use some of these terms, so as not to neglect the rest. And the first part of Repentance I will call Contrition, or Dying to sin, as the most easie expression ; of which I shall now begin to speak.

* Psal. 51. 17.
Ezay 57. 15.
& ch. 66. 2.

Contrition, or Dying unto sin, hath sometimes the whole name of Repentance and

Mar. I. 15.

and Turning given to it; namely, as often as the thing to be turned from is solely mentioned. As Heb. 6. 1. we have repentance from dead works. S. Peter saith to Simon Magus, Act. 8. 22. Repent of thy wickedness. S. Paul, 2 Cor. 12. 21. speaks of repenting of uncleanness, and fornication, and lasciviousness. In all which, and the like places, Repentance seems to signify only Contrition, or the act of aversion and turning away from sin. Otherwise, as I have already said, it signifies the whole act of our turning, from the beginning to the end: as appears plainly, either when both terms are mentioned, or but the thing or term to be turned unto: as Acts 20. 21. Repentance unto God; and Act. 26. 20. where S. Paul saith, that he preached both to the Jews and Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God. For no man can turn unto God, unless he first have turned from the Devil.

But to leave words, and come to the matter. Contrition, or Dying unto sin, is such a Compunction of the Heart for the same as is joyned with a purpose to leave and forsake it. Not every Compunction for sin is true Contrition, but such a Compunction only as is joyned with a purpose to leave and forsake it. Contrition hath therefore as you see, two parts or degrees. The first is, A Compunction of the Heart for sin; the second, A Purpose to forsake and renounce sin. The one is a turning away from sin, in the affections or passions of the Mind; the other is a turning of the Will.

Matt. 25. 41.

Compunction is a turning in the affections and passions of the Mind; and that not of one passion only, but of every passion wherewith we abhor and fly a thing as evil; as Fear, Grief, and Hate: for we must turn with our whole hearts. Fear leads the rank, and trembles at the wrath of God and dreadful Judgment to come, when it shall be said to every unrepentant sinner, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the Devil and his Angels, there to be tormented for ever and ever. For Fear is of an evil to come.

Ezek. 18. 23.
& 33. 11.

Next comes Grief, and laments that ever it was committed, whereby we have incurred so great an evil as to become vassals of Satan, and the loss of so great a good as the favour of Almighty God, yea of so good and gracious a God as saith again and again, As I live, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his ways, and live. What wretch would have lost the favour of such a God as this? O that it were to do again! I would never do it. For we grieve at the presence of evil and absence of good, as we joy in the contrary.

Thirdly comes Hate, and begins to loath and detest sin as a thing not only hurtful, but ugly and abominable, a foul and beastly thing, most contrary to and unbefitting the nature and excellency of a Reasonable creature, as man is. For we hate that which is contrary, and love what is agreeable to us.

These are the several motions and degrees of that Compunction of Heart whereby a Repentant Soul turneth from his sin. And that this is the order of them, may appear, because that is always first which may be without the rest. Now a man may tremble at God's judgments for sin and wrath to come, and yet not grieve for them; yea a man may tremble and grieve too for his sins, and yet not hate and loath them.

But all these repentant passions of Compunction, though diverse in themselves, yet are wont to be comprehended under the name of Sorrow and Remorse for sin: Not as though that were the only passion in our Compunction; but because all passions of the Mind which spring from the apprehension and sense of evil are grievous and painful, and so may, as by a general name, be comprehended under the word Sorrow: as the contrary passions, being pleasing and delightful to nature, may be, and are wont to be, comprehended under the name of Pleasure. For Dolor and Voluptas, Pain and Pleasure, divide all our Passions between them. Πᾶσι περὶ ἡμῶν, saith Aristotle, ἡ πᾶσι περὶ ἡμῶν, Every action of ours is attended with some either pleasure or pain. Though yet there be among the doleful passions a passion peculiarly called Tristitia or Sorrow; and among the delightful passions one likewise in special called Lætitia or Joy.

But all this Fear and Trembling at the wrath of God to come for sin, this Sorrow for sin, this Hating and Loathing of sin, will not make our Contrition full and perfect, unless our Will also do his part, and resolve to forsake and leave it. For so I defined true Contrition, or Dying to sin, to be A compunction of the Heart for sin, joyned with a will and resolution to forsake it.

Hath then the wrath of God Almighty, and the everlasting woe denounced to all impenitent sinners, made thee fear and tremble? Hath thy trembling been seconded with a true and hearty sorrow for thy sins? Hath thy sorrow been such as brought brought forth hate and loathing of sin, so that sin appeared ugly and abominable unto thee? Hath there then followed a Will to be rid of it, a Purpose to forsake and leave it? Then art thou truly contrite and dead to sin-ward. With this last act thy service of sin gave up the ghost. Thou hast turned away, bidden farewell, and shaken hands with Sin and Satan.

An Effect of this Contrition is Confession: when out of a contrite and wounded heart, we acknowledge and lay open our sins before the face of Almighty God (our heavenly Father) begging pardon and forgiveness for them. A Duty always necessary to be performed to God himself, whom we have chiefly and principally offended; and in some cases also convenient to be made unto his Ministers, not only for advice, but for consolation, by that power and authority which God hath given them to exercise in his name, according to that, Whose sins ye remit, shall be remitted. For if we confess our sins, (saith S. John 1 Epist. 1.9.) he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness; and Proverb. 28. 13. He that covereth his sins, shall not prosper; but whose confesseth and forsaketh them, shall have mercy.

THUS have we seen the several degrees and steps of Contrition and Dying to sin: Trembling at the fearful doom and vengeance due unto it; Grieving for it; Hating and loathing of it; a Will and Purpose to forsake and leave it; together with the common Effect of them, Confession. And so now we are arrived at the main Cardo and hinge of Repentance, the Joynt where the two parts thereof, Aversion and Conversion, meet and are knit together: For where the Act of Aversion from sin endeth, there Conversion unto God begins. The last Act of turning from sin was that of the Will, to forsake and leave it: The same Act is the beginning of our turning unto God. For no man can resolve to forsake and leave sin, but he must purpose also to lead a new life to God: Nor can any man have a purpose to lead a new life, but he must withal resolve to leave sin. This is then the main Joynt of Repentance, where the Spirit and Grace of God (the vis plastica of our Regeneration, which from the beginning stirred our hearts) gives that great and powerful lift which doth the deed.

Here and not before now, that Faith in the Gospel, which applies and reaches hold of Christ, first comes in to give life unto Repentance, as a Soul unto a Body. Which union of Faith and Repentance (as I said in the beginning of this Discourse) makes the Regeneration of a spiritual man; as the union of the Soul with the Body makes the generation of a natural man. And as in natural generation, the Soul is not infused at the first conception, but after the Body hath been in some measure fashioned and formed: So in our Regeneration, or generation spiritual, Justifying Faith, or that Faith whereby the Soul flies unto and relies upon Christ, hath no place till Repentance be come to the last degree of Contrition. For then our Saviour inviteth a sinner to come unto him, and not till then: Come unto me, saith he, all ye that labour, and are heavie laden, (that is, all ye that are contrite, and groan under the burthen of your sins,) and I will ease you. Till then he invites them not, as being not till then fit to be eased; For the whole hath no need of the Physician, but the sick. I speak not of an Historical faith, whereby a man believes in general, that Christ is the Saviour of mankind; nor of a Legal, wherewith a man believes the punishments and threatenings of the Law, (for these may be, yea are, before Repentance;) but of a saving faith, which applies Christ as a salve to a sick and wounded soul.

BUT now, to dwell no longer upon the connexion of the two parts, let us see what are the degrees also of this second part, namely, of Turning and Living unto God, by a new and reformed life, answerable to the degrees of the former part, which was Dying and Turning from sin. Where first we are to know, that because Turning to a thing, and Turning from a thing, are motions of a contrary nature; therefore the degrees of our Turning unto God are to be ranked in a clean contrary order to those of our Turning from sin. For the first degree here, is the Act of the Will, which as it concluded our Turning from sin, by resolving to forsake it, so it begins our Turning unto God, by a firm purpose of Heart to serve him thenceforth in newness of life. After this, the Affections begin to act their parts answerably, and as it were to eccho the good choice the Will hath made.

First Love, when a man begins to find himself affected and enamoured with this change of life. After Love comes Delight, when the Penitent takes some pleasure in doing the duties whereby God is served, and finds joy and comfort in his favour. From whence in the third place springs Hope of the reward; namely to be partaker of

Mar. 1. 15.

* ἐξ ἧς μεταβολῆς ἔργα.

the glory and life to come, promised unto all those who unfeignedly turn to God, and set themselves to do his will. But we must know, that these Affections appear not all at once, nor in like measure, but according as a mans growth and proficiency in Conversion is more or less.

Howsoever the inseparable Effects of this second part of Repentance are good works, or, as the Scripture calls them, * works worthy of, or meet for, or be seeming Repentance; that is, works of Religion towards God, and of Righteousness towards men. I shewed (saith S. Paul, Acts 26. 20.) first to the Jews, and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance. Without such works, he that saith he is turned unto God, and yet doth them not, is a liar and deceives his own soul.

THUS much of the second part of Repentance. I will conclude this whole Discourse with these two excellent descriptions of Repentance in the Prophets Esay and Ezekiel, which contain the Sum of what I have hitherto spoken concerning the same.

For thus saith Esay, chap. 1. 16. Wash ye, make ye clean, put away the evil of your doings from mine eyes, saith the Lord, cease to do evil: This is the first part of Repentance. V. 17. Learn to do well, seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow: This is the second part.

Ezek. ch. 33. v. 14, 15. thus; When I say unto the wicked (saith the Lord) Thou shalt surely die; if he turn from his sin, [there is Contrition, the first part] and do that which is lawful and right; If he restore the pledge, give again that he had robbed, walk in the Statutes of life, without committing iniquity [here ye see the fruit of a New life, the second part] he shall surely live, he shall not die.

Believe the Gospel.

THUS much shall suffice to have spoken of Repentance, the first part of our Regeneration. I come to the second, Faith in the Gospel, Repent, and believe the Gospel. Where first I will shew, What this Gospel is; secondly, What it is to believe it, or, What is that Faith concerning it which our Saviour here requires.

For the First; The Gospel is the glad tidings of Salvation to be attained by Christ; who by taking away of sin, reconciles us unto his Father, that through him we might turn unto God, and perform service and obedience acceptable unto eternal life. Before I prove every part of this Description out of Scripture, and explain the same as shall be needful for your understanding, we will first speak of the Antiquity of this Gospel, and shew when these glad tidings were made known to the sons of men.

1 Cor. 15. 56.

Know therefore, that albeit the Fulfilling and solemn publication thereof were not until our Saviour's coming, yet the Promise of the same was from the daies of old, even as ancient as the time of man's sin; and afterwards continued and repeated all the time of the Covenant of the Law, until the Mediatour of the New Covenant came in the flesh. For when the Devil, abusing the shape of a Serpent, had seduced our first Parents unto sin, and so had gotten dominion over them and theirs by this title; the Gospel or Promise of a Redeemer (that they might not be without all comfort) was given them in these words, The seed of the woman shall break the Serpent's head. The Serpent's head is Satan's sovereignty, which is Principatus mortis, the sovereignty or principality of death; a Sovereignty that whosoever is under, is liable to death both temporal and eternal; the power thereof consisting not in saving and giving life, but in destroying both of body and Soul. The Sword whereby this dominion is obtained, the Sceptre whereby it is maintained, or, as S. Paul speaks, the sting of this Serpent's head, is sin. This is that which got this dominion at the first, and the title whereby he still maintaineth the remainder of his jurisdiction in the world. This Sovereignty, this Headship of the Devil, One to be born of mankind, the seed of the woman (which is Christ our Lord) should one day destroy and overthrow; as was then promised, and we at this day see fulfilled.

But this Promise was general, and not yet restrained to any part of mankind, but so that any son of Adam might, for ought was yet revealed, be the progenitor of that seed which should deliver man from the Devil's thralldom, and reconcile him to his God. But when God called Abraham forth of Ur of the Chaldees, the Promise was made more special, being restrained to the off-spring of his loyns: For the Almighty tells him once, and again, and the third time, That in his seed all the Nations of the earth should be blessed, Gen. 12. 3. ch. 18. 18. & ch. 22. 18.

Now

Now Abraham had two sons, Ishmael the son of the bond-woman, and Isaac the son of Sarah his wife. Of which of these two the promised Seed should come was yet indifferent, till God entailed it to Isaac; both telling Abraham, * That in Isaac his seed should be called, and repeating to Isaac the Promise made to Abraham, That in his seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed, Gen. 26. 4.

Mar. 1. 15.
Gen. 21. 12.

Isaac had two sons, Esau and Jacob: Esau was excluded, and the Promise entailed to Jacob, That in his seed all the families of the earth should be blessed, Gen. 28. 14. that is, the blessed seed should come of his loyns.

Of Jacob came the twelve Patriarchs, and of them the twelve Tribes of Israel, among whom the Promise of the blessed Seed was entailed to the Tribe of Judah, and of him promised That Shiloh (that is, the Saviour or Peace-maker) to whom the Nations were to be gathered, should come. The sceptre saith the Text, shall not depart from Judah, nor a Law-giver from between his feet, until Shiloh come, and unto him the gathering of the people be, Gen. 49. 10.

After this Tribe was multiplied, and some hundreds of years together with the other Tribes settled in the land of Canaan, the Promise was made yet more special, and entailed to David, a man of that Tribe, whom God exalted to be King of his people, as a Type of that Blessed King to come. And to this all the Prophets bear witness, That Messiah the Redeemer should be a Rod out of the stem of Jesse, a Branch or Impe of David, the Son and Heir of David's house, yea another David. For under these terms Esaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Zachary, prophecy of him, and the rest of the Prophets to like purpose.

And this was the last limitation of the blessed Seed until the Angel Gabriel was sent of God to a Virgin of the house of David, with a message, That God had chosen her of all David's house to be that highly favoured one, and that blessed Mother of that Great King who should be called the Son of the Highest, of whose Kingdom there should be no end, Luke 1. 32, 33.

Thus was the Gospel or glad tidings of a Redeemer prophesied; and not only so, but it was also signified and sealed by the Types and Shadows of the Law. For the Legal Sacrifices, which were offered to make atonement for sin, were nothing else but shadows and representations of that Offering upon the Cross which Messiah was one day to make of himself for the sins of the world. For the way whereby the blessed Seed should vanquish Satan, and redeem his Elect out of his power and jurisdiction, was by becoming a sacrifice for sin, so to cancel the title whereby the Devil held the world in thralldom.

This was foreshewed unto Abraham, unto whose loyns, as ye have heard the Promise of the blessed Seed was first confined. For when Sarah had born him his son Isaac, the son wherein his seed should be called, and so either himself to be that happy Seed, or the progenitor of the same; God, to reveal unto him by way of mystery, how that Seed of his should make all the Nations of the earth blessed, commanded him to take his Son Isaac, the only hope and pledge of that happy and blessed Seed, and to offer him for a burnt-offering to the Lord upon the mountains of Moriah: to intimate and signifie, that this blessed Seed of Abraham should suffer death, and by sacrifice of himself redeem the world from the claws of the Serpent; yea and more than so, that he should be offered even in that very place, even in the land of Moriah: and so he was; for there was Jerusalem and the Temple for Sacrifice afterwards builded. But when Abraham had brought his son to the place appointed, had built an Altar there, and made all things fit, and was now ready to slay his son; the Angel of the Lord stayed his hand, and shewed him a Ram caught in a thicket by the horns; which Ram Abraham took and offered for a burnt-offering in stead of his own son: To signifie, that the offering of the blessed Seed should be yet suspended, and that God in the mean while would accept the offerings of Bulls and Rams, as a pledge of that expiation which the blessed Seed of Abraham should one day make. So this wonderful Story was to be the Key of the Sacrifices of the Law, whereby it might be known what they meant, and whither they tended: namely, That the blood of Bulls and Rams and other Beasts of themselves do not work atonement for sin, but only as they were ordained by God to stand for Types and Pledges of the Sacrifice of Christ to come. Which that they might the more lively express, God so disposed, that that very place where the Ram was offered in stead of Isaac, should be the place of Sacrifice for Israel. For there it was where the Lord answered David by fire from heaven, and so designed it for the place which he had chosen for his Altar. There David pitched him a Tabernacle; there Solomon built him his Temple.

Of this see Disc.
course XIII.

Mar. 1. 15.

By all which it is plain and manifest, That the Fathers in the Old Testament under the Law were saved by Christ as well as we: but with this difference, That to them Christ was but in promise, and hoped for; to us he is already sent and exhibited: To them the mysterie of Redemption by him was obscure and dark, as known but for the general, That it should be, not in particular for the manner, How it should be; but to us all is open and revealed: Their Faith groped after shadows; but ours lays hold on the substance. And let this Information be the Use of this Discourse.

This being premised touching the Promise of Christ so long before he came, and how the Mysterie of his Gospel was pourtraied by Types and Shadows before it was openly revealed and exhibited; I come to confirm and explain the Description I gave thereof; to wit, That it is the glad tidings of Salvation to be attained by Christ, &c.

I say, It is the glad tidings; for so the name thereof both in the Greek and in our English imports: For spell in old English was to speak or read, and so Gospel is as much as Good spell, that is, the good speak or say, the good tidings, the word of good news. Under which name it was revealed by the Angel to the Shepherds who were watching their flock in the fields the night our Saviour was born; Behold, saith the Angel, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people: For unto you is born this day a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord, Luk. 2. 10, 11.

I call it the glad tidings of Salvation to be attained by Christ; for so much the name of Saviour implies. And saith S. Paul, 1 Tim. 1. 15. This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, That Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners. Neither is there (saith S. Peter Acts 4. 12.) salvation in any other; for there is no other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.

The next words I used, shew the way and manner how and whereby Christ purchased this Salvation unto men, and the means whereby it is attained through him: namely, by cancelling of sin by his atonement made he reconciles us to his Father, that we through him might turn unto God, and perform works of obedience acceptable unto eternal life. All which was foretold by Daniel, chap. 9. 24. where prophesying of the time of Messiah's coming, he said, seventy weeks were determined upon the people, and upon the holy city, to finish transgression, and to make an end of sin, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness.

To prove in particular that Christ dyed for sin, I shall not need. No man that ever read the Gospel but knows it. That by the atonement he made for sin by death he hath reconciled us to his Father, is as evident by what S. Paul tells us 2 Cor. 5. 19. That God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses to them. That the ministry of the Gospel is the Ministry of reconciliation, v. 18. whose Ministers as Embassadors for Christ, beseech men in Christ's stead to be reconciled unto God, v. 20. For by reason of Sin all mankind is at enmity with God, and liable to eternal wrath: Christ, by taking our sins upon him, abolished this enmity, and set us at peace with God his Father, according to that the Quire of Angels sang at his blessed Birth, Glory be to God on high, and on earth Peace, Good-will towards men: that is, Glory be ascribed to God, forasmuch as Peace was come upon earth, and Good-will towards men.

Luke 2. 14.

All this is plain. But that which the greatest part of men (as may be guessed by their practice) seem to make question of, is, that last parcel of my Description; That therefore Christ took away sin and reconciled us to his Father, that we might through him, whose righteousness is imputed to us, perform works of piety and obedience, which God should accept and crown with eternal life. But that this is also a part of the Gospel, as well as the former, is plain and evident. First, by that of S. Peter, 1 Ep. ch. 2. ver. 24. where he tells us, That Christ his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we being dead to sin, might live unto righteousness. Secondly, by that of the Apostle Paul to Titus ch. 2. 11, &c. The grace of God (saith he) that bringeth salvation hath appeared unto all men: Wherefore? Teaching us, that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world; Looking for that blessed hope, the glorious appearing of the great God, and our saviour Jesus Christ; Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works. Is not this plain? Thirdly, by that of the same Apostle, Eph. 2. 10. where the Apostle having told us (v. 8, 9.) that we are saved by grace, through faith, and not of works (that is, not according to the Covenant of works, wherein the exact performance was required) lest any man should boast, namely, that he was not beholden to God for grace and and favour in rewarding him; he adds presently, lest his meaning might be mistaken, That we are God's workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained (προϋποτάξας) that we should walk in them. As if he should say, Though of our selves we are no ways able to perform those works of obedience ordained by God aforetime in his Law for us to walk in, yet now God hath, as it were, new created us in Christ, that we might perform them in him; namely, by way of acceptation, though they come short of that exactness which the Law requireth. And thus to be saved, is to be saved by grace and favour, and not by the merit of works; because the foundation whereby our selves and services are approved in the eyes of God and have promise of reward, is the mere favour of God in Jesus Christ, and not any thing in us or them.

Agreeable to these Scriptures is that in the Revelation, where glory is ascribed to Jesus Christ who loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us Kings and Priests unto God his Father; that is, that he might make us Kings and Priests unto God his Father. For [and] is here to be taken τελωνος, for [that.] Kings, to subdue the world, the flesh, and the Devil; Priests, to offer Sacrifices of prayer, thanksgiving, works of mercy, and other acceptable services to our heavenly Father. Mar. 1. 15.
Rev. 1. 5. 6.

Moreover and besides these express Scriptures, this Truth may be yet further confirmed by Demonstration and Reason. Repentance is a forsaking of sin to serve God in newness of life. Now the Gospel includes Repentance as the subject wherein it worketh, as the Body which it enliveneth as a Soul. Or, to use a similitude from weaving, Repentance is the warp of the Gospel, and the Gospel the woof of Repentance: Repentance is as the warp which the Gospel, by the shuttle of Faith, runs through as the woof, whence proceeds the web of Regeneration. Therefore is Repentance everywhere joyned with the Gospel: Both John Baptist and our Saviour so published it, Repent, for the Kingdom of heaven is at hand: Repent, and believe the Gospel. Our Saviour in his last words or commission to his Disciples tells them, Luk. 24. 47. that Repentance and Remission of sins (which is the Gospel) should be preached in his Name among all Nations, beginning at Jerusalem. All which is elsewhere comprised in the sole name of preaching the Gospel: which argues that the Gospel of Christ, and consequently our Faith in the same, supposeth Repentance as the ground to do its work upon. So S. Peter, in his first Sermon, Acts 2. 38. conjoyns them, Repent (saith he,) and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins: as if he had said, Repent; and that thy Repentance may be available, betake thy self to Christ, become a disciple and a member of his Kingdom. S. Paul likewise taught the Gospel in like manner, for himself tells us so, Acts 20. 21. that he testified both to Jews and Gentiles, Repentance toward God, and Faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ. Repentance therefore and the Gospel cannot be separated. If Repentance includes newness of life and good works, the Gospel doth so. For Christ is the way of Repentance; without Repentance there is no use of Christ, and without Christ Repentance is unavailable, and nothing worth: for without him we can neither be quit of the sins we forsake, nor turn by a new life unto God with hope of being received. He is the blessed Ferry-man, and his Gospel is the Boat, provided by the unspeakable mercy of God, for the passage of this Sea. As therefore in Repentance, we forsake sin to serve God in newness of life; so in the tenour of the Gospel, Christ delivers us from sin, that we might through Faith in him bring forth the fruits and works of a new life acceptable to our heavenly Father.

Hence it is that we shall be judged and receive our sentence at the last day according to our works: Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: For I was hungry, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Forasmuch as ye have done these things unto the least of my brethren, ye have done them unto me. Lord! how do those look to be saved at that day, who think good works not required to Salvation, and accordingly do them not? Can our Saviour pass this blessed sentence upon them? No; assuredly he will not. Mat. 25. 34. &c.
Verf. 40.

But if the case be thus in the Gospel; What is the reason, will some men, say, that the Apostle tells us, that we Christians are no longer under the Law, nor justified by the works of the Law? but under Grace, and justified by Faith only? Rom. 6. 14.
Gal. 5. 18. &
2. 16.
Rom. 3. 28.
and elsewhere.

I answer, It is true, that we are justified, that is, freed and acquitted from sin, by Faith only: But besides Justification, there is a Sanctification, with the works of piety towards God and righteousness towards men, as the Fruits, yea as the End of our Justification, required to eternal life: For therefore we are justified, that we might do works acceptable to our heavenly Father through the imputation of the Righteousness of Christ (which of our selves we could not,) and so obtain the reward he hath promised the doers of them.

Mar. I. 15.

* Rom. 3. 27.

As for the Law, it is to be considered either as a Rule, and so we are bound to conform and frame our actions to it, (for who dare deny but a Christian is bound to fear God and keep his Commandments?) or the Law may be considered as it is taken for the Covenant of works. The Apostle, when he disputes of this argument, by the Law means the Covenant of works, which he also calls \ The Law of works*; and by Faith, and the Law of Faith, he understands the Covenant of grace, the condition whereof is Faith: as will easily appear to him that shall diligently read the third and fourth chapters of the Epistle to the Galatians, where he expressly changeth those terms of Law and Faith into the equivalent appellations of the Two Covenants.

Rom. 3. 23, 10.

Now as the Law is taken for the Covenant of works (the Seal whereof was Circumcision) 'tis true, we are not under it. For the Covenant of works, called by the Apostle the Law, is that Covenant wherein Works are the condition on our part, which if we perform in every point as the Law requires, we are justified before God, as keepers of his Covenant; otherwise, if we fail in the least thing, we are condemned as guilty of the breach thereof. Under this Covenant we are not; for if we were, and were to be judged according to it, alas! who could be saved? For, all (saith the Apostle) have sinned, and come short of the glory of God. There is none righteous, no not one.

Matt. II. 30.

But the Covenant we are under, is, Believe, and thou shalt be saved; the Covenant of Grace: the condition of which Covenant, on our part, is not the doing of works which may abide the Touch-stone of the Law; but Faith in Jesus Christ, which makes our works, though of themselves insufficient and short of what the Law requires, accepted of God and capable of reward. This is that S. John saith, 1 Ep. 5. 3, 4. That to love God, is to keep his commandments, and his commandments (now under the Gospel) are not grievous. For whatsoever is born of God, overcomes the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our Faith, &c. Whence our Saviour also saith, that his yoke (the yoke of the Gospel) was ease, and his burden light. The condition of the first Covenant was that which we could not do; the condition of the second Covenant is that which enableth us to do, and makes accepted what we can do: and this is the Covenant of the Gospel, a Covenant of favour and grace through Jesus Christ our Lord.

And thus we have seen what the Apostle's meaning is, when he saith, we are not under the Law, but under Grace. Not as though a Christian were not bound to walk after God's commandments; but that the exact fulfilling of them is not the condition whereby we are justified in the New Covenant, but Faith in Jesus Christ, in whom whosoever cometh unto the Father, is accepted, be his offering never so mean, so it be tendered with sincerity and truth of heart.

Rom. 6. 1.

Most unworthy therefore should we be of this so great and unspeakable favour of Almighty God our heavenly Father, offered us in the Gospel, if when he hath given us his only Son, to make the yoke of our obedience ease and possible to be born, we, contemning this superabundant grace, should refuse to wear and draw therein. Far be it from the heart of a Christian, to think it possible to have any benefit by Christ as long as he stands thus affected; or ever to win the prize of eternal life, without running the race appointed thereunto. Shall we sin that grace may abound? saith S. Paul, God forbid.

THUS much of the Gospel. Now of Faith, whereby we are partakers of the grace therein, being the condition of the New Covenant which God hath struck with men.

Faith is to believe the Gospel, that is, to attain Salvation through Christ. But there is a three-fold Faith wherewith men believe in Christ. 1. There is a false Faith: 2. there is a true Faith, but not a saving; and 3. there is a saving Faith.

A false Faith is, to believe to attain Salvation by Christ any other way than God hath ordained; as namely, to believe to attain Salvation through him without works of obedience to be accepted of God in him: which is a Faith whereof there is no Gospel. A true Faith is, to believe Salvation to be attained through obedience to God in Jesus Christ, who by his merits and satisfaction for sin makes our selves and our

Disc. XXVI. Faith three-fold. Saving Faith not without Good works. 115

our works acceptable to his Father. A saving and justifying Faith is, to believe this so as to embrace and lay hold upon Christ for that end, to apply our selves unto him and rely upon him, that we may through him perform those works of obedience which God hath promised to reward with eternal life. For a justifying Faith stays not only in the Brain, but stirs up the Will to receive and enjoy the good believed, according as it is promised. This motion or election of the Will is that which maketh the difference between a saving Faith which joyns us to Christ, and that which is true indeed, but not saving, but dogmatical and opinionative only. And this motion or applying of the Will to Christ, this embracing of Christ and the Promises of the Gospel through him, is that which the Scripture, when it speaks of this Faith, calleth coming unto Christ, or the receiving of him. Come unto me, all ye that are heavy-laden, and I will ease you, Matth. 11. 28. See John 5. 40. and chap. 6. 37, 44, 45. So for receiving, John 1. 12. As many as received him, to them he gave power (or priviledge) to be the sons of God, even to them that believe on his Name; where receiving and believing, one expounds another.

Now if this be the Faith which is saving and unites us unto Christ, and none other; then it is plain that a saving Faith cannot be severed from good works, because no man can embrace Christ as he is promised, but he must apply himself to do them. Would we then know whether our Faith be true and saving, and not counterfeit? This is the only sign and note whereby we may know it; if we find these fruits thereof in our lives and conversations. For, 1 John 1. 6. If we say we have fellowship with Christ, and walk in darknes, we lye, and do not the truth. Ch. 2. 3. Hereby we know that we know him, (namely, to be our Advocate with the Father, and the propitiation for our sins) if we keep his Commandments. And ch. 3. 7. Little children, let no man deceive you: He that doth righteousness, is righteous, even as Christ is righteous. For if every one that believes in Christ truly and savingly, believes that Salvation is to be attained by obeying God in him, and so embraces and lays hold on him for that end; how can such a ones Faith be fruitless?

DISCOURSE XXVII.

Acts 5. 3, 4, 5.

But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the holy Ghost, and to purloin of the price of the land? Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thy power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? Thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God. And Ananias hearing these words, fell down and gave up the ghost.

IN the 110. Psalm, where our Saviour is Prophetically described in the Person of a King, advanced to the Throne of Divine Majesty, glorious and victorious, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool, &c. Verse 1. amongst other Kingly Attributes and Graces it is said, (if it be translated as it should be) That his people in the day of his power should offer him Free-will-offerings; that is, bring him Presents Verse 3. at the day of his Inauguration or Investment, as a sign of their Homage. For so was the manner of the East to do unto their Kings:

and therefore when Saul was anointed King by Samuel, it is said of those sons of Belial, which despised and acknowledged him not, that they brought him no presents: But of Messiah's people it is said, Thy people in the day of thy power (that is, the day when thou shalt enter upon thy power, or the day of thy Investment) shall be עַם נְרוּחַ, a people of free presents, or shall bring thee Free-will-offerings. It is an Elliptical speech, עַם נְרוּחַ for עַם נְרוּחַ, or עַם יְבִיא נְרוּחַ, and rightly expressed in the Translation

Acts 5.3,4.

Translation of our Service-Book, Thy people shall offer (or bring) the Free-will-offerings.

This we see fulfilled in the Story of the foregoing Chapter, when after our Saviour's ascension into heaven to sit at the right hand of God, which was the day of his power or Inauguration in his Kingdom, as soon as this his Investment was published by sending of the Holy Ghost, presently such as believed in him, that is, submitted themselves to his power, and acknowledged him to be their King, dedicated their goods and possessions to his service, selling their lands and houses, and laying down the money at the Apostles feet; namely, to be distributed as were the sacred Offerings of the Law, partly to the maintenance and furnishing of the Apostles for the work whereabout they were sent, and partly for the relief of the poor Believers, which belonged to Christ's provision.

According to this Example one Ananias with Sapphira his wife consecrated also a possession of theirs unto God, and sold the same to that purpose; but having so done, covetousness tickling them, they purloined from the price, and brought but a part of the summe, and laid it down at the Apostles feet. Then said Peter (according to the words I have read) *Why hath Satan * filled thine heart* (that is, made thee so daring) to lie unto the Holy Ghost, and to purloin from the price of the field, &c?

* So in Ffth. 7.
5. 'tis said,
Who is he אשר מלאו לבו לעשות כן whose heart hath filled him (we read it, that durst presume) to do so? Lud. de Dieu in Jo. 11. & Act. 5. Quis tantos spiritus jussit & tam audax evasit, ut hoc facere sustineat? The like phrase we have in Ecclef. 8. 11. — The heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil. In the former place the LXX. hath ἐπιδύοντε, in the latter ἐπληροζομένην.

The words I have read contain two things; Ananias his Sin, and his Punishment therefore. His Sin in the third and fourth verses; his Punishment in the fifth, Ananias hearing these words, fell down and gave up the ghost.

Concerning his Sin, as appears by the relation I have already made, it was sacrilege, namely, the purloining of what was become holy and consecrate unto God, not by actual performance, but by vow and inward purpose of the Heart. For, as it is well observed by Ainsworth, on Levit. 7. 16. out of Maimonid. in his Treatise of offering the Sacrifice, Chap. 14. Sect. 4, 5. &c. In vows and voluntaries, it is not necessary that a man pronounce ought with his lips; but if he shall be fully determined in his heart, though he hath uttered nothing with his lips, he is indebted. And this is no private Opinion of mine, the Fathers so determine it: S. Augustine, that Ananias was condemned of Sacrilege, * quod Deum in pollicitatione fessellisset, because he had deceived God, had been false to him in what he had promised him. And in another Sermon, * Ananiam detraxisse de pecunia quam voverat Deo, Ananias purloined and kept back part of the money he had devoted to God. S. Chrysostome in his 12. Homily upon this place; Ταῦτα γὰρ ἱερὰ λοιπὸν ἦν τὰ χρήματα, &c. The money or price of the land being by Ananias devoted to God's service, henceforth became sacred. And therefore he that, after he had voluntarily sold his estate with a purpose to have all the money distributed for the use of the Church, durst yet notwithstanding purloin and take part thereof to his own private use, was clearly guilty of Sacrilege. Again, in the same place, Tou see that Ananias is most justly charged with Sacrilege, ὅτι ποιήσας αὐτὰ ἱερὰ χρήματα, τότε ἔλαβε, because he took back again part of that money which he had made sacred by devoting it unto God. S. Jerome in his 8. Epistle, *Ananias & Sapphira dispensatores timidi, imò corde duplici; & ideo condemnati, quia post votum obtulerunt quasi sua, & non ejus cui semel ea voverant, partemque sibi alienæ substantiæ reservaverunt; præsentem mernere vindictam non crudelitate sententiæ, sed correctionis exemplo: Ananias and Sapphira were distrustfully covetous, false and double-hearted in disposing the money they received for the sale of their estate; and being therefore condemned, because that after their Vow they presented the price of their estate as if it had been their own still, and not God's, to whom they had given it by vow, and withal kept back and reserv'd to themselves part of that which was no more theirs, but another's, viz. God's; upon these accounts they did most worthily deserve that punishment of Death. Nor was this condemning of them to such a punishment an over-severe or cruel sentence; but an useful exemplary severity, that others might amend and fear to transgress in the like manner. Cæsarius brother to Gregory Nazianzen, in his fourth Dialogue, expresseth the sin of Ananias thus; τὸ ἀπαξ Θεῷ ἀνατεθέντ' ἡ χρυσίον, ἱεροσυλία πρῶτ' ἐνοσφίσατο, ἐρωτηθεὶς δ' ἡρνήσατο. He alienated the money dedicated unto God, being wounded with Sacrilege; and when he was asked thereabout, denied it. Lastly, Oecumenius, in whom we have the currant interpretation of the Greek Fathers, thus expounds the words of S. Peter to Ananias; — μὴ γὰρ ἀκούεις ὑμᾶς ἔλκομεν, &c. We were far from compelling or forcing you in the least to sell your estate: But when as you were pleased of your own accord to offer it as a Sacrifice to God, for you afterwards*

* Serm. 25.
De verb. Ap.
* Serm. 10.
De divitiis.

wards to withhold any part of what ye had given to God for the use of the Church, and to keep it for your own use; this without question is plain sacrilege. And then adds, δὲ τῶν ἱεροσύλων καθυπεβλήθησαν προσήμιον. τίτι τὴν τῶν θανάτων. And therefore they received the punishment due to sacrilegious persons: what's that? even Death itself. Also Asterius Bishop of Amasea, who lived near the time of Julian, in his Hom. against Covetousness, calls Ananias and Sapphira τῶν οἰκείων ἀθεμάτων ἱεροσύλους, persons guilty of sacrilege even in their own Offerings.

I quote these Fathers the more fully, because many of our late Commentators omit the main sin, and dwell upon the circumstances only, as Hypocrisy, Vain-glory, Covetousness, and the like. But we must distinguish between Ananias his Fact, and the manner and circumstance thereof. The Fact was sacrilege: In the manner of doing, other sins attended as handmaids. It will be plain, if we ask but these two questions: First, What Ananias did: The Text will make answer, ἐκοσφίσατο ἀπὸ τῆ τιμῆς, He purloined of the price, the holy money; This was his Fact. Ask secondly, How and in what manner he purloined: The story will tell us, dissemblingly and hypocritically, making an appearance to the contrary. This then was but the manner and circumstance of his Fact, and so the species of the Fact not to be placed therein.

Now this sacrilege or sacrilegious act committed by Ananias is in the words of the Text partly expressed, partly aggravated from the inexcusableness thereof. In the expression is spent the third Verse, the aggravation is in the fourth.

The Crime or Fact of Ananias is expressed two ways. First, by κοσφισαδαι ἀπὸ τῆ τιμῆς, purloining of the sacred price. Secondly, by ψεύσασθαι τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, by lying unto, or deceiving, the Holy Ghost. For both these I suppose to mean one and the same thing, namely the same Fact of Ananias two waysexpressed. The first, κοσφισαδαι ἀπὸ τῆ τιμῆς, I translate by stealing or purloining, for so the word signifies. Our English which turns it Keeping back of the price, doth not sufficiently express the propriety thereof in this place: In another place it doth, Tit. 2. 10. where it turns κοσφιζόμενους, purloining; Exhort servants, saith the Apostle, to be obedient unto their Masters, and to please them well in all things, μὴ κοσφιζόμενους, not purloining, but shewing all good fidelity. The Vulgar in both places useth Fraudare, defrauding. In a word, the true signification of κοσφισαδαι is surripere, suffurari, aut clam subduela in commodum nostrum convertere; to steal or take away privily, or to convert to our own use and advantage what was so closely purloined. Whence Beza turns it by Intervertere, Intervertit ex pretio, He purloined, or closely and cunningly took unto himself, part of the price; and in Titus, Intervertentes. In the same sense it is used by the Septuagint in two several places, both pointing at the sin of sacrilege. One is in Achan's story, Josh. 7. 1. where what we read, Achan took of the accursed thing, the Septuagint renders, ἐκοσφίσας ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀναθέματος, he purloined of the accursed thing, that is, the thing that was consecrated to God, as all the silver and gold was, Chap. 6. Ver. 19. For which cause when God relates to Joshuah Israel's sin as the reason of their flying before their enemies, he makes a distinction between Achan's sacrilege and his theft and dissembling, Ver. 11. of the 7. Chap. saying, For they have even taken of the accursed thing, and have also stollen also, and they have put it even among their own stuff. The other is in 2 Macc. 4. 32. where Menelaus his sacrilege (who stole the sacred Vessels) is expressed by it; Menelaus (saith the Author) supposing he had got a convenient time, χρυσώματα τινα κοσφισάμενος, stole certain vessels of gold out of the Temple, and gave some to Andronicus, and some he sold into Tyrus and the Cities round about.

*Andronicus and ὄρν signi-fic both a thing cursed,
and a thing
offered or consecrated, which had a curse laid upon it,
viz. a curse to him that medled with
it.*

The second expression of Ananias his sacrilege is by ψεύσασθαι τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, deceiving, or lying to, the Holy Ghost; or, as it is repeated immediately after, ψεύσασθαι τῷ θεῷ, lying unto God. Πεύσασθαι is fallor, frustror, mentior, to deceive, cozen, lie; (as also the Hebrew word הַיָּא, which peculiarly signifies sacrilegious transgression, as Lev. 5. 15. and in the story of Achan, is in all those places (as elsewhere) rendered in the Targum, קשׁ to lie, and the substantive הַיָּא, קשׁ a lie) and in Oaths and Promises, Non servo, frango, not to keep, or to break them. So Ananias his sin was a lying unto, or breaking of promise with, God: For having vowed, or promised unto him in his heart, the whole price of the field, he brought him but part thereof. Both expressions point out the same Fact; which, in regard of the matter was stealing or purloining; in regard of the Vow and Consecration, a breach of promise or lying unto God. So that when Peter says in the third verse, Why hath Satan filled thine heart, to lie unto the Holy Ghost, and to purloin of the price of the land? the latter is the explication of the former, and is as if it had been said, Why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie unto the Holy Ghost, in purloining the price of the land?

But

Acts 5.3,4.

But what, will some man say, means this special expression of the Deity in the Person of the Holy Ghost? why is Ananias said to have lyed to the Holy Ghost, rather than to have lyed unto God only? For lying unto God would bear the sense I speak of. Should not then lying unto the Holy Ghost seem to have something else, or something more in it? I answer; Ananias his lie or breach of promise is applied thus in special to the Holy Ghost in respect of the Prerogative of that Person, as to stir and sanctifie, so to take notice of the motions of the Heart. Forasmuch therefore as Ananias his Vow and Promise which he broke was not such as men could witness or take notice of, but such as his own Heart and Conscience only was privy to; hence it is said to have been done under the privy of the Holy Ghost, and he in the breach thereof to have lied unto him; because that which none but the inward man knoweth of, and is yet but in the purpose of the Heart, is under his privy. There is a plain place Rom. 9. 1. to this purpose; I say the truth in Christ, (saith the Apostle) I lie not, my Conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost; that is, the Holy Ghost, who is privy to my Conscience, bearing me witness, or my Conscience which the Holy Ghost is privy to. Some other places of Scripture I could name which may receive light from this notion, but I am loth to meddle with them.

But for their interpretation, who expound this Lying unto the Holy Ghost of Ananias his Hypocrisie, I cannot well see how it can stand: for Ananias dissembled not with the Holy Ghost, but with men; the Holy Ghost knew his Heart well enough. And the Hypocrite properly lies unto men, who guess only by the out-side, and not unto God, who knows the Heart.

Others expound Lying unto the Holy Ghost, as if it were Lying to try whether the Holy Ghost in the Apostles could discover him or not: But this is an harsh and forc'd sense. As for that in the 9. verse whereon it is grounded, viz. How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? The word Tempt, or πειράζεν, is mistaken; the notion thereof in Scripture being otherwhile, To provoke God by some presumptuous fact to anger, as it were to try whether he will punish or not, to dare God. There is an evident place for this sense, Numb. 14. 22. Those men, saith the Lord, which have seen my glory and my miracles which I did in Egypt and in the wilderness, and have tempted me now these ten times, and have not hearkened to my voice, 23. Surely, they shall not see the land which I swore to their Fathers, neither shall any of them that provoked me see it.

And thus much of the bare description of Ananias his Sin: Come we now to the aggravation thereof; While it remained, was it not thine? and after it was sold, was it not in thy power? That is, Before it was sold, was it not thine? and being sold, was not the money paid thee? was not the price in thine hand? Thou hast therefore no excuse for what thou hast done.

For there were two Cases which might have excused Ananias for bringing but part of the price: If either he had not been Dominus in solidum, the full Proprietary of what was sold; or had not received the whole price it was sold for. For, as for the First, it is a Rule in Law, Quoties Dominium transfertur ad alium, tale transfertur quale apud eum fuit qui tradit. A man can sell no more than is his. So that if Ananias had been owner but in part, he had power to dispose but in part. Secondly, Though he were Dominus in solidum, the full Proprietary of the Field, and so had right enough to sell it; yet had not the whole price been received, and in his power and possession, he might still have been excused for bringing but part thereof. But Ananias could plead neither of these: for, saith S. Peter, Οὐχὶ μένον σοὶ ἔμμε; whilst it remained unsold, did it not remain thine? or wert not thou owner? καὶ οὐχὶ πωθέν ἐν τῇ σῇ ἐξουσίᾳ ὑπῆρχε; and when it was sold, was not the money it was sold for in thy possession? The first words, Οὐχὶ μένον σοὶ ἔμμε; (though there be no such speech again in Scripture) yield the sense I speak of pliantly enough, nor will they bear any other meaning; unless somewhat forsaking the letter, we should with others construe them to imply, That Ananias was not constrained or urged to sell his possession at all, but might have kept it still. Which sense is most commonly followed, and hath the authority of Oecumenius in the words before alledged; — μὴ γὰρ ἀκούσας, &c. We were far (saith S. Peter to Ananias and Sapphira) from compelling you in the least to sell your estate: But whereas you were pleased of your own accord to offer it as a sacrifice and Free-will-offering to God, for you afterwards to withdraw any part of what ye had devoted to God, and take it to your own use; this is ἱεροσυλία ἀναλλήπτου, downright Sacrilege without all controversie and dispute. Therefore Beza translates the words, Nonne, si servasset, (so he renders μένον) manebat tibi?

True

True it is, this sense makes as much for the unexcusableness of Ananias as the other: For could he have alledged, that what he had done for the sale of his land was done not spontè, but coactè, not willingly, but by way of constraint; it might have excused him: Because that act only is taken to be of force in Law which a man consents unto; but that which is done by constraint or compulsion, is not done with full and free consent, and therefore binds not. So this sense agrees well enough with the story, only it may seem somewhat to strain the words: Howsoever if you had rather follow it, because of the authority, I will not contend. Only note thus much, that the Syriack Translator inclines to the first sense; for he translates, Οὐχὶ μένον σοὶ ἔμμεν; לא הוא רילך הות ער לא תורכן, Was it not thine before it was sold?

Acts 5.3.4.

A second plea for the excuse of Ananias might have been in case he had not yet received the full price, and so had not the whole money in his hand. But this S. Peter also takes from him, Οὐχὶ περὶ ἐξουσίᾳ (saith he) ἐν τῇ σὴ ἐξουσίᾳ ὑπῆρχε; Was it not, when it was sold, in thy power? that is, was not the price it was sold for in thine hands? For τὸ περὶ ἐξουσίᾳ must here be understood for the price of what was sold, or the Field reduced to money: otherwise the contrary would be true to that which Peter intimates, namely, That when it was sold, it was now no longer in his power, because he had sold it. But the latter words, ἐν τῇ σὴ ἐξουσίᾳ, in thy power, I understand to be as much as, in thy possession, or in thine hand; meaning, as I have said, that he had received the price. For not only that which a man hath dominion and propriety in, but that also which he hath but in bare possession, is rightly said to be in his power. For in the Law Jus possessionis extends farther than Jus dominii, namely, as far as Habere, to have a thing: Habere autem dicitur, non solum qui rei dominus est, sed qui rei quidem dominus non est, sed rem tenet; that is, as they speak, corpore possessioni inest. And in this sense the price which Ananias had received is said to have been ἐν τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ αὐτοῦ, in his power, that is, in his possession. Which will not seem a forc'd exposition, if we consider that ἐν τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ hath the same sense with בְּיָד, or in manu, in the Hebrew; which implies not dominion only, but also bare possession. As it is said of Abraham's servant, Gen. 24. 10. that all the goods of his Master were in his hand; as well as of the rich miser's son, Eccles. 5. 14. that there was nothing in his hand, that is, he was a beggar. Both which might be expressed by ἐν τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ, as manus in Hebrew, yea and in Latin too, is well enough known to be put for ἐξουσία power.

Possession.

Propriety.

I confess there is another Exposition usually given of these words, but it is such an one as directly contradicts the story; namely, that Was it not in thy power? should be, Was it not in thy power to have kept the price when it was sold? But first there is no such word in the Text as to keep it, and so we are not bound to understand it. It is only said, Was it not in thy power? And if any Verb be to be understood to supply the sense, why should it not as well be the contrary? Was it not in thy power to dispose it according to thy Vow? intimating there might be some just impediment after the sale, whereby he could not; especially if he could not get the money. But to expound, Was it not in thy power? to be, Was it not in thy power to have kept it? is directly against the drift of the story: For how did Ananias sin in bringing but part of the price, if he might have kept all? Is not his sin expressly placed in that he purloined of the price? what other Fact of his is mentioned save only this? Nay, if this should be the meaning of the words, it would follow, a man might vow a thing unto God, and yet be at liberty, when he had done, whether he would perform it or not; he might lie unto God, and yet be guiltless. Without doubt this Exposition was it that so obscured the whole Narration, that it could not appear wherein Ananias his Sin consisted. But his Sin, as I have already shewed out of the Fathers, was Sacrilege, and of that kind whereof Solomon speaks, Prov. 20. 25. It is a snare to the man who devours that which is holy, and after vows to enquire. He had dedicated the whole value of the Field in his conscience and the purpose of his heart, as was evident by his sale thereof to that end; and yet when he had done, he repented him, and brought but part thereof. This meaning is evidently contained in the body of the Narration, and therefore such a sense of any part as cannot stand with this, is in no wise to be admitted. He that considers it, will perceive the necessity of what I say.

HAVING thus cleared the words of the Text where there was any doubt or obscurity, let us come to the Observations to be deduced thence; whereof the Relation affords us three evident ones.

1. That Sacrilege is a Sin against God, and not against men.
2. That that which is consecrated to God, must not be alienated to other uses.
3. That it is an heinous Sin which God thus severely punished.

For

Acts 5.3,4.
Observat. 1.

For the First, That Sacrilege is a sin against God, and not against men, is plain by the Text, Thou hast not lyed (said Peter) unto men, but unto God. For whatsoever is sacred, is his; yea, to be sacred is nothing else but to be set apart from man's interest to be God's in a peculiar propriety and relation. To steal then or alienate that which is sacred, is to rob God, and not man; for he is robbed whose the propriety is, but of sacred things God is the Proprietary, and not man. It is an error therefore to be observed among the Expositors of the Decalogue, who rank sacrilege as a Sin of the Eighth Commandment: when sacrilege as sacrilege is a Sin of the First Table, and not of the Second; a breach of the loyalty we immediately owe to God, and not of the duty we owe to our neighbour. True it is, He that committeth sacrilege, indirectly and by consequent robbeth men too, namely, those who live of God's provision; but sacrilege it self is the robbing of God. This is evident by that of the Prophet Malachi, Mal. 3. 8. Will a man rob God? yet ye have robbed me, (saith the Prophet in the person of God:) But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In Tithes and Offerings. Ver. 9. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole Nation. Ver. 10. Bring ye all the Tithes into the store-house, that there may be meat in mine house; and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it, &c.

The observation of this would be useful in the Question of the due of Tithes; for the state thereof is not rightly framed, when the Quere is made, Whether Tithes are due to the Ministers of the Gospel; meaning as a duty of the people unto them. We should say rather, Tithes are due unto God; for so is the style of the Scripture, All the Tithes are mine: these I give to Levi, and not you. God maintains not his Ministers at others charges, but out of his own Revenue which he had reserved to himself: As was well observed by Philo the Jew, in his Book de sacerdotum honoribus, where speaking of that σεμνότερον τεύχος καὶ ἀπονώτερον, that honourable maintenance and without bodily toil, which God had provided for his Priesthood, ὑπὲρ ὃ τὸ μὴδὲνα τῆς διδόντων οὐκ εἰσὶν τοῖς λαμβάνουσιν, to take away from them out of whose labours this maintenance did accrue all occasion of upbraiding those who by God's assignment were to receive it, he saith, κελεύει τὰς ἀπαρχὰς εἰς τὸ ἱερόν κομιζεσθαι πρῶτον, εἰτ' ἐνθὺνδε τὰς ἱερεὺς λαμβάνειν. ἡμοῖς τε γὰρ θεῷ τῶν μὲν ἀεργετημένων, &c. The people were commanded to bring their offerings first to the Temple, that thence the Priests might fetch them: It being not unworthy God himself, in token of gratitude for his infinite bounty and benefits, to take some part back again from him upon whom he had conferred so great benefits; and seeing himself, the Giver of all good gifts, stood in need of nothing, it pleased him to transfer that honourable maintenance, which was so returned him by way of thankfulness, upon those that served at his Altar and ministered about holy things: τῷ γὰρ μὴ παρ' ἀνθρώπων, (as he gives the reason) ἀλλὰ παρὰ τῷ πάντων ἐνεργῆτι δοκεῖν λαμβάνειν, ἀδυσώπητον ἔχει δωρεάν because they (the Priests) might take that their provision without being ashamed, as not coming from men, but from God the Giver of all good gifts to every one. For they are his Ministers, and * not the people's; and therefore to receive their wages from their own Master who employs them, and not from them. The stating of the Question thus would make the way to the resolution of the controversie more easie, and less invidious, whilst we should plead for God, and not for our selves. For it is not needful that all which is given unto God should be spent upon his Ministers; though it be true that their maintenance should be out of his Revenue, and that honourable and competent. But there are many other uses for the employment of bona sacra, the sacred Revenues, if there be more than is competent for them and theirs; building of Churches; defraying of such as are sent to Synods and employed upon other occasions of the Church; furnishing of treasures for a Holy War; the relief of the poor, the Orphan, the Widow, the Captive and the distressed: All which belong to Christ's provision.

* See Discours V.

Observat. 2. Thus much of the First Observation: Now I come to the Second, That that which is consecrated to God may not be alienated to other uses. The Reasons whereof are,

1. Because none can alienate but he that hath the propriety and is Owner; Dominium transferre non potest qui ipse Dominus non est: But in things consecrated to God, none hath the propriety but God. For certainly a man cannot be said to have given that unto God wherein he still reserves the Title to himself as the Owner. He that gives, transfers the Dominium from himself unto him to whom the gift is made. If therefore that which is given to God, be God's; then must those who go about to alienate it, dispose of that which is none of theirs: which whether it be just or not, let any man judge.

2. To

2. To alienate that which is given unto God is a Breach of Vow or Promise made unto him; a lying unto him, as my Text speaks. And if it be a Sin not to perform what was vowed in the purpose of the Heart only, (as we see it was in this Story of Ananias;) much more is it to revoke a Vow already performed. Nor will it serve turn to say, This reason may indeed concern the person himself that vowed, that he should not revoke again what he hath vowed; but doth not take away from the Commonwealth or publick Magistrate their power to dispose of things subject to them. For howsoever it be true, That every private person and his goods are under the tuition of the Publick; and the interest the Publick hath in either cannot be given away by the sole act of a private person: yet in this case that Rule hath place which is given by Almighty God, Numb. 30. 3, &c. concerning a Maiden's vow in her Father's house, or a Woman's vow under covert; That if the Father or the Husband hear the Vow, and the bond wherewith she bound her soul, and disallow it not, but shall hold his peace; then the vow shall stand. So when the Commonwealth or publick Magistrate consents to and allows what is done, as in this case it is supposed they do; the vow and dedication is also irrevocable on their part.

Acts 5. 3, 4.

Hence in Scripture it is made an inseparable property of that which is sacred or God's, not to be alienable. As in Ezek. 48. 14. it is said of the portion of land to be laid out for the Levites, They shall not sell it, neither exchange, nor alienate the first-fruits of the land; (mark the reason;) for it is holy unto the Lord. This was the reason likewise why a Jew might not sell out-right his possession in the land of Canaan, but only for fifty years term, or until the year of Jubilee; because the whole land was holy, and God's land, and they but Usufructuaries. So saith God Levit. 25. 23. The land shall not be sold for ever, or out-right, for the land is mine; for ye are strangers and sojourners with me: therefore v. 24. in all the land of your possession ye shall grant a redemption for the land. Where he saith, ye are strangers and sojourners with me; the meaning is, That as the Gentiles who became Profelytes had no inheritance in the land, but dwelt therein as sojourners: So was all Israel in the sight of God, who would have none accounted Proprietaries of that land but himself, having acquired it by his own powerful conquest from the Canaanite. For although in the same land some part were yet in a more special manner the Lord's land; yet comparatively and secundum quid the whole land was sacred and His. As all Israel was a peculiar and holy people, though the Tribe of Levi were in a more special sort the holy Tribe. Now if that which was but in a more general sense holy and the Lord's, might not be alienated; what shall we say of that which is holy and His in the most special manner of all? I speak all this while of that which is dedicate unto God absolutely, and not with limitation or for term of time only; for such Dedications I suppose there may be.

Now if any shall ask me, whether this Assertion, That things dedicate to God are unalienable, admits not of some limitations; I answer, It may; and that in two cases: If either it can be proved that the Donation made unto God were a nullity; or shewed that God hath relinquished the right which once he had. But here the water begins to grow too deep for my wading; yet I hope I may say thus much, That whosoever he be that shall plead either of these Cases to acquit himself of sacrilege, had need be sure in a point of such moment that his evidence be good, and such as he can shew good warrant for out of God's own Book: To go upon bare conjectures will not be safe. And for direction and caution in this Case, I will add further, That not every sinfulness of the person who is the Donor, nor every default or blemish in the Consecration, makes the act it self void. It appears in the story of Korah, Dathan and Abiram, in that oblation of Incense made by the two hundred and fifty Princes of the Congregation; whose service though it were so displeasing unto the Lord, that he sent fire from heaven to consume them, yet when all was done, he gave this commandment to Moses, Speak (saith he) unto Eleazer the son of Aaron the Priest, that he take up the censers out of the burning, and scatter thou the fire yonder; for they are hallowed. The censers of those sinners against their souls; let them make of them broad plates for a covering of the Altar: for they offered them before the Lord, therefore they are hallowed, Numb. 16. 37, 38. Mark here; Though they were offered by sinful men, and in a sinful manner, and were not to be used any more for Censers; yet must they be applied to some other holy use, because they were become sacred by having been offered unto the Lord. So Rabbi Solomon Jarchi, קרשו ואסורין בהנאה שהרי עשאו כלי שרת, Unlawful for common use, because they had made them vessels of Ministry.

My last Observation is raised from the Judgment which befel Ananias; That it must be observed, that it needs needs be a hainous sin which God so severely punished, namely, with death: For there is no Example to be found again in the whole New Testament of so severe a Punishment inflicted by the mouth of the Apostles for any sin whatsoever. But this was the first Consecration of goods that ever was made unto Christ our Lord, after he was invested to sit at the right hand of God; and this transgression of Ananias and Sapphira the first sacrilege that ever was committed against him: Wherefore it was requisite that by the severity of the punishment thereof, he should now manifest unto men what account he made of and how hainous he esteemed that Sin; that it might be for an Example to the world's end unto all that should afterward believe in his name to beware thereof. So saith S. Hierome, Ananias & Sapphira, quia post votum obtulerunt quasi sua, & non ejus cui semel ea voverant, presentem meruere vindictam, non crudelitate sententiae, sed correctionis exemplo. Ananias and Sapphira most worthily deserved to be so severely punished, viz. with death; because that after their vow they presented the price of their estate as if it had been their own, and not God's to whom they had given it, and withal kept back and reserved to themselves part of that which was no more theirs, but another's, viz. God's. Nor was this an over-severe and cruel sentence, but an useful exemplary severity, that others might amend, and beware of offending in the like kind. For the First in every kind is the Measure of that which follows: and though sacrilege be not since punished by God, as often as it is committed, by such a visible death; yet was it his purpose that by this First punishment we should take notice how great that Sin was, and how displeasing in his sight, which was a punishment by the greatest visible judgment that could be.

Acts 5.3,4.

The like severe Example to this, and for the like end, was that upon him who at first profaned the Sabbath-day in the Wilderness by gathering sticks, Numb. 15.32, &c. who by the sentence of God himself was put to death, and stoned by the whole Congregation: that the Jews hereby might know, that howsoever the like were not ordinarily afterward to be inflicted for the like sin, yet the gravity thereof in the eyes of God was still the same which that First severity intimated.

Furthermore, it is worthy to be noted, that we find three Examples of such a kind of coercive jurisdiction (if I may so term it) exercised either by our Saviour when he was here on earth, or by his Apostles; and all three for the profanation of that which was sacred. The first two by our Saviour himself against those that profaned his Temple, by buying and selling therein as a common place: For which, at the first Passover after his beginning to preach the Gospel, he made him a whip, and whipped such profaners out of it, saying, Make not my Father's house a house of Merchandise, John 2.16. Another time, which was at his last Passover, He overthrew the Tables of the Money-changers, and the seats of them that sold Doves, and would not suffer any to carry a Vessel through the Temple; telling them, that his house was made for an house of prayer, but they had made it a den of Thieves, * Matt. 21. 12. Mark 11. 15. Luke 19. 45. The third Example is this which the Apostle Peter exercised upon Ananias and Sapphira for sacrilege. Whereby it should appear that, how small account soever we are now-a-days wont to make of these sins, yet in God's esteem they are other manner of ones than we take them for.

Vide Chrysost.
in Matt. 21.12.

* S. Jerom on this place affirms this to be one of the greatest Miracles wrought
by our Lord.

Another argument of the hainousness of the sin of Sacrilege is, That there was no Sacrifice appointed in the Law to make atonement for the same, if it were committed willingly and wittingly; but only if it were ignorantly done. For so we have it, Levit. 5. 15, 16. If a soul commit a trespass, and sin through ignorance in the holy things of the Lord; he shall bring for his trespass unto the Lord a Ram without blemish out of the flock. — And he shall make amends for the harm that he hath done in the holy thing, and add the fifth part thereunto. — And the Priest shall make an atonement for him, and it shall be forgiven him. Thus if it were done ignorantly; but if wittingly and presumptuously, there was no atonement appointed for it: though for other sins there be, even to Perjury it self. For, as it is in Mal. 3.8. Will a man rob his God?

Another proof and testimony of the hainousness of this Sin, is that so ancient a custom in Dedications to lade it with a Curse: Which to be no late custom (as some may suppose) taken up among Christians, but used both by Jew and Gentile before Christ was born, may appear by that Decree of King Darius for the building of the Temple of Jerusalem, which concludes with this Execration; The God that hath caused his Name to dwell there, destroy all Kings and people that shall put to their hand to destroy this House of God which is at Jerusalem. I Darius have made a Decree, let it be done with speed. Ezra 6.12.

From this custom it came, that Anathema signifies both a Donary given unto a Temple, Temple, and an accursed thing, or that which hath a curse with it. So קֶרֶם in Hebrew a thing cursed and destined to destruction, and also a kind of offering or consecration which had a curse laid upon it, namely, a curse to him that should meddle with it. Acts 5. 3. 4. Which kind of Consecration had this peculiar, that even the very individual might never be altered, changed, or redeemed upon any terms, Levit. 27. 28. whereas other offerings might, so that a valuable thing or better were given for them. Such a Consecration (I mean a Cherem, or Consecration under pain of a curse in the very individual) was that of the City Jericho as the First-fruits of the conquests of Canaan.

To these Arguments I will add two or three Examples to this of Ananias, of the Punishment of this sin, and so conclude. To begin then with the beginning of all: Was not the First sin of Mankind, for which himself, his posterity and the whole earth was accursed, a great and capital sin? But this, if we look well into it, was no other for the species and kind of the Fact than sacrilege: Such the ancient Jews conceived Adam's sin to have been, namely, a species of Theft; as may be gathered out of the Book De morte Moſis, where Moſes is brought in deprecating death, and answering God that his case was not such as Adam's; for he transgressed by stealing, and eating what God forbade him to meddle with, and so was justly condemned, עֲבַר אָדָם הָרָשָׁון נֹנֵב וְאָכַל : But who could Adam steal from, save from God only? And therefore I say the First sin of mankind for the Fact, was the sin of sacrilege: For whereas among all the Trees of the Garden, which God gave man freely to enjoy, there was one Noli me tangere, which he had reserved unto himself as holy, in token he was Lord of the Garden; Man by eating of this as common, violated the sign of his Fealty unto the great Landlord of the whole Earth, and committed sacrilege: for which he was cast out of Paradise, and the whole earth accursed for his sake. Might I not say, that to this day many a son of Adam is cast out of his Paradise, and the labours of his hands accursed, for meddling with this forbidden fruit? But to go on.

Achan for nimming a wedge of gold and a Babylonish garment of the devoted thing of Jericho aforementioned, brought a curse both upon himself and the whole Congregation of Israel. Josh. 7. 21.

For the sacrilege of Eli's sons, who, not content with those Offerings which God allowed them for their maintenance, robbed him of his Sacrifices to furnish their own Tables, God gave not only his people, but even the Ark of his Covenant, into the hands of the Philistines. 1 Sam. 2.

For the sacrilege of the Seventh or Sabbatical year, God caused his people to be carried captive, and the land to lie waste seventy years. By the Law of Moſes every Seventh year the whole land was sacred unto the Lord, so that no man that year might challenge any right of propriety, either to sow his field, or prune his vineyard, or reap that which grew of it self, or gather the fruits of his vineyard undressed; only he might eat thereof in the field, as at other times any might of that which was none of his, as he travelled by; otherwise every man's field and vineyard was that year free as well to the Servant as the Master, to the Stranger as the Owner, to Beasts as well as to Men. The same year also were all servants and all Debts sacred unto the Lord, and so to be released; whence that year was called The Lord's release. See Exod. 21. Levit. 25. Deut. 15. This consecration being as much as the forgoing of the seventh part of every man's profits, the covetous Jews for many years neglected the observation thereof: For which sin the Lord, as himself professeth, caused them to be carried captive, and the land to lie waste seventy years without Inhabitant, till it had fulfilled the years of Sabbath which they observed not. For their Idolatry he gave them into the hands of the Gentiles their enemies: for their sabbatical sacrilege he added this unto it, that they should, beside their bondage, be carried captives into a strange Country, and their Land lie desolate seventy years. \ 2 Chron. 36. 21. Levit. 25. 4.*

For the sacrilegious profanation of Belshazzar, in causing the Vessels of God's House to be made his Quaffing-bowls for himself and his Lords, his Wives and his Concubines to carouse in; was the hand-writing upon the wall sent, which did so affright him, that the Text says, His countenance was changed, and his thoughts troubled him, so that the joints of his loins were loosed, and his knees smote one against another. And the same night God's vengeance lighted upon him. \ Dan. 5. 2. Verſ. 6.*

Lastly, In the days of the Greek Kings God gave his own Temple and Worship to be profaned, and his people to be troden under foot by Antiochus Epiphanes a Gentile King; because they themselves had a little before profaned the same with sacrilegious hands, having betrayed the Treasures and Offerings of the same unto a Gentile's coffers, and sold the Sacred Vessels to the Cities round about them, 2 Maccab. 3, 4. and 5. Chapters.

DISCOURSE XXVIII.

PROVERBS 30. 8, 9.

Give me neither Poverty, nor Riches; Feed me with Food convenient for me, [לֶחֶם חָקִי]

Lest I be full and deny thee, and say, Who is the Lord? or lest I be poor and steal, and take the name of my God in vain. [וְתַפְשֵׁתִי שֵׁם אֱלֹהֵי]

THESE words are a part of the Prayer of Agur, a man for wisdom ranked with Solomon; and one of the two things he desired of God not to deny him before he died. The first was concerning his inward and spiritual estate, Remove far from me vanity and lies, that is, all impiety and sinful hypocrisie: for so David expressed them, Psal. 4. 2. O ye sons of men, how long will ye turn God's glory into shame? how long will ye love vanity, and seek after leasing? The second is concerning his outward estate, Give me neither Poverty, nor Riches; Feed me with Food convenient, &c.

This second suit contains two parts: 1. His Request: 2. The Reason thereof. His Request is doubly expressed; first Negatively, what he would not have; then Affirmatively, what he would have. The Negative part in these words, Give me neither Poverty, nor Riches: the Affirmative in these, Feed me with Food convenient for me. Then follows the Reason, Lest I be full and deny thee, &c.

Nevertheless this Request, though two ways expressed, is not to be conceived as two, but one Request; both ways tending to the same purpose: For he that would be neither poor nor rich, must needs be in the middle; and he that hath neither too little nor too much, must needs have a competency or food convenient for him. Therefore Agur reckons of this but as one petition, when he saith in the former verse, Two things have I required of thee; deny me not them before I die. Else the things that he required would be three, if this of my Text made two.

Again, for the understanding of this compound suit, we must not so conceive it as if he prayed absolutely against Riches, or absolutely against Poverty; (for so the Prayer were unlawful, Poverty and Riches being of themselves things indifferent, and the blessing of God may go with both: ) But it is a Prayer of choice, or a comparative prayer; as if he had said, Rather than either Poverty or Riches, Give me, O Lord, if it be thy will, the Mean between both: Feed me with Food convenient for me. For though all three estates be indifferent, yet comparatively and for choice the middle is the best and happiest condition. Such speeches by way of Opposition or Antithesis, yet implying in their sense a choice or Protimesis, are frequent in Scripture. * I will have mercy, and not sacrifice: not to be understood as though God forbade Sacrifice; but thus, I had rather have mercy than sacrifice. So in S. Matthew, * Lay not up for your selves treasures upon earth; but lay up for your selves treasures in heaven: not to be understood as a plain prohibition to lay up earthly treasures, but by way of choice or προτιμησης. Rather lay up treasures in heaven, than treasures upon earth; Have a greater care of the one than of the other: And many the like, for it is a frequent expression.

Thus having made the way plain and open to my Text, I come now to consider the several parts thereof: and First, The Request or Thing prayed for; where, of the two ways whereby it is expressed, I must, for the more easie unfolding thereof, begin with the Affirmative, Feed me with Food convenient for me. For if this be understood, we cannot be long ignorant of the other: If we know the Mean once which Agur chuseth, we shall soon guess what he understands by Riches and Poverty, the Extremes which he refuseth. Feed me (saith he) with Food convenient for me. This convenient food is in the Original לֶחֶם חָקִי, Panis dimens mei, The bread of my competent allowance. The Septuagint turns it, τὰ δέοντα καὶ τὰ ἀρκευόντα, Things fit and sufficient: Symmachus, Διαίταν ἱκανὴν, Competent diet: The Chaldee Paraphrast, לֶחֶם מִסְתָּה, Bread or Food sufficient for me; for so מִסְתָּה or מִסְתָּה signifies; for it is the word for Sufficit, * Hof. 6. 6.

Matt. 9. 13. 8.
12. 7.
* Matt. 6. 19, 20.

Discourse XXVIII. Food convenient more particularly explained. 125

cit, in the 15. verse of this Chapter, Four things say not, אֲתָמָּה, sufficit, It is enough; it is the word for sufficient, Exod. 26. 7. where it is said of the offering for the Tabernacle, that which was offered, אֲתָמָּה was sufficient for all the work; and in 2 Sam. 24. 16. where God says of the plague, אֲתָמָּה sufficit, It is enough. Prov. 30. 8, 9

Now by Bread or Food the Hebrew understands All provisions for the use of life: so competent Food is a competent Maintenance: Which to be the true meaning of this Panis dimensis, Agur's deprecation of Poverty on the one side, and of Riches on the other, is a firm demonstration: For what else can it be but a state of Competency which he begs as the Mean between Want and Superfluity?

And this is even that Ἀρτὸ ὁ ἐπιούσιος, that daily bread, which Christ our Lord in his Prayer hath taught us all to pray for; τὸ ἄρτον ἡμῶν τὸ ἐπιούσιον δὸς ἡμῖν σήμερον, or, as S. Luke hath it, τὸ κατὰ ἡμέραν, Give us day by day our daily bread: Where the meaning in general is indifferently well agreed upon; but much ado there is what this word ἐπιούσιος should signify. But not to trouble you with the rehearal of so many varieties of interpretation as the singularity of this word hath begotten, some nearer, some altogether wide of the mark; the plain truth is, That as περισσός, a word like unto this, was first devised by the Septuagint; so was Ἐπιούσιος in this prayer made by the Evangelists in imitation thereof; neither of both being any where to be found but in Scripture only. For the Septuagint of περισσός signifying Abundantia, Exuperantia, abundance and superfluity, formed the Adjective περισσός to express the Hebrew word עֲשִׂירָה; and for עֲשִׂירָה * a Peculiar people, rendered λαὸς περισσός, a Supernumerary people, a people wherein God had a Superlative propriety and interest, above and besides his common interest to all the Nations of the world: For so he saith, Exod. 19. 5. Thou shalt be unto me λαὸς περισσός a Peculiar people above all people, for all the earth is mine: as if he should say, But you shall be mine in a degree above the rest. * Deut. 7. 6 & ch. 14. 2. & 26. 18.

According to the Example and Analogy of this περισσός. (I say) the Evangelists here formed Ἐπιούσιος. For as περισσός signifies an Abundance or Superfluity, of ὕψις a Being, and περι ultra or super, as it were an Over-Being; so would Ἐπιούσιος signify a Sufficiency, as it were τὸ ἐπὶ τὴν ὕψιν, that which is adequate to Being, or, as Suidas hath it, τὸ ἐπὶ τῇ ὕψει ἡμῶν ἀρμόζον, Fit for our Being and Supportance, Therefore as of περισσός Abundance, the Septuagint made περισσός Abounding: so the Evangelists of Ἐπιούσιος a Sufficiency, made Ἐπιούσιος Sufficient. And this is agreeable to the Syriack Translation, the Language our Saviour spake, which hath here, ܐܪܬܐ ܕܥܡܝܢܐ The bread we have need of. Thus Ἀρτὸ ὁ ἐπιούσιος is sufficient bread, and opposed to Ἀρτὸ περισσός Superfluous and Superabounding bread. All which will appear most clearly and elegantly, if we do but parallel these two words in the Petition by way of Antithesis in this manner, Τὸν ἄρτον ἡμῶν ὃν τὸν περισσόν, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἐπιούσιον, δὸς ἡμῖν σήμερον. Not Ἀρτὸ περισσός a Superfluous and Superabounding bread; but Ἀρτὸ ὁ ἐπιούσιος a Sufficient bread, give us, O Lord, this day.

And thus we have seen that this Prayer of Agur, in my Text, is the self-same with that our Saviour taught us in the Gospel; which Tremellius well observing in his most elegant Hebrew Catechism, renders that petition in these very words of Agur, הַסֵּר יְיָ מִלִּפְנֵי הָאֵלֹהִים, as though our Saviour had reference to them.

Now for the right understanding of this Sufficiency we are to pray for, we must know, that a Competency is twofold: Either in regard of Nature, which sufficeth to support a man in his natural life and health: or secondly, a Competency in regard of a man's condition, which is sufficient to support and maintain him in that condition, order, degree and calling wherein God hath placed him. Both these degrees of Sufficiency are meant in the Prayer our Saviour taught us, Give us this day our daily bread; and in this of Agur, Feed me with food convenient for me, namely, for Agur. For perhaps that may not be sufficient for Agur's condition, which might suffice for another. But if Agur's condition were such as some man's is, that he needed no more than was convenient to maintain himself in his natural life and health; then the Competency he must pray for is no more than a Competency in regard of Nature. If Agur be a Master of a Family; then that is his Competency which is convenient to maintain his wife, children and household. If Agur be a Publick person, a Prince or a Ruler of the people; then that is Agur's Sufficiency which will conveniently maintain him in that condition.

For the Competency which Agur prays for is that, which if he want, he is in poverty; if he exceed, he is rich. Now our own Reason will inform us, that those means which would make a private man rich, a King may have, a Peer may have, and more too, and yet be exceeding poor. In a word therefore, as Zeba and Zalmunna said to

Gideon, Jud. 8. 21. As is the man, so is his strength; the like may I say here, As is the man, so is his Competency. And in whatsoever condition God hath placed thee, thou mayest, yea thou oughtest to pray for a convenient Food to maintain the same; but to ask more thou hast no pattern, neither in this, nor in the Prayer which Christ himself hath taught thee.

HAVING thus fully explicated (as I think) these first words of Agur's Prayer; let us now see what Observations they will afford us, before we come to the Reason in the words following, where indeed is the marrow of the Text.

Observat. 1. First therefore, If we ought with Agur to pray against Poverty, Then is that Monkish affecting of Poverty no point of Piety; their voluntary and vowed Poverty, as they would make us believe, neither a State of Perfection, nor a Religion acceptable to God. We know well enough what the Poverty of Monks and Friars hath been for many hundred years, not a State of Perfection (God knows) but a State of Hypocrisie: For what Poverty is that, I pray you, where a man is said to be poor, and to have forsaken all, because he hath nothing in proper, and yet hath a rich and plentiful share in the common? But suppose it were as they say it is, and as amongst the ancient Monks it was indeed, and perhaps still among some of their begging Friars; yet, I say, such a wilful Poverty is neither a State of Perfection, nor a Religion acceptable to God: For if it were, it could not be lawfully prayed against, nor a competent sufficiency prayed for: But, Give me not poverty, (saith Agur) but feed me with food sufficient for me.

I. But they alledge the Counsel of our Saviour to the young man in the Gospel, Matth. 19. 21. If thou wilt be perfect, go sell that thou hast, and give it to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven. Doth not Christ prescribe Poverty here as the way to eternal life?

A Ship in a storm is sometimes in that danger, as there is no way to save her but to throw her lading into the Sea; The Body sometime cannot be saved, unless an arm or a leg be cut off. If this young man's Soul were in danger of some such spiritual Gangrene through his great possessions, then was this counsel of our Saviour a personal and particular advice unto him: but extraordinary cases are not to be made an ordinary practice. But I think this was not this young man's case, for the Text saith, Mark 10. 21. Our Saviour loved him, when he heard his replies, &c. And therefore I answer, that our Saviour spake this πειρασμός, Trial-wise; as he did to the woman of Canaan, when, to prove her constant Faith, he told her, He was not sent but to the lost sheep of Israel; and as he did to Moses, Numb. 14. 12. when, to prove or stir up his zeal in praying, he threatned utterly to destroy his people Israel; I will (saith he) smite them with pestilence, and disinherit them, and will make of thee a greater Nation than they.

So our Saviour spake here to the young man by way of Trial, to prove him, and to make him see and acknowledge how much he was deceived, how far short he was of that Perfection of heart he deemed to be in himself, who thought he could have been willing and ready to do any thing for the attainment of everlasting life: Master, (saith he) what shall I do, that I may inherit everlasting life? I have done all I know, command me any thing else what thou wilt, I am ready to undertake it. Our Saviour answers, By this shalt thou approve thy perfection with God, if thou canst be willing for his sake to sell all that thou hast, and give it unto the poor. And this was a Touchstone indeed; for the Text lays, He went away sorrowful. And I make no doubt, but if many among us, who think themselves some-body, would examine themselves upon this point, they would find their hearts deceive them egregiously, and that they were not the men they took themselves to be. Art thou rich, and yet couldst thou be willing to forsake all thou hast to follow Christ? This is a scourging Trial indeed. And yet should every true Christian be thus affected, to forsake all in the purpose and estimation of his heart, that he may be one of Christ's: For,

Matth. 19. 16. He that loveth father and mother, houses and lands, better than him, (he that hath not forsaken them in his estimation and resolution,) is not worthy of him. And this is that forsaking of the world in purpose and affection, to prefer Christ before the world, whereof S. Peter chiefly spake, Luke 18. 28. Lo, we have left all, and followed thee, (that is, we have set all at nought to follow thee,) and yet Peter kept his house still at Capernaum. I leave it to be considered, whether such as these be not the poor in spirit, Matth. 5. 3. that is, who in spirit and affection have renounced the world, and esteem of Christ above all riches. For these words are but once found in Scripture, and S. Luke seems to imply as much as I say, when he relateth the words as spoken to and of the Apostles only; Blessed be ye poor, for yours is the Kingdom of God. But I will not contend for it.

Secondly,

Secondly, The Patrons of Monkery alledge the Practice of the Primitive Church, Acts 2. 45. & chap. 4. 34, 35. who sold their lands and possessions, and laid down the money at the Apostles feet. I answer, They were Jews that did so, and none but Jews that did so. Shew me the like done among the Gentiles, when the Gospel came amongst them: Which of all S. Paul's Epistles give any such Precept, or intimate any such thing? But as for the Jews; those who once believed in Christ, believed also the woful destruction of their own Nation to be within a few years after; and therefore they thought good, while there was yet time, to improve their Lands and Possessions to the best use, which they should not many years enjoy. And the occasion was now fit, at the first preaching of the Gospel and gathering of a Church to Christ, to furnish the Apostles and others for this service and employment. And therefore when the Gospel was also spread among the Gentiles, the Apostles were so careful to make Collections in all the Churches for the relief of the poor Saints at Jerusalem, even those who at the first had disurnished themselves of all, and at whose charges, as may be supposed, the Gospel was at the beginning preached among the Gentiles. Rom. 15. 26, 27. 1 Cor. 16. 1. 2 Cor. ch. 8, and ch. 9.

Prov. 30. 8, 9
2.

And seeing I have entred thus far into the question of Monkery, I will take leave to examine two more Examples which they bring to that purpose, though not so near to the matter of my Text as the former.

Thirdly therefore, The Patrons of Monkery alledge the Example of the Rechabites, of whom we read Jer. 35. 6, 7. that according to an Ordinance wherewith their Father Jonadab bound them, they drank no wine, built no houses, sowed no seed, neither planted nor possessed vineyards or fields; but lived in tents all their days. Which singularity of life seems not only to resemble, but to warrant that of Monkery, in those two main points of forsaking possessions, and abstaining from meats; seeing God himself in that place commended those Rechabites for observing this Ordinance of Jonadab their Father.

3.

But I answer; This of the Rechabites was no matter of Religion, as that of Monks is, but a mere civil Ordinance grounded upon a National custome: For the Rechabites were of the race of the Family of Hobab the Kenite, Moses's Father-in-law, as you may read 1 Chron. 2. 55. Now the Kenites were Midianites, and the Midianites were dwellers in Tents from the beginning. This I prove, 1. Because the Arabians of those parts were such both then, and still are at this day. 2. The Ishmaelites and Midianites dwelt together, insomuch that their names are confounded in Scripture, or interchangeably used the one for the other. For Gen. 37. 25, 28. those Merchants to whom Joseph was sold are promiscuously called sometimes Ishmaelites, sometimes Midianites, as if they were both one people; as indeed they both descended of Abraham, the one by his handmaid Hagar, the other by his second wife Keturah. So Judg. 8. 24. the Midianites which Gideon vanquished are called Ishmaelites. They had (saith the Text) golden ear-rings for they were Ishmaelites. Now it is apparent in Scripture that the Ishmaelites or Hagarens used to dwell in Tents, whence 1 Chron. 5. 10. it is said, the Reubenites in the daies of Saul made war with the Hagarites, who sell by their hand; and they dwelt in their tents throughout all the East-land of Gilead. Besides, of the Ishmaelites were those famous Scenite-Arabians, mentioned in Scripture so oft under the name of the Tents of Kedar. Such therefore as the Ishmaelites were, may we deem the Midianites also to have been, who dwelt with them: and to put it quite out of doubt, we have so much told us in Scripture, in the prayer of Habakkuk, cha. 3. 7. I saw, saith he, the Tents of Cushan (or Arabia) in affliction, and the curtains of the land of Midian did tremble.

Psal. 120. 5.
Jer. 49. 28.

This custome of their Nation and Countrey did that Midian Tribe of the Kenites (of which was the Father-in-law of Moses) still observe, after they came to live in Canaan with the Israelites. So we read Jud. 4. 11. that Heber the Kenite, which was of the children of Hobab the Father-in-law of Moses, severed himself from the Kenites, and pitched his tent unto the plain of Zaanaim, which is by Kedesh. See 1 Chron. 2. 55. according to Hierome. And this manner of living they seem to have retained, partly for to be a Badge and Cognizance of the Nation whence they were descended, and partly to live the more securely in the land where they were strangers, either from the envie of the Jews at home, or danger of enemies abroad, to whom by this means they should be the less subject, as having neither houses to fire, nor lands to be taken from them, but only cattel wherewith they lived, and tents, which they removed hither and thither as opportunity served for pasture to feed them: Even as Abraham lived while he sojourned as a stranger in the land of Canaan, and in imitation imitation of whom, being their Ancestor, perhaps this custome was derived to the Midianites his children.

Prov. 30. 8, 9

Howsoever at length it seems these Kenites, allured by the more pleasant living of the Israelites, began to change this custome of their Ancestors; which occasioned Jonadab the son of Rechab, a famous Kenite, to renew it again, and bind his posterity to observe it; and to that end he forbad them altogether to drink any Wine, lest desire thereof might occasion them to plant Vineyards, and so to build Houses as the Jews did, and so to forsake the custome of their Nation; as perhaps licentiousness of Wine before had caused many of them to do. For certain it is, that Jonadab renewed but that which their Ancestors had observed long before he was born. And thus you see it was no order of Religion which they bound themselves unto, but a maintenance of a Civil custome. And therefore the wild Arabians and Tartars, who at this day live in like manner, are as good a Pattern to warrant Monkery by as they.

4.
Num. 6. 2. &c.

But there is another Example yet, wherein they put great confidence, as being established by God himself; and that is of the Nazarites in the Law, who bound themselves by a solemn vow to a singularity of life, not much unlike that of Monks, (especially those of the ancient form) as to separate themselves unto the Lord, to drink neither wine nor strong drink, nor suffer a razor to come upon their heads, and to be accounted in a special manner holy unto God above other men.

I answer, If this be the sample from which Monkery is derived, there needs no other Argument utterly to overthrow it; and therefore it is as ill chosen as could be. For this Law of Nazarism is one of the things expressly named, which the Apostles decreed at the Council of Jerusalem should not be imposed upon the Gentiles who believed in Christ. Look Acts 21. where S. Paul having made a Nazarite's Vow at Cenchrea for a certain time, according to the manner, James and the Elders of the Church at Jerusalem advised him to joyn himself with four others who had the like Vow upon them, (and the time thereof also as Paul's was then to be fulfilled, for they were seldom perpetual,) and to take and purifie himself according to the Law with them, that the Jews might take notice he was conformable to the Laws and Orders of his own Nation, till God should dissolve the same. But as touching the Gentiles, (saith James verse 25.) we have written and concluded, that they observe no such thing. Is not this plain enough? If therefore the Law of Nazarites be the Pattern of Monkish Orders, the Apostles decreed the Gentiles should observe no such thing. And for the Jews, God hath now also dissolved their Temple and all their Legal Worship.

Observ. 2.

THUS much for the first Observation against superstitions and affected Poverty; nor shall I need stay longer upon this part of Agur's Prayer, Give me not Poverty. There are not many of us willingly guilty on this side. I come therefore to the other side, whence my second Observation shall be, That we ought not to covet nor seek after Abundance and Excess in these outward things; but to have our aims and desires stinted at such a Competency only, as is convenient to maintain us in that condition and state wherein God hath placed us. Whatsoever is more than this, is Sin: For what we have no pattern in the Word of God to pray for, we have no warrant to covet or seek for. In the Pattern for all our Prayers, The Lord's Prayer, our Saviour alloweth us to pray for no more but a competency, Give us day by day our daily bread; that is, not a superfluous and superabounding bread, but a sufficient bread we pray thee, O Lord, to give us this day and every day. Agur in my Text, Give me neither Poverty nor Riches; feed me with food convenient for me. Jacob in his vow, Gen. 28. 20. If the Lord (saith he) will give me food to eat, and raiment to put on, The Lord shall be my God, &c. Food he desires, but food to eat; Clothing he desires, but clothing to put on; so much as was sufficient for him and his to eat: so much as was sufficient for him and his to wear: this Jacob desires, but no more. And under these two words, Food and Raiment, are comprehended all things needful for the maintenance of life; as may appear by the following words v. 22. where Jacob promiseth, that if God will grant him this his suit, of all that he should give him he would pay the Tenth unto him. But in the whole Book of God there is no Prayer to be found for superfluity and Abundance.

I would not be mistaken: I say not, it is unlawful to have and enjoy Riches and Abundance, if God give them; but unlawful to covet and seek after them. I know, the things of themselves are indifferent, and the good creatures of God made for the use of man, if man abused them not; yea, plenty and abundance of them are called the gifts of God, and, which is more, the blessings of God: The blessing of God (saith (saith Solomon, Prov. 10. 12.) maketh rich: and it is the usual phrase of Scripture to say of those that became rich, that God blessed them. And they are Blessings indeed, when God offers them, but no Blessings to such as covetously hunt and gape after them. Abraham was rich, Jacob was rich, Solomon and David were rich; I mean, they had abundance wherewith God blessed them: But which of all these, or any other holy man in God's Book, do we find to have long'd for, crav'd or labour'd after more than a portion convenient for them? which of them made their desires carvers of such abundance? No: Desire of abundance and superfluity tures not with the heart of God's servants. Jacob indeed became rich, but desired (as you heard) but meat to eat, and raiment to put on. Solomon a King, for whose estate the greatest measure of these things was most behoveful, yet when God (1 Kings 3. 5. 9.) gave him his choice to ask what he would, and he would give it him; he asked neither riches nor honour, but a wise and understanding heart; wherewith God was so well pleased, that he tells him, Because he had not asked riches nor honour; therefore he would give him both riches and honour in that abundance, as no king on earth should be like him. When Riches come thus, they come then indeed as Blessings: For God gives them as well-pleased, and accordingly as he sees them good for those to whom he giveth them; and sends his Grace with them, that those who have them may use them to his glory and their own good.

Prov. 30. 8. 9

Verf. 11.

Verf. 13.

On the contrary, To men whose hearts could never say, If God will give me but sufficient and convenient for me, I will lay me down and be at rest, and crave no further; to those whose hearts are restless and mad after abundance and excess of wealth, whose desires are without all bounds in seeking after Riches: Experience may tell us, that to such as these Riches seldom or never prove a Blessing when they get them, but a Curse. He that maketh haste to be rich, (saith Solomon, Prov. 28. 20.) shall not be innocent. They that will be rich, (saith S. Paul, 1 Tim. 6. 9.) speaking of such as could not rest with a Competency) fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition. We use to say, that those who have great losses are undone: but here, he that getteth much is undone.

Wouldst thou then be happy and blessed in the enjoyment of these outward things, then desire no more in thy heart than thou mayest lawfully ask of God in thy Prayer: Follow the counsel of Solomon, Prov. 23. 4. Labour not to be rich, cease from thine own wisdom; viz. to seek to be rich, which is humane wisdom, but indeed plain folly. Let neither thy desires nor thy aims out-bound this of Agur's, to have food convenient for thee. If God sees it good for thee to have more, he will give it thee, and offer thee the means and opportunity thereof, without thy seeking. But if he sees it not good for thee, why wouldst thou have it? Thou hast enough already, if thou hast convenient. Howsoever, God hates a large and restless desire: Therefore be not covetous, be not greedy of much; lest if thou come by it, God give it thee not in mercy, but in wrath and displeasure.

My third Observation is, That a Competency, or the Middle estate between Want and Superfluity, is in choice to be preferred, as the best and happiest condition. We see Agur preferreth it before the rest, and that his choice was a Wise man's choice, we cannot doubt, when the Scripture records it as a piece of his Wisdom: yea, even the Wise men of the * Heathen were not ignorant thereof. The reason is apparent, because it is the most free from such dangers as both Extremes are subject unto; which Agur mentioneth in the Reason of his petition, to be perils of Irreligion towards God and Injustice towards man: Great evils both of them, endangering the state of the Soul. But I must not speak of them particularly here, they belong to the Second part of my Text: and we shall not need look so far; for not only in that, but even in outward respects, we shall find this middle estate to be the safest condition. The low shrubs, Beasts will brouze them, and trample upon them; the high Trees are most subject to the violence of Tempests; when those of a middle size are free from both. So a poor estate is subject to contempt, and so to be wronged and injured of every one that will: The rich and mighty are envied, and obnoxious to the rage of troublesome times, being looked upon as a booty by such as are able and find advantage to seize upon them. Only the Mean estate is most free from such perillous Extremities, being as below Envy, so above Contempt.

If then our good and gracious God hath given us a convenient measure of means to maintain our condition, let us think our line hath fallen unto us in a pleasant place, as the * Horat. Carm. l. 2. Od. 10.

Auream quisquis Mediocritatem
Diligit, tutum caret obsoleto
Sordibus tellus, caret mordenda
Sobrius aula.

Seneca in Oedipo.
Fata si licet mihi
Fingere arbitrio meo, &c.
Tuta me munda est haec
Vita decurrens citâ.

Prov. 30.8.9

the Psalmist speaks, Psal. 16. 6. and that we have a goodly heritage. He that hath once a Competency, let him be assured he hath all the Contentment which is to be found in these temporary things; and Experience will tell him, Though Riches may encrease, yet after a Sufficiency once attained, Contentment will encrease no more, though Riches encrease never so much.

II.
The Reason of Agur's Request.

THUS much of that which Agur requested; Now follows The Reason of his Request, Lest I be full and deny thee, and say, Who is the Lord? &c. Out of which, before we come to handle them particularly, let us make this General Observation, That the Rule of our desires and endeavours, in the getting and enjoying of these outward things, ought to be our Spiritual welfare and the bettering of us to God-ward. This was Agur's Rule, He desires such a measure of outward means as might neither through fulness make him forget God, nor through want tempt him to sin both against him and his neighbour. This is the Compas we ought to sail by, if we would avoid shipwreck: This is the Pole-star and Heavenly mark whereon our eyes in all our thriving courses should be fixed, and by it our desires and aims measured. That proportion of outward things and provisions for this life which may the best stand with our improvement to God-ward, which may the most further and enable us, and the least endanger and hinder us, in our religious devotions to God and charitable duties to our neighbours; this should be the stint of all our worldly desires and endeavours under the Sun. More than may stand with this, is so far from being wished or sought for, that we ought with Agur to pray against it, and say, Lord, lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. But alas! we set the Cart before the Horse; we make not the Worship of God and our Spiritual advantage the Rule of our aims in getting and enjoying of these Temporal things: But on the contrary, we use to serve God and keep his Commandments so far as may stand with our profit, with our covetous and ambitious desires, and no farther. And this was Jeroboam's sin, who forsooth would serve the God of his Fathers so as he thought might stand with the safety of his kingdom, but no farther. But alas! what would it profit a man to win the whole world, and lose his own soul? But Jeroboam lost his kingdom too, which else God had promised to entail unto his posterity. But let us be wiser, and, as S. Paul bids us, whether we eat or drink, or whatsoever we do else, let us do all to the glory of God. Let this be the End of all our actions, and then we shall be sure to thrive here, and be blessed for ever in the world to come.

Mar. 8. 36.

1 Cor. 10. 31.

I.

So much for the General Observation: Now to the particular handling of the words, Lest I be full, and deny thee, and say, Who is the Lord? The words are plain, and their meaning is of Impiety and Irreligion: Give me not Riches, lest I become ungodly and irreligious. For, as to know God in Scripture is to worship and serve him with fear and reverence; so to deny him is to be devoid of Religion toward him, to live as if there were no God. So it is said of the sons of Eli, that they were sons of Belial, they knew not the Lord, that is, they acknowledged him not by love, fear and obedience, but lived as if they had said, Who is the Lord?

1 Sam. 2. 12.

Now that men who abound in Wealth and Superfluity are much subject to this malady, is so manifest by other places of Scripture, that Agur's fear was not without a cause. Dent. 6. 12. is a Caution given to Israel, when God should bless them with Prosperity, When thou shalt have eaten and be full, then beware lest thou forget the Lord which brought thee out of the Land of Egypt. Again, Dent. 8. 10, &c. When thou shalt have eaten and be full Beware that thou forget not the Lord thy God, in not keeping his Commandments, and Judgments, and his Statutes: Lest when thou hast eaten and art full, and hast built goodly houses, and dwelt therein, And thy herds and thy flocks multiply, and thy silver and thy gold is multiplied, and all that thou hast is multiplied; Then thine heart be lifted up, and thou forget the Lord thy God, which brought, &c. Verf. 17. And thou say in thine heart, My power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth. Whence it appears, not only how dangerous Prosperity is to Piety, but what it is to forget God, which is, in my Text, to deny him, and to ask Who he is; namely, to break his Commandments, Statutes and Judgments, to be unthankful for his Blessings, and to attribute all to our own power and wisdom. Again, in Dent. 32. 15. Moses prophetically sings of Israel, Jesurun waxed fat, and kicked: Thou art (saith he) waxed fat, thou art grown thick, thou art covered with fatness: Then he forsook God which made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his salvation. Verf. 16. They provoked him to jealousy with strange gods, with abominations they provoked him to anger. And Hosea 13. 6. the Lord complains of the event of this prediction, According to their pasture (saith he) so were they filled, and their hearts were lifted

Dis. XXVIII. Unthankfulness to God, how unreasonable and unworthy. 131 up; therefore they have forgotten me. — Rare fumant felicibus are. I think it is sufficiently proved, and Experience doth every where make it good. Prov. 30.8,9

1. The cause hereof is, the weakness of our Nature through sin, not able to wield the Blessings of God if they abound. Even as the Physicians say that a Plethora, or full state of body, is dangerous in respect of health, even though it be without impurity of blood; because Nature, if weaker, then it cannot wield it; or if a while she be of equal strength, yet is soon and sometimes suddenly, overturned: Even such is the case here with our life and health spiritual.

2. Religious Devotion springs from Humility and Lowliness of mind: but Abundance usually puffeth up with pride; as the Lord even now complained in Hosea, that the heart of his people was exalted, and therefore they forgot him. So in the quotation Deut. 8.10, &c.

Lastly, A full belly is unfittest for Devotion and Prayer, and therefore in our devoutest Supplications we use Fasting. Even as it is in plenteous feeding, so is it in the very outward injoyment of plenty: whence ye heard even now the Spirit of God to express this Abundance of outward things by Feeding, Fulness, and Fatness.

THIS Truth thus confirmed will afford us three useful Observations. First, To consider the wickedness of man's nature which abuseth the Abundance of God's Blessings to dishonour him that gave them. Unthankfulness is a most hateful vice, if but to men, and for such benefits as one man can afford another: How much more to be abhorred is Unthankfulness to God, who is the giver of all good things? Yet amongst men Abundance of benefits will sometimes wring an acknowledgment from an unthankful disposition, though a smaller kindness would not do it. But the contrary, the more Benefits and Favours are heaped, so much the more unthankful to grow to him that bestows them; or the more his Benefits encrease, the more to wrong and reproach him: this I think is not easily sampled in the dealings and courtesies from man to man. Yet thus most (unworthy and ungrateful wretches!) are we wont to deal with our gracious God, not only to be unthankful, (which were bad enough) but so much the more unthankful, by how much his Benefits encrease and abound toward us. The less we have, the more we acknowledge him; the more he gives us, the less we own him; and if so be we once arrive at a Fulness, it is ten to one but we plainly deny him, and ask, Who is the Lord? and what a hideous Unthankfulness is this! Observat. 1.

If this were not so, Agur would never have grounded his Prayer upon such a supposition: if it be so, we see why God is fain, for the most part, to deny those he loveth, abundance of these outward things; namely, lest by so giving he might quite lose them, and utterly undo them. He knoweth our nature better than our selves, and moderates his Blessings for our good.

Physick is an unpleasing thing, (our Stomachs are much against it) and a Potion is bitter in tast; yet in danger of life, if we be sick, or if we be but crazie and in danger of sickness, we are willing to submit our selves to the will of the Physician, as one that knows what is good for us better than our selves: We can endure in such a case to be abridged of our diet, to be restrained from our pleasure, to fast from our desired meat and drink; and not to be offended at him who shall thus abridge us, but to love him, yea reward him too, as who for this his care hath deserved well at our hands. Come on then: Hath not God as much skill in the state of our Souls, as any Physician in the state of our Bodies? Why should we then take it unkindly or impatiently, when for our spiritual safety he abridgeth us of that abundance which other men enjoy? Envie them not; it may be they are none of God's Patients, and so he takes no care of them, but lets them fill until they surfeit and perish: but thou art under his cure, who is the great Physician: if thou believest it, thou wilt love him therefore, and quietly submit unto his will; and not be like the horse and mule who, because they want understanding, are impatient to be dieted or diminished of their fodder, though it be for their good, because they know it not. And thus much for the first useful Observation.

Observe in the second place, The unreasonable Folly of men, so greedily to long for and pursue after that which so much endangereth their welfare and happiness. For is it not a Folly never to think a man's self well, until he be in an estate of greatest danger? It is as if a man should seek a Lion in his den, when he might safely have passed by without danger; or like the silliness of children, who long to have an Adder in their hands, because he hath a gay skin. Were it not much better, with Agur's choice, to sit somewhat low with safety, than to ride aloft with continual danger of breaking a man's neck? We would have we know not what: we daily pray that God would not lead Observat. 2.

Prov. 30. 8, 9

lead us into temptation, and yet we long to be tempted : or it may be we are of Socrates his mind, who chose a shrew to exercise his patience ; so we would have wealth in abundance, to approve our moderation. But as Aristotle thinks it not true Valour and Magnanimity to be φιλοκίνδυνος, to long to be in danger, but rather to acquit himself well when he shall encounter it ; so I think of a wise man : He that shall do otherwise, I think him not wise ; if I should, I must take Agur for a fool.

Some perhaps are daring out of ignorance, whom, if they have no better experience, yet even Nature her self seems willing in some sort to inform, who by Divine Providence is so ordered, that in those places where Gold and Silver groweth, there grows neither Grass nor Plant nor other thing that is any thing worth ; to shew us how fruitful the hearts and minds of such are wont to prove as long after them, being as barren of Goodness as those Countries of Grass. But if any one, after he knows and is informed of the danger of such a condition, shall say with Nero's mother, when the Mathematician had told her, her Son should indeed be Emperour, but put her to death, Me verò occidat, modo imperet ; So he may reign, let him kill me : If any shall say so here, Let me be rich, though I perish ; I yield him as worthy Simon Magus his blessing, Pecunia tua sit tecum in perditionem, Thy money perish with thee, Acts 8. 20.

Observat. 3.

My third and last Observation is, A Lesson of caution to those who are rich in this world, to keep a continual watch over themselves, that they forget not God in their abundance. For though this estate be fickle and dangerous, as I have already shewed ; yet it is possible to be happy therein, if competent and fit means be used ; and the beloved of God have been so. And those here have the best hope of success, who have not by their covetous and ambitious desires tempted God in getting their abundance. Howsoever, as the wealth, so the care also and watchfulness of the owner must be exceeding and abundant ; for a ship of such sail requires a skilful Pilot and extraordinary care in the steerage.

Prov. 3. 9.
Psalm. 24. 1.

Besides the General means in all Estates to prevent declining from God, there is one more Special means in this case of Abundance, which if it be not used, I am perswaded the danger neither can nor ever will be avoided ; and that is, To be fruitful in good works ; to be liberal and open-handed to the relief of the poor, and furtherance of all godly and sacred uses. It is S. Paul's charge, 1 Tim. 6. 17, 18. Charge them that be rich in this world, — that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate, &c. If thou wouldst have God's blessing go with thee, follow Solomon's counsel, Honour him with thy substance, and with the first-fruits of all thine increase. For the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof ; and he requires this as a Tribute whereby we may acknowledge him to be the Giver of what we have. Away with words or mere verbal thanksgivings, God is thy Landlord, he requires a Lords Rent ; those who use not to pay it, will soon forget who is their Landlord ; which is the proper fountain of all the evil that comes by Abundance. Nay, he that thinks this Tribute of his goods is not due, doth already disclaim his Landlord, and deny God to be his Lord. When David made that bountiful and glorious offering for the building of the Temple, 1 Chron. 29. 10, 11, 14. he blessed him in this manner, Thine, O Lord, is the kingdom, and thou art exalted over all : Both riches and honour come of thee, and thou reignest over all, and in thine hand is power and might, and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all. All things come of thee, and of thine own have we given thee. If thou wouldst have the grace to say as David said, thou must do as David did.

THUS we have considered the First part of the Reason of Agur's Prayer, Why he prayed against Riches : let us next examine the Second, which moved him to pray against Poverty also, Lest (saith he) I be poor, and steal, and take the Name of my God in vain. Poverty, we see, and want of things needful, hath her dangers and evils, as well as Riches and Abundance.

1.

First, Stealing ; Lest I be poor, and steal. Where by stealing we must understand as much as is forbidden in the eighth Commandment : not only stealing by force and violence, which we call Robbery ; but stealing by fraud, consenage, or detention of anothers due ; though not so much punished by the Laws of Man, yet as great a Sin before God as forcible robbing. You may find all these kinds of stealing reckoned up together Levit. 6. and one and the same sacrifice appointed by God for atonement of them ; whereby it appears, their guilt is the same in his estimation, whatsoever men think of them. Lev. 6. 2. If a soul sin, and commit a trespass against the Lord, and lye unto his neighbour in that which was delivered him to keep, or in fellowship, (or dealing,) or in things taken by violence, or hath deceived his neighbour, Ver. 3. Or hath found found that which was lost, and lieth concerning it, and sweareth falsely; in any of all these that a man doth, sinning therein: Ver. 4. Then it shall be, because he hath sinned and is guilty, that he shall restore that which he took violently away, or the thing which he hath deceitfully gotten, or that which was delivered him to keep, or the lost thing which he found, Ver. 5. Or all that about which he hath sworn falsely: he shall even restore it in the principal, and add the fifth part more thereto, Then followeth the sacrifice for atonement. Here you may easily see how far this sin of stealing extends. And there is none of all these but a poor man in extremity of want is in danger to fall into; as not only Agur's fear, but daily experience may tell us, and therefore it needs no further proof.

The second danger that Agur nameth, is, of Taking the Name of God in vain; that is, of perjury and false swearing, as that which would follow upon stealing, as stealing doth upon Poverty. The danger of Perjury, upon committing of Theft, was greater among the Jews than amongst us, by reason of a Custom and Law amongst them, to tender an oath to those who were accused or suspected of Theft, to clear and purge themselves. For because Theft was not punished by death according to the Divine Law, but by restitution and recompence; this course with them was just and reasonable, when no other evidence sufficient could be brought, to give an oath to the accused; it being supposed that the guilty party, where the punishment for Theft was but restitution, would rather confess his offence, than incur so hainous a sin as the sin of Perjury. But with us, who punish Theft with death, this way of trial by oath would be most unreasonable, it being most true (though spoken by the father of lies) that skin for skin, and all that a man hath, he will give for his life. But that this manner of trial was practised among the Jews, the place I even now quoted out of Leviticus, for the kinds of Theft, doth sufficiently manifest, where it is said, If a soul have committed such or such a kind of theft; and lieth concerning it, and sweareth falsely; and again it is said, he shall restore all that about which he hath sworn falsely. And Exod. 22. 8, 11. there is an express commandment to give an oath in a case of Theft there mentioned. Hence it is that the prohibition of Theft and Perjury are joyned together, Lev. 19. 11, 12, 13. because the one depended of the other: Ye shall not steal, neither deal falsely, neither lie one to another. And ye shall not swear by my Name falsely, neither shalt thou prophane the Name of thy God; I am the Lord. Thou shalt not defraud thy neighbour, neither rob him: The wages of him that is hired shall not abide with thee all night until the morning. The Perjury and false swearing here mentioned the Jews understood to be specially intended in case of Theft. For the same reason Theft and swearing are coupled together, Zech. 5. 3, 4. and a curse pronounced against them both, The curse, saith the Lord of Hosts, shall enter into the house of the thief, and into the house of him that sweareth falsely by my Name; and it shall remain in the midst of his house, and shall consume it.

And thus you see what special reason Agur had, in regard of the custom of his Nation, to add to the first evil of stealing, this second danger of Taking God's Name in vain, because the one was like to bring on the other.

Yet I would not have you so to take me, as if I thought that we were altogether exempt from this danger; for though the occasion be less, yet we find by experience that our Thieves will also swear themselves, though no Law or Judge constrains them to swear at all. And for Lying, the next neighbour to it, we find that to be the ordinary, and almost unavoidable, consequent of this sin. So that Agur's reason will fit us well enough.

THIS much shall serve for the Explication of the words, that ye might understand Agur's meaning. Now let us see what Lessons and Observations we may gather from them, which are these. First, That it is not lawful to steal, no not in a case of want and necessity. For though Agur were poor, and wanted food convenient for him, yet were it a sin for him to steal; which makes him pray against it, Lest I be poor, and steal. For that which is of it self unjust and sinful, no necessity can make lawful or dispensable. Indeed in Ceremonies and things by nature indifferent the case is otherwise; necessity there dispenseth, as it did with David in eating of the Shewbread: For the eating of that Bread more than other was not of it self unlawful, but only for ceremony sake: But Injustice is always Injustice, and such a one among other sins is Theft, when we take that from another which is his, and by no right is ours.

Prov. 30. 8, 9

It is therefore a preposterous plea which Poor men are wont to use, therewith to excuse themselves. 1. What would you (say they) have us do? the world hath forsaken us; we have no friend to help us. Alas! have men forsaken you? and will you make God forsake you too? Will no body help you? and will you make your selves uncapable of God's help too? This is not the way to ease your cross, but to procure a curse and to draw a great misery upon your heads. Nay, if you had not used these unlawful courses, but had recourse to God your heavenly Father, and trusted upon him who clotheth the grass and lilies of the field, he would have provided for you: but now you shut the gates of his blessing and mercy against your selves. 2. Yea, but I am a poor man, and he from whom I have taken it, is well able to spare it; it will do him no harm, and me good. But who made thee a divider of other mens goods? Thou must not look only whether he can spare it, but by what means thou comest by it. 3. But it is a small thing. The more base and abject sinner thou, who wilt corrupt thy conscience for such a trifle. Take heed; he that will serve the Devil for so small advantage, if the Devil once mend his wages, it is ten to one but he will mend his work.

Observat. 2. This is the first Observation, and if we mark it well, here will be ground and roomth for another: For if it be a sin for a Poor man to steal in his want from those that have enough; how much more hainous is it for a Rich man to rob the poor? as many do by fraud, oppression, detaining the hire of the labourer, and the like. The poor man's need is a strong temptation to make him steal; therefore Agur makes Theft the poor man's danger, and not the rich; Lest I be poor (saith he) and steal: not, Lest I be rich, and steal; for why should the rich man steal? he hath no need, as we say, he hath no direct temptation thereto, as the poor man hath, and therefore his sin is the greater. And indeed there can be no other reason of his Theft, but the rich man's malady; He hath forgotten God, and saith, Who is the Lord? and then no marvel if he be ready for any sin.

The hainousness and unreasonableness of this Sin may appear by that parable of Nathan, wherewith David was so much incensed and convinced, 2 Sam. 12. 1, &c. There were two men in one city (saith he,) the one rich, the other poor. The rich man had exceeding many flocks and herds: But the poor man had nothing save one little ewe-lamb, which he had bought and nourished up— And there came a traveller unto the rich man, and he spared to take of his own flock, and of his own herd, to dress for the way-faring man that was come unto him, but took the poor man's lamb, and dressed it for the man that was come to him. And David's anger (saith the Text) was greatly kindled against the man; and he said to Nathan, as the Lord liveth, the man that hath done this thing shall surely die; and he shall restore the Lamb fourfold, because he did this thing, and because he had no pity.

Hence in Scripture, for the rich to spoil the poor, is accounted a crying sin; which kind of sins are in a degree above the ordinary rank of sins, viz. such as call for some visible and remarkable judgment upon the head of the committers. Judge of the rest by that which S. James saith of one kind of robbing the poor, by detaining their wages. Little know some men, who out of a kind of pride in their own might, and contempt of the poor, as scorning to acknowledge themselves obliged to them for their service, commit this sin, little consider they how grievously they offend: Behold (saith S. James. ch. 5. 4.) the hire of the labourers which have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth; and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. To conclude this observation, Men do not despise a thief (saith Solomon, Prov. 6. 30.) if he steal to satisfy his soul when he is hungry; yet if he be found, he shall restore seven-fold. If the poor man's theft be punished seven-fold amongst men; sure with God, the rich man's shall be punished seventy times seven-fold.

Observat. 3. My third Observation shall be, That we must avoid the occasions of sin, as well as sin it self. Agur prayes not, that he might not steal, &c. but that God would keep him out of that condition which might occasion him to commit those sins. This might have been observed from the other part of Agur's reason as well as from this; for there he desired God to keep him from that Fulness which might occasion him to deny and forget God: but I chose rather to defer it hither. Opportunity, we say, makes a thief. It is as true in the general, That occasion is a snare whereby a man becomes a prey unto sin. Eve, by talking with the Serpent, was at length caught to eat of the forbidden fruit. David, by seeing Bathsheba washing her self, was tempted to commit adultery with her. Peter, by intruding himself into the high Priest's Priest's Hall out of too much confidence in his own strength, came to deny his Master. For this cause God commanded his people in the Law, not only that they should worship no Idol, but that they should demolish all the Monuments of them; that they should make no covenant nor affinity with those who worshipped them: and all lest they might be drawn by these occasions to commit idolatry with them.

Prov. 30. 8 9

If this be so, we may see hence how much they deceive themselves who think it makes no matter what company they keep, or what places they come in; they will look to themselves forsooth, and mean not to be corrupted, but only to observe the fashions, either to satisfy their curiosity, or, as some will pretend, for the greater loathing of such abhorred courses. This is a dangerous principle, to play with the flames, as the fly doth. If thou wouldst avoid the sin, avoid the Occasion also. And let me add one thing more: Several sins have their several occasions and their proper gins; but Evil company is the Devil's Magazine, wherein are contained all Occasions of all sins.

Now I come to the fourth and last Observation, which I gather from the last words of Agur's Reason, That the commission of one sin makes way to another. Agur thought, if he were once brought to steal, he should not stay there, but be carried farther, even to for swear, and take God's Name in vain; Lest I steal, (saith he,) and take the Name of my God in vain. Peter first denied Christ; but the Devil would not let him stay there, but made him curse and for swear him. David having once committed adultery with the wife of Uriah, the Devil took the advantage to make him commit murder too. Sin is like a Serpent; if it can but once get in the head, it will draw the whole train after. While there is no rift in a block, it is hard for the wedge or axe to enter; but if a rift be once made, it will enter all with a little driving: So will sin.

Observat. 4

The reason is, Because he that commits a sin, puts himself thereby, more or less, into the Devil's power; who is not so negligent as to lose or not to ply his advantage. The Devil is the Prince of death, Heb. 2. 14. Now death comes by sin; therefore sin gives the Devil a title; and first brought, and still bringeth man into the Devil's jurisdiction. Hence those who are converted to God and acquitted of their sins, are said To be delivered from the power of Satan unto God, Acts 26. 18. But sin makes them again obnoxious to his power; it reaches him a new hold of us, which though (perhaps) it be not so much as he may quite pull us from God, yet will it serve him to pull us into many a transgression, and cost us much work and a great deal of sorrow before we get free again.

DISCOURSE XXIX.

ISAIAH 2. 2, 3, 4.

And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the Mountain of the Lord's House shall be established [or, prepared] in the top of the Mountains, and exalted above the Hills; and all Nations shall flow unto it, &c.

ILLS or Mountains are States, Kingdoms or Societies of men; which consisting of degrees, rising unto a height one above another, are compared unto Mountains raised above the ordinary Plain and Level of the Earth.

The mountain of the Lord's House is that State and Society of men which is called the Church and People of God: Regnum Celorum, the Kingdom of Heaven; that is, a Kingdom whose both King and King's Throne have their residence and place in the Heavens.

These words therefore are a Prophecy or prophetic Promise of the glorious exaltation, wonderful inlargement, and unheard-of prosperity of this Society of men, called the Church, above all other States or Societies of men whatsoever.

Ifai. 2.2,3,4.

The glory and exaltation is exprell'd in the words, The Mountain of the Lord's House shall be one day exalted, yea mounted, not only above the lesser Hills, but the highest Mountains, though at this time it were depressed and trampled under foot by the proud enemies thereof.

The inlargement and ampleness thereof, in the words, All Nations shall flow unto it: that is, Though, at the time of this Prophecy, it were reduced to a small remnant; yet the time was to come, when it should not only consist of the one Nation of the Jews, as then it did, but of all Nations under the whole heaven.

The prosperity thereof begins to be described from these words in the 4th verse, They shall beat their swords into plow-shares, and their spears into pruning-hooks, &c. that is, Although the greatest part of Jacob were already captive, and Judah and Jerusalem in a continual fear and no less danger of the arms and invasion of the King of Babel; yet the time should one day come, that the People or Church of God should not only be the most exalted State upon the earth, and the most ample and universal Dominion that ever was in the world, but the most peaceable, quiet and flourishing State that ever was since man was first created.

This is the Prophecy. But now comes the Question, Whether this, as we have described it, be and hath already been fulfilled; or whether the time thereof be yet to come; or if already any ways fulfilled, whether it be not in part only performed, and the full accomplishment reserved for the time to come.

Our Adversaries would fain find here the constant and perpetual Visibility of the Church. And I must needs grant them that it is meant of a time when the Gentiles shall be called; for the words of the Text, viz. [All Nations] tell us so. But, without doubt, he that will have this place for his purpose, must shew us not only naked and single Visibility, but more than that, a glorious Visibility: yea, the most glorious among the sons of men. For a Visibility is one thing, and a glorious Visibility is another: for many things are visible which are not glorious to look upon; and oftentimes good and rich mettall may be within, when the outside glisters not. We must therefore, when we talk of the Church's Visibility, distinguish between these two, and not confound them. The Church might be Visible, though it were but a Hill; much more if it be a Mountain: but here it is to be established on the tops of Mountains, and exalted above the Hills; so that no other State shall overtop or overlook it, much less trample it under feet. Now whether there were ever yet such a time, when this was completely fulfilled, though all be granted our Adversaries they can ask, yea and that the Romish Church be that Church here spoken of, I leave it to any mans indifferent judgment, who can compare the Description of the Prophet with the Stories of forepast and present Times.

But, suppose it were to be fulfilled and fully accomplished in the times which have already been; and I will not deny but in part it hath been so; yet how doth it follow from this Prophecy, that this glorious Visibility should be constant and continual, and never interrupted or eclipsed?

Is not the Prophecy true, and hath not God made his Promise good, if he hath at any time performed the thing here spoken of; though it neither were done all at once, and though this exaltation and glory did not alway continue? If one skilful in Divination or Astrology should meet with a private man for the present in great want, distress, contempt and misery; and should tell him, that it was his fortune to rise to the greatest honours, and to become the greatest man that was in the Kingdom: If this fell out so at any time of his life, according as it was foretold him, though perhaps it proved not long durable (as such exaltations use not to be,) had he any reason to say that the Astrologer had lied unto him in that he had foretold him? I think any man in reason will think him unjustly charged. Why then may not the like be said and thought of the Church, and (as I may so speak, with reverence) of the prediction of the Church's fortune? But if the time of the full performance of this Prediction be yet to be expected, as perhaps it is, then it will serve our Adversaries to far less purpose: For were not Joseph's dreams and visions true, that the Sun, Moon and twelve stars should worship him, and all his brothers sheaves should bow to his sheaf? was not this true (I say,) though his brothers first sold him, though he became afterward a slave, and long a prisoner in a strange Land, before he was so suddenly exalted to be the great Viceroy under Pharaoh King of Egypt? Or would you have an Example of a glory afterwards eclipsed and almost extinguished? Were not God's first Promises made to the Israelitish Nation, That he would make them a renowned Kingdom, fully performed in the days of Solomon, when there was no kingdom upon the earth like like unto it for glory and magnificence; though this so great glory lasted not long, but began a little to be obscure in the end of Solomon's days, and afterwards was quite eclipsed and clouded, the Sun but now and then (as it were) shewing it self through a cloud? And what is the Church of the Gentiles, or what priviledge have they above the Church of the Jews, that the like should not befall it which we are sure besel them? and yet nevertheless God always made good his Promises unto them, and no word of his mouth failed.

When we therefore talk of the Church's Visibility and glory, we must distinguish of Times; and know that there are Times when the Church is indeed visible, but not glorious; secondly, Times when it is neither visible nor glorious; thirdly, Times when it is to be both visible and glorious.

In the Times immediately after Christ's passion, or (if you will) at his Passion, I think any man will grant, that it was then neither visible nor glorious. In the Times of the persecuting Emperors, when the Church had taken foot among the Gentiles, and the Nations began flow unto it, it was a society indeed visible, but not glorious: I am sure, it was not in the tops of the Mountains; but the Imperial Mountain of Rome not only overtopped it, but ever trampled it under their feet. For we must know here, that we speak all this time of the external glory, for that is the thing whereabout the quarrel is. In the Times of Constantine and thereabouts, after three hundred years cruel persecution, the Sun seemed as it were to break forth of a cloud, and the Christian society became for a while both visible and glorious; but presently after, even as it was in the end of Solomon's reign, this glory of the Church was not only eclipsed, but even the visibility thereof, in a manner, covered and altogether darkened with that thick and universally-overspreading cloud of Arianism. And thus far our Adversaries will go with us: But we require they should grant us something more, namely, That this Arian cloud was no sooner blown over, but another great cloud of that fore-prophefied Apostasie of the Church began to arise; whereby the Church's glory was not only eclipsed, but at length again the Visibility thereof wholly overshadowed with the thick darkness of Idolatrous Antichristianism; until that after a long day of darkness, and a black night, it pleased God, even of late, somewhat to dispel the cloud, whereby the Society of true Believers became again outwardly visible and conspicuous unto the world. And we hope, when the cloud shall be wholly consumed by the beams of the Sun of the Gospel, it shall become not only more visible than yet it is, but far more glorious than ever hitherto it hath been, when the fulnes of the Gentiles (as S. Paul speaks) shall come in. But of this more hereafter. Isai. 2. 2. 3. 4.

In the meantime, that you may the better understand what is already discoursed concerning the Visibility of the Church, as likewise know what was the State of true Believers when this Visibility was overshadowed, take this which followeth; viz. That there hath been in all Ages since Christ, without interruption, a Company or Society of Christian men, agreeing or joyned together in the inward and invisible communion of the Faith, concerning such Divine Truths as we profess needful to Salvation. And, for so much of this Faith as was not acknowledged by the rest of erring men, called Christians, in that respect this Society was a distinct Society from them: yet nevertheless, for so much of this their true Faith as was still acknowledged by those erring ones we speak of, they were a part of the same Society with them: For the Apostasie of the Church was not total, and therefore in all the sound parts of their Faith our true-believing Society neither was nor is divided from them.

But if the Question be asked of a Visible Christian Society professing the same Essential Faith with us, Whether such a one hath always been; First, we must know that by Visible Society, in this question, is meant, A society of Christian Believers joyned together in one external Communion, of the same publick profession, use of Sacraments, and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction or Government: For these make the outward Form, whereby this Society is discernible from other Societies of men; and a Society by this out-side severed and distinguished from other Societies, is a Society visible and conspicuous to other Societies of men.

The Question therefore is, Whether that Society of men, agreeing together in the Points of our Christian Belief, hath been in all Ages, in this kind and sort, joyned, and distinguished from other companies, not only of the world, but even of Christian men: or in shorter terms thus, Whether the Society of men of our Christian Belief hath in all Ages been, for the out-side, a distinct Corporation from all other Societies and States of men.

Isai. 2.2,3,4.
Of this see in Book III. Treatise of The Apostasie of the latter
Times, ch. 10

My Answer is, That for divers of the First Ages, as before was shewed, it was in that manner visibly distinguished; but after an Apostasie had overspread and deformed the beautiful Spouse of Christ, then was the Society or Belief, as it were, covered and involved with the same external mantle with them, and as it were hidden in that dark cloud, and so not a distinct external Society from the rest. But though in the inward communion of the sincerer Faith it was diverse and distinguished, yet it still for the most part continued a member of the same external (I say, external) body with them; being begotten by the same Sacrament of Baptism, taught in some part, by the same Word and Pastors still continuing amongst them, and submitting to the same Jurisdiction and Regiment, so far forth as these or any of these had yet some soundness remaining in them: But for the rest, whether in Doctrine or Practice, that was not compatible with their sincerer Faith, either wisely avoiding all Communion with it; or if they could not, then patiently suffering for their Conscience sake under the hands of Tyrants termed Christians.

For understanding this, take this Simile: When good Gold is mixed with a greater quantity of counterfeit metal, so that of both becomes one mass or lump; though each metal still retains and keeps his nature diverse from the other, yet can they not outwardly be discerned asunder by the eye; (for because they are incorporated into one external body, the outside or visible dimensions which are seen are one and the same:) But when the Refiner comes and severs them, then will each metall appear in his own out-side and his own proper colours, whereby they are easily discerned asunder one from the other. Such must the State of the Church needs be, when an Apostasie shall rise out of the bowels thereof; and such do we affirm was the State of the Church of Christ in that great prevailing Apostasie, from which we are separated, viz. The purer metal of the Christian body was not outwardly discernible from the base and counterfeit, whiles one out-side covered them both; but when the time of refining came, then was our Church, not first founded in the true Faith, (God forbid;) but a part of the Christian body newly refined from such corruptions as Time had gathered: as Gold refined begins not then first to be Gold, though it began then first to be refined; so our Church began not a hundred years ago to be a Church, though then it first began to be a Reformed Church.

1 King. 19. 18.

And is this any thing more than that which befel the Jewish Church in her frequent Apostasie? Was the seven thousand that had not bowed their knees to Baal, a visibly-distinguished Society from the rest of the body of Israel? were they such as were outwardly known unto others who were not of their Communion? nay were they known one to another? yea to Elias himself? I think no man will easily affirm it: Yet were they a distinct Society joyned in the Communion of the same true Worship, and in that respect separate from the rest of that Idolatrous body: yet nevertheless, as far as there was any thing which was found yet remaining for the external Regiment and Ceremonies, it is most certain that they could not but be to the eyes of the world of one external body with the rest, as receiving the same Circumcision, and living under the same Priests and Ceremonies, so far forth as any soundness in either of them remained.

Nay do not our Adversaries themselves in their good mood grant us as much as we have said, though it be because they cannot will nor chuse (as is the Proverb?) For it is a thing chiefly to be considered and remembered in this Quarrel between them and us about the Visibility of the Church, it is (I say) to be considered, That when all granted and pleaded on both parts is well examined, the point of difference between them and us is only this, They hold the glorious Visibility of the true Church to be in present; and the overshadowing of the light, and eclipsing of the glory thereof under Antichrist, to be yet to come; at which time of his being in the world they grant and affirm more of the eclipsing and overshadowing of the true Church than we do for our hearts. He that reads their conceits of Antichrist shall easily find this to be true: For they hold that then the publick exercise of Christian Religion, saying of Mass, and all shall utterly cease, until Antichrist's days be out: this is their Tenet. We on the contrary hold this clouding of the Church's visibility to have been already, and the greatest glory (in probability,) or at least some part thereof, to be yet to come. So that we both agree, That in the great Apostasie the Church's visibility and glory should cease; but we say that this Apostatical time hath been already; they say it is yet to come: we say that that time was to last many ages; they say that when it comes, it shall be but three single years and a half.

Why

Why then are they not ashamed to choke us with this Argument of the Churches visibility and glory, as though the Church could never be without it, when yet themselves confess that there is a time to come, when the case will be such, that the same Argument may be alledged against the true Church, though it were theirs, as is now alledged against ours? This is too great partiality.

Isai. 2. 2. 3. 4.

Seeing therefore the whole Controversie lies in this, Whether the Churches great Apostasie be already past, or in being, or yet to come; It is a great deal the quicker course for them and us to examine the condition and quality of both Religions by the Scriptures, and not to distract our selves with every point of difference; (for every Error is not a part of this Apostasie;) But let us examine our Religion in that point alone, wherein the Scripture it self places and limits the quality of this Apostasie, namely, that it should be Spiritual Fornication or Idolatry; for Babylon is not called the Lier of Babylon, the Tyrant of Babylon, the Heretick of Babylon, the Murtherer of Babylon, but the Whore of Babylon. It is very like indeed, that as Whores have commonly many other foul qualities, so may the Spiritual Whore have also: Yet as every ill quality of a Whore is not a part of her Whoredom; no more is every Error of the Spiritual Whore, how gross soever, a part of Spiritual Fornication. Let us therefore examine her by the Mark which God sets upon her, and by that Abomination for which only in a manner (if we observe the Scripture) God did use to punish, and wrathfully complain of his old people Israel, though (no doubt) they had many other corruptions beside; but had they been faithful in that one, God could have winked at many other. As we know a Husband, if his Wife be faithful and true to him in that point which so nearly toucheth his jealousy, he will the easier bear with other shrewish conditions.

Now if the Church of Rome be not an Idolatress or a Spiritual Whore, prostituting her self to other gods, to stocks and stones, and many ways breaking her Faith to her one Lord and Mediator Christ Jesus, by committing fornication with (I know not how many) other Mediators; there never was a Whore in the world.

And certainly, if the Church of Rome may herein be justified, the Church of Israel had but hard measure to be condemned, who could as truly plead that she never forsook the true God altogether, only she would worship him in Calves and such Images as other her neighbour-Nations used to do; and that though she was for variety, yet she reserved the chief place for her Jehovah, and in all other respects could as well as the present Roman Church excuse her practice in that kind. And yet we know how she is branded by the Prophets for a Whore; and not a simple fornicating Whore, but an Adulteress, and is threatned to be proceeded with and judged as those that break wedlock and shed blood are judged, to have blood given her in fury and jealousy. And such an Example of God's fury and jealousy hath he made them to all the world, as no other people (how great soever their Idolatries) have ever equall'd or come near their sufferings.

See this more fully discoursed of in the Treatise of The Apostasie of the latter Times, Book III chap. 9.

And thus far we have in a manner yielded to our Adversaries for a time, That the time of fulfilling this Prophecy hath already been; for we would deny them no favour willingly which we could lawfully yield them. Nevertheless I verily believe that this Prophecy hath never yet received his full accomplishment, nor is to do, Until (as S. Paul saith, Rom. 11. 25.) the fulness of the Gentiles be come in; and so all Israel shall be saved.

For we shall find in the Prophecies of the Scriptures, that there are two Sorts and Times of the Calling of the Gentiles: The first is that which should be with the rejection and casting off of the Jews, and (as S. Paul saith) to provoke them to jealousy: such a Calling as should be in a manner occasional, that God might not want a Church the time the Jews were to be cast out; for this is that which S. Paul means, Rom. 11. 15. That the casting away of the Jews is the calling of the Gentiles or reconciling of the world: whence we may see, that the Apostles were not to preach Christ to the Gentiles, until being first offered to the Jews, * they refused him. And this is that Calling of the Gentiles which hitherto hath been for many Ages.

Rom. 11. 11.

* Acts 13. 46. & chap 18. 6. & chap. 28. 23.

But there is a second and more glorious Calling of the Gentiles to be found in the Prophecies of Scripture; not a Calling, as this is, wherein the Jews are excluded; but a Calling wherein the Jews shall have a share of the greatest glory, and are to have a preeminence above other Nations, when all Nations shall flow unto them, and walk in their light: For the calling of the remainder of the world which is not yet under Christ, is reserved for the solemnizing of the Jews restitution. This is that Calling and that Time which he calls the Fulness of the Gentiles; I would not brethren (saith he) have

Rom. 11. 25.

you

Isai. 2. 2, 3, 4.
Verse 12.

Dan. 2. 34.
See in Book
IV. Epistle 8.
The Purport of the four Kingdoms in Daniel.
* Dan. 2. 35.

you ignorant of this mystery, that blindness in part is hapned to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in; and so all Israel shall be saved. This is that Time whereof he speaks, that if the present fall of the Jews be the riches of the world, and their decay the riches of the Gentiles, how much more shall their fulness be the fulness of the Gentiles? This is that glorious Time which the Prophecy of this Text principally, if not altogether, intended: For if the fulness of the glory and enlargement of the Church be here described, then it must needs be that the time hereof hath never yet been, because as yet the Fulness of the Gentiles, whereof S. Paul speaks, is not come in. While the Roman and Iron part of Nebuchadnezzar's Image was yet standing, a stone was hewn out of the mountain without hands: This is the First State of the Kingdom of Christ, and Calling of the World; which hath been hitherto. But at length this stone, when the time of the Image's brittle feet came, smote the Image upon those feet, so that the wind blew the whole Image away, and there was no more place found for any part thereof: which was no sooner done, but the * stone which smote the Image, swelled into a great Mountain, and filled the whole earth: This is the Time of the Fulness of Christ's Kingdom, the Fulness of the Gentiles: This is the Time when the Mountain of the Lord's House should be established upon the tops of the Mountains; namely, when the small stone of Christ's Kingdom, which is now in being, shall smite the brittle feet of the last Remainder of the Roman State now subsisting in the Popedom, in whom the divided Toes of too many Kingdoms are in a sort (though but brittlely) united together, and so that great seven-hilled City still Ladies it over the Nations of the Earth.

DISCOURSE XXX.

JUDGES I. 7.

As I have done, so God hath requited me.

THESE are the words of Adonibezek, one of the Kings of Canaan, whom the sons of Judah and Simeon having taken prisoner in war, they cut off the thumbs of his hands, and great toes: The justness of which punishment so evidently sampling his fore-past sin, forced him, though with a heavy heart, to give glory unto God, and say, Threescore and ten Kings, having their thumbs and great toes cut off, gathered their meat under my table: As I have done, so God hath requited me.

These words (without any longer Preface) may be considered two ways; either simply or absolutely in themselves, or with reference to him who spake them. In themselves they are an Affirmation or Historical narration, That as Adonibezek had done, so God requited him. If we consider them with reference to the speaker, they are a Confession, as being spoken by him who did the fact, and suffered now the punishment; Adonibezek himself it is who saith, As I have done, so God hath requited me.

I.

The first Consideration of Adonibezek's words.

In the First Consideration I observe four things.

1. That God punisheth sin with temporal punishment in this life, as well as with eternal in the life to come. Thus this miserable King here feels the hand of God fall so heavy upon him, while he was yet in the world, that it makes him bitterly cry out, I have done cruelly, and God hath even here requited me.

2. That God doth not always presently inflict his Judgments, while the sin is fresh, but sometimes defers that long which he means to give home at the last. So saith our King here, As I have done; not as I did even now, but as I did long ago, and thought by this God had forgotten me, yet now I see he requiteth me.

3. That these Divine Judgments by some conformity or affinity do carry in them as it were a stamp and print of the sin for which they are inflicted. So saith this unhappy King, As I have done; even just as I have done to others, now I suffer my self: Seventy Kings thumbs in my cruelty I cut off, and in my pride made them to feed like dogs under my table: now the measure which I mete unto others, is measured unto my self; for just as I have done, so God hath requited me.

4. That

4. That the Profit and Pleasure which men aim at when they commit sin will not so much as quit cost even in this life : For if God's punishments be requitals, certainly the profit we have gotten by sin he will make us lose in the punishment ; the pleasure we hope to find, and seek after in sin, will be over-poised in the pain we are sure to feel when the just hand of the Almighty shall requite us.

Judg. I. 7.

And thus have you heard already the Summ of what I mean to speak of in the First consideration of these words. Now I will return again, and speak more largely of them all, and that in the same order I gave them out.

The first Collection therefore which I made was, That God punisheth the sins of men with temporal punishment in this life, as well as with eternal in the life to come. This verity (to use the words of Zophar, Job 20. 4. ) was known in the days of old, and found true ever since man was placed upon the earth. For as the Apostle saith of righteousness, that it hath both the promise of this life and of the life to come ; so it is most true of unrighteousness, that it hath the curse of this life as well as of the life to come.

Obsev. i.

1 Tim. 4. 3.

The first sin of our first Parents, whereof we all stand guilty, was thus punished, as it were to be a Rule and Law of what God would do after. I say, the first sin of our first Parents was punished with a curse in things of this life. From hence come all the outward calamities and miseries of mankind, wherein the happiest man on earth hath his share ; hence our labour and vexation of spirit ; hence our pain, our want, and all our trouble wherein we travel under the Sun. No man in the world is exempted from this Law ; all of us as well feel a present punishment here in this life, as fear that which shall be to come hereafter in the world to come.

Now as the universal misery we all feel is a temporal punishment of an universal sin ; so the clods of daily sin, which we add unto this great mountain of transgression, doth usually bring us under some special kind of punishment, above that which we have in common with other men. The whole History of the Bible, if we look well into it, is most part taken up in Examples of this one Maxim : whosoever thinketh otherwise, he hath taken too slight a view and too short a survey of the world's affairs. Perhaps he sees the person of a Tyrant, of an Oppressor, of a Blasphemer, to live long in jollity, and to end his days in tranquillity ; or, to use the words of Job in the same argument, to spend their days in wealth, and in a moment ( without any more trouble ) go down into the grave. How is it then true, That God requiteth sin in this life, or that any regard should be had to any temporal calamities or worldly disasters ; since these come alike to the just and unjust, to the fool and to the wise, to those whom God favoureth as well as those he favoureth not ?

Chap. 21. 13.

But for Answer hereunto, we must know, That the way of God in temporal punishments is one, and his way in eternal and spiritual another ; he deals not after the same fashion in both. For eternal punishments in the world to come, the person which sinneth shall alone suffer, and no other for him ; but as for temporal punishments, which are seen in this world, sometimes God lays them upon the person, sometimes upon the posterity of the offender, or sometimes upon others which in such like respects are near unto them, as he sees best in his wisdom. When therefore thou seest a man live in open and gross sins, confine not thine eye unto his person only, but look farther about him, survey his whole family ; if nothing appear while he is living, yet after his death consider of his posterity, and thou wilt find the ways of God to be just and glorious in the avenging of sin and wickedness.

This question was long debated between Job and his friends, and at last came to this very issue, Job himself determining and asloiling it after this manner ; I will teach you ( saith he, chap. 27. ver. 11, &c. ) by the hand of God ; that which is with the Almighty will I not conceal. Behold, all ye your selves have seen it, why then are you thus altogether vain ? This is the portion of a wicked man from God, and the heritage of oppressors, which they shall receive of the Almighty. If his children be multiplied, it is for the sword, and his off-spring shall not be satisfied with bread, &c.

The reason of this difference between temporal punishments and eternal is to be gathered from the several and differing Ends of them both : Because they are for divers Ends and Purposes, therefore the way of God is diverse in the execution of them. The End of eternal punishments is to satisfy the justice of God, in avenging sin ; but the End of temporal punishments is chiefly exemplary ; that is, for example and warning unto others, that they might hereby know that God regardeth and observeth the actions of men, and therefore fear lest the like might come unto themselves which they have seen to have befallen other men.

Now for such an End as this, it is not always requisite that God should punish every offender offender in his own person ; because the punishment here respecteth not so much the person of the offender himself, as others who have been witnesses of his sin, that they might take heed of committing the like. Now this End may be as well attained in the punishment of a mans posterity, subjects, servants, as of his own person : For by both alike may others see that God observeth the sins of men, and hath plagues in readines for those which commit them : And by both alike will men be afraid of the hand of God ; seeing most men do most vehemently with the good and happy condition of their posterity and others having like relation unto them ; Kings the weal of their Subjects, Fathers the good of their Children, Husbands the good of their Wives ; and therefore will refrain from doing that which they see by experience of others may bring a plague or a curse upon any of them.

Judg. 1.7.

2 Sam. 12.13

Verse 11.

Verse 10.

Verse 14.

Yea God so much regardeth this exemplary End in temporal punishments, that I think this to be one chief reason why God forgiving the sin, and consequently eternal punishment, yet he remitteth not temporal plagues and chastisements ; lest when the sin is notoriously known and scandalous, those who saw the sin, and could not so well know of the inward reconciliation between God and the sinner, might stumble and doubt in their hearts Whether there were a God or no, who observeth the ways of men. In this sort, and for this end, was David punished ; whom though upon his humble repentance Nathan had told, The Lord hath put away thy sin, thou shalt not die : yet nevertheless did God raise up evil against him out of his own house, he took his wives from before his eyes, and gave them unto his neighbour, and the sword never departed from his house, according as the Lord had spoken. The reason hereof follows in the Text, in the words of Nathan ; Because, saith he, by this deed thou hast given great occasion to the enemies of the Lord to blaspheme, the child also which is born unto thee shall surely die. The child also ; that is, all the former plagues, together with the death of the child, shall come upon thee for this end.

This then being so plain, what End God chiefly aims at in his outward and visible judgments ; we ought hence to learn what to do as often as we see the hand of God fall heavy upon any open and known sinner ; namely, to accomplish in our selves the End which God aims at, to examine our actions past, to amend our lives, lest as bad, if not a worse thing, befall us or ours. And if at any time we see an Example of this upon one of God's own children, as we heard of David before, a man after God's own heart ; let us learn to fear and tremble, and say, If such things befall those whom God most loveth. what shall become of us if we sin likewise ? Again, when we see God thus punishing sin in the eyes of the world, let us acknowledge his All-seeing Providence, and say with those, Rev. 15. 3, 4. Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty ; just and true are thy ways, thou King of Saints. Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy Name, when thy judgments are made manifest ? and with David, Psal. 9. 16. and Psal. 11. 7. The Lord is known by the judgment which he executeth ; for the righteous Lord loveth righteousness.

See also Psal.

52.7.

Observat. 2.

A N D thus I come to the second thing I observed, namely, That God often forbears and defers his punishments. As I did long ago (saith Adonibezek) yea again and again, seventy times one after another ; so long and so often, that I thought God had either not seen, or quite forgotten me : yet now I see he requiteth me.

Psal. 73.2.

Jer. 12.1.

How true this Observation is, is sufficiently witnessed by their experience who have little less than stumbled and staggered hereat. This made Cato, a Heathen man, to cry out, Res divina multum habent caliginis, The disposals of Divine providence are not a little cloudy and dark. This made David, a man after God's own heart, to confess and say, My feet were almost gone, my steps had well-nigh slipped. This made Jeremy cry out from the bottom of an amazed soul, Righteous art thou, O Lord, when I plead with thee ; yet let me talk with thee of thy judgments. Wherefore doth the way of the wicked prosper ? why are they happy that deal very treacherously ? Yea those Martyred Saints, Rev. 6. 10. are heard to cry from under the Altar, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell upon the earth ?

Now as these forenamed have stumbled at God's delaying and forbearing his judgments, so others there are who have been quite deceived, verily believing that with God Quod differtur, aufertur, what was forborn, was also forgotten. Such an one was Adonibezek here, who having escaped so long, thought to have escaped ever. And such were those whereof David spake, Psal. 10. 6. Who say in their hearts, We shall never be moved, we shall never be in adversity. Such an one is the great Whore of Babylon, that sings, Καθήμεαι βασίλισσα, I sit like a Queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow. Such an one was Pherecydes Syrius, master of Pythagoras, and a famous

Rev. 18.7.

Philosopher,

Philo'sopher, and one that is said to have been the first Philo'sopher that taught among the Greeks the Soul to be immortal; and yet among all his knowledge had not learned this one Principle, The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. For as * Ælian reports, he used among his scholars to vaunt of his irreligion after this manner, saying, That he had never offered sacrifice to any God in all his life; and yet had lived as long and as merrily as those who had offered several Hecatombs. But he that thus impiously abused the long-suffering of God, came at length to an end as strange as his impiety was unusual; for so they report of him, that he was stricken (like Herod, by the Angel of the Lord) with such a disease, that * Serpents bred of the corrupt humors of his body, which eat and consumed him being yet alive.

But that we may neither distrust the righteous ways of God, nor prevent his unsearchable counsels with our over-hasty expectation, let us a little consider of the Ends why God oftentimes defers and prolongs his Judgments. These Ends I suppose may be referred unto four heads.

1. For the sake of godly ones, for whom God useth to forbear even multitudes of sinners. So had there been but ten righteous persons in Sodom, Sodom had never been destroyed; I will not destroy it (saith God) for tens sake. So for good Josiah's sake God deferred the plagues he had decreed to bring upon that people, that Josiah might be first gathered unto his fathers in peace, and his eyes might not see all the evil that he was to bring upon that place: as it is 2 Kings 22. 20. For as the new wine (saith the Lord, Esa. 65. 8.) is found in the cluster, and one saith, Despise it not, for a blessing is in it: even so will I do for my servants sakes, that I may not destroy them all: That is, I will spare a whole cluster of men, even for one or two blessed servants of mine which I shall find therein. This is the first End; and this is most, if not only, found in publick judgments and common sins, such as concern whole societies of men; for in such properly doth God, for the sake of godly ones, forbear a multitude of sinners.

2. The second End is, To give time of repentance and amendment: For the Lord is long-suffering, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance, as it is 2 Pet 3. 9. This is shewed by the parable of the Fig-tree, Luke 13. 7. Three years the husbandman came to seek fruit, and found none; and the fourth year he expected, before he would cut it down. An hundred and twenty years the old world had given them before the Flood came. And Jonah proclaimed (not, Yet one day, but) Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be destroyed. This End concerns such punishments as deprive men of life, and of the means of salvation and of amendment of life: For such as these only can God be said to forbear, to give time of repentance. For as for other punishments (not the forbearance, but) the hastening of them rather would cause repentance; seeing men then use to remember and call upon God when they are in misery and affliction.

3. The third End of God's deferring his punishments is, The opportunity of example by them unto others, and of manifesting his own glory. God is Lord of Times; and as he created them, so he alone knows a fit Time for all things under the Sun. He therefore who knows all occasions, when he seeth a fit Time for his Judgments, to profit other men by example, and most of all to set forth his own glory, then he sends them forth, and till then he will defer them.

4. The fourth End or Reason hath some affinity with this, and it is, When God intending some extraordinary judgment, suffers mens sins to grow unto a full ripeness, that their sin may be as conspicuous unto the world as his purpose is their punishment shall be. Thus God punished not the Canaanites in Abraham's time, but deferred it till Israel's coming out of Egypt; and that (as himself witnesseth, Gen 15. 16.) Because the iniquity of the Amorites was not yet full. And therefore is not this last End to be looked for in all God's delays; but it seemeth proper to his extraordinary punishments: when God meaneth, as it were, to get himself a name amongst men, then God stays to have the sin full, upon which he will pour a full vial of wrath and indignation.

Having thus seen how many Ends there are why God should oftentimes defer the execution of his Judgments; the consideration hereof may be a double lesson unto us.

1. A lesson of spiritual wisdom, that we should not think with Epicures and children of this world, That God's delay in punishing for a time is any argument he means not to punish at all. But, with wise Solon, let us account no man happy, but him who ends happily. 2. We may learn here also a lesson of Christian Patience. When we behold the prosperity of wicked men, let it not grieve us to see sin a while lye unrevenged; let it not grind our hearts to see those who make a trade of wickedness a while to triumph,

Judg. 1. 7.

ITOV. 1. 7.

* Var. hist.

l. 4. c. 28.

underd. 70.

σταυρ. 20. 21.

χ. 20. 21. 22.

πτον. 1. 2.

α. 20. 21. 22.

α. 20. 21. 22.

α. 20. 21. 22.

* Pliny l. 7.

nat. hist. c. 51.

Pherecyd. s. cop.

piā serpentium

ex corpore ejus

erumpente ex-spiravit.

Gen. 18. 32.

Jonah 3. 4.

Judg. 1.7.

umph, and be, as it were, at defiance with Heaven it self : For either God doth it for the good of some of his Saints ; and then how can we but bless him ? Or else to give them time of repentance ; and then who art thou, O man, that repinest at the mercifulness of thy God ? Or else to wait a fit time when thy self and others may be the most edified thereby, or his own glory most illustrated, or when men may take greatest notice of his Justice. Admire therefore his Wisdom, and let the expectation of that renown which God will one day purchase to himself, make thee rest in hope and possess thy soul in quietness. Why should the Heathen go before us in this duty ? They knew not so much as we have heard this day, and yet could they rest themselves in an assured expectation of God's justice, though a while it were deferred : As is very observable in the words of Agamemnon, expressed by Homer, Iliad. 4. upon occasion of the Trojans perfidious perjury ;

"Εἰπερ γὰρ τε καὶ αὐτίκ' Ὀλύμπῳ ἐκ ἐτέλεσσαν,
"Εκ τε καὶ ὅψ' ἐτελείῃ, ———

Though, faith he, the God of heaven avenge not this presently, yet sure at last he will do it.

Εὖ γὰρ ἐγὼ τόδε οἶδα, ———

For of this I am sure,

"Εσσεταί ἡμᾶρ ὅταν ποτ' ὀλώλῃ Ἰλιὸς ἱρή, that there will be a day when stately Troy shall be overthrown :

Nam licet haud fontes praesenti puniat ira ;
Sera tamen sumit Deus & graviora malorum
Supplicia ———

Though God doth not always presently inflict his judgments upon offenders, yet he will pay them home at last ; and the punishments he defers long, are the more grievous when they come. What could Job, David, or Jeremy have spoken more freely in such a case ? Methinks I durst almost apply the words of our Saviour concerning the Centurion, We shall scarce find so great Faith in Israel.

Matth. 8.10.

Observ. 3.

BUT now I pass unto the third point I observed ( and it is chiefly to be observed ) in these words, namely, The conformity between the Sin and the Punishment : Temporal punishments have for the most part, as it were, a character stamped upon them, in which men may read their sins as well, oftentimes, as if they heard God himself to speak from heaven. Adonibezek could do it with small learning ; he saw his punishment so evidently branded with the mark of his sin ; Threescore and ten kings ( faith he ) having their thumbs and great toes cut off, gathered their meat under my table : As I have done, so God hath requited me.

Matth. 7.2.

Which rule of God's Justice appears by those words of our Saviour, With what measure ye mete unto others, the same shall be measured unto you : and by that of the Prophet Obadiah, verse 15. thus threatening Edom, As thou hast done, it shall be done unto thee ; thy reward shall return upon thine own head.

1.

But for the better discerning of this Conformity with the Sin which God stampeth upon the punishment thereof, we must know that it is of Four several kinds. The first is, Ταυτοπαθεια, When we suffer by the hand of God the very same things our selves which we have done to others. Such was Adonibezek's punishment here, and such was that wherewith Habakkuk, chap. 2. 8. threatens the Chaldeans ; Because thou hast spoiled many nations, all the remnant of the people shall spoil thee : and Ezekiel the Edomites ; As thou didst rejoyce at the inheritance of the house of Israel, because it was desolate, so will I do unto thee ; Thou shalt be also desolate. Thus Pharaoh, who * commanded all the males of the Hebrews to be drowned as soon as they were born, himself with all his Host was drowned in the Red Sea. The depths covered them, they sunk unto the bottom like a stone, Exod. 15. 5. * David committed Adultery with the wife of Uriah ; his own son Absalom did the like with his Concubines in the sight of the Sun and face of all Israel. * Joram like a villain slew all the sons of his Father ; and so did the Arabians by the will of God slay all his sons likewise, only Jehoahaz excepted. Jehoiakim, who slew Urijah the Prophet, Jer. 26. 23. and would not suffer his body to have honest burial, himself ( according as Jeremy had foretold, Chap. 22. 19. ) was likewise slain, and buried with the burial of an Ass, being cast forth beyond the gate of Jerusalem. I shall not need trouble you with profane stories, or tell you how Brutus and Cassius were forced to slay themselves with the same swords wherewith they slew Cesar ; with many other like :

Chap. 35.15.

* Exod. 1.22.
& 12.29.* 2 Sam. 11.4.
Chap. 16.22.* 2 Chr. 21.
v. 4, & 17.

2.

But I come unto the second kind of Conformity, Ὁμοιοπαθεια, When we suffer not the very same, but yet that which hath some Analogy and resemblance with our sins. Thus the the universal overflowing of sin in the Old world was punished with an universal overflowing of waters. It was the common punishment of the Jews, when they served other Gods besides their own, for God to make them serve other Lords and Kings besides their own. Look in the Scripture, and see whether this were not the regular punishment of Idolatry, with God, thus to requite his people with that which resembled their sin; to give them over to serve other nations, when they served other Gods besides himself. As Jer. 5. 19. Like as ye have forsaken me, (saith the Lord) and served strange Gods in your land, so shall ye serve strangers in a land that is not yours. So also, 2 Chron. 12. 5. Ye have forsaken, or left [עֲזַבְתֶּם] me, and therefore have I also left you [פָּרַצְתִּי] in the hand of Shishak. And after they had humbled themselves, the Lord says by Shemaiah the Prophet, verf. 7. They have humbled themselves, therefore I will not destroy them, but grant them some deliverance, &c. verse 8. Nevertheless they shall be his servants, that they may know my service, and the service of the kingdoms of the countries: Vulg. Ut sciant distantiam servitutis mee & servitutis regni Terrarum, That they may know the difference between my service and the service of the kingdoms of the lands.

Judg. 1. 7.

And certainly, if we look into the condition of the Church since Christ's time, we shall find the way of God's dealing in this case to have been the same. The Saracens, who spoiled and subdued so great a part of Christ's Church, were never heard of till six hundred years after Christ, even at the time when Christians began generally to fall to Idolatry, and to worship Images, Saints and Angels: Then God first gave us over to serve other Nations, when we began to serve other Gods besides the Lord our God. The Turkish fury could never be stayed from casting more and more this yoke of bondage upon our necks, until Judah (I mean the now Reformed Churches) began to put away her Idols, some one hundred years since: From that time unto this, that God which would have spared Sodom for ten righteous sakes, hath spared the remnant of Christendom for their sakes who have turned again to the Lord their God to serve him as he would be worshipped.

But to go on: Solomon, when he divided that worship which was due unto the Lord alone, between him and the Idols of Zidon, Moab and Ammon, the Lord, to give him the same measure, divided his kingdom, and that allegiance which was only due to him and his posterity, between himself and his servant Jeroboam: Because he served God with an imperfect heart, God left him an imperfect kingdom; Because he bestowed divine honour upon the vassals of the Lord of heaven, the Lord also bestowed his honour upon his vassal Jeroboam.

1 Kings 11. 5.

1 Kings 12. 20.

Nebuchadnezzar, who had lived like a Beast in his Palace, God made him to eat grass like an Oxe in the field, till he knew the most High ruled in the kingdoms of men, Dan. 4. 25, 32, 34.

Otho Bishop of Mentz, in a time of famine shut up a great number of poor people in a Barn, promising to give them some relief: But when he had them fast, he set the Barn on fire; and hearing then the most lamentable and piteous cries and shriekings of the poor in the midst of the flames, he scoffingly said, Hear ye how the mice cry in the Barn. But the Lord, the just revenger of cruelty, sent a whole Army of Mice upon him, which haunted him a great deal worse than the Frogs did King Pharaoh; not only coming into his bed-chamber and upon his bed, but following him into a Tower which he had built for his last refuge in the midst of the River Rhene, never leaving him till they had quite devoured him.

Of this Otho or Hatto 11.
see Trithemius,
Isengrinus 1.
12. Rerum
Spir. &c.

Socrates hath a memorable story of one Cyricius Bishop of Chalcedon, who in a meeting of many Bishops inveighed very bitterly against good S. Chrysostom, and amongst other spiteful language called him often ἀγώμας, a kneeless fellow, because in a good cause he would never be gotten to bow and crouch to obtain the favour of men, which Cyricius accounted a stubborn and obstinate disposition. But when he had thus uttered his malice, Marathas another Bishop by chance trod upon his toe; which being at the first esteemed (as it was indeed) a very small hurt, yet afterwards so rankled, that for the safety of the rest of the body his leg was fain to be cut off; which done, the other leg also was in like manner affected, and that so, that being otherwise incurable, it was fain to feel the same remedy the other had done. Thus he who called the holy man a kneeless fellow in one sense, God made him a kneeless Bishop in another. By which and the former Examples we see how God in punishing requites men with that which hath some resemblance with their Sin. And so much for Ομοιοπαιθεα.

I come now to the third kind, which is Conformitas subiecti, The Conformity of subject; When though we suffer not the same, nor perhaps like unto that we have done

3.

O

Judg. 1. 7.

Psalm. 106. 18.
A fire was kindled in their company,
the flames
burnt up the wicked.
* Judg. 19. 2,
25.
1 Sam. 2. 22,
&c.
Chap. 4. 11.

done unto others, yet are we punished in that subject wherein and whereabout we have sinned. Thus Adam our first Parent sinned in eating the fruits of the earth; and he and all his posterity are punished in the curse of the same, in that now in sorrow we eat of them all the days of our life. Touching God's dealing with Israel in this kind, see Wisdom chap. 11. verse 7, 13. Korah and his company sinned in offering strange fire unto the Lord, and were punished by a strange destruction: The earth opened its mouth and swallowed them up quick; and there came out a fire from the Lord, and consumed the men that offered incense, Numb. 16. verse 32, and verse 35. The Levites wife in * Judges, sinned in the Commission of Fornication, and therefore died by the same, being forced to death by the men of Gibeab. Eli, by too much indulgence towards his sons, sinned against God, and was punished in them, being slain by the Philistines, and the Ark of God taken, which they had carried with them. David gloried in the number of his people, and was punished in the Consumption of seventy thousand of them by the pestilence, 2 Sam. 24. 1, 15. Hezekiah, who sinned in shewing by way of ostentation his treasures and riches unto the Ambassadors of the King of Babylon, had his punishment threatened by the same things, that all he had thus gloriously shown should one day be carried unto Babylon, 2 Kings 20. 13, 17. Lastly, The Jews, who crucified our Saviour by the hands of the Romans, had their City and Temple rased by the same hands.

4.

Now I come unto the last kind of Conformity, which I call Conformity of circumstance; When the Time and Place of Punishment agrees with the Time and Place of the Sin. Of the agreement of Place I find these Examples. The first of Ahab and Jezebel, in the place where the dogs licked the blood of Naboth, they licked the blood of Ahab and Jezebel; 1 Kings 21. 19. and 2 Kings 9. 36. In the place where Baal's Priests had committed Idolatry, were their bones, being dead, and the bodies of those who were alive, slain and burnt by Josiah upon the Altar of Bethel, 2 Kings 23. 16.

Matth. 27. 25.

Numb. 13. 25.

Numb. 14. 33.
34.

Examples of concurrence of Time I find these. At the same time of the year wherein the Jews crucified Christ, hapned that fatal and final siege by the Romans, when that heavy curse fell upon them, His blood be upon us and our children. The Spies, which brought an evil report upon the land, had spent forty days in searching it; and therefore God for this sin, that Time might agree with Time, made them wander up and down forty years in the wilderness. They are the words of God himself, According unto the number of days (saith he) in which ye searched the land, even forty days, (each day for a year) shall ye bear your iniquities. Last of all, (because I will not be tedious in Examples) Pompey the great is reported to have died most miserably upon the very same day he triumphed for the spoil of Jerusalem.

Observat. 4.

Nemo animi sui causa malus est.

A N D thus having spoken of the three first Observations, I come now to the fourth and last Observation, namely, That the Profit and Pleasure which men seek for in the works of sin, will not so much as quit cost in this life: Because God's Punishments are requitals; the Profit gotten by sin we shall lose wholly, if not doubly, in the Punishment thereof; the Pleasure found in sin will be overpoised in the pain of sorrow we shall undergo for the same. It is hard to conceive that a man should be so much the son of Belial, as to commit sin only for his mind sake, without any aim to a farther end. But rather we may think, That as all actions are done for some End, so even in sinful and wicked actions men have some Ends why they commit them: And it is the conceit and apprehension of some such thing to be gotten by sin, which makes that which is indeed Evil to have a shadow of an appearing Good. To be short, The Ends men aim at in the commission of sin are those two bastard goods, Utile & Jucundum, worldly Profit and carnal Pleasure. Within the compass of which two fall all those kinds of false Happiness whereabout the Philosophers were so divided, Riches, Honours, Pleasures, Bodily ease, &c. All are comprehended within the verge of these two, Utile & Jucundum, Profit and Pleasure.

Matth. 4. 8.

These are verily those two baits of the Devil wherewithal he inveigleth the Souls of men; with these two he insnared our First Parents in Paradise. Our mother Eve saw the forbidden fruit, that it was like to be as pleasant to the taste as it was pleasing unto the eye: on the other side, Knowledge like unto God, which she hoped to attain hereby, was a thing exceeding commodious and worth the compassing: Upon these Motives therefore she fell miserably: and upon the like do we fall every day. Nay the Devil thought with these to have tempted our Saviour Christ himself to worship him; for he shewed him (as we read) All the kingdoms of the earth, with the glory of them. In a kingdom all kinds of Profit and means of wealth abound; and for Pleasure, what delight is equal unto that which is to be found in the glory of a Kingdom?

To

To speak of them severally: What power and force a Motive of Gain and Profit hath to sway our affections to commit sin, S. Paul hath told us, 1 Tim. 6. 9. Those, Judg. 1. 7.
saith he, that will be rich, fall into temptation and a snare; and verse 10. that Covetousness is the root of all evil. The same also is apparent by the words of our Saviour, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God, Matth. 19. 24.

And for the other, to wit, carnal Pleasure; so forcible it is, so much prevailing in tempting and drawing us unto evil, that the wise Son of Syrach stilled not to say, He that resisteth pleasures, crowneth his own soul. Besides, these Ends are so nearly linked together, that the one of them is commonly desired for a Means unto the other; for therefore do many desire wealth, that they might have means to live voluptuously. Chap. 19. 3.

But be they as they will be, If this be all the good men do or can expect from the works of sin; if these only be those fair Ends we strive to attain by so foul a means; and when we have gotten them, if the just God requites the Pleasure we expect, with pain and sorrow; and the Gain we hoped for, with an equal yea with a greater loss: if the Pleasure of a moment be entertained with a remaining sorrow; if a single Gain be rewarded with a double loss, and that in this world: Surely it will not quit the cost to commit the most gainful or pleasing sin in the world. But certain it is that God useth thus to meet with our intendments, and to make us always fall short, first or last, of what we hoped for by Sin.

For as for Pleasure and Hearts-ease, as we call it, alas! who ever found this gotten by sin to be worth the while? To overpass such requiting pains as fall within the observation of other mens eyes; as when God makes our pain and sorrow to grow even from those members, those hands, those things from which we sought delight, as I shewed you in the last Observation: I will, I say, omit these, and put you in mind only of that secret pain, which no man knows but he that feels it, The sting of Conscience. Is there any man that finds not the honey of sin mingled with this gall? Surely the sting of Conscience never leaves a sinner, but is in all our pleasure like unto those wild gourds, 2 Kings 4. 39, &c. wherewith the young Prophets of Gilgal spoiled their whole pot of pottage: We cannot taste so much as one spoonful of this false pleasure, but presently we must cry as they cried, Mors in olla, Death is in the pot.

As for Profit and Wealth; It is even gotten into vulgar experience, that what in this kind is gotten by sinful and bad means, is nothing durable. Treasures of wickedness (saith Solomon, Prov. 10. 2.) profit nothing; and wealth gotten by vanity shall be diminished, Prov. 13. 11. Yea as the feathers of an Eagle are said to consume the feathers of other birds; so a little gotten by indirect and bad means often consumes a man's whole substance. I cannot stand to enlarge upon this point: I will only shew in the example of our first Parents, how God in this manner requited them.

First, They looked for Pleasure in the taste of so pleasing a fruit. This hope God repaid them with pain and sorrow; I will multiply thy sorrow, (saith he unto the wo- Gen. 3. 16.
man) and in pain shalt thou bring forth children: and to the man, In sorrow shalt thou Verse 17.
eat the fruits of the earth all the days of thy life. They looked, secondly, to have gained much, and to have profited themselves exceedingly, as namely, to have gotten more knowledge than God had given them. This hope God requited, not only with the loss of that knowledge they had before, but even of the outward things they enjoyed Verse 24.
in Paradise. Primum in unoquoque genere est mensura consequentium, The First in every kind is the measure of that which follows. Thus God dealt with them, and thus will he deal with us unto the world's end. Sin is utterly unprofitable; whatsoever is gotten thereby is like the change Diomedes made with Glaucus; like that which Rehobam made of the shields in the house of the Lord, shields of brass for shields of 2 Chron. 12. 10 gold.

Let us therefore hence learn to withstand such foolish Motives and such vain Hopes: when we are in danger to be ensnared by these baits, let us thus reason with our selves, What will it profit a man to enjoy an hour's pleasure, for many a year's pain? What will the sweet do us good, which is mixt with so much sour? What will it profit a man to be rich in his youth, and a beggar in his age? What will it profit a man by guile and oppression to raise his house while he liveth, by that which shall most certainly ruine it when he is dead and gone? And lastly, if none of all this Mar. 8. 36.
were, yet What will it profit a man to win the whole world, and lose his own soul?

NOW having done with the First consideration of these words, I come unto the second, which is with relation to him that uttered them, and so they are a Confession. II.
In which I observe Three things. The Second consideration of Alonibezek's words:

Judg. 1. 7.

1. That the suffering of punishment extorts the Confession of sin. Thus this miserable King is made, for all his pride and stomach, to lament with an Ego feci, with an I have done.

2. God's Justice in the punishing of sin visibly is one of the strongest Motives to make an Atheist confess there is a God. Adonibezek, who scarce believed, or perhaps not well remembered, that there was a God till now, is here forced to confess, The irresistible God, that crusheth down the proud, he hath requited me.

3. As the Punishment in general bringeth sin to mind, which else would be forgotten: so the fashion and kind thereof well considered may lead us, as it were by the hand, to know the very sin we are punished for. Many sins had Adonibezek committed; the condition and manner of his punishment made him remember his cruel usage of the seventy kings, and say, As I have done, &c.

Observat. 1.

To begin with the First; I say, The suffering of punishment extorts the confession of sin. The reason whereof is the very nature of Punishment, which always implieth some offence, and therefore is a good remembrancer of the same. Thus Joseph's brethren, when they were distressed in Egypt, cried, We are verily guilty concerning our brother. Proud Pharaoh, when he saw the plague of hail and thunder, said, I have now sinned; the Lord is righteous, and I and my people are wicked. The proud stomachs of the Israelites came down, when once the fiery serpents stung them, and then they came to Moses, and said, We have sinned; for we have spoken against the Lord, and against thee. Manasses, whom all the threatnings of God's Prophets in fifty years space could never move, yet when he was bound in fetters, and carried prisoner unto Babylon, Then he besought the Lord his God, and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers. Whosoever therefore he be that feels not this fruit, and makes not this use of his crosses and afflictions, is worse than hard-hearted Pharaoh, worse than cruel Adonibezek. But if by this means we come to see and acknowledge our sin, then may we say with David, It is good for me that I was afflicted; and give thanks and praise unto our God, who is able out of such hard rocks as these to make flow the saving waters of repentance.

Gen. 42. 21.

Exod. 9. 27.

Numb. 21. 7.

2 Chro. 33. 12.

Psal. 119. 71.

Observ. 2.

And thus I come to my second Observation, which is, That God's judgment for sin is one of the strongest motives to make an Atheist confess there is a God. Those who say, There is no God, David accounts them in the number of fools: The fool saith in his heart, There is no God, Psal. 53. 1. Now Solomon styleth Punishment Eruditio stultorum, the Schoolmaster of fools. If for all fools, then also for Atheistical fools, that they either by their own, or by example of God's plagues upon others, may be taught to put away their folly.

Psal. 73. 2, 3.

Most certain it is, The not observing of God's judgments, or the supposed examples of some who seem to escape the hand of God in the greatest sins, is a main occasion of Atheism. This made David himself to say, My feet were almost gone, my steps had well-nigh slipped: For I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked. It is reported of Diagoras Melius, surnamed the Atheist, that at the first he was very devout, and a great worshipper of the Gods; but having committed some certain money unto a friend's keeping, and afterwards demanding it again, his friend, loth to forgo such a booty, forswore that he ever received any: whom when Diagoras saw, notwithstanding this horrible perjury, to thrive and prosper, and no divine judgment to fall upon him, he presently turned Atheist and enemy to the Gods, and laboured by all means to bring other men to the like impiety.

For this cause therefore David, as jealous of God's honour, and knowing what force God's Judgments have to keep Atheism from creeping into the hearts of men, desireth God (Psal. 59. 13.) that he would avenge himself of evil-doers, even for this end, that it might be known he was the Lord: Consume (saith he) in thy wrath, consume them, that they may not be; and let them know (that is, that men may know) that God ruleth in Jacob, unto the ends of the earth. And hence it is also that God often in Ezekiel doth plainly affirm this to be the End of his judgments, That it might be known that he was the Lord. As in chapter 6. v. 6. thus he threatens Israel, Your cities shall be laid waste, and your high places shall be desolate, &c. v. 7. And the slain shall fall in the midst of you; and you shall know that I am the Lord. And again, v. 12, 13. He that is far off, shall die by the pestilence; and he that is near, shall fall by the sword. Then shall ye know that I am the Lord. And chap. 25. 17. concerning the Philistines, I will execute great vengeance upon them, saith the Lord, with furious rebukes: and they shall know that I am the Lord, when I shall lay my vengeance upon them. If this then be so as ye have heard, let us learn hence a good preservative against Atheism, and all the ill motions of the devil and our flesh drawing thereunto : not lightly, as most men do, to pass over the Judgments of God upon sin ; but duly and diligently to observe them : if in our selves, then more severely ; if in our neighbours, curiously, but charitably.

Atheism,

Judg. 1. 7.

And so I come to the third and last point, which is, That as Punishment in general bringeth sin to mind, which else would be forgotten : so the fashion and kind thereof well considered may lead us, as it were by the hand, to know the very sin we are punished for. I have shewed already at large, That God's visible judgments have usually in them a stamp and mark of conformity with the sin for which they are inflicted : For either we suffer the same thing our selves that we have done to others, or some resembling or like unto it ; or else are punished about the same thing wherein our sin was ; or lastly, in the place or time where and when we sinned. I am perswaded there is no judgment which God sends for any special sin, but it hath one of these marks in it. Come therefore to Adonibezek, and let us learn of him, by God's stamp in our punishment to find out what sin he aims at. If we would once use to read this Hand-writing of God in our crosses and afflictions, what a motive would it be to make us leave many a sin wherein the Devil nuzzles us the greatest part of our life without sense and feeling ? For if any thing would rouse us and scare us from sin, sure this would, to hear word from God himself what the sin is he plagues us for, and so sharply warns us to amend. Whensoever therefore any cross or calamity befalls us or any of ours, either in body, goods, or name, or in the success of any thing we take in hand, let us not rebel against God with an impatient heart, or fret at the occasion or author of our misery ; but let us take a just account of our life past, and thus reason with our selves, This is surely none other but the very Finger of God ; I am punished, therefore have I sinned : I am punished thus and thus, in this or that sort, in this or that thing, in this or that place or time ; therefore God is angry with me for something I have done, the same with that I suffer, or something like unto it, or because I sinned in this thing, or at this time, or in this place, when and where I now am punished : As I have done, so surely God hath requited me. Therefore I will not look any longer upon any other cause or occasion of this misery, of this cross or calamity, but look unto my sin, and give glory unto God, who sent the hand which hath done all this unto me.

Observat. 3.

Thus did the sons of Jacob, having nodoubt learned of their good father to make this use of their crosses and afflictions : For when they saw themselves so roughly entertained in Egypt, being challenged for spies of the countrey ; when their brother Simeon was to lie in prison in a strange land ; and not only this brother, but another brother, so dearly beloved of his father, must needs be taken from him, and come into the like jeopardy ; when all this distress fell still upon the head of a brother, and nothing but a brother ; they presently discovered the Hand-writing of God, and cried out, We are guilty, and therefore is this evil come upon us : Behold the Finger of God. All this evil still lights upon one or other of our brethren ; for we are verily guilty concerning a brother, our brother Joseph, in that we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear ; therefore is this distress come upon us. Ah ! said Reuben, I told you, I spake unto you that you should not sin against the child, but you would not hear : therefore behold his blood is now required. Yea this writing of God is yet more evident, for we sinned in the dearly-beloved of our Father, Joseph, and now are we distressed about our brother Benjamin, the child whom our Father loveth : As we have done, so God hath requited us.

Gen. 42. 21.

Verse 22.

This is the last point I observed in these words, and it contains the Use of all the former. Verbum sapienti, one word is enough to him that is wise, and one Example is sufficient for him that is willing to follow it.

DISCOURSE XXXI.

S. MATTHEW II. 28, 29.

Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart : and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

SHALL not need trouble you with prefacing of the coherence : The words I have read are an intire sense of themselves, without dependence on what went before. For the matter, they are such, as I might call them an Epitome or Brief summe of the whole Gospel, containing in few words the compleat method of Salvation, and as in a small map a full view of the way to the gates of Eternal life ; whither he is most unworthy to come who will not learn so small a Catechism as this. They are propounded unto us by way of an Invitation, consisting of Three parts :

1. The Thing, 2. The Persons, 3. The Benefit.

1. The Thing invited to, which is double, to wit, Christ and his yoke. Come unto me, saith he, and take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly.

2. The Persons invited, Those that labour and are heavy laden : Come all ye that labour and are heavy laden.

3. The Benefit to those who embrace the invitement, Rest and Ease ; which you shall find in every corner of this Invitation. I will give you rest, or, I will ease you : again, Ye shall find rest unto your souls : and in conclusion, My yoke is easie, and my burthen is light. A Benefit so transcendent, as might allure any ear, that is not wholly stopp'd up with spiritual deafness, to listen after the means whereby it is attained.

I. Let us therefore consider these Three points in order ; and first, that which must first be known and learned, The quality of the persons invited ; Those that labour and are heavy laden. Which before I tell you what they mean, I must first tell you how to construe them, viz. by the Figure called Hendiadis, understanding the conjunction [ and ] causally ; and so contriving the two things named into one, in this manner, labour and heavy laden, into labouring of being heavy laden : As if it had been said, Come unto me all ye that labour of, or by, being heavy laden ; All you that are toiled with, and weary of, your heavy burthen, come unto me, and I will ease you.

For after this manner are many things in Scripture which are uttered conjunction-wise to be understood. I will multiply thy sorrow and thy conception, ( saith God unto the woman, Gen. 3. 16. ) that is, I will multiply thy sorrows of conception, or the sorrows which come of conception. You shall find often in Scripture, Do judgment and righteousness ; that is, Do judgment according to righteousness, Do such judgment as proceeds from justice and rightousness. Psal. 116. 1. I love the Lord, because he hath heard my voice and my supplication, that is, the voice of my supplication, Jer. 29. 11. The Lord promiseth his people to give them an end and expectation, that is, the end of their expectation, or the end they look for. In this Gospel, saith S. John Baptist, chap. 3. verse 11. He that cometh after me, shall baptize you with the holy Ghost and with fire, that is, with the fire of the holy Ghost. So in my Text, weary and heavy laden, is weary of being heavy laden ; Such as labour, such as are toiled and tired out by the weight of their loading. And thus are the words to be construed.

Now to the meaning of them. Those that labour of being heavy laden, are such as grieve and groan under the burthen of their sins. According to the Law, * none should appear before the Lord empty : what offering, what sacrifice then must we bring when we

— Pateris libamus & anro ( saith the Poet ) that is, Libamus pateris ex auro : — Chalybem franosque mordit, i. franos ex chalybe, or chalybeos franos, * Exod. 23. 15.

we come in to Christ, but that which David (who well knew) tells us Psal. 51. 17. The sacrifice of God (saith he) is a broken and contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise. Thus must they come furnished whom Christ inviteth. For this is that which S. Paul calls, 2 Cor. 7. 10. a sorrow after God, or a godly sorrow, which, saith he, worketh repentance to salvation, not to be repented of. For understanding therefore of this Metaphor in my Text, we must know, That Sin is compared in Scripture unto a burthen, wherewith every sinner is laden, yea overcharged; a burthen intolerable. So Psal. 38. 4. Mine iniquities, saith David, are gone over mine head; as a heavy burthen they are too heavy for me. Ver. 6. I am troubled, I am bowed down greatly. Ver. 8. I am feeble and sore broken; I have roared because of the disquietness of my heart. S. Paul followeth the manner of speech, when he tells us, 2 Tim. 3. 6. of silly women laden with sin, and led away with divers lusts. This loading and pressure of sin is in respect of a twofold weight which oppresseth the Soul, the one of Punishment, the other of Loathsomeness. For the weight of Punishment; it is the ordinary style of the Prophets to term God's Judgments for sin by the name of burthens. Jehu calls his execution upon Jehoram, the burthen which the Lord laid upon his father Abab, 2 King 9. 25. So S. Paul saith, Gal. 6. 5. that every one shall bear his own burthen. For the other, the Loathsomeness of sin, that also weighs heavy. Ab sinful Nation! (saith the Prophet Esay, ch. 1. 4.) a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil doers — and it follows, v. 6. From the sole of the foot, even unto the head, there is no soundness in it, but wounds, and bruises, and putrefying sores. This also is a part of David's burthen, Psal. 38. 5. My wounds stink and are corrupt, because of my foolishness. I am troubled (or wryed, יצוּרְיָ Incurvatus sum,) I am bowed down greatly.

Mat. 11. 28, 29

Sin a burthen and load in respect of the weight of Punishment.
Loathsomeness.

Is Sin indeed so heavy a thing? how then do we make it so light a matter? Nullum onus (saith Ambrose Ep. 18.) gravius est quam sarcina peccatorum & pondus flagitiorum, No burthen is more heavy, no load more pressing to the Soul, than the weight and load of Sin. If every thing that presseth down be heavy, how heavy is that which presseth down to Hell, that is, unto that depth of woe whose bottom can never be fathom'd! Is Sin so heavy a thing indeed? how comes it then to pass we feel it not? Our case is so much the more fearful and dangerous. For, saith Chrysostome, Διὰ τὸτο μέγα ἔστι κακόν, ὅτι ὅσον ἔστι δοκῆ, The evil is so much the greater, by how much it seems to be the lesser. For Physicians all agree, that those are most dangerously sick who have no sense and feeling of their sickness; whereas on the contrary, to be sensible of pain is a sign the sickness is not deadly. Happy therefore are those who can add the other word to this, being not only πεφορτισμένοι laden, but κοπιῶντες labouring under the weight of their burthen. These are those whom Christ calleth; and these are those whose condition we are now to consider, that we may know it, and whether our selves be any of that number.

That a man therefore may truly be said to labour and be weary of his burthen, two things are requisite: First, That he feel and be sensible of the weight thereof; Secondly, That he desire to be rid thereof.

He must feel and be sensible of the weight thereof. Now the weight of sin, as I told you, is twofold: First, The weight of Punishment; and secondly, The load of Loathsomeness. The first and soonest felt is that of Punishment; which as it is the grossest weight, so may it be felt while the sense of the Soul is yet but gross and dull: But to feel the other, that is, to loath our sin, requires a quicker and more tender sense; which is not easily attained to, unless the Soul be first well rubbed and galled with the weight of Punishment. The entry therefore and, as it were, the porch of Penitence, are those Terrors and Pangs of the Soul affrighted with the apprehension of the Wrath of God for Sin, and of the danger we are in therefore. When the piercing sting of an accusing conscience upbraids us, and tells us we are in a state to be damned eternally: That if I should die this day, this night, this hour, I must go to the place of weeping and gnashing of teeth, there to yell and howl with devils in pains unspeakable, and be tormented for ever and ever. When our Soul is stricken with horror, to think how long we have lived in this danger, and how little we thought thereof; nay, how securely we increased our score, as though we should never have come to a reckoning for the same; how often God might have taken me away in the midst of my sins, and where had I been then? yea what shall become of me, if he should do it now? O how am I afraid of this moment, who feared nothing so many years! These are those arrows of the Almighty, which must go through our Souls at the beginning of our Repentance. That we may take up the words of David, Psal. 38. 1. O Lord, rebuke me not in thy wrath, neither chasten me

1.

Mat. 11. 28, 29 in thy hot displeasure. v. 2. For thine arrows stick fast in me, and thy hand presseth me sore, v. 3. There is no soundness in my flesh, because of thine anger; neither is there any rest in my bones, because of my sin.

This is a good beginning; but is no more than a beginning: for yet we labour not enough; yet we are not weary enough for Christ to call us unto him. This is but as the prick of a needle, making way for the thread. We must go further, else this will do us no good. For thus far, as to be sensible and affected with the punishment due for sin, to be terrified with the weight of the wrath of God which lies upon us for the same, thus far he may come who shall be damned. For it is common to the desperate reprobate, as well as to the children of God; to Judas, who hanged himself; to Cain whom God drove out from his presence; for he could say and confess to God himself, My punishment is greater than I can bear, Gen. 4. 13. Let us therefore see what we are further to add unto it.

And that is a sense and feeling of the foulness, loathsomeness and odiousness of Sin. If we feel not our selves affected with this weight, the former groaning will be accounted no better with God than hypocrisy and slavish fear; for this is the soul and the life of a godly sorrow indeed, without which the other is but a carcase, if it be alone. But if by rubbing and galling our Hearts, it makes them at length so tender as to be sensible not only of the punishment, but to loath Sin it self as a soul and ugly thing; then indeed it begins to live and give some proof it will be sincere. For as a surfeit of meats, how dainty and delicate soever, will afterward make them loathsome: So if we be indeed surcharged with the burthen of our sins, the appetite of the Soul will begin to loath them, though they have been never so full of delight; yea, it will make us loath our selves, and cry out in a mournful manner with S. Paul, Rom. 7. 24. O miserable man that I am! who shall deliver me from this body of death? Even as a man who is covered over with noisome boiles and sores, is not affected only with the bodily pain caused by them, but even abhors the sight and smell of that which causeth it, as filthy and ugly: so must it be in this leprosie of sin. And indeed, were our eyes once open to see it, Sin is the most ugly, beastly, filthy and noisome thing in the world: For being wholly opposite to God, the most glorious Beauty and most delectable Good; it is contrary to whatsoever is any way seemly, comely, graceful and beautiful: for all these carry in them some Image and resemblance of him; but Sin, none at all. Nay, it is a distasteful and loathsome thing to the Reasonable nature of man, as appears by the continual upbraiding and griping of the Conscience, which can never down with it. In meats, if any go against our stomach, we abhor and loath them: how much more loathsome is that which the Conscience cannot digest, the stomach and taster of our souls? O how nice and daintie we are, that no loathsome and unpleasant meat should offend (so much as by the sight thereof) our fleshly appetite, which is common to us with Beasts! but our Souls, our nobler part, whose safety so much concerns us, we cram and choak with the loathsome filthiness of Sin, and perceive it not. But as those who cannot endure a cat or a mouse, or the like, by Antipathie of nature, when any such thing comes within their sight or near their person, presently they start, and shew some extremity of passion or other; and if they cannot fly it, it casts their body into a cold sweat: So must we labour under the sight of our sins, that we may be of those whom Christ here calleth for. O Lord, supple our hearts with thy quickning grace, that they may be so tender as to feel this part of their burthen as well as the other.

The reason of Sin's Loath-
someness.

Thus have we heard the first requisite of such as may be truly said to labour, and be weary of their burthen; namely, To feel and be sensible of a double weight thereof.

Now follows the next and last requisite, A desire to be rid thereof. He that truly and unfeignedly labours under the burthen of his sin, he that is indeed weary thereof, will desire to be rid of it: For sorrow is so much against the good liking of Nature, that he that is pressed with the burthen thereof, will earnestly desire to be eased; will endeavour to shake off his burthen, and remove that which procures his Sorrow. He therefore that is not so far toiled with the pressure of his sins as to have a purpose to forsake and leave them, is no true penitent, none of those who are yet weary enough to go unto Christ for ease.

And lest we might deceive our selves, and think we have a purpose to leave our sins, when we have not; let us examine our selves by these three Rules following.

i. That

1. That this purpose must be general, without reservation of any darling sin : For he that retains any sin, is not yet weary enough of his burthen. He that looks for a forgiveness of all his sins, must purpose to forsake them all ; he must not with Herod in the Gospel have a reservation of Herodias, his brother Philip's wife : God will not be served with halves ; he will have our whole Hearts, or none. Mat. 11. 28, 29

2. He that devises not how to cast off the burthen of his sin, though it pains him, but how to carry it more handsomely and conveniently, by qualifications and distinctions, and the like, he is perhaps heavy laden, for he feels his shoulders pincht ; but he is not weary of carrying ; but thinks to ease himself as he in the Fable did his horse of the plough, who sitting still upon his horse back, carried the plough on his own neck : So was the horse eased by a distinction ; for now his master carried the plough, and not he.

3. He that hath indeed a purpose to cast off the burthen of his sin and to forsake it, is willing to make amends where he hath wronged ; as we see by the example of Zacchæus in the Gospel. For he that cannot wish from the bottom of his heart that what he hath done were undone, and if it were to do again, he would never do it, is no true penitent, nor heartily sorry for his sin. But how can he say thus who hath ill-gotten goods, and will not restore them ; who hath power in his hands yet in some sort to undo his sin, as far as the injury concerneth man, and yet will not do it ?

And thus you have seen How the persons must be qualified, and what preparation is required of them who are capable of this sweet Invitation of our Saviour, Come unto me all ye that are weary or labour of being heavy laden, and I will ease you.

But you will say, How should a man come to be thus affected ? How should he come to be touched with remorse for sin ? and what means is to be used ? I answer, By a serious and often meditation upon the Law of God, which is a Glass wherein to behold the deformity of sin and depth of our misery. Dost thou in deed and good earnest believe that God Almighty hath given this Law to men ? Dost thou believe thou hast transgressed and broken every part thereof ? Dost thou believe ( tell me truly ) that all those who have done so, are under the wrath of God and in the state of eternal damnation, to be tormented with the devil and his angels for ever ? Dost thou, or canst thou, believe all this, and thy heart not yield and bleed to think how woful and fearful a condition thou art in ? If it doth not, I say thou dost not yet fully and in earnest believe any of these things. Thou mayst perhaps say so, and think so too ; but thou deceivest thine own heart : The devil deludes thee. I say again, Thou believest not ; thy perswasion is too slight : For every unrepentant sinner, that knows and hears the law of God without sorrow and contrition of heart is a piece of an Infidel ; and it is Unbelief, and nothing but Unbelief, which makes his Heart so unmoveable and unrelenting.

If a Proclamation came from an earthly Monarch, that whosoever had at any time committed such and such misdemeanours, should have his estate confiscated, or suffer some grievous and exquisite torments, as a Traitor unto his Prince : if I should see a man deeply liable unto all this, who could hear of such a Proclamation securely, without trouble and astonishment, that could sleep quietly, and be no whit dejected or cast down therewith : might I not justly think, either he believed himself not guilty of any of the crimes there mentioned, or took it for a counterfeit, or only some scare-crow never meant to be put in execution ? I know your selves would think so. How then is it possible that a man should firmly and seriously give credence to the Law of God and the Threats contained therein, and yet his Heart never smite him, his Soul be never touched with remorse ? No, without doubt, this Legal faith ( for so I call the belief I speak of ) is yet a weak one, a superficial and unsettled perswasion ( perhaps, ) but no grounded or firm impression. Wouldst thou amend it ? wouldst thou drive it deeper ? Rub thy Heart continually with a fixt and frequent meditation of the severity of God's Law, of the number and greatness of thy transgressions, of the dreadfulnes of wrath and vengeance due for the same. Never cease doing this untill thy Heart shall yield, and thy bowels melt within thee. One drop of water weareth not a stone, but continual dropping will do it. Gutta cavat lapidem, &c. If one meditation will not melt thy Heart, yet a continuance therein will do it. Those who let blood will rub the Vein often to make it swell : so must thou rub thy Heart often to make it bleed. A hard skin, with often grinding and fretting, will at length grow thin and tender.

I COME now to the Second thing I propounded in this Invitation, The thing invited to ; which is double, Coming unto Christ, and Taking his yoke upon us. I begin begin with the first. This coming unto Christ is the approaching to him by Faith; which is manifested by those places of Scripture where coming and believing are interchangeably used as one and the same thing. He that cometh to God (saith S. Paul, Heb. 11. 6.) must believe that God is, and that he is a rewarder of them that seek him. John 6. 35. I am (saith our Saviour) the bread of life: He that cometh to me, shall never hunger; he that believeth on me, shall never thirst. Here coming is expounded by believing. Ver. 37. All that the Father giveth me, shall come unto me; and he that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out. In John 1. 12. it is called a receiving of Christ: But as many as received him, to them gave he power (or priviledg) to become the Sons of God, even to them that believed on his Name.

II.

Mat 11. 28, 29
I.

Here therefore observe, That a Saving Faith, a Faith which makes Christ our own, and hath promise of ease by him, in a word, that Faith which gives us an interest in Christ Jesus, is more than a bare assent or persuasion that the Gospel is true, which saies that Christ is the Son of God and the Redeemer and Saviour of mankind. It is a coming Belief, a coming Faith; that is, an assent inclining the Soul to Christ, to be made partaker of the Benefits through him. Not a bare speculative assent, which remains in the Brain, and proceeds no farther; but such an assent as rests not there, but worketh a motion in the Will, to seek and embrace that which is believed. Such an assent as not only believes the Promises made in Christ, but goes unto him, relies upon him, clings unto him for them. Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavie laden; and I will ease you.

To believe the Gospel is true, that Christ Jesus is the only means of Salvation ordained by God, I grant it to be a Faith, though it go no farther: But it is an insufficient Faith, an imperfect and impotent Faith, which is usually called Historical Faith; which I make no question but you all have: But if you stay here, the Devil believes as much as you do. But a Saving Faith, though it begins with this, yet it staies not there: It stands not only gazing upon Christ, but is effectual and powerful upon the Soul, to make it apply and betake it self unto him. This height of Faith the Devils have not, nor can have. They can believe, as well as we, that Christ is a Saviour; but never so far or so much as to have any hope, affiance, or confidence in him. For if a King should proclaim a general pardon to a number of known rebels, and vow execution without mercy upon some principal offenders who had cunningly and maliciously seduced the rest; both of them might equally believe the Proclamation to be true: yet the one would be encouraged to rely upon the King's clemency, and to sue out his pardon; but the other would be utterly disheartned, as being uncapable. Such altogether is the case of men and wicked Angels in the Proclamation of the Gospel: Men hearing Christ took the woman's Seed, are encouraged with hope of pardon; the Devils knowing he in no wise took the nature of Angels, the better they believe his Incarnation, the less are their hopes of their own redemption.

Heb. 11. 6.

Come we therefore to application. He that cometh unto God (saith S. Paul) must believe that God is, and that he is a Rewarder of them that seek him: So say I, He that cometh unto Christ must believe that he is, and that he is the Easer of them that seek unto him. He that believes this sufficiently, cannot but go unto Christ. You therefore that labour, and are heavy laden with your sins, do you believe that Christ is, and that he is the Easer of them that being weary of their sins seek unto him? How can your Soul then but fly unto him with trust and confidence in him? Yea but will some men say, I believe that Christ is, and that he is the Easer of them that seek him; yet for all this I can put no trust and confidence in him. Yea, but dost thou believe it so well as to find thy Soul on wing toward him, to seek and sue for pardon? If thou findest this, thou hast some trust and confidence in him, more or less: For didst thou quite despair of Ease from him, thy Heart could never seek to him: for where a man utterly despairs to obtain, he will not so much as stir a foot to make a suit.

The motion or flight of the Soul is Desire. He that out of a true sense and feeling of his sin (for no other can do it in good earnest) desires Christ, he goes unto him. And Christ thou see'st requires no more, but that all those who are weary and heavie laden should thus come unto him, and he will ease them. And this is the first degree of a Faith which is Justifying, and gives interest in Christ Jesus: For this Faith is not barely Historical and in speculation, but a Faith in motion, and able to walk and go unto Christ Jesus whom it believeth; which, if cherished, will in time gather such further strength as will fill the Soul with a full and stedfast confidence.

But

But if thou sayest, Thou believest that Christ is, and that he is the Easer and Saviour of those which seek him, and yet thy Soul is not on wing, nor any motion in thy Heart advancing to him; I say then, either thy Sorrow for thy sin is not true, and therefore thou yet feelest no need of him; or thy Belief is deficient. Whatsoever thou sayest and thinkest of thy self, thou believest not yet thoroughly and indeed, that Christ Jesus is a Redeemer and Saviour of those that come unto him. For, as I told you before that he believed not the Law thoroughly and indeed, that could hear it without remorse of Conscience and contrition of Soul, so he believes not the Gospel thoroughly and firmly, who being laden and grieved for his sins, yet is not able to flie and betake himself unto Christ for mercy. For if you saw a man condemned to die, and in great affliction for the same, who hearing of a Pardon proclaimed for all in his case who would demand it, should nevertheless sit still, and never go about to seek it; who would think but that either he misdoubted the report, or gave but little credence to the word of the King? Such is the case here: There is certainly some defect in believing: And this must be cured after the same manner as that in believing the Law; namely, by a sober and frequent meditation, reading, hearing, and thinking of that great myserie revealed of Redemption in Jesus Christ, and of the gracious Promises of the Gospel in and through him. This is Faith's whetstone, which, if it be blunt, will make it keen. This is the only means to establish thy Belief, if it be deficient or unsettled; if there be any metal in it, this will give it an edge; if there be any sparkles, this will blow them into a flame.

Mat. 11. 28, 29

Thus you have heard what Coming to Christ is, that is, what a Saving Faith is; namely, so firmly and effectually to believe that Christ is a Saviour of those that seek him, as doth incline thy Heart to go unto him, to sue out a Pardon and rely upon him for mercy and Redemption.

NOW follows the Benefit, Ease and Rest to thy Soul; I will ease you, or give you rest; that is, I will free you of your burthen, I will ease you of your sin, I will acquit you. And this is that we call Justification of a sinner, which is an Absolution or remission of sins by the only merits and satisfaction of Christ accepted for us and imputed to us: An acquitting and cancelling of all bonds and obligations of transgression for Christ's sake, through the only merit of his death, passion, and shedding of his blood. For he that hath right to Christ, hath right in Christ to be partaker of his righteousness and of whatsoever satisfaction he hath undergone for the sins of mankind; whereby he is justified, that is, acquit before God of the guilt of sin, and of the punishment according to the Law due for the same. For God (saith S. Paul, 2 Cor. 5. 21.) made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him. Rom. 5. 19. For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners: so by the obedience of one many are made righteous.

III.

This is the Ease, this is the Rest here mentioned, the unlading and unburthening of a sinner, where Christ dischargeth him of his loading, and beareth him upon his own back. For he (saith Esay, chap. 53. 4, 5, 6.) hath born our griefs, and carried our sorrows: He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed—The Lord laid upon him the iniquity of us all. Thus he eased Peter, when his heart was ready to break for denying him: Thus he eased Mary Magdalen, a woman laden with sins, when she bathed his feet with tears, Luke 7. 48. Thus he refreshed trembling Saul, the persecutor, Acts 9. 6. And still he casteth the eyes of his mercy upon every one that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at his word, Esa. 66. 2.

See therefore here to whom alone a troubled soul is to have recourse for Ease. Neither to Angels nor Archangels: For those who do so, hold not the head, Col. 2. 19. Neither to Saints nor Martyrs, to Peter nor Paul, nor to the blessed Virgin herself: For Abraham is ignorant of us, and Israel knows us not, Esa. 63. 16. and, Cursed is he that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord, Jer. 17. 5. Nor to the Law given by Moses: For the Law worketh (not ease but) wrath, Rom. 4. 15. Nor will our merits and good works, pilgrimages, fastings or alms-deeds, purchase this Ease: For although we could do all we ought to do, yet must we say we are unprofitable servants, and that we have done but that which was our duty to do, Luke 17. 10. It is Christ Jesus, and only Christ Jesus, who can give Rest to a troubled soul, that Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world.

Joh. 1. 29.

AND thus you have in part had a view of the Three points considerable in this Invitation: 1. The Persons, who; 2. The Invitation or Thing invited to; what; and 3. The Benefit to be attained. But I must call you to the Second point

Mat. 11. 28, 29
2.

2 Tit. 12. 13.

Mat. 19. 6.

point again, there being one part thereof not yet spoken of. For I told you The thing here invited unto was double, Christ himself, and His yoke. The first, concerning Christ himself, I have spoken of in those words, Come unto me. Now it remains to speak of the second, Take my yoke upon you. Those who come unto Christ, must also take his yoke upon them. But what is this yoke? even the yoke of obedience; which should have been ours, but Christ for our sakes took it upon him, and made it his. Yet not that we should draw our necks out of the collar, but still do our endeavours by denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, to live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope to come. As therefore in coming unto Christ you had Faith in the Ease by him, Acquitting or Justification: so in the taking his yoke ye have Sanctification or Holiness of life. All which are so linked together, that neither must they nor can they be put asunder. No man comes to Christ by Faith, but shall be eased; but no man can ever truly and seriously come unto him to be eased by him, but he must take his yoke upon him: No man puts on Christ to be justified, but he takes on his yoke also to be sanctified. That which God hath joyned together, let no man put asunder.

True it is, and nothing more true, That no works of ours in this life can abide the Touch-stone of God's Law, and therefore not able to justify us in the presence of God, but to condemn us. But it is true also, That we are therefore justified through Faith in the blood and righteousness of Christ, that in him we might do works pleasing and acceptable to Almighty God, which out of him we could not do. For as the blood and sufferings of Jesus Christ, imputed to us through Faith, cleanse and acquitteth us of all the sins whereof we stood guilty afore we believed: so the imputation of his righteousness when we believe makes our works (though of themselves far short of what they should be, yet) to be acceptable and just in the eyes of the Almighty; Christ supplying out of his Riches our poverty, and by communication of his obedience continually perfecting ours where we fail; that so we might receive the reward of the righteous of him that shall reward every man according to his works. Being therefore in Christ, we are so much the more bound to frame our lives in holy obedience unto God's Commandments; in that before we were justified we could not, but now henceforth we are enabled to do that which for Christ's sake will be acceptable and pleasing to Almighty God our Father.

This is that which S. Peter tells us, 1 Epist. 2. 24. That Christ his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we being dead to sin, should live unto righteousness. So S. Paul, Tit. 2. 11, &c. The grace of God (saith he) that bringeth salvation hath appeared unto all men; (wherefore?) Teaching us, that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world; Looking for that blessed hope, the glorious appearing of the great God, and our saviour Jesus Christ, ver. 14. Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purifie unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. Here you may see, that Christ is therefore given us to be a propitiation for our sins and to justify us, that in him we might walk before God in newness of life; so to obtain a crown of righteousness in the world to come.

But if this be not enough to perswade us to take on this yoke of Christ, yet I hope this consideration will do it; when I shall shew you, that That Faith can never be true which is not attended with these fruits. Nor is there any other mean to assure us we are truly come to Christ, and ingrafted in him, but this. If we have taken up this yoke of Christ, we may know then we have put on him: If we have never put our necks to his yoke, we never put on him. It is S. John's express assertion, 1 Epist. 1. 6. If we say we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lye, and do not the truth. Ch. 2. 3. Hereby we know that we know him, (viz. to be our Advocate with his Father, and the propitiation for our sins) if we keep his commandments.

The Reason is plain; Because the one follows the other, as the heat doth the Fire, or the light the Sun. Which I thus demonstrate, both on Christ's part and ours. On ours thus: He that sincerely sues to and seriously relies upon another for a Favour which nearly concerneth him, and no other can do for him, will by all means endeavour to avoid whatsoever he knows may distaste his Patron, and do his best to approve himself in whatsoever he can learn is most pleasing unto him. If you should see a man having a Suit to some great Courtier for a pardon of his life, and yet shewing no care of doing in his presence what he knew would deeply offend him, and wilfully neglecting that he knew would give him the best content; would you think such a man in earnest, and sufficiently perplex with fear of death, and seriously seriously relying upon that man to save it? I know you would not. If therefore, out of a true affrightment and sense of the wrath of God for sin, with a sincere and serious Faith, thou fliest unto and reliest upon Christ for mercy and redemption, as the only name under heaven whereby thou canst be saved; how canst thou but love him with all the Powers of thy Soul, and therefore do thy best to please him upon whom thou dependest for so great and unvaluable a benefit? If thou dost not, surely thou hast not yet weighed thy misery sufficiently, thy Faith is insufficient and counterfeit, it never yet came home to Christ, that he might ease thee.

The same appears on Christ's part: For unto whomsoever Christ is given for Justification, through the imputation of his merits and righteousness, in him God creates a new heart, and reneweth a right spirit (as the Psalmist speaketh, Psal. 51. 10.) that is, by virtue of this union he conferreth upon him the grace of his Spirit, for the abolishing of the body of sin, and enabling the Soul in some measure against the assaults thereof, to abandon at least the more eminent, notorious, enormous and mortal sins, though sins of ordinary infirmity shall not be quite subdued in this life. If therefore I see a man run still without restraint into gross and open sins, and walk not blameless in the eyes of men, I conclude he hath not this Spirit of grace within him, and therefore was never ingrafted into Christ by a true and lively Faith. Wherefore therefore is a true faith and unfeigned, 1 Tim. 1. 5. there follows a new life. He that cometh to Christ sincerely, takes his yoke upon him too. Labour therefore, as S. James saith, to shew your Faith by your works; For not every one that saith, Lord, Lord, but he that doth the will of my Father (saith Christ) shall inherit the kingdom of heaven.

Mat. 11. 29.

Acts 4. 12.

James 2. 18.

Mat. 7. 21.

DISCOURSE XXXII.

S. MATTHEW II. 29.

—Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your Souls.

Hese Words are a continuing of the former Exhortation to take upon us the yoke of Christ: First, in general, That we follow his Example, Learn of me: Then in particular, wherein we should follow him, In Meekness and Lowliness; For I am (saith he) Meek and Lowly in heart. Then the Profit we shall reap thereby; Do this, And ye shall find rest unto your souls.

For the first, Learn of me: Observe, That Christ is given unto us not only for a sacrifice for sin, but for an Example of life. They are the words of one of our Collects. For he is our Lord and King, and Subjects we know will naturally conform and fashion themselves unto the manners of their Princes;

Regis ad exemplum totus componitur orbis:

And those which do so, are accounted the most devoted to them, and are the best accepted of them. If Christ then be our Lord and King, we must acknowledg him to be such by conforming to his Example, and endeavouring to follow his steps. Besides, since he took this yoke of obedience upon him out of love to us, how can we chuse but offer our necks thereto our selves, out of duty to him? If he hath done so much to make our yoke easie, which before was so unsupportable; should we now think much to put it on? Nay it is the very character of God's chosen ones, to carry in them a conformity and resemblance of Christ. For whom (saith S. Paul Rom. 8. 29.) he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren.

P

And

Matt. 11. 29.

And this duty of conforming unto Christ consists not only in doing as he did, but suffering also as he hath done. 1 Pet. 2. 20. If when you do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently; this is acceptable with God. ver. 21. For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an Example, that we should follow his steps. See also 1 Joh. 3. 17. And this conformity and sampling (as I may say) of Christ, extends not only to those Acts of his which he did as man, where the imitation is plain and direct; but in a certain sort to those supereminent ones, which exceed the nature of a mere man, and were done by the concurrence and power of his Godhead; which because otherwise unimitable, we must express by way of a mystical resemblance. Thus are we to imitate his expiatory Death and Burial, by our dying unto sin. Shall we continue in sin, (saith S. Paul, Rom. 6. 1.) that grace may abound? v. 2. God forbid. How shall we that are dead to sin, live any longer therein? v. 3. Know ye not that so many of us as are baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death? To the same purpose, 1 Pet. 4. 1. Forasmuch, saith he, as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm your selves likewise with the same mind; for he that hath suffered in the flesh, hath ceased from sin, &c. So likewise in suffering one for another, Eph. 5. 1. Be ye followers of God, as dear children, v. 2. And walk in love, as Christ hath also loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God. In the like manner must we imitate his Resurrection and Ascension. S. Paul Rom. 6. 4. Therefore (saith he) we are buried with him into death; that like as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. Accordingly Col. 3. 1. If then ye be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God. All which you see are grounded upon this one Principle, Learn of me. Some Physiognomers conceit the Head of a man to be the model of the whole Body; and where there is any spot, wart, or like mark about the Face or other part of the Head, that there is another answerable to it in some suitable part of the Body; and upon this ground they will adventure to discover some hidden mark in the unseen parts of the Body. But whatsoever it be in the natural Body, I am sure it is true in the mystical Body of Christ, That every character in the Head, Christ, must have something answerable to it in his Body, the Church.

THUS much for the general, We must learn of Christ. But what is that here in my Text which Christ would have us learn of him? It followeth, I am Meek and Lowly in heart. And this we must learn of him; this is that yoke of his he would have us wear, that we may find rest unto our souls. For under these two words our Saviour comprehends the whole Habit of Obedience, they being two such dispositions of the mind as make it tractable and pliable to put on and wear the yoke he speaks of. As if he had said, I am wholly qualified to obedience, I am fitted for this yoke; learn of me to put it on, for I am meek and lowly.

Now though Lowliness and Meekness are of very near affinity, and such, as both of them do dispose a man for the duties of both Tables of God's Commandments; yet hath Lowliness (as I take it) a prerogative in our devotion to Godward, and Meekness is more proper for the duties we owe to our neighbours. I will therefore construe them here, as others have done before me, as dividing the whole Decalogue between them; Lowliness, as a mother, including the Duties of the First; and Meekness, those of the Second Table. Which are the two parts of that Yoke which Christ wore for us, and which every one that cometh to him must learn to put on.

Of Lowliness.

In the handling whereof I will therefore rather chuse to follow the order of the Decalogue, and first begin with Lowliness, though it be last placed in the words. Lowliness therefore, as I said, stands here for the whole duty of the First Table, which is Cultus Dei, religious service or devotion towards God; or as the Scriptures phrase is, The fear of the Lord: Which as it is founded upon the acknowledgment of the Superlative and Transcendent Excellency of God in his Sovereignty of Power, Wisdom and Goodness; so the first and mother-disposition and affection of the Heart to his Worship and Service is Humiliation of the soul and Lowliness of Mind: For all Emnency is worshipped with humility, reverence and submission; that is, as we sometimes, and rightly, speak, By keeping a distance: And the Sovereign or Supreme Excellency of God must be adored with the lowest demission of mind, and with the greatest stoop the Soul can make. We find by experience, that that disposition of the Eye which fitteth it to behold the visible Sun, makes a man blind when he looks down upon himself: So here the apprehension of the transcendent Excellency of God, ten thousand times brighter than the Sun, if truly admitted into our hearts, must needs darken all overweening conceit of any worthiness in our selves. The greater we would apprehend his Power, the more sensible we must be of our own Weakness. The greater we acknow-

ledg

Dis. XXXII. The humblest nature & condition best fitted for Religion. 159

ledg and adore his Goodness, the less Goodness must we see in our selves. The more we would apprehend his Wisdom, the less we are to be puffed up with our own knowledge. As in a pair of scales, the higher we would raise the one scale, the lower we pull down the other: so the higher we raise God in our hearts, the lower we must depress our selves. Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. And this is that Lowliness of heart which Christ would have us learn of him, Who being in the form of God—made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant—And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross, Phil. 2. 6, 7, 8.

Matt. 11. 29.

Matt. 5. 3.

1 Sam. 16. 7.

Hence it comes That the humblest nature and the humblest condition are the fittest for devotion. For humble natures, experience shews them the most religious; whereas those which the world so much commendeth for high and brave spirits of all others do buckle the worst unto devotion. God seeth not as man seeth: It is not the tallest Eliab, but the humblest David, who is the man after God's own heart. He that humbleth himself as a little child, the same is the tallest and goodliest Soul in the kingdom of heaven. The Stars in the firmament, howsoever they here seem small to us, yet are bigger than the Earth: So he that is despicable and small here in the eyes of men, is there a great one in the eyes of God.

As the humblest nature, so the humblest estate and condition is best fitted for Religion; as the poor rather than the rich. Therefore Agur desired of God, not to give him riches, more than food convenient for him; lest being full, he should deny him, and say, Who is the Lord? Such likewise is the state of adversity and affliction, being a state of lowliness, and an estate wherein our hearts are taken down; and therefore more fit to bring us home to God than that of prosperity: whence you know that David saies, Psal. 94. 12. Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O Lord; and Psal. 119. 67, 71. Before I was afflicted I went astray, But now I have kept thy word. It is good for me that I have been afflicted.

Prov. 30. 8, 9.

For diseases (say the Physicians) must be cured by contraries. It was Pride which caused the disloyalty and rebellion both of Men and Angels against their Creator: whence is that of the Son of Sirach, Ecclus. 10. 12. The beginning of Pride is, when one departeth from God, and his heart is turned away from his Maker. ver. 13. Pride is the beginning of sin, and he that hath it, shall pour out abomination. If Pride then be the beginning of our rebellion against God, then must Lowliness be the proper disposition of those who fear and worship him. And, Tanto quisque est vilior Deo, quanto est pretiosior sibi; The higher any one is in his own esteem, the lower he is in God's.

Now from this near affinity and inseparable dependance between a Religious devotion and an Humble and Lowly mind, it is that the Scripture useth them as equipollent terms. Prov. 22. 4. By humility and the fear of the Lord are riches, honour, and life. Prov. 3. 33. The curse of the Lord is in the house of the wicked; but he bleisseth the habitation of the just. Ver. 34. Surely he scorneth the scorers, but he giveth grace, or sheweth favour, unto the lowly. Where scorers and the wicked on the one part, and the lowly and the just on the other, are interchangeably used for one and the same. In like manner speaks the son of Sirach, Ecclus. 12. 4, 5. Give to the godly man, and help not a sinner. Which in the next words he altereth thus, Do well unto him that is lowly, but give not to the ungodly. In the same notion of Humility and Lowliness, S. Paul tells the Ephesian Elders at Miletus, that he had served the Lord with all humility of mind, Acts 20. 19.

I have dwelt the longer upon this point, To shew that Lowliness of mind is the proper disposition for devotion and the mother of a religious fear, because the * present occasion if you examine it, is nothing else but the exercise of what I speak of. For the End of Fasting is to beget Lowliness and humbleness of mind, that so we might be rightly disposed and affected to approach the Divine Majesty, and tender our supplications unto him: Especially at such times when his dreadful rod is shaken over us, to bid us down and cry for mercy, lest we perish. Are they not some of the first words we uttered this day? O come, let us humble our selves, and fall down before the Lord with reverence and fear. Hence Fasting and Humbling a mans self go in Scripture for equipollent terms. My clothing was sackcloth (saith David, Plal. 35. 13.) I humbled my self with fasting. So Ahab humbled himself, and thereby deferred his judgment, 1 King. 21. 29. Hezekiah humbled himself, both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, 2 Chro. 32. 26. Manasseh likewise besought the Lord, and humbled himself greatly before the God of his Father, 2 Chron. 33. 12.

If we take a view of the Ceremonies of this Discipline which the Ancients used, and we in some part continue; they imply nothing else but Lowliness; either to express it, if we be already so affected; or to work and beget it in our hearts, if as yet we have it

This was preached Anno 1625. when there was a great plague in London.

~~~~~
 Matt. 11. 29.
 ~~~~~

not: They are reducible to three heads: 1. of Habit, 2. of Gesture, 3. of Diet. For Habit, it was anciently sackcloth and Ashes. By the courtness of sackcloth they ranked themselves, as it were, amongst the meanest and lowest condition of men. By Ashes, and sometimes Earth, upon their heads, they made themselves lower than the lowest of the creatures of God: For the lowest of the Elements is the Earth, than which we use to say a man cannot fall lower.

Qui jacet in terra, non habet unde cadat.

For Gesture, they late or lay upon the ground, which in the Primitive Church was called χαμενυια humicubatio, a natural ceremony both to express and ingenerate or increase, this disposition of Lowliness and abjection of our selves; and as frequently practised among the Christian Fathers, as it is seldom or never used among us. It were a thing most comely, and undoubtedly most profitable, if either these Ceremonies, or some other answerable to them, were reviv'd amongst us at such times as these. If we were all of us this day attired (if not in sackcloth, for perhaps it suits not with the custom of our Nation, yet) in the dolefullest habit of mourners if we lay all groveling upon the ground; would not such a rueful spectacle, would not the very sight of such an uncouth Assembly much affect us? The mournful hue of Funeral solemnities, we know by experience, will often make them to weep who otherwise had no particular cause of sorrow; how much more when they have?

But the Principal ceremony, and which we retain, is Abstinence from meat and drink, from which this whole exercise hath the name of Fasting: the End thereof being to bring down our Bodies, thereby the better to humble our Souls, or to express so much; I mean to express our sorrow and dejection, if we be already so affected. Mores animi sequuntur temperamentum corporis: If the Body be full and lusty, the Mind will be lofty and refractory, and most unfit to approach the Divine Majesty with reverence and fear. How uncomposed is that Heart to sue to God for mercy and aversion of his judgments, which is fraught with rebellious, unclean, proud and lustful thoughts, like so many dogs barking within it? But these are all engendered and cherished by full feeding, and cannot be easily quelled unless they be starved. When I fed Israel to the full, (saith the Lord, Jer. 5. 7, 8.) then they committed adultery, and assembled by troupes in harlots houses, &c. Jesurun (saith Moses in his propheticall song, Deut. 32. 15.) waxed fat and kicked, and forsook the Lord that made him, and lightly esteemed of the rock of his salvation.

Wherefore S. Paul was fain to pinch his Body, and bring it down with fasting: I keep under my body (saith he, 1 Cor. 9. 27.) and bring it into subjection; lest that by any means, when I have preached unto others, I myself should be a cast-away. Hilarion a religious young man, when after much abstinence and course diet he felt his flesh still unruly and rebellious, Ego, (inquit) Aselle, faciam ut non calcitres, nec te hordeo alam, sed palcis, fame & siti te conficiam: thus threatening his Beast, (that is, his Body) that he would take an order with it, that it should not kick; and that he would no longer feed his Ass with corn, but give it a little chaffe or straw; nay punish it with hunger and thirst. Such is the danger of a pampered Body, and such the necessity of keeping it under.

Thus you see what is the chief End we are to aim at in this our solemn abstinence; namely, to beget this lowliness in our hearts, this humiliation in our souls, to subdue the high-mountaining flames of our unruly desires, by withdrawing the fuel which breeds and nourishes them. Which as it is at all times requisite in some measure, whensoever we approach the Majesty of God for mercy and forgiveness; so then especially and in a more than usual manner, When God shakes the rod of his judgments over our heads, and bids us down and prostrate both souls and bodies before him, lest his judgments break us in pieces, if we bow not. He that attaineth this, hath fasted well: he that hath not, may thereby know he hath not done enough, or not as he should do. If the boiling of our lusts be cooled and calmed; if the swelling conceits of worth in our selves be taken down, with a true and feeling apprehension of our vileness and wretchedness by reason of sin, which makes us the most unworthy creatures in the world; if those ramping weeds of contempt and despising of others be cropped and withered (and these, I can tell you, will quite spoil a garden where many good flowers grow;) if after this manner we be affected, then are we humbled: if not, we are not yet sufficiently taken down; all our service is hypocrisy, nor will our devotion be accepted of that All-seeing Majesty who resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble.

James 4. 6.
 1 Pet. 5. 5.

Of Meekness.

THUS much of Lowliness, the mother of the duties of the First Table. Now I come to Meekness, which implies our obedience to the second. What Meekness, or

or Manfuetudo, signifies in Ethicks every one knows, that Vertue which tempereth anger; or, as I may so call it, Unangriness. But sometimes whilst we take words in Scripture according to our own or the Philosophical notion, we slip into a mistake; as it falls out in this word Meekness, whose notion in the Hebrew and Scripture use is as large well-nigh as of Vertue it self, so far as it hath respect to the Second Table. For it signifies, as I may so speak, yokeableness, or a pliability and tractableness to be ordered; a certain tameness of disposition to obedience of laws, for untamed cattel are not fit for yoke; and may be expressed, as I think, by Ingenuity, or Ingenuous goodness; or, as we speak, Fair-conditioned; by which we understand a general disposition to be well ordered in such actions as are exercised in the conversation of men.

Thus it is taken in that of our Saviour, Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth, Matt. 5. 5. Which appears out of Psal. 37. 10, 11. whence it is taken, where the meek and the wicked are opposed as terms of equal extent. For yet a little while (saith David) and the wicked shall not be: but the meek shall inherit the earth. Who seeth not that by meek is here meant the opposite party to the wicked? So I understand that, Psal. 76. 9. God arose to judgment, to save all the meek of the earth; id est, omnes probos terræ, all the honest or vertuous of the earth. And Psal. 149. 4. For the Lord taketh pleasure in his people; he will beautifie the meek with salvation. Zeph. 2. 3. Seek the Lord, all ye meek of the earth, which have wrought his judgment, seek righteousness, seek meekness: It may be ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger. Amos 2. 6. For three transgressions and for four of Israel, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because they sold the righteous for silver, and the poor for a pair of shoes. Verf. 7. That pant after the dust of the earth on the head of the poor, and turn aside the way of the meek. Here that which in the first is exprest poor and righteous in the next is changed into poor and meek, shewing meek and righteous to be equipollent terms. So S. James 1. 21, 22. as writing to Hebrews, useth the Hebrew notion; Wherefore (saith he) lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the ingrafted word, which is able to save your souls. But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only. Againch. 3. 13. Who is a wise man and indued with knowledge amongst you? let him shew out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom: where it is evident that Meekness cannot be taken in that restrained sense of Philosophers, for that would be non-sense.

Yet I deny not but Meekness in Scripture also is taken for a special Vertue: and for the excellency of that Vertue amongst men, were all the rest denominate thereof: For it is an usual Trope of the Scripture, to make that which is taken for the most eminent and notable in any kind, to bear the name of the whole kind; as the Foreman speaks for the whole Jury, and Armies are comprised in the names of their Cheif-tains. In the Decalogue it is a regular synecdoche: Father and Mother, for all sorts of Superiours; Murther, for whatsoever hurt to the body of our neighbour; Adultery, for all sins of intemperance; Theft, all injuries in our neighbour's goods; The sanctifying of an holy day, to comprehend the holy usage of all things sacred and consecrate to divine uses. So Peace, the chief of blessings, stands in the Hebrew style for happiness; that is, all blessings whatsoever. Whence is their salutation, Peace be unto you. So Meekness, of near a-kin to Peace, stands here for a general name to all probity or honesty; as Lowliness did for Religious devotion. For the yoke of devotion to God hath its peculiar, to be taken on with stooping and humbleness; the yoke of a well-ordered converse with men, with this tameness or meekness. For as Meekness in the special sense is a vertue exercised only towards men: so in this general notion thereof, I extend it no farther; making, as I told you, Lowliness and Meekness to share the Decalogue betwixt them.

Here now I might observe at large, How Meekness seasoneth all our actions and carriage towards men, giving that genuine sweetness and relish of Vertue to them all; this being the reason of that so general acception of the word in the phrase of Scripture. I might also enlarge my self unto all the several offices and duties of this Vertue. But let me commend unto you those two which are most principal and immediate, and therefore expressly required in our Liturgie, as the truest tokens of Repentance; namely, forgiving of offences, and satisfaction of injuries; both of them genuine offerings of this Meekness.

And ye shall find rest unto your souls.

HERE is that inestimable Benefit which befalleth those who take up Christ's yoke and learn of him to be meek and lowly; They shall find rest unto their souls. For the understanding whereof we must know, that there is a twofold Ease mentioned in this Invitation of our Saviour. The one, to those who come unto him by Faith, Come unto me, &c. and I will ease you, or give you rest. The second, to those who take upon them his yoke, that is, the yoke of obedience to God's commandments; a yoke which Christ first wore for our sakes, and made it his, that so he might make it possible for us to wear it, whilst the main weight still rests upon his shoulders: Those who put their necks to this yoke, shall find rest unto their souls.

Matt. 11. 29.

These two Rests are near of kin, but not the same: The first Rest is that which Christ gives; the second, the Rest which we shall find. All those who come and by Faith apply themselves to Christ, shall have Ease: But there is something else to be done before our selves shall find and know it; we must put our necks into the collar, and take his yoke upon us, and then there shall not only be Rest obtained for us, but we shall find and feel our selves eased.

For a Sinner hath a twofold Burthen; 1. The weight of his sin, and 2. The pain he feels thereby; for such is the condition, we know, of every one that is laden. Answerable therefore to this twofold Burthen, there is a twofold Rest and Ease to be attained. The first is by taking off the burthen by remission of our sin in our Justification, when Christ discharges those who come unto him of their load, and beareth it upon his own back, by justifying and acquitting them of sin. The second is the ceasing of the pain which the pressure of sin hath caused; when a sinner by wearing of the yoke of Christ finds peace of conscience, and ease and rest unto his soul. For the pain and aking of the Soul for sin doth not presently cease, though sin be taken off. A man condemned to die, doth not presently feel the comfort of his pardon as soon as it is obtained; for it may be gotten many daies before he knows it, and till then his pain and discomfort will be as if it were not gotten at all. Also a man that hath overlong born a burthen too heavie for him, is often we know, so benumbed, that he thinks he feels the pressure of his burthen still, some while after it is taken off his back. So is the ease here; the pain of the soul will not presently cease when Christ hath taken off our sin, nor will the joy and comfort of our pardon be so soon found as our pardon is obtained.

1.

Let this then be the first Observation, That as those only are justified and discharged of their sin by remission who flee unto Christ by Faith: So only those have promise of rest and peace of conscience who take his yoke upon them; and being, as he was, meek and lowly, stoop unto God, and submit their lives unto his Commandments. Art thou heavy-laden, and wouldst thou be discharged of thy sin? Go unto Christ, and he will ease thee. Wouldst thou know thy sins are acquitted? wouldst thou have peace, and feel thy conscience sweetly comforted? Take this yoke upon thee, learn of him to be yokeable, to be meek and lowly, to walk in the waies of God; and thou shalt find rest to thy soul. By this, saith S. John, we know that we know him, (namely, to be our Advocate, and the propitiation for our sins) if we keep his Commandments. There is no way but this to feel and have notice thy sins are forgiven thee.

1 John 2. 3.

* Esa. 48. 22.

Many do trust all to a supposed Faith as a short and compendious cut to quiet their conscience: But never look to find peace with God so long as thou hast peace with sin: There is no peace unto the wicked, saith the * Prophet. What Jehoram, 2 King. 9. 22. asked Jehu, Is there peace, Jehu? What peace (saith Jehu) so long as the whoredoms of thy mother Jezebel and her witchcrafts are so many? So saith God to all such whose life and conversation is unreformed; What peace can be unto thy soul, so long as contempt of his worship, extortion, defrauding of thy neighbour, covetousness, drunkenness, backwardness to all good duties, reign still within thee? If thou wouldst have peace in thy soul; if thou wouldst have the wringing torments of a troubled conscience to be calmed within thee; If thou wouldst find out that peace of God which passeth all understanding; let thy whole life and conversation, as far as thou art able, be ruled by the Law of God; wear that yoke which Christ thy Saviour hath made so easie; learn of him to be meek and lowly, and thou shalt find rest unto thy soul.

Phil. 4. 7.

But some perhaps will say, What needs so much preciseness and strictness of life? For my part, I do as other men do; I can dispense sometime and take my pleasure in sin, and am not thus yoked (as you speak,) but take my liberty according as I see advantage, either for my profit or contentment; and yet am not disquieted, but find my soul at rest and ease without thus much ado.

I answer, It is hard to conceive that a man should give himself the reins to commit sin, and his Conscience not to twitch him more or less, though he useth all the means he can to smother it. But if it doth not, thy case is so much the more woful and and dangerous : For, alas ! it is not a rest and ease of soul, as thou misdeemest, but hardness and deadness of heart, which thou mistakest for rest and quietness : A condition than which there cannot be a worse, and of all estates of the soul the most hopeless. And this is the fruit of a customary violation of the Conscience, which being often bruised, scratched at first with smaller sins, and at length rent and torn with greater, contracts one scar and brawn all over, and so becomes senseless and unfeeling. How dreadful therefore is it, if men would consider it, to adventure the Conscience upon the least violence ? if it endure but a scratching once or twice, it is secretly, and before a man is aware, hardened to endure a wound. O let us be then tender to keep our Conscience tender, else we are undone. Is it therefore indeed so with thee, that thou canst take thy sinful liberty, and yet find no scruple check thee ? Canst thou cast off the yoke of Christ, and yet thy heart be at rest within thee ; or at the worst, if it pants a little, it will soon have done ? O rouse it up in time, else the time will come, when thy Conscience will be so awaked, that all the world cannot quiet and still it. The longer it hath been smothered, the more dreadful and unquenchable will the flame be when it once breaketh out. No tongue of mortal man is able to express the terrors which then shall overwhelm thee.

Matt. 11.29.

In the day-time we know Spirits and Hobgoblins usually walk not, but in the night-time, when darkness covereth the face of the earth : So in the brightness and Sunshine of health and prosperity, what marvel though this terrible Fiend, an evil Conscience, doth not much haunt a dull and stupid heart ? but in the darkness of sickness, in the midnight of death, when the black times of calamity shall surprise thee, then will this grisly and gasty Spirit begin to affright and scare thee ; then will he roar in the chamber of thy soul, and most hideously rattle his chains about thine ears.

As the blows and bruises received in the flower of our youth, though then we feel them not, will pain us in the decay of our strength, in our declining years : So the blows and bruises given the Soul by sin in the days of our jollity and prosperity, will most grievously torment us when by sickness, fear of death, or other calamity, our wonted mirth and transitory contentment shall be eclipsed. Then as the carcase of him that is slain, though it seemed stark and stiff, is said to bleed afresh at the presence of the murderer : So when our former and unfelt sins, whereby the Soul was wounded and murdered, shall present themselves unto our view, as at such times they use to do, then our stark and benumbed Conscience will gush out streams of blood, and be in danger to bleed unto eternal death. What would a man then give for this Rest unto his soul ? even all the gold of Ophir, all the riches of the East and West Indies ; yea he would be content never to have had ease, never to have enjoyed any contentment ( no not lawful ) in these worldly and transitory things all the days of his life, so he might have but one dram of that comfortable quietness of Soul which a good conscience bringeth.

A good conscience therefore, from a life well led, is a Jewel unvaluable, for which a man should undergo the hardest task, and forgo all the contentments of the world, if it could not otherwise be gotten. Which is the Second thing I here observe. For our Saviour we see propounds it as a Reward and Prize, such as he thought sufficient to allure any reasonable man, even to abandon his liberty and freedom, and to enter a bondage, and to take a yoke upon his neck ; a yoke the sweetest that ever was worn, and far surpassing the greatest liberty in the world.

A good conscience, saith Solomon, Prov. 15. 15. is a continual Feast ; that is, an everlasting Christmas. The twelve-days-Feast of our Blessed Saviour's Nativity, how is it longed for before-hand ? how welcomed when it comes ? and yet it lasts but a short time. But a good conscience is a Feast that lasts all the year, yea all a mans life long ; and that too without satiety, without fulness, without the least wearisomeness.

There are three things in a Feast which make it so pleasing and desirable, Mirth, good Company, and good Chear. In this Feast all three of them are superlative.

1. For Mirth, all the merriment and Musick, all the wine and good chear in the world will not make a man's heart so light and merry as the wine which is drunk at the Feast of a good conscience. This is no superficial matter, but rooted in the very Centre of the Soul. Whereas your Wine-mirth is but the smothering sometimes, if not drowning, of a deeper grief ; like the lustick fit in some Countries of such as are going to execution. Give strong drink ( saith Solomon ) unto him that is ready to perish, and wine unto those that be of heavy hearts. Prov. 31.6.

2. For Society and Company, what Feast in the world can afford the like this doth ? For it hath not only exceeding good, but all suitable and homogeneal, where is no admixture admixture of ill. Here you shall have no unruly persons blaspheming God or men, to make themselves or others pastime: no unfavoury communication to stain and pollute by degrees the purity of the Soul, and make a reckoning unsupportable, when the day shall come wherein we must give accompt of every idle word. But a good Conscience hath ever good Company, and so good as will admit no ill. For the Father is with it, that great and mighty God who made us: The Son is with it, even Christ himself who redeemed us; they sup and feast together: The Holy Ghost is with it, who cheers up and sanctifies the hearts of all who come to this Table. What Feast in the world can shew so honourable, so loving, so chearful company as this?

Mat. I 1. 29.

3. And for the last thing which makes a Feast desirable, good Chear; it is a Table richly furnished with all Varieties and Dainties, a collection of all the Rarities and Delicacies, not which Sea and Land only, but which Heaven it self affords. Who would not come upon any invitation to partake of such a Feast as this?

DISCOURSE XXXIII.

ACTS 10. 4.

And he said unto him, Thy Prayers and thine Alms are come up for a memorial before God; or (as it is ver. 31.) are had in remembrance, &c.

WHEN the Jews had crucified our Blessed Saviour, the Lord and Prince of Life, though their impiety were most horrible, and such as might seem to admit of no expiation or atonement, yet would not God for that reject them; but after he was risen from the dead, his Apostles and Messengers were sent to offer and tender him once more unto them, if so be they would yet receive him as their Messiah and Redeemer which was promised to come: telling them that what they had formerly done unto him, God would (namely, according to our Saviour's prayer upon the Cross, Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do) pass by it as done of Ignorance on their part, whilst himself was by the disposition of his Providence fulfilling that which was long before spoken by the mouth of all his Prophets, That Christ or Messiah should suffer death. All which you may read in the Sermon which S. Peter preached unto them in the Temple, Acts 3. 12, &c. Thus the Lord shewed himself according to his style, A God gracious and merciful, long-suffering and slow to anger.

But when these Jews, notwithstanding this second tender, not only continued in their former obstinacy, refusing to accept him for their Redeemer, but also misused and persecuted his Ambassadors sent unto them; this their ingratitude was so hideous and hainous in the eyes of God, that he could bear with them no longer, but resolved thenceforth to cast them off, and chuse himself a Church among the Gentiles.

To prepare a way whereunto, he sent a Vision much about the same time both to Peter, (who was then by reason of the Jews persecution fled to Joppa) and to Cornelius a Gentile, Captain of the Italian Band, living at Casarea upon that coast; ordaining the one (Peter) to be the Messenger and Preacher; and the other (Cornelius) to be the first Gentile which should be partaker of the Faith of Christ. Therefore accordingly Peter's Vision was to admonish him, not to make scruple, as all Jews did, of conversing with a Gentile as unclean; signified by a sheet let down from heaven, wherein were all manner of four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the aire, that is, of all both clean and unclean; wherewith came also a Voice, saying, Rise, Peter, kill and eat. Whereunto when Peter answered, Not so, Lord; for I have never eaten anything that is common or unclean: the Voice replies, What God hath cleansed, that call not thou unclean. Now as this Vision was to give

Peter

Luke 23 34.

Nehem. 9. 17.
Joel 2. 13.

Verse 11, 12.

Verse 13.
Verse 14.

Verse 15.

Peter commission to go unto Cornelius; so was Cornelius his Vision to command him to send for Peter. For he saw in a Vision, at the ninth hour of the day, an Angel of the Lord coming unto him, and saying, Cornelius. * Whom when Cornelius beholding and being afraid, said, What is it, Lord? The Angel said unto him, Thy Prayers and thine Alms are come up for a memorial, or had in remembrance, before God. * And now send men to Joppa, and call for one Simon, whose surname is Peter, * and he shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do. And thus have I brought the Story as far as my Text; which is, as you see, a part of this Message of the Angel to Cornelius, namely, his Report; And he said unto him, Thy Prayers and thine Alms, &c.

Acts 10.4.
Verse 3.
* Verse 4.
* Verse 5.
* Verse 6.

Wherein I will consider two things. First, Who was the man, and what was the condition of this person to whom the Angel spake, namely, Cornelius: And the Angel said unto him. Secondly, What the Message or Report he brought importeth: Thy Prayers and thine Alms-deeds are come in remembrance before God.

To begin with the First; The man here spoken to (as you may read in the beginning of the Chapter, and as I have in some part already told you) was Cornelius, a Gentile, Captain of the Italian Band at Cæsarea, and so no doubt himself of that Nation. To understand which, ye must know that at this time the Land of Jury, like as most other Nations were, was under the Roman Empire, and ruled by a President of their appointing: which President had his Court and Seat at Cæsarea, a great and magnificent City upon the Palestine coast, some seventy miles from Jerusalem, where was continually a guard of Souldiers, both for the President's safety and awing the subdued Jews: and among these was our Cornelius a Commander, being Captain of the Italian Band. But howsoever he were by race and breeding a Gentile, yet for Religion he was no Idolater, but a worshipper of the true God, the God of Israel, or God the Creator of heaven and earth: For the Text tells us, that he was a devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, who gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God alway: which is as much as to say, he was a Profelyte; for so were those converted Gentiles called, who left their false Gods and worshipped the true. Yet was he not circumcised, nor had taken upon him the yoke of Moses Law, and so was not accounted a member of the Church of Israel: wherefore according to the Ordinances of the Law he was esteemed unclean, and so not lawful for Peter, or any other circumcised Jew, to company with him, had not God given Peter an Item that he should thenceforth call no man unclean, forasmuch as that badge of separation was now dissolved.

I.
Verse 2.

For the better understanding of this, we must know, there were, while the Legal worship stood, two sorts of Profelytes or converted Gentiles. One sort which were called Profelytes of the Covenant: These were such as were circumcised, and submitted themselves to the whole Mosaical Pedagogy; These came into the Court of Israel to worship, being accounted Jews, and as freely conversed with as if they had been so born. But there was a second sort of Profelytes inferior unto these, whom they called Profelytes of the Gate: These were not circumcised, nor conformed themselves to the Mosaical Rites and Ordinances; only they were tied to the obedience of those Commandments which the Hebrew Doctors call the Commandments of Noah, that is, such as all the sons of Noah were bound to observe. Which were, 1. To worship God the Creator; 2. To disclaim the service of Idols; 3. To abstain from Bloud, namely, both from the effusion of man's bloud; and 4. from eating flesh with the bloud therein; 5. To abstain from Fornication and all unlawful conjunction; 6. To administer Justice; and 7. To abstain from Robbery, and do as they would be done to. And such Profelytes as these, howsoever they were reputed Gentiles, and such as with whom the Jews might not converse, as being no free denizens of Israel; yet did the Jewish Doctors yield them a part in the life to come. Such a Profelyte was Namaan the Syrian; and of such there were many in our Saviour's time; and such an one was our Cornelius.

See Discourses III, and XI.

Hence it was, that when afterward there arose a Controversie in the Church, Whether or no the Gentiles which believed were to be circumcised, and so bound to observe the Ordinances and Rites of Moses; S. Peter in the Council of the Apostles at Jerusalem determined, It was the will of God they should not; and that upon this ground, Because Cornelius the first believing Gentile was no circumcised Profelyte, but a Profelyte of the Gate only; and yet nevertheless when himself was sent (as ye have heard) to preach the Gospel of Christ to him and his house, * the Holy Ghost came down upon them as well as upon the Circumcision: Whereby it was manifest, that God would have the rest of the Gentiles which believed, to have no more imposed

Acts 13.
* Acts 10.45.
46.

Acts 10.4.
Verse 20.

Hag. 2.7.
See Discourse
III. at the end.

imposed upon them than Cornelius had: and accordingly the Council concluded that no other burthen should be laid upon them, but only those Precepts given to the sons of Noah, To abstain from pollutions of Idols, from blood, from things strangled, and from fornication, and the rest, which they had received already in becoming Christians, and so needed not to be expressly mentioned. For that enumeration in the Apostles Decree is to be understood with a וְכִלִּי or an Et cetera; a Scheme usual in the allegation not only of Texts of Scripture, but of passages commonly and vulgarly known. We may find an Example of it, Hebr. 12. 27. in the citation of that Text of Haggai, Yet once more, and I will shake not the earth only but the heavens; which the Apostle there repeats with this Σχῆμα ὁδείας, Τὸ ὅ, Ἐτι ἅπαξ, This, Yet once more, (saith he) signifies the removing of things that are shaken; that is, Τὸ ὅ, Ἐτι ἅπαξ, καὶ τὰ λοιπὰ, (or, as the Hebrews speak, וְכִלִּי or וְכִלִּי) This, Yet once more, and the rest, signifies so much: for Ἐτι ἅπαξ [Yet once more] alone signifies it not, but that whole Sentence.

Now that I may not have held your ears all this time with so long a story, without some matter of Instruction; let us observe by the example of this Cornelius, How great a favour and blessing of God it is to live and dwell within the pale of his Church, where opportunity and means of Salvation is to be had. If Cornelius had still dwelt among his Countrymen the Italians, where he was bred and born, or in any other Province of that Empire, he had in all likelihood never come to this saving and blessed knowledge of the true God, but died a Pagan as he was born. But by this occasion of living at Cæsarea, within the confines of the land of Israel, where the Oracles and Worship of the most High God were daily resounded and professed, he became such an one as ye have heard, a blessed Convert unto the true God, whom with all his house he served and worshipped with acceptance.

If this be so, Then should we our selves learn to be more thankful to God than most of us use to be, for that condition wherein by his Providence we are born. For we might, if it had pleased him, have been born and had our dwelling among Pagans and Gentiles, who had no knowledge of his Word or Promise; (and such our Nation once was.) But behold, his goodness and mercy! we are born of Christian Parents, and dwell in a Christian Country, and so made partakers of the name and livery of Christ as soon as we were born. How great should our thankfulness be for his mercy? Nay we might have been born and bred in a Christian Nation too, and yet such an one where Idolatry, false worship and Popery so reigned, as there had been little hopes or means either to be saved: But behold, we are born, bred, and dwell in a Reformed Christian state, where the Worship of God in Christ is truly taught and practised; where no God is worshipped but the Father, and in no other Mediator but his Son Jesus Christ. How should we then magnifie our good God for his so great and abundant mercy towards us! Luther, or some other, tells a story of a poor German peasant, who on a time beholding an ugly Toad, fell into a most bitter lamentation and weeping, that he had been so unthankful to Almighty God, who had made him a Man, and not such an ugly creature as that was. O that we could in like manner bewail our Ingratitude towards him who hath made us to have our birth and habitation not among Pagans and barbarous Indians, a people without God in the World, but in a believing and Christian Nation, where the true God is known and the means of Salvation is to be had! Thankfulness for a less benefit is the way to obtain a greater. To acknowledge and prize God's favour towards us in the means, is the way to obtain his grace to use them to our eternal advantage: Whereas our neglect of Thankfulness in the one, may cause God, in his just judgment, to deprive us of his Blessing in the other. Consider it.

2.

AND thus much concerning the Person to whom the Angel spake, Cornelius, And he said unto him. Now I come to the Message it self, Thy Prayers and thine Alms are come up into remembrance before God. Where before I make any further entrance, there is an Objection require to be answered; namely, How Cornelius his service could be accepted of God, (as here it is said to be,) whenas he had no knowledge of Christ, without whom no man can please God. I answer; Cornelius pleased God through his Faith in the Promise of Christ to come, as all just men under the Law did: which Faith God did so long accept after Christ was come, till his Coming and the mystery of Redemption wrought by him were fully and clearly made known and preached; which had not been to Cornelius until this time: For though he had heard of his preaching in Galilee and Judea, and that he was crucified by the Jews; yet he had not heard of his Resurrection from the dead and Ascension into glory, or was not assured assured of it, till it was now confirm'd unto him by one sent from God himself. And it is like that having heard somewhat of the Apostles preaching and of the Jews opposing their testimony, and so knowing not what to believe; he had earnestly besought God in his Devotions to lead him in the way of Truth, and make known unto him what to do. Acts 10.4.

This being premised, I return again unto the Angel's words; wherein I will consider Three things. 1. The conjunction or joyning of Almsdeeds with Prayer; Thy Prayers and thine Alms. 2. The efficacy and power they have with God; Thy Prayers and thine Alms are come up into remembrance before God. 3. I will add the Reasons why God so much accepteth them, which are also so many Motives why we should be careful and diligent to practise them.

For the first, The joyning of Almsdeeds with Prayer: Cornelius we see joyn'd them, and he is therefore in the verses before-going commended for a devout man and one that feared God. And by the Angel's report from God himself, we hear how graciously he accepted them; giving us to understand, that a Devotion thus arm'd was of all others the most powerful to pierce into his dwelling-place, and fetch a blessing from him. Therefore our Saviour likewise, Matth. 6. 1, — 5. joyns the Precepts of Alms and Prayer together, teaching us how to give Alms and how to Pray in one Sermon, as things that ought to go hand in hand, and not to be separated asunder. It was also the Ordinance of the Church in the Apostles times, that the First day of the week, which was the time of publick Prayer, should be the time also of Alms. So saith S. Paul, 1 Cor. 16. 1. Now concerning the collection for the Saints, (saith he) as I have given order to the Churches of Galatia, even so do ye. 2. Upon the first day of the week (that is, upon the Lord's day) let every one of you lay by himself in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come. Which Institution seems to be derived from the Commandment of God in the Law * twice repeated; Let no man appear before the Lord empty. For the words annexed to that Law Deut. 16. (where it is applied to the three great Feasts, when all Israel was to assemble to pray before the Lord in his Tabernacle) the words, I say, there annexed sound altogether like unto these of S. Paul concerning the Lord's day; Three times a year (saith the Text there) shall all the males appear before the Lord: and they shall not appear before the Lord empty. Every one shall give as he is able, according to the blessing of the Lord thy God which he hath given thee. Is not this the same in sense with S. Paul's, Let every one lay by himself in store, as God hath prospered him? The Primitive Church after the Apostles followed the same precedent, and our own Reformed Church hath ordained the same in her Service-book, were it accordingly practised as was intended: For after the Epistle and Gospel she appoints divers choice Sentences of Scripture to be read, which exhort us to Alms and other Offerings to the honour of Almighty God; and then, as supposing it to be done, in the Prayer for the whole estate of Christ's Church, We humbly beseech him most mercifully to accept our Alms, and receive our Prayers, which we offer unto his Divine Majesty.

* Exo. 23.17.
Deut. 16.16.

Shall I now need to exhort you (Brethren) thus to furnish and strengthen your Prayers which you daily offer unto God, to couple them with Almsdeeds, to come before God with a present, and not empty-handed? Whom neither God's Commandment, the Practice of his Church, the Example of his Saints, nor the Acceptance of such Prayers as the hand which dealeth Alms lifteth up to him; whom these will not move, no words of mine will do it.

But some may say, Would you have us always give Alms when we pray? No, I say not so, but I would not have you appear before the Lord empty, that is, such as are not wont to give them, nor meant to do: For you may give them before, or second your Prayers with them after; you may have set and appointed times for the one, as you have for the other. Or when the Law of man enjoyns you any thing in this kind, do it heartily, faithfully, and with a willing mind, without grudging, that so God may accept it as a service done to him. Or lastly, Thou mayest do as the holy men in Scripture were wont, vow and promise unto God, if thy Prayer be heard, to offer something unto him either for relief of the poor, the Widow, the Orphan, and distressed one, or the maintenance of his Service and Worship. If God will be with me, (saith Jacob, Gen. 28. 20, &c.) and keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on, &c. Then shall the Lord be my God, and this stone which I have set for a pillar shall be God's house: and of all that thou shalt give me, I will surely give the tenth unto thee. (See the use of vowing by such as came to pray in God's House, Eccles. 5. 4.) If thou comest before God in any of these ways, thou

Acts 10.4.
* Eccles. 35.2.

thou shalt not come empty-handed. But send not thy Prayer single and alone: The Prayer with Alms is the Prayer God loveth. Hear what himself saith, Psal. 50. 14. 15. Offer unto God thanksgiving. (Alms is an Offering of * Thanksgiving) and pay thy vows unto the most High. So call upon me in the day of trouble, and I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me.

II.

* Chirp. 5.19.

NOW I come to the second thing I propounded, The power and efficacy which Prayer and Alms have with God; Thy Prayers and thine Alms (saith the Angel) are come up for a memorial (or, are had in remembrance) in the sight of God. God is said to remember our Prayers when he grants them, our Alms and good deeds when he rewards them, or, in a word, when he answers either of them with a blessing: as on the contrary he is said to remember iniquity, when he sends some judgment for it. So God is said to remember Hannah, when he heard her prayer for a Son, 1 Sam. 1. 19. and Nehemiah speaking * of his deeds of mercy and bounty shewed unto his poor brethren returned from captivity, says, Think upon me, or [זכרה לי] Remember me, O my God, for good, according to all that I have done for this people. Thus were Cornelius his Prayers and Alms remembered. Prayers therefore and Alms, be they performed as they should be, are powerful and approved means to obtain a blessing at the hands of God.

I.
1 Kings, Chap.
17, & 18.
* Jos. 10. 12.

To speak first of Prayer: What is it that Prayer hath not obtain'd? It hath shut and opened Heaven; see the story of Elijah. It hath made the Sun and Moon to stand still; read the Book of * Joshua. It is the Key that openeth all God's Treasures of blessings, both spiritual and corporal. For spiritual blessings, Cornelius we see obtained thereby Illumination and Instruction in God's saving Truth. And S. James saith, If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally; and it shall be given him. Ephraim in Jeremy 31. 18. prays for converting grace, Turn thou me, O Lord, and I shall be turned: To whom God presently replies, ver. 20. Is Ephraim my dear Son? is he a pleasant Child? for since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still. Therefore my bowels are troubled for him, I will surely have mercy on him, saith the Lord. Prayer obtains remission of sins; I said (saith David Psal. 32. 5, 6.) I will confess my transgressions unto the Lord, and thou forgavest the iniquity of my sin. For this shall everyone that is godly pray unto thee in a time when thou mayest be found. Prayer also obtaineth corporal blessings. When Heaven was shut and it rained not, Elijah prayed for rain, and it rained: Hannah prayed for a Son, and she conceived: If we be sick (saith S. James chap. 5. 15.) The prayer of faith shall heal the sick: Nehemiah prayed that he might find favour in the sight of King Artaxerxes, Chap. 1. 11. and found it, Chap. 2. 4.

1 Kings 18.
1 Sam. 1.

But some man will say, If Prayer have such power and efficacy, how comes it to pass that many even godly men oft pray, and yet speed not? I answer, There are divers causes thereof. Either 1. we pray not as we ought; or 2. we are not disposed as we ought to be when we pray.

Luke 18.

1. We pray not as we ought, either 1. when we pray not heartily, or not constantly: For God regards not formal and superficial prayer, but prayer that comes from the Heart; and loves to be importuned before he grant; as our Saviour tells us in the Parable of the woman and the unjust Judge, whom though at first he would not hear, yet importunity made him do her justice. Or 2. We rely not upon God as we ought when we pray; but trust more to second means, to our Wit, to our Friends, or the like, than to Him. And this seems to be that wavering in prayer S. James speaks of, when he bids us pray in faith without wavering, Chap. 1. 6. that is, without reeling from God to rest upon second means: But as with our mouth we pray to him, so should our Hearts rely upon him to give us what we ask. But we often pray to God for fashion, but indeed we look to speed by others; and so God takes himself mocked, and so no marvel if he hears us not. If it were our own case, we would not listen to such suiters. Or 3. We pray and speed not, when we make not God's glory the End of what we ask; Ye ask (saith S. James Chap. 4. 3.) and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye might consume it upon your lusts. Or 4. We may ask something that crosseth the Rule of Divine Providence and Justice, and then also we must not look to speed. David prayed for the life of his child by Bathsheba, Uriah's Wife; but was not heard, because it stood not with the Rule of Divine Justice, that so scandalous a sin, which made the Enemies of God to blaspheme, should not have an exemplary punishment. In like manner sundry times when the children of Israel rebelled against the Lord, and murmured against Moses and Aaron their Governours, Moses poured forth very earnest prayers to God for removing his judgments from off the people; but God would not hear him, because their sins were scandalous and committed with

2 Sam. 12. 16,
&c.

so high a hand, that it could not stand with the Rule of his Justice not to inflict punishment for them.

Acts 10.4.

2. Again, sometimes, and that too often, we are indisposed for God to grant our request. As first, when some sin unrepented of lies at the door, and keeps God's blessing out. Psal. 66. 18. If I regard (saith David) iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me. So God would not hear Jeshua praying for the Israelites, when they fled before the men of Ai, because of Achan's Sacrilege; * Get thee up, (saith God) why liest thou thus upon thy face? Israel hath sinned — for they have taken of the accursed thing, (that is, the thing that cursed were those that meddled therewith:) Therefore the children of Israel could not stand before their Enemies, — because they were accursed. Neither will I be with you any more, except ye put the accursed thing from among you. Or lastly, our Prayers often are not heard, because we appear before the Lord empty; we do not as Cornelius did, send up Prayers and Alms together: we should have two strings to our bow, when we have but one. This is another indisposition which unfits us to receive what we ask of God: For how can we look that God should hear us in our need, when we turn away our face from our brother in his need? When we refuse to give to God, or for his sake, what he requires, why should he grant to us what we request? Hear what an ancient Father of the Church, S. Basil by name, in Concione ad Divites, saith; Οἶδα πολλὰς νηστεύοντας, προσευχομένους, στενα-ζοντας, ὅσον ἵνα μὴ προϊεμένους τοῖς ἑλικομένοις: τί ὄφελος τούτοις τῆς λοιπῆς ἀρετῆς; I have known many (saith he) who would fast, who would pray, who would sigh; but not bestow one halfpenny upon the poor: But what then will their other devotion profit them?

See Psal. 50. 15.
Prov. 28. 9.
* Jof. 7. 10, 11, 12.

3. Add to all these Reasons of displeasure a Reason of favour, why God sometimes grants not our requests; namely, because we ask that which he knows would be hurtful for us, though we think not so. We ask sometimes that which if he granted us would utterly undo us. As therefore a wife and loving Father will not give his child a knife or some other hurtful thing, though it cries never so much unto him for it: so does God deal with his children. And how wise soever we think our selves, we are often as ignorant in that which concerns our good as very babes are; and therefore we must submit our selves to be ordered by the wisdom of our heavenly Father.

Moreover, we must know and believe, that God often hears our Prayers when we think he doth not; and that three manner of ways. As namely 1. When he changes the means, but brings the End we desire another way to pass. We ask to have a thing by our means, but he likes not our way, but gives it us by another means which he thinks better. S. Paul, that he might the better glorifie God in serving him, desires the thorn in the flesh might be taken from him: God denies him that means, but grants him grace sufficient for him; that so being humbled by the sight of his own infirmity, he might glorifie God for his power in mans weakness. And is it not all one, whether a Physician quench the thirst of his Patient by giving him Barberies or some other comfortable drink, as by giving him Beer which he calls for? 2. God often grants our request, but not at that time we would have it, but defers it till some other time which he thinks best. Daniel prays for the return of the Captivity in the first year of Darius, but God defers it till the first of Cyrus. We must not therefore take God's delays for denials. The Souls of the Saints under the Altar (Rev. 6. 10.) cry out aloud for vengeance: God hears that cry, and cannot deny the importunate cry of innocent blood; yet he defers it for a little season, saith the Text v. 11. and why? because their fellow-servants and brethren that should be slain as they were, might be fulfilled. Lastly, God sometimes grants not the thing we ask, but gives us in stead thereof something which is as good, or better; And then we are not to think but that he hears us.

2 Cor. 12. 7, 8.
σκόλον τῆς σαρκί.
Verle 9.

Dan. 9. 1, &c.
2 Chron. 35. 22.

And thus much concerning the power and efficacy of Prayer. Now I come also to shew the like of Alms, how powerful a means they are to procure a blessing from God: Not thy Prayer only, saith the Angel, but thine Alms also are come up for a remembrance in the sight of God. For Alms is a kind of Prayer, namely, a visible one, and such an one as prevails as strongly with God for a blessing as any other. Hear David in Psal. 41. 1. Blessed is he that considereth the poor; the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble. 2. The Lord will preserve him and keep him alive, and he shall be blessed upon earth; and thou wilt not deliver him unto the will of his enemies. 3. The Lord will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing: thou wilt make all his bed in his sickness. A place so evident as flashes in a man's eye. But hear 2.

Q

Solomon

Acts 10.4.

* Compare
Prov. 21.13.

Solomon speak to, Prov. 19. 17. He that hath pity upon the poor, lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given, he will pay him again. And Prov. 28. 27. He that giveth unto the poor, shall not lack: but he that hideth his eyes, shall have many a * curse. Also Prov. 11. 25. The liberal soul shall be made fat; and he that watereth shall be watered also himself. Likewise Eccles. 11. 1. Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days. These are for corporal blessings, and of this life: But hear also for spiritual blessings, and those of the life to come. David Psal. 112. 9. (quoted by S. Paul, 2 Cor. 9.9.) He hath dispersed, he hath given to the poor; his righteousness remaineth for ever, &c. that is, he shall be remembered not only in this life, but in the life to come. Luke 16. 9. Make to your selves (saith our Saviour) friends of the * unrighteous Mammon, (that is, of these deceitful and uncertain riches;) that when you fail, they (that is, the friends you have made) may receive you into everlasting Tabernacles: that is, that God looking upon the Alms-deeds you have done, and hearing the Prayers and blessings of the poor, may reward you with eternal life. So S. Paul, 1 Tim. 6. 17, &c. Charge them that be rich in this world, — that they trust not in uncertain riches, but in the living God, — That they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; Laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life. Non memini (saith S. Hierome) me legere malā morte mortuum, qui libenter opera charitatis exercuit; habet enim multos intercessores, & impossibile est multorum preces non exaudiri. I do not remember in all my reading that ever any one died an ill death who was in his life-time ready to good works and acts of Charity; for indeed such a one hath many to intercede and pray for him, and it is impossible but that the prayers of so many in his behalf should be heard and accepted by God: What should I say more? Shall we not receive our sentence at the Last day according to our works of mercy? Come ye blessed of my Father, and inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: For when I was hungry, ye gave me meat; when I was thirsty, ye gave me drink, &c. ye know the rest. O the wonderful efficacy of Alms in prevailing with God! What favour do they find in his sight! how are they remembered! but not for any merit in them, which is none; but of his mere mercy and merciful promise, who accepts them in Christ our Saviour. Whence is that Prayer of Nehemiah, c. 13. 22. concerning this case of good works, Remember me, O my God! concerning this, and spare me according to the greatness of thy mercy.

* Μαμωνᾶ ἀδύλας, The Mammon of unrighteousness. is neither Goods unlawfully gotten (as I am afraid some take it,) nor Mammon about which the sons of men are wont to be unrighteous (as others take it;) but as the Hebrews call it מָמוֹן שָׁקֶר, or as the Chaldee speak, מָמוֹן רִשְׁקָא Mammona falsitatis, deceitful and uncertain riches. For among the Hellenists ἀδύλας is the same with ἄεδος, and so the Lxx. often render שָׁקֶר. Agreeable wherunto S. Paul 1 Tim. 6. as it were paraphrasing this of our Saviour, saith, Charge the rich that they trust not in uncertain riches, that is, מָמוֹן רִשְׁקָא or μαμωνᾶ ἀδύλας.

Math. 25.34.
35.

Thus much of the efficacy and prevalency which Prayer and Alms have with Almighty God to procure a blessing from him; Thy Prayers and thine Alms are come up for a memorial before God.

III.

NOW I come to the third thing propounded, The Reasons why God requires them, and why they are so pleasing unto him: which Reasons when they are known, will be also strong Motives to us why we should frequent them. For though indeed their Efficacy alone were a Motive sufficient to invite any reasonable man to do them; yet will these Reasons add a further enforcement thereunto.

To begin then with Prayer; The Reasons why God requires this duty at our hands (I will name but the chief) are these.

1. That we might acknowledge the property he hath in the Gifts he bestows upon us: otherwise we would forget in what tenure we hold those Blessings we receive from his hands. Though therefore he be willing to bestow his Benefits upon us, yet he will have us ask them before he doth it. Even as Fathers do with their children; though they intend to bestow such things upon them as are needful, yet they will have their children to ask them. Unless therefore we ask of God the things which are his to give; as we shall not receive what we have not, so we cannot lawfully use any thing we have.

2. Another Reason is, That we might be acquainted with God; Acquaint now thyself with God, (saith Eliphaz Job 22. 21.) and be at peace; thereby good shall come unto thee. Now acquaintance we know grows amongst men by conversing together, by intercourse and speaking to one another. So is it here, by accustomed to speak to God in Prayer we grow acquainted with him: otherwise if we grow strangers to him, and he to us, we shall not dare to behold him.

Acts 10.4.

For 1. We are to offer Alms, to testify our acknowledgment of whom we received, and of whom we hold what we have. For as by Prayer we ask God's creatures before we can enjoy them; so when we have them, there is another Homage due for them, namely, of Thanksgiving, without which the use of the creature which God gives us is unclean and unlawful to us. Every creature of God (saith S. Paul, 1 Tim. 4. 4.) is good, if it be received with thanksgiving; not else. And the same Apostle 1 Cor. 10. tells us, that even those things which according to the manner of the Gentiles were offered unto Idols, (that is, to Devils,) a Christian might lawfully eat, so it were done * with thanksgiving to the true and only God: For so he should profess, he eat not meat of the Devil's gift, or Devil's Table, but of the Lord's, whose of right was the Earth and the fulness thereof. Whether therefore, saith he, v. 31. ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do else, do all to the glory of God, that is, give him the glory of the Lordship of his creature by your thanksgiving: For to do a thing as, &c. ὡς ἵνα Θεῷ to the glory of God, in the Apostle's meaning, is that which the Jews say, To do it לשם השמים, so as the Majesty and Dominion of God may be acknowledged thereby, which the Scripture calls His Glory.

* Verse 30. *Εἰ
ἐγὼ χάριν μετέχω, ἴf I with thank-giving be a partaker, why am
I evil spoken of
for that for which ἐγὼ χάριν I give thanks?*

Now our Thanksgiving to God for his creature must not express it self in words only, but it must be also in work and deed; that is, we must yield him a Rent and Tribute of what we enjoy by his favour and blessing; which if we do not, we lose our Tenure. This Rent is twofold: either that which is offered unto God for the maintenance of his Worship and Ministers; or that which is given for the relief of the poor, the Orphan and the Widow, which is called Alms. For not only our Tithes, but our Alms are an Offering unto Almighty God. So Prov. 19. 17. He that hath pity on the poor, lendeth to the Lord: and Chap. 14. 31. He that hath mercy on the poor, honoureth his Maker. And our Saviour will tell us at the day of Judgment, that what was done unto them, was done unto him. This then is the Reason why we must give Alms, because they are the Tribute of our Thanksgiving, whereby we acknowledge we are God's Tenants, and hold all we have of him, that is, of the Manner of Heaven, without which duty and service we have not the lawful use of what we possess. Whence our Saviour tells the Pharisees, who stood so much upon the washing of the Cup and Platter, lest their meat and drink should be unclean. Give alms, saith he, of such things as you have; and behold, all things are clean unto you, Luke 11. 41.

Now that this Acknowledgment of God's Dominion was the End of the Offerings of the Law, both those wherewith the Priests and Levites were maintained, and those wherewith the poor, the Orphan and the Widow were relieved; appears by the solemn profession those who pay'd them were to make, Deut. 26. where he that brought a basket of first-fruits to the house of God, was to say, * I profess this day unto the Lord, that I am come unto the Country which the Lord swore unto our Fathers for to give us. And when the Priest had taken the basket, he was to say thus; (verse 5, &c.)* A Syrian ready to perish was my Father, and he went down into Egypt and sojourned there with a few, and became there a Nation great, mighty, and populous. And the Egyptians evil intreated us, &c. — And the Lord brought us forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand and out-stretched arm, &c. — And brought us into this place, and hath given us this land, even a land that floweth with milk and honey. And now, behold, I have brought the first-fruits of the land, which thou, O Lord, hast given me. And thou shalt set it (saith the Text) before the Lord thy God, and worship before the Lord thy God. This was to be done every year. But for Tithes, the profession was made every third year, because then the course of all manner of Tithing came about. For two years they pay'd the Levite's Tithe and the Festival Tithe, the third year they pay'd the Levite's Tithe and the poor man's Tithe: So that year the course of Tithing being finished, the party was to make a solemn profession: When thou

* Verse 3.

* Others understand it of Laban the Syrian, and render it thus; A Syrian was I, &c. proving my Father, viz. Jacob. So the Vulg. Lat. Syrus persecutus patrem meum, qui descendit in Aegyptum. The Chaldee most full, לִבְן אֲרַמָּה Laban Syrus quæsit perdere patrem meum, &c. To the same sense Munster, Luther and Castilio translate these words.

Acts 10.4.
Verle 12, &c.

hast made an end (saith the Lord) of Tithing all the Tithes of thine increase, the third year, which is the year of Tithing, (that is, when the Tithing course finisheth) and hast given it to the Levite, the Stranger, the Fatherless, and the Widow, that they may eat within thy Gates and be filled: Then thou shalt say before the Lord thy God, I have brought away the hallowed thing out of mine house, and also have given it to the Levite, and to the Stranger, to the Fatherless, and to the Widow, according to all the Commandments which thou hast commanded me. — Look down from thy holy habitation, from heaven, and bless thy people Israel, and the land which thou hast given us, as thou swarest to our Fathers, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

What we have seen in these two sorts, is to be supposed to be the End of all other Offerings for pious uses, (which were not Sacrifices,) namely, To acknowledge God to be the Lord and Giver of all. As we see in that royal Offering which David with the Princes and Chieftains of Israel made for the building of the Temple, 1 Chron. 29. 11, &c. where David acknowledgeth thus; Thine, O Lord, is the Kingdom, and thou art exalted as Head over all: Both riches and honour come of thee, and thou reignest over all; and in thine hand is power and might, and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all. Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praise thy glorious Name. — For all things come of thee, and * of thine own have we given thee.

* Heb. מִיָּדְךָ
of thine hand.
Vulg. Lat.
Qua de manu
tua accepimus, dedimus tibi.

For this Reason there was never time since God first gave the Earth to the sons of men, wherein this Acknowledgment was not made by setting apart something of that he had given them, to that purpose. In the State of Paradise among all the Trees in the garden, which God gave man freely to enjoy, one Tree was Noli me tangere, and reserved to God as holy, in token that he was Lord of the garden. So that the first sin of Mankind for the species of the fact was Sacrilege, in profaning that which was holy; For which he was cast out of Paradise, and the Earth cursed for his sake, because he had violated the sign of his Fealty unto the great Landlord of the whole Earth. Might I not say, that many a man unto this day is cast out of his Paradise, and the labours of his hands cursed, for the same sin? But to go on.

Gen. 4. 3, 4.

After man's ejection out of Paradise, the first service that ever we read was performed unto God was of this kind: Abel bringing the best of his flock, and Cain of the fruit of his ground, for an Offering or Present unto the Lord. The first spoils that ever we read gotten from an Enemy in war, paid Tithes to Melchisedek the Priest of the most High God, as an Acknowledgment that he had given Abraham the Victory: Melchisedek blessing God in his name to be the possessor of heaven and earth, and to have delivered his enemies into his hand: To which Abraham said Amen by paying him Tithes of all. Jacob promiseth God, that if he would give him any thing, (for at that time he had nothing) he would give him the Tenth of what he should give him: which is as much to say, as he would acknowledge and profess him to be the Giver, after the accustomed manner.

Gen. 14. 19, 20

Gen. 28. 20,
&c.

For the Time of the Law, I may skip over that; it is well enough known, no man will deny it. But let us come to the Time of the Gospel, which though it hath freed us from the bondage of Typical Elements, yet hath it not freed us from the profession of our Fealty unto God as Lord of the whole Earth. 'Twere strange methinks to affirm it: I am sure the ancient Church next the Apostles thought otherwise. I will quote for a witness Irenaeus, who * tells us that our Saviour, when he took part of the Viands of his last Supper, and giving thanks with them, consecrated them into a Sacrament of his body and blood, let his Church an example of dedicating part of the creature in Dominicos usus; Dominus (saith he) dans discipulis suis consilium Primitias Deo offerre ex suis creaturis, non quasi indigenti, sed ut ipsi nec instructi nec ingrati sint; eum qui ex creatura panis est accepit, & gratias egit, &c. Et Novi Testamenti novam docuit oblationem, quam Ecclesia ab Apostolis accipiens, in universo mundo offert Deo, ei qui alimenta nobis praestat, primitias suorum munerum in novo Testamento. But this is no proper occasion to follow this Argument any further: I will therefore leave it, and proceed to a second Reason why God requires Alms and such like Offerings at our hands.

* Lib. 4. c. 32.

See this (and the like passages out of Irenaeus) quoted more at large and explained in the Treatise of The Christian Sacrifice, Chap. 8. in Book II.

2. Namely, That we might not forget God: our Blessed Saviour Matth. 6. 19, 20. and Luke 12. 33, &c. speaking of this very matter of Alms, Lay not up (saith he) for your selves treasures upon earth; — but lay up for your selves treasures in heaven: — For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. The proper evil of Abundance is to forget God and our dependence upon him: the remedy whereof most genuine and natural is, to pay him a Rent of what we have: So shall we always think of our

Dis. XXXIV. Nehemiah's provision for God's House and Priests. 173

our Landlord, and lift up our Hearts to Heaven in whatsoever we receive and enjoy. Yea, when this service is so acceptable to God, that he promiseth a great Reward to those who thus honour and acknowledge him; how can it chuse but detain our hearts in Heaven in that respect also, when we shall so often think of God, not only as the Lord and Giver of what we have, but as the Rewarder also of the acknowledgment we perform? Acts 10.4.

3: The last Reason why we should give Alms is, that we may be fit subjects of Mercy at the day we look for Mercy: (For all that we can look for at the hands of God is nothing but Mercy: Nehem. 13. 22. Remember me, O my God, concerning this also, and spare me according to the greatness of thy Mercy.) Now it is the will of God revealed, That unless we shew mercy unto our brethren, he will shew none to us. Ye know the condition of the fifth Petition in the Lord's Prayer, and the * Parable of the unmerciful servant in the Gospel. This is the reason why among all other works we shall receive our doom at the last Day according to our works of Mercy, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you; — For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat, &c. How then can they look to be saved at that Day, who do not these works of Mercy? Can our Saviour pass this blessed sentence upon them? Or will he change the form of his sentence for their sake? No certainly; if the sentence of bliss will not fit, the other will and must; Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire — For I was an hungred, and ye gave me no meat, &c. Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me. * Matth. 18. 23, &c. Matth. 25 34. Verse 41, &c.

DISCOURSE XXXIV.

NEHEMIAH 13. 14.

Remember me, O my God, concerning this, and wipe not out my good deeds [Heb. זְכוּתִי] that I have done for the House of my God and for the Offices thereof.

with Verse 22.

Remember me, O my God, concerning this, and spare me according to the greatness of thy mercy.

HE present occasion is Remembrance, and my Text (you see) is of Remembrance; and that too for good deeds done to the House of God. The difference is, that in my Text is God's Remembrance, the occasion of this meeting is * Ours: But seeing the one will follow from the other, the Text is every way fit enough for the Occasion. * The Commemoration of Colledge-Benefactors.

The words I have read are the words of Nehemiah himself, by way of a short Ejaculatory prayer and Apostrophe unto Almighty God. But what were those good deeds, will you ask, which he speaks of, done for the House of his God and the Offices thereof? Of this the words going before will inform us: I perceived (saith he) that the portions of the Levites had not been given them; whereby the Levites and the Singers that did the work, were fled every one to his field. Then contended I with the Rulers, and said, Why is the House of God forsaken? And I gathered them together, and set them in their place (or, Station.) Then brought all Judah the tithe of the corn, and the new wine, and the oyle, unto the treasuries (or, Store-houses:) And I made treasurers over the treasuries, such of the Priests and Levites as were accounted faithful; and their office was to distribute unto their Brethren. Verse 14. Remember me, O my God, concerning this, &c. Verse 12. Verse 17. Verse 12. Verse 13.

There needs no more for understanding the meaning of the Words: Now therefore let us see what Lessons we may learn there-from. And in the first place, that which is most pregnantly to be gathered thence, and best fits our turn, namely, That to make provision for the maintenance of God's Worship and the Ministers thereof, is a worthy work, and of high esteem and favour with God: Forasmuch as Nehemiah here commendeth himself unto the Divine favour and remembrance, under that name of having done good deeds or kindneses unto the House of God, and the Offices thereof; a manifest argument he took them to be most pleasing and acceptable unto him. The truth of this Observation appears not only by this, but by other places of Scripture both of the Old and New Testament: Let us take some survey of them.

Nehem. 13.
14, 22.

And first for the furnishing a place for God's worship, take notice of that famous benediction and Prayer of King David, when his people offered so willingly and liberally towards the building of the Temple; In the uprightness of my heart (saith he) I have willingly offered all these things: and now I have seen with joy thy people which are present here, to offer willingly unto thee. O Lord God of Abraham, Isaac and Israel our Fathers, keep this for ever in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people, and prepare their hearts unto thee, 1 Chron. 29. 17, 18. Surely therefore it was a most excellent disposition, and such as he knew God prized and esteemed.

For entertainment and provision for his Prophets and Ministers, in what account God hath it, appears by his great solicitude in his Law that they should not be neglected: Take heed to thy self (saith he, Deut. 12. 19.) that thou forsake not the Levite, as long as thou livest upon the earth. What expression can go beyond this? Again, by that story of the Shunamite woman, 2 Kings 4. who entertained the Prophet Elisha and made provision for him, when he should have occasion to pass that way: Verse 9. Behold, (saith she to her husband) this is an holy man of God which passeth by us continually. V. 10. Let us make, I pray thee, a little chamber on the wall, and let us set for him there a bed, and a table, and a stool, and a candlestick; and it shall be when he cometh unto us, then he shall turn in thither. How acceptable to Almighty God was this good office done to his Prophet, appears by the double miracle he wrought for her, both in giving her a child, when her husband was now so old she despaired; and in raising him again to life, when he was dead: Both in the same Chapter.

But let us come now to the New Testament, and see whether the like be not to be found there; lest otherwise any might think (as some are prone enough to do) the case were now altered. And first also to begin here with the provision of a place for God's worship, the story of that Centurion of Capernaum in S. Luke's Gospel is worthy our consideration; Who when he heard of Jesus, (saith the Text) sent unto him the Elders of the Jews, beseeching him that he would come and heal his servant. The Elders came to Jesus, and besought him instantly, saying, He was worthy for whom he should do this. Why so? For (say they) he loveth our Nation, and hath built us a Synagogue, Luke 7. 3, 4, 5. Then Jesus (saith the Text, v. 6. without any more ado) went with them; namely, as well approving of their Motive, that he who had done such a work, deserved that favour should be deign'd him. Also concerning provision and entertainment for his Apostles and Ministers; Are they not our Saviour's own words and promise when he sent them forth? He that receiveth a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, shall receive a Prophet's reward: Nay, He that should give them but a cup of cold water, should not lose his reward. According to which S. Paul, speaking of the Philippians bounty and communication towards him, I have received (saith he) of Epaphroditus the things which were sent from you, an odour of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well-pleasing unto God. And 2 Tim. 1. 16, 18. concerning the like good office done him by Onesiphorus, he speaks in this manner; The Lord (saith he) give mercy unto the house of Onesiphorus; for he oft refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my chain. The Lord grant unto him that he may find mercy of the Lord in that day. Which is not much unlike this of Nehemiah in my Text, if it had been spoken in the first person by Onesiphorus himself, as it is in the third by S. Paul: Howsoever, who will deny but it implies the same thing?

Matth. 10. 41.

Verse 42.
Phil. 4. 18.

Now then, if this be so, as I think we have proved, what shall we think of the times we live in, when men account them the most religious to God-ward who do or would unfurnish the House of God most, who rob his Priests most? But they have an excuse sufficient to bear them out; and what is that? The Priests, they say, have too much. If this excuse would serve turn, some of themselves perhaps might soon have less than they have; for sure some body else as well as the Priest have more than they need, and might spare some of it. But whether the Priests have too much or not, will not be the question: Suppose they had; hath God too much too? For these men consider not that the Propriety of such things as these is God's, and not the Priests; and that to change the Propriety of what is sacred, by alienating thereof to a profane

profane and private use, ( I say not by diverting it from the Priest's livelihood to any other holy use, in case the Priest have more than needs ) is to rob God himself: yea God tells us so much, Malach. 3. 8, 9. Will a man (saith he) rob God? (as if it were a thing intolerable, and scarce ever heard of) yet ye (saith he) have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In Tithes and Offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse, because ye have robbed me. (For that's the burden that goes with things consecrated, Cursed be he that alienates them.) This Malachi lived at the same time with Nehemiah, and the Jews say 'twas Ezra; whence this exprobration of his, and this fact of Nehemiah in my Text, may justly seem to have relation one to the other. And thus much of my first Observation.

*Nehem. 13.
14, 22.*

My Second is, That God rewardeth these, and so all other our Good deeds and works, not for any Merit or Worthiness that is in them, but of his free Mercy and Goodness, Remember me, O my God, (saith Nehemiah) and wipe not out my good deeds: Why? is there any Reward due to them of Justice? No; But remember me, O my God, and spare me, כָּרַב according to the greatness, or multitude, of thy mercy. Thus he expounds himself. And S. Paul taught us even now the self-same thing in his Votum or Prayer for the House of Onesiphorus, for the like good service done to the Offices of God's House; The Lord (saith he) grant unto him that he may find mercy of the Lord in that day, that is, the day of Judgment, which is Tempus misericordias The time of rewarding, when every one shall receive according to his work.

II.

The controverſie therefore between the Romanists and us, is not, Whether there be a Reward promised unto our Works: We know the Scripture both of the Old and New Testament is full of Testimonies that way, and encourageth us to work in hope of the Reward laid up for us: We know that in keeping of God's Commandments there is great reward, Psal. 19. 11. And that unto him that soweth righteousness shall be a sure reward, Prov. 11. 18. We know our Saviour saith Matt. 5. 11, 12. Blessed are ye when men revile and persecute you,—for great is your reward in heaven. Also that He that receiveth a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, shall receive a Prophet's reward: and whosoever shall give a cup of cold water only to one of his little ones in the name of a Disciple, shall not lose his reward, Matt. 10. 41, 42. Again, we read Luk. 6. 35. Love your enemies, do good and lend,—and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be the children of the Highest. We know also what S. John saith, 2 Ep. v. 8. Look to your selves, that ye lose not those things which ye have wrought, but that ye may receive a full reward. But the Question is, Whence this Reward cometh; Whether from the Worth or Worthiness of the Work, as a debt of Justice due thereto; or from God's Mercy, as a recompence freely bestowed, out of God's gracious Bounty, and not in Justice due to the Worth of the Work it self. Which Question, methinks, Nehemiah here in my Text may determine, when he saith, Remember me, O Lord, for my good deeds, according to thy great Mercy: and the Prophet Hosea, ch. 10. 12. when he bid- deth us, Sow to your selves in righteousness, and reap in mercy: and S. Paul, Rom. 6. 23. where though he saith, that the wages of sin is death, yet when he comes to eternal life, he changeth his style, But (saith he) eternal life is χάρισμα τῷ Θεῷ the gracious gift of God through Jesus Christ. For as for our Works, they are imperfect; and whatsoever they were, we owed them to him in whom we live and have our Being, whether there were any Reward or not promised for them.

Neither do we hereby any whit detract from the truth of that Axiome, That God rewardeth every man according to his work: For still the Question remaineth the very same, Whether there may not be as well merces gratiae, as merces justitiae; that is, Whether God may not judge a man according to his works, when he sits upon the Throne of Grace, as well as when he sits upon his Throne of Justice. And we think here, that the Prophet David hath fully cleared the case in that one sentence, Psal. 62. 12. With thee, O Lord, is Mercy; for thou rewardest every one according to his work.

Nay more than this; We deny not but in some sense this Reward may be said to proceed of Justice. For howsoever originally and in it self we hold it cometh from God's free Bounty and Mercy, who might have required the Work of us without all promise of Reward, (For, as I said, we are his Creatures, and owe our Being unto him;) yet in regard he hath covenanted with us, and tied himself by his Word and Promise to confer such a Reward the Reward now in a sort proveth to be an Act of Justice, namely of Justitia promissi on God's part, not of Merit on ours: even as in forgiving our sins (which in it self all men know to be an Act of Mercy) he is said to be Faithful and Just, 1 John 1. 9. namely in the faithful performance of his Promise;

For Nehem. 13.

14, 22.

Deut. 9. 5.

Chap. 9. 8.

For Promise ( we know ) once made, amongst honest men is accounted a due debt. But this argues no more any worthiness of equality in the Work towards the obtaining of the Reward, than if a Promise of a Kingdom were made to one if he should take up a straw, it would follow thence, that the lifting up of a straw were a labour or a work worth a Kingdom, howsoever he that should so promise were bound to give it.

Thus was Moses careful to put the children of Israel in mind touching the Land of Canaan, ( which was a Type of our Eternal habitation in Heaven ) that it was a Land of promise, and not of merit, which God gave them to possess, not for their righteousness, or for their upright heart; but that he might perform the word which he swore unto their Fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Whereupon the Levites, in this Book of Nehemiah, say in their Prayer to God, Thou madest a Covenant with Abraham, to give to his seed the Land of the Canaanites, and hast performed thy words, because thou art just, that is, true and faithful in keeping thy promise. Now because the Lord hath made a like promise of the Crown of life to them that love him, S. Paul sticks not in like manner to attribute this also to God's Justice; Henceforth ( saith he, 2 Tim. 4. 8. ) is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but to all them that love his appearing. Upon which S. Bernard most sweetly, as he is wont, Ergo quam Paulus expectat corona Justitiæ; sed justitiæ Dei, non suæ: Justum quippe est, ut reddat quod debet; debet autem quod pollicitus est. There is therefore a crown of righteousness which Paul looks for; but it is of God's righteousness, not his own: it being a righteous thing with God to give what he owes; now he owes what he hath engaged himself to by promise.

Lastly, for the word Merit; It is not the name we so much scruple at, as the thing wont now-a-daies to be understood thereby: otherwise we confess the name might be admitted, if taken in the large and more general sense, for Any work having relation to a reward to follow it; or whereby a reward is quocunque modo obtained; in a word, as the Correlate indifferent either to merces gratiæ or justitiæ, the reward of Grace or of Justice. For thus the Fathers used it; and so might we have done still, if some of us had not grown too proud, and mistook it. Since we think it better and safer to disuse it; even as Physicians are wont to prescribe their Patients recovered of some desperate disease, not to use any more that meat or diet which they find to have caused it.

And here give me leave to acquaint you with an Observation of a like alteration of speech, and I suppose for the self-same cause happening under the Old Testament; namely of Δικαιοσύνη changed into Ἐλεημοσύνη, Righteousness into That which findeth mercy: For the Septuagint and the New Testament with them render the Hebrew word צְדָקָה Righteousness; not only when it is taken for Eerescence or Alms, ( as in that Tongue it is the ordinary word ) in which use we are wont to expound it Works of mercy; but where there is no relation to Alms or Eerescence at all. Whence I gather that by Ἐλεημοσύνη the Septuagint meant not, as we commonly take it, Works of mercy; but rather Works whereby we find mercy at the hands of God. I will give you a place which methinks is very pregnant, Deut. 6. 24, 25. where we read thus, And the Lord commanded us to do all these Statutes, ( you may see there what they are ) to fear the Lord our God, for our good alwayes, that he might preserve us alive, as at this day. And it shall be our Righteousness, if we observe to do all these Commandments before the Lord, as he hath commanded us. Here the Septuagint ( for, And it shall be our Righteousness ) have, Καὶ Ἐλεημοσύνη ἔσται ἡμῖν, And it shall be our Ἐλεημοσύνη, that whereby we shall find mercy at the hands of God, if we observe to do all these Commandments, &c. This place will admit no evasion; for there is no reference to Alms here. And indeed all our Righteousness is nothing else but Ἐλεημοσύνη, that whereby we find mercy at the hands of God: and no marvail if Works of mercy ( as to relieve the poor and needy ) be especially so called, for they above all other are the works whereby we shall find mercy, and receive the reward of Bliss at the last day. And thus much of my second Observation.

III.

I come now to my third; That it is lawful to do good works Intuitu mercedis, with an eye or respect to the recompence of Reward. It is plain that Nehemiah here did so; Remember me, O my God, concerning this, &c. So did Moses, of whom it is said, Heb. 11. 25, 26. that he chose rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt: for, saith the Text, ἀπέβλεπε (aspiciebat vel intuebatur) εἰς τὴν μετὰ ποθοσίων, he had respect unto the recompence of Reward. And, I confess, it seems an unreasonable thing to me, that that which is made the End ( though but in part ) of the Action, should not be at all looked unto by the Agent, whenas Finis is principium Actionis; and that that which God hath promised unto us as an encouragement to make us work with the more alacrity, should not be thought on nor looked to in our working. Do not they who would perswade this, go the way to discourage men from good works, by removing out of their sight the Encouragement which God hath given them?

of

But they object, the obedience of God's Children ought to be filial, that is, free, and not mercenary, as that of Hirelings. I answer; Obedience which is only for Reward, without all respect or motive of Love and Duty, is the Obedience of an Hireling; not that which acknowledgeth the tie of Obedience absolute, and the Reward no otherwise due than of his Fathers free love and bounty, as every true child of God doth, and ought to do.

They object again that of the Apostle, 1 Cor. 13. 5. Charity seeks not her own: now say they, the works of God's children must proceed from love and charity. I answer; What though Charity seeks not her own? may not yet a charitable man so much as look or hope for his own, or have an eye to what is promised him? But this place is altogether misapplied and abused: For that property of Charity now mentioned (as some also of the rest in that Chapter) concerns only our Charity towards men, and not our Charity towards God; the meaning thereof being, That a Charitable man will sooner lose his own, than by seeking or contending for it break the band of Charity. And this may suffice for my third Observation.

Now I come to the fourth and my last Use of this Text, which I told you in the beginning followed thereupon; namely, That if Almighty God remember them who have done good deeds unto his House and the Offices thereof; much more ought we, who are partakers of the comfort and benefit of such Bounty, to remember and honour them with a thankful celebration of their Names.

IV:

DISCOURSE XXXV.

DEUTERONOMIE 33. 8.

And of Levi he said, Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy Holy One.

THIS Verse is part of that Blessing wherewith Moses the man of God blessed the children of Israel before his death; and These words are part of the Blessing of Levi; a Blessing which much exceeds those that went before it, and is far above all that come after it. For as S. Paul Heb. 7. 6. proves Melchisedec to be greater than Abraham, because he blessed Abraham; and worthier than Levi, because he tithed Levi in the loins of Abraham; Vers. 9. So may we say of this Blessing, that it is the greatest of all, because it is the Blessing of him who by his Office was to bless all the rest; and the worthiest of all, because by it the party blessed is enabled to bless the rest of his Brethren. Ἀεὶ δὲ ὅ ὑπάρχει ἑκάστου, ἐκείνο μᾶλλον ὑπάρχει, Always that by which another is, that thing it self is more than the other.

In the Words themselves we will consider first The subject blessed, and then The quality of the Blessing it self. The subject blessed is expressed both by name, and by description: by name, Levi; by description, God's Holy One. The Blessing it self is contained in words few, but for substance plentiful; Urim and Thummim; nay more than so, Thy Thummim and Thy Urim: that we might know whence this Blessing comes; how that it is θεῖον τι and χάρισμα θεῶν, a Divine thing, the gift of God, who is the Author and Giver of all good things. And of Levi he said, Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy Holy One.

To

Deut. 33. 8.

To begin first with the subject, Levi. What Levi was is so well known, that it were needless to say much to make it better known. Only this, that Levi was the Tribe which God had especially bequeathed to himself, and set apart for the ministry of the Altar. Concerning whose Name (though Observations drawn from Names are like an House raised upon the Sand; yet because of old, and among the Patriarchs, Names were given by the spirit of Prophecy,) it will not be altogether unworthy our speculation to remember why this Name Levi was imposed, which we shall see as truly verified in that Function to which God did advance his posterity, as it was by his Mother firstly given to himself upon the good hope she conceived at his birth.

Gen. 29. 34.

For Levi signifies a Conjoyners, an Uniter, or maker of Union; For thus said Leah when she bare him, Now at this time will my husband be joyned to me, because I have born a third son: And she called his name Levi. She called him Levi; but (for ought we read) in regard of her self she found him no Levi as she hoped: but she prophesied of that sacred Office whereby all the sons of Levi became Conjoyners, became makers of Union (not between Jacob and Leah, but) between God and Man, between Christ and his Spouse, between the spiritual Jacob and his deformed Leah, For, as truly as ever Leah spake, might the Church then, and may the Church now, affirm, when she hath born these sons unto her husband, Now I know, my heavenly husband, my Lord, my God, will be joyned to me; because I have born him these

* 2 Cor. 5. 18.

בני לויה, these sons of Union, these * Ministers of reconciliation. Plato could say, A Priest was φιλίας θεών & ανθρώπων δημιουργός, A friend-maker between God and men: Nay, his whole Office is nothing but the service of peace, and that not only between

† John 4. 20.

God and man, but between man and his brother; For how can he love God, who loves not his brother? or how can he be at peace with God, who is at variance with his brother? Needs must he therefore that is Minister of the one be Minister of the other also: and he that is so, nay he alone that is so, is a right Levite and a true son of Union.

Matt. 5. 9.

How unworthy then of this holy Name, how unworthy to succeed in the holy Order of Levi, are those who are Ministers of division; who by their lives, doctrine, example, or any other way divide God and his Church, and the Church within it self; who neither have peace with God themselves, nor will suffer others to have it; who neither agree themselves with others, nor suffer others to agree among themselves? Beati pacifici, Blessed are the Peace-makers, especially in the sons of Peace. This Christ prayed for in his Aposiles, Joh. 17. 11. saying, Holy Father, keep them through thy name, that they may be one as we are one. Christ is so one, that he makes all one who are one in him; so should every son of Levi be one. In sum, the Ministers of God are called Angels, and therefore should sing a song like unto that song of Angels, Glory be to God on high, peace on earth, and good will amongst men. That Church which hath such a Levite, such a Minister, such a son of Union, may truly take up the words of Micah, Judg. 17. 13. and say, Now I know the Lord will do me good, seeing I have a Levite to my Priest.

Luke 2. 14.

AND thus much of the Name Levi: Now I come unto the Tribe it self; concerning which there may be two things asked. First, Why God did confine the Priesthood to one Tribe alone, and not suffer it to be common to all, as it was before the Law, and is now since the Law. Secondly, Why Levi was chosen to this holy Function rather than any other Tribe.

To the first, Why God did limit this holy Function to one Tribe only, some of the Jews make this answer; That one of the sons of Israel with his whole posterity was due unto God by vertue of Jacob's Vow, Gen. 28. 20, &c. which was, that if God would be with him in his journey, and bring him back again unto his Father's house, Of all that thou shalt give me, saith he, I will give the Tenth unto thee. Now because God gave children, as well as bees and sheep, therefore they also must fall within compass of his Vow. And that there might be no difficulty about tithing the odd children, because there were more than Ten, they devise this way to make all even. For first, say they, the full number of Jacob's children was fourteen, because that Joseph's two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, go in the number of Jacob's sons: For Jacob (Gen. 48. 5, 6.) said unto Joseph, Thy two sons which were born unto thee in the land of Egypt before I came into Egypt, shall be mine, as Reuben and Simeon are mine; but thy lineage which thou begettest after them, shall be thine. Now of these fourteen, four were the Lord's by his right unto the first-born; for so many there were which first opened the womb of their four Mothers, Rachel and Leah, Bilhah and Zilpah, Jacob's two Wives and and his two Concubines. Now of the remainder, being ten, one falls to Gods share for Tithe, as being comprized within their Father's Vow.

Deut. 33. 8.

This reason, though it be as you see handsomly framed, yet hath no great likelihood, because men use not to be tithed; and therefore this extent of the Vow is beyond the intent of the Vower. And whereas they urge the words, Of all that thou shalt give me; they seem to forget that God gave unto Jacob, besides his sons, great store of man-servants and maid-servants; and yet we read not that any of these were dedicate unto God, or that he challenged any of their posterity.

The only or chief Cause (if I am not deceived) why God restrained the Priestly Function to one Tribe, was for a sign and band of the restraint of his Church to one People: For as the Church cannot be without the sacred Function of the Ministry; so likewise the condition thereof must follow the condition of the Ministry. As long therefore as none could be a Priest but of the Tribe of Levi, so long there could be no Church but of that people whereof Levi was a Tribe. A point of sacred Policy so to order the choice of Ministers as shall be most fit to uphold the present state of an established Church.

The other Question we propounded was, Why God chose Levi before any other Tribe. And of this many Reasons may be given. As

1. For Moses his sake, whom God would honour by advancing the house of his Father to the highest pitch of dignity that mortal man could attain to. For what greater honour than to be Embassador of the Lord of Hosts, to be admitted unto the inspection of his most secret Mysteries, to be God's  $\kappa\lambda\eta\rho\omicron\varsigma$ , his proper and peculiar portion? would God they either knew or believed this who think their house disgraced, and their blood stained, if any of their Kin become of the Clergy. It was not so in God's opinion, no nor Moses his neither; for had it been, Levi of all the Tribes should not have been God's Holy one.

2. The second Reason was the Nobility of this Tribe; for Levi was enobled both generally, as being the son of a lawful Wife, and not the son of an Handmaid; and specially, as being of kin to Moses the Prince of the Congregation: In the first respect he was nobler than many of his brethren; in the second, more noble than any of them. This example of God's own choice of men for his holy Service if we would look unto, we would not sin the sin of Jeroboam*, to make Priests almost of no other but of the lowest of the People. I speak not only of the lowest for external condition, but of the lowest for the gifts of their Mind. For I know it is true which the Virgin hath in her Magnificat, Luke 1. 52. That God often puts down the mighty from their seats, and exalteth them of low degree: I know it is true that he often filleth the hungry with good things, and the rich he sends empty away, v. 53. But we should know that whensoever we offer unto him, he requireth the best thing in our hands; and therefore for this worthy Calling we are to give unto him, as far as may be, the worthiest among the sons of men.

3. Another Reason why God chose this Tribe afore other, may be the smallness thereof, being not above the sixtieth part of the people: A number which God in his wisdom saw fit for that Church, as being both sufficient for instructing the people, and discharge of the duties of their order, and not too great to live of God's ordinary, his Tithes and the other Offerings of the Altar; whereas the least of the other Tribes were as big as three of it.

4. But the last Reason, and as it seems one of the chiefest, is that which Moses intimates in the very verse following my Text, speaking thus of Levi, That he said unto his Father and to his Mother, I have not seen them; neither did he acknowledg his brethren, nor knew his own children; but observed God's word and kept his Covenant. In which words Moses alludes unto their forward zeal to avenge the Lord of the people which worshipped the golden Calf, Exod. 32. 26, &c. where it is said, that Moses stood in the gate of the camp and cried, Whosoever is on the Lord's side, let him come unto me. And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves unto him. Then said Moses, thus saith the Lord God of Israel, Put every man his sword by his side, and go in and out from gate to gate throughout the Camp, and slay every man his brother, and every man his companion, and every man his neighbour. And the children of Levi did according to the word of Moses, &c. For Moses had said. (so it follows in the Text) Consecrate your selves unto the Lord this day, even every man upon his son, and upon his brother, that there may be given you a blessing this day. This Blessing here spoken of is our Urim and Thummim, the blessing of Sacred Order. So bountifully did God reward them who were so forward to be on his side when Moses called them, that himself vouchsafed to call them unto his side for ever.

Whence,

* 1 King. 12. 31
 ῥεῖα δ' ἀείχηνον μυνέει.
 καὶ ἀδύλον ἀείρει
 Ζεὺς ὑψίστης

Deut. 33. 8.

Whence, first we may learn whom we are chiefly to prefer unto this holy Function, namely, Those who are zealous for the Lord of Hosts, who prefer the glory of God above all worldly respects whatsoever. This got Phinehas the son of Eleazar the High-Priesthood; this got all the sons of Levi the guerdon of Urim and Thummim, the blessing of Holy Orders.

Secondly, We may see by the advancement of this Tribe, how merciful our God is. We know that Levi's fury did once as much offend him as his sons zeal now pleased him; and yet for this one action he forgot the sin of their Father in the bloody slaughter of the Sichemites: He remembered not the curse of Jacob, Into their secret let not my soul come: My glory be not thou joyned with their assembly. Cursed be their wrath, for it was fierce; and their rage, for it was cruel, Gen. 49. 6, 7. Nay he turned the very curse of Jacob into a blessing, by dividing them in Jacob, and scattering them in Israel. Here Mercy and Truth met both together, and Justice and Peace kissed each other.

Exod. 23. 5, 6.

Lastly, Here God verified his own description of himself, That though he be a jealous God, and visits the sins of the Father upon the children unto the third and fourth generation; yet he is also a merciful God, and shews mercy even unto the thousandth generation of them that love him and keep his Commandments.

A N D thus have you seen why of Levi Moses said this Blessing, And of Levi he said. Now I come to The description of this blessed Tribe, in these words, God's Holy one: Let thy Urim and thy Thummim be with thy Holy one. How is Levi here called Holy? how is this Title given to him above the rest of his Brethren? Are not all the Lord's people holy? Certainly whatsoever is meant hereby, it is something more specially belonging to Levi than to any other Tribe. Which that we may the better find, we must take notice of a Threefold Holiness; Essential, Habitual, Relative. Essential Holiness is the Holiness of God, all one with God himself, and this is a glorious Holiness: Who (saith Moses) is like unto thee, O Lord, among the Gods? who is like unto thee, glorious in holiness? Exod. 15. 11. Habitual I call an Inherent Holiness, such as is the holiness of righteous men, integrity of life, or righteous holiness, whereof Abraham, Job, David, and all the Patriarchs are called Saints and Holy men. This is that which the Greeks call ἁγιότης, the Latines sanctimonia. Relative Holiness I define a special relation, or relation of peculiarity which a thing hath unto God, either in regard of propriety of possession, or speciality of presence. That which is holy after this manner the Greeks call ἅγιον, the Latines sacrum. The first of these three is proper to God alone, for he only is essentially holy. The second is proper to reasonable creatures; for they are only habitually holy, or endued with holy qualities. But the last is common to all manner of things; For all things animate or inanimate are capable of relative holiness or peculiarity towards God; Persons, Things, Times, Places. Persons; So the Nazarites of the Law are called holy: thus was Sampson, thus was Samuel holy from their Mother's womb. Things; So the Offerings of the Law, yea and of the Gospel too, are holy things: The Censers of Korah and his company were holy, because (saith the Text) they offered them before the Lord. Times; So the Sabbath-day and other Festival days are holy days. Places; So the Temple of the Lord is an holy Place; Mount Sion an holy Mount; yea the ground about the Bush where God appeared to Moses is called Holy ground. And of these four; Persons, Things, and Times are holy, because of God's peculiar propriety in them, in that they are his Persons, his Things, and his Times: But Places are holy in another regard, because of God's special manner of Presence in them.

Num. 16. 38.

Exod. 4. 5.

Now let us see in which of all these three ways Levi may be said to be holy. Essentially holy he cannot be, for he was not God, but the holy one of God. Habitually holy the event shews he was not more than the rest, though he should have been. The Tribe of Levi was always Tribus sacra, holy unto the Lord, but was not always righteous before the Lord. It was not always true of Levi, that he walked before God in peace and equity, and turned many from iniquity; but often, yea too often, they were gone out of the way, and caused many to stumble at or in the Law. Phinehas the son of Eli was not like Phinehas the son of Aaron. Annas and Caiaphas high Priests, as holy as any for their order, as unholy as any in life and conversation.

Mal. 2. 6.

Vcrf. 8.

* Num. 8. 10, 11, 13.

It should therefore seem that Levi should be only called Holy by a Relative holiness; namely, because he was God's peculiar one, because his \ offered* one, because his peculiar of peculiars; that is, his peculiar Tribe of his peculiar people: for in this Levi had a priviledg above the rest, in the other none. And this Ezra gives unto him chap.

chap. 8. 28. when he delivered unto the Levites the holy vessels, Ye are holy (saith he) unto the Lord, and these vessels are holy also, that is, Ye are holy as the Vessels are: for he saith not, they were holy before the Lord; for so he had meant holy in life: but holy unto the Lord, קדש ליהוה, which always implies a Relative Holiness. Deut. 33. 8

But though this be true that Levi was Holy after this manner, yet the word which in my Text is turned Holy, seems scarce to admit of this construction: for the word here used is not קדוש, but חסיד, which signifies favourable and gracious, and in Religion charitable and godly: All which leans to an Habitual, not to a Relative holiness. But because Levi was not in this sort holy above other, as I said before; it may seem therefore it should be thus construed; that חסיד is taken Actively or Passively: Actively, it signifies favourable, benigne and gracious; Passively, he that is favoured or graced. And thus Junius expounds חסיד in this place, virum tuum quem beneficio prosequeris, Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy favoured one; not ἀσθενήσαντος, as the Septuagint, but χαριζομένου σου. Which word and sense the Angel useth in his salutation to the blessed Virgin, Χαίρε χαριζομένην, Hail thou highly-favoured one; Luke 1. 28. Hail thou whom God hath especially graced to be the Mother of his only Son. So Levi is here described to be one upon whom God bestowed a special favour or grace, a special חסד or χάρισμα, the grace of the holy Ministry: for so S. Paul calls this power of Order a grace or favour, χάρις & χάρισμα as Eph. 3. 8. Unto me, who am less than the least of all Saints, is this grace given, to preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ. And of Timothy the same Apostle speaketh, Neglect not that χάρισμα or grace in thee, which was given by prophecy with the imposition of hands. 1 Tim. 4. 14. With this grace was Levi graced, with this favour was he highly favoured, and well might be called יהוה חסיד איש God's highly favoured one.

And thus the issue will be all one, חסיד in this sense will fall out to be God's holy one in the last sense: For to be especially favoured of God is to have a special relation to God-ward, to be God's more especially; and this is to be holy with a Relative holiness. Now which soever of these we take to be here meant, we see that that is in special given to Levi, which otherwise was common to all the other Tribes. If you take it in the first sense, for Holiness in life, as it were to put Levi in mind how it behoved him above all to be holy; were not all the Tribes as holy as Levi? and yet Levi alone is called God's holy one. If you take it in the second sense, for a Relative holiness; were not all the Tribes of Israel thus holy unto God? were not all his own people, his peculiar people, and a chosen Nation? and yet Levi alone is called God's holy one. If you take it in the last sense, for God's favoured one; were not all Israel a Nation favoured of God above all Nations? and yet Levi alone is especially called God's favoured one.

1. We therefore whom God hath set apart to minister about holy things, we who are holy unto the Lord, and God's own in a peculiar manner, we who have a special relation unto God, we who have received a special favour from God; We must remember we owe a special thankfulness unto him. We who are God's peculiar, must demean our selves peculiarly both toward God and man: We are unto God as other men are not, and therefore may not always do as other men do: We cannot reason from others to our selves, no not in things of themselves lawful, Why should not we do as every man may do? For all that is lawful for others will not be seemly for us; for we are the household-servants of the most High, we are special men, of whom God requires a special demeanour in life and actions.

This was one cause why God enjoined the Jews so many peculiar Rites and special Observations differing from the fashions of other people, because they were his peculiar people, an holy Nation; because they were toward him as no other was, though all the world were His; and therefore he would have their manners differ from the fashion of all other Nations, as a badge and acknowledgment of that special relation they had to him above others. Levit. 20. 24, 25, 26. I (saith God) am the Lord your God, which have separated you from other people: Ye shall therefore put difference between clean beasts and unclean, unclean fowls and clean, &c. And ye shall be holy unto me: For I the Lord am holy, and have severed you from other people, that you should be mine. This was also a cause why God restrained the Priests of the Law from that which was lawful for the rest of the people: They might drink no Wine; they might not mourn for their kin: they might not marry a divorced woman: the reason of all this is given, Levit. 21. because they were holy unto the Lord; that is, with a Relative holiness, as being God's men in a special manner, and therefore he required they should specially demean themselves in their lives. These Observations indeed were Ceremonial, but there is something

Deut. 33. 8.
1 Tim. 3. 7.
* Verſ. 2.

Moral in them. And therefore in the New Testament we hear of ſome ſpecial things required in a Miniſter; as that he ſhould have a good report of thoſe who were without: this was not required in every one who was to be a Chriſtian. Again, S. Paul requires in a Biſhop, that * he ſhould be the huſband of one wife: this was not in thoſe times required of every one who was to be a Chriſtian. I ſhall not need to tell you what ſpecial demeanor the ancient Church bound her Clergy unto: But it came to paſs at laſt this Rule was over-practiſed by them; for hence it was that a Biſhop might not marry at all, that Priests and Deacons might not marry being once in Orders, and at laſt marriage was quite forbidden them all. Thus our Fathers erred on the right hand, but we go aſide on the left: They reſtrained their Clergy from that which was lawful for and beſeemed all men; we think almoſt that lawful for us which is lawful for no man; at leaſt we think that which any man may do, we may do alſo. But there is a golden Mean between theſe Extreame; happy is he that finds it, for he alone ſhall demean himſelf like himſelf, like a Levite, like God's holy one.

1 Ep. ch. 5. 3.

2. From this ſpecial title given to Levi, we may note how cauſleſſy ſome are offended to hear thoſe who miniſter about holy Things diſtinguiſhed from others by names of holineſs and peculiarity; to hear them called Clerus, and Clerici, The Clergy, as it were the Heritage of God; for ſo ſaith S. Jerome, Clerus dicimur, quia ſors Dei ſumus, We are called Clerus, or the Clergy, becauſe we are the lot and portion of God. But, ſay they, are not the People alſo God's Heritage? Doth not S. Peter call them κλήρον, when he forbids Presbyters κατακυριεύειν τῷ κλήρον to domineer over God's heritage? I confeſs he doth: But thoſe who reaſon after this manner come too near the language of Dathan and Abiram, Numb. 16. 3. Moſes and Aaron, you take too much upon you; Is not all the Congregation holy, every one of them? and is not the Lord among them? why then liſt ye your ſelves above the Congregation of the Lord? If this reaſoning had been good, wherein had theſe Rebels offended? It could not be denied them, that all the People were an holy People; for they might have alledged the teſtimony of God himſelf, avouching them to be his peculiar People and an holy People unto the Lord their God: All the earth (ſaith he, Exod. 19. 5.) is mine; but you ſhall be my κλήρον, my peculiar people, a Kingdom of Priests, and an holy Nation.

Lev. 25. 23.
* Verſ. 10.

Of the XI. degrees of the Holineſs of Places in the land of Iſrael, ſee Talmud in Kelim, l. c. i. Maymon. in Beth. habbecchir. h.
* Num. 8. 10, 11, 13.

But it might be answered them, Though all the people were God's peculiar people, and therefore his holy ones; yet Levi was his peculiar Tribe of his peculiar people, and therefore comparatively his only holy one. All the Land of Canaan was the Lord's, The Land is mine, ſaith he, and therefore it could not be alienate beyond the year of * Jubilee; and yet for all this there were ſome parts of the Land ſpecially called Holy unto the Lord. All the increaſe of corn, all the increaſe of wine, all the fruit of the field was the Lord's; and yet the Offerings alone were called Holy unto the Lord. God himſelf calls them his κλήρον, his inheritance, and therefore gave them unto that Tribe alone, which alone he had made his κλήρον, the Tribe of his inheritance: So the * offered Tribe lived of God's offerings, the holy Tribe on the holy things. Again, why may we not call our Clergy God's inheritance, when God himſelf calls the Levites his Levites? Thou ſhalt (ſaith he, Num. 8. 14.) ſeparate the Levites from among the children of Iſrael, and the Levite ſhall be mine; that is, my κλήρον, my Clergy. Why may not we call the Miniſters of Chriſt his κλήρον, or inheritance, when he himſelf calls them the gift his Father gave him out of the world? for ſo he ſaith, Joh. 17. 6. I have declared thy name unto the men thou gaveſt me out of the world; thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me: and again, ver. 11. Holy Father, keep them in thy name, even them whom thou haſt given me. If you ſay he ſpeaks here of all his Elect, the words following v. 12. prove the contrary; for thoſe (ſaith he) whom thou haſt given me, I have kept, and none of them is loſt but the child of perdition. Here he plainly affirms, he loſt one of thoſe his Father gave him; wherefore he ſpeaks not of his Elect ones, for thoſe no man can take out of his hands. Again, ver. 18. As thou didſt ſend me into the world, ſaith he, ſo I ſent them into the world: but I hope all the Elect are not ſent as Chriſt was ſent by his Father. I conclude therefore, So long as God in the Law ſays ſpecially of the Levites, They are mine; So long as Chriſt in the Goſpel of his Apoſtles, They are mine, O Father, which thou haſt given me out of the world; it is neither arrogancy nor injury to ſtile thoſe who miniſter about holy things by the name of κλήρον, δεῦν, the inheritance of the Lord.

W H A T LEVI was, and what is meant by this Title [ God's Holy one ] we have now ſhewed ſufficiently. It remains we ſhould come unto the words containing the Bleſſing it ſelf, which is called Urim and Thummim: the words themſelves ſignifie Light and Perfection, Illumination and Integrity: good endowments certainly, whoſoever ſhall enjoy them.

But

But because they are not only Appellative words, but also Proper names of certain things, we must enquire further what is meant by them; and that in a twofold consideration. First, specifically and properly, as they are names of certain things belonging in special unto the High Priest: Then generally, as they are applied by Moses unto the whole Tribe of Levi. The first again shall be twofold, What they were in the High Priest personally; or what they signified in him typically, himself being also a Type.

For the first, What is meant by these things as they belong unto the High Priest personally, is a matter full of controverſie; and therefore that we may the better proceed, we will first ſee the Generals wherein all or the moſt agree; and after come unto the particulars wherein they diſagree.

The first wherein all agree is, that this Urim and Thummim was ſomething put in the Breast-plate which was faſtned to the Ephod over againſt the Heart of the High Priest. And thus much the Scripture witneſſeth, Exod. 28. 30. where God ſaith to Moses, And thou ſhalt put in the Breast-plate of Judgment the Urim and the Thummim; and they ſhall be on Aaron's heart when he goeth in before the Lord. And for this cauſe, as moſt think, was the Breast-plate made double, that the Urim and Thummim might be enveloped therein.

The ſecond thing wherein all agree is, That this Urim and Thummim was a kind of Oracle whereby God gave answer to thoſe that enquired of him; and from hence the Septuagint call the whole Breast-plate λογεῖον, which ſome turn Rationale, but might more truly be turned Orationale; for an Oracle is as it were λογεῖον περὶ θεοῦ, the voice of God, though this Voice or Revelation were of divers kinds; for at ſundry times and in divers manners (ſaith S. Paul) God ſpake in old time to our Fathers. The Jews therefore make four kinds of Divine Revelation. Firſt, נבואה or Prophecy, which was by Dreams and Viſions. The ſecond רוח הקדש The Holy Ghoſt, as was in Job, David, and others. The third Urim and Thummim, which was the Oracle. The fourth כח קול a Voice from heaven; which was uſual in the ſecond Temple after the Oracle had ceaſed: as Matt. 3. 17. at Chriſt's Baptiſm there came a Voice from heaven, ſaying, This is my beloved ſon, in whom I am well pleaſed; and Job. 12. 28. when Chriſt ſaid, Father, glorifie thy name; There came a Voice from heaven (like * thunder) ſaying, I have both glorified it, and will glorifie it again.

But to return again to our purpoſe; That Urim and Thummim was an Oracle of God, beſides the conſent of Jews and others, it is plain by Scripture. Num. 27. when God had commanded Moses to put his hands upon Joſhua, and to ſet him over the congregation in his ſtead; he addes Verſ. 21. And he (that is, Joſhua) ſhall ſtand before Eleazar the Priest, who ſhall aſk counſel for him by the judgment of Urim before the Lord. So 1 Sam. 23. when David was to aſk counſel of the Lord, he called for the Ephod, wherein the Oracle was: and whereas before he had once or twice aſked counſel of the Lord concerning Keilah, to prevent the objection how the Lord answered, it follows in the next by way of a Prolepiſis, That Abiathar then Priest, when he fled to David to Keilah, brought the Ephod with him, verſ. 6. Laſtly, in the ſecond of Ezra, when certain of the Priests which returned from Captivity could not find their names written in the Genealogies, it is ſaid verſ. 63. that the Tirſhatha commanded they ſhould not eat of the moſt holy things, till there roſe up a Priest with Urim and Thummim, that is, till God ſhould by Oracle reveal whether they were Priests or no: whereby it alſo appears that this Oracle had then ceaſed.

And for more light to that we have in hand, it will not be amiſs to obſerve, that Teraphim among the Idolaters was answerable to the Urim and Thummim of the holy Patriarchs. Both were ancient: For * Rachel is ſaid to have ſtolen away her Father's Teraphim: and Urim and Thummim ſeems to have been uſed among the Patriarchs before the Law was given, becauſe the making of it is not ſpoken of among other things of the Ephod; and becauſe God ſpeaks of it to Moses demonſtratively, האורים והתמים the Urim and the Thummim.

Both alſo were Oracles: For the Jews and others agree, Teraphim were ſmall Images made under a certain conſtellation, which they uſed to conſult both in things doubtful and things future, ſuppoſing they had a power to this effect received from heavenly influence; much like to Puppets made of wax and like matter, which our Wizzards ſtill uſe unto like purpoſe. And therefore Ezek. 21. 21. we read that the King of Babylon among other divinations conſulted alſo of Teraphim: And the King of Babel (ſaith the Text) ſtood at the head of the two ways, to uſe divination; he conſulted with Teraphim, he looked in the liver. And Zech. 10. 2. ſurely (ſaith the Text) התרפים דברו און The Teraphims have ſpoken vanity, and the Soothſayers have ſeen a lie, and the Dreamers have told a vain thing.

Deut. 33. 8

Hebr. i. i.

* Verſ. 29.

How Teraphim answered to Urim and Thummim.
* Gen. 31. 19.

Exod. 28. 6, &c.
Verſ. 30.

Deut. 33.8.

Besides, from this like use of Teraphim with the holy Urim and Thummim, we may read Ephod and Teraphim joyned both together as things of like kind. As Hosea 3.4. The children of Israel (saith the Lord) shall remain many days without a King, and without a Prince, and without an Offering, and without an Image, and without an Ephod and Teraphim. Yea of so near a nature was this Teraphim unto the Urim and Thummim, that Micah, he that had an house of Gods, when he had made an Ephod, because he had no Urim and Thummim, he put Teraphims instead thereof; as we may gather Judg. 17. 5. And in ch. 18. we may see also that when the children of Dan enquired of the Lord concerning their journey, it pleased him to give answer by the Idolish Teraphim. So we may gather likewise that the Israelites after Jeroboam's schism, having no Urim and Thummim, used Teraphim in the Ephod; and therefore it is that Hosea threatens that they shall be without Ephod and Teraphim.

HAVING hitherto shewn how far it is agreed about Urim and Thummim, in the next place the points of difference ought to be considered; which are either about the matter whereof it was made, or the manner how God answered by it.

For the Matter; Some will have it to be nothing else but the writing or carving of the great name Jehovah, which was put within the folding of the Breast-plate; and that it was called Urim and Thummim, because by the knowledge of the mystery of Jehovah in the Trinity our minds are enlightened and our understandings made perfect.

מאיר דבריו ומתמים
את דבריו
* Exod. 28. 15.

Some other there are of the same opinion, but they will have it called Urim and Thummim, because by the virtue of that name written the High Priest was enabled to return clear and perfect answers. And moreover they say the Breast-plate was called השן משפט * the Breast-plate of judgment, because by it the Lord gave as it were sentence and judgment what was to be done in hard and doubtful matters. And this is the opinion of Rabbi Salomon.

Some others will have it called the Breast-plate of judgment, because that by it the judgment of the Judges, if it were amiss, was hereby as it were pardoned; because the High Priest was to bear the sins of the People. The Authors of this opinion are mentioned by R. Salomon.

מעשה אומן

opus artificis.

מעשה שמים

opus celi, (1. Det.)

Kimchi in Rad.

לא נתברר
אצלנו מה
הוא

* In Legem.

Aben Ezra saith it was so called, because by it the judgment and decrees of the Lord were known: and he thinks also that Urim and Thummim were something * made by the hand of the craftsman.

But Nachmanides and R. Salomon say, it was * opus divinum, and given to Moses in the Mount; or at least that God shewed him how to make it.

Some think it was nothing but the Stones in the Breast-plate, by the shining whereof God did annuere, favourably answer and grant; by the not shining, abnuere, disallow and refuse. But Kimchi confutes this, because it is spoken of as a differing thing in the same place where the stones are described: But he himself says, it is not certainly known what the Urim and Thummim were.

* Nachmanides saith it was certain sacred names, by the virtue whereof the letters of the Breast-plate were enlightened and ordered so that the Priest might read the answer of God: and that that which caused shining was called Urim; and that which made them legible, Thummim.

The sum of these Opinions laid together is, That this Oracle was either the Stones of the Breast-plate themselves, or something in the folding of the Breast-plate, which by a divine virtue did cause the Stones to shine, and by the letters of the Tribes names in them as it were to express the answer of God.

Talmud Babylon. in Foma,
c. 7. Vid etiam
Abarben. in
Exod. 28.

For concerning the Manner of this Oracle, the Talmudists report thus much: First, No private man might consult with Urim and Thummim, but either the King, or אב בית דין he that was chief of the Consistory, or בית דין the Consistory or Judges themselves; and that in matters difficult and of great importance.

Vid. Tal. Hie-
rol. Foma in Gemara; & Maimonid. in Hal. Cele bam-mikdash cap.
10.

קול נמוך

Maimon.

* Vid. Talmud
Babylon. Foma
c. 7.

Secondly, השואל he that enquired must stand with his face looking full upon הנשאל the Priest whom he asked; and the Priest stood with his eyes fixed upon the Ark, or upon his breast (say some) where was the Urim and Thummim.

Thirdly, The voice was to be a * soft still voice, and * not above one thing to be asked at one time: But if they asked two things at once, the answer was only unto the first; but in case of extremity, unto both. And such was David's case, 1 Sam. 30. 8. when he asked concerning the Amalekites who had burnt Ziklag, shall I follow this company, (saith he) and shall I overtake them? The Lord answers, Follow, for thou shalt surely overtake them, and recover all without fail.

Now

Now if you ask how the Priest knew the answer of the Lord: First, you must remember there were twelve stones in the Breast-plate, and in those stones the twelve names of the Sons of Israel, either set or carved; and that there might be a full Alphabet of letters, there was also, * say they, written upon the Breast-plate, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and these two words שכטי ישרון, the Tribes of Jeshurun or Israel. Now when the Lord answered, the letters expressing the answer, by the divine virtue of the Urim and Thummim became בולטות, i. prominentes; that is, they shewed forth themselves with a splendor, that the Priest might read the answer of God. As 2 Sam. 2. 1. when David asked the Lord האעלה shall I ascend into any of the Cities of Judah? the letter y in Shimeon, l in Levi, and h in Jehudah, put themselves forth, or shone forth with a splendor, that the Priest might read עלה Ascend. Though some of the Jews say the letters became מצטרפות, that is, joynd themselves together and made a word: which as I cannot conceive how it should be, so I think it less probable.

Deut. 33. 8.

* Vid. 3 alkut
ex libro Siphre, & Talm. Babylon Foma.

And thus hitherto have you heard the diverse Opinions of the matter and manner of this Oracle of Urim and Thummim. Here is variety enough; I leave to every one to make his own choice which he will believe: only give me leave to add thus much in way of censure of them, which is, That they all seem against reason and likelihood to confound Urim with Thummim, in making them one and the same thing called by diverse names in regard of diverse effects and uses: which I can the less believe, because I find Urim alone used in matter of consultation with God, whereby it seems Thummim had some other use. In the 27. of Num. 21. Moses commands Joshua in all business to consult the High Priest by the judgment of Urim before the Lord; but no speech of Thummim. Again, 1 Sam. 28. 6. it is said that saul asked counsel of Lord, when he was to go against the Philistines; but the Lord answered him not, neither by dreams, nor by Urim, nor by the Prophets. Here also is Urim spoken of, but no word of Thummim.

If I may therefore speak what I think, I would say, That Urim and Thummim were a twofold Oracle, and for a twofold use. And that Urim was the Oracle, or part of the Oracle, whereby God gave answer to those who enquired of him in hard and doubtful cases; therefore called Urim or Lights, because as ignorance is called darkness, so is all knowledg a kind of illumination or enlightning; and that which bringeth knowledg is fitly called a Light, because it dispels the darkness of our minds.

But Thummim was that Oracle or mean whereby the High Priest knew whether God did accept the Sacrifice or no; therefore called Thummim, that is, Integrity, because those whose Sacrifice God accepted, were accounted Thummim, that is, just and righteous in the eyes of God; because their Sacrifice was a shadow of Christ's Sacrifice, by acceptation whereof we are justified and made righteous before God. For without doubt the Patriarchs and Legal Church had some ordinary mean to know when their Sacrifice was accepted; else had they been behind the Gentiles, for they had a sign to know when they did Litare, that is, when their false Gods accepted their false sacrifice: and as the Devil was God's Ape in giving Oracles, so I verily believe he was in this also. Nay * Josephus expressly affirms it of the Jews, though for the particular I suppose he is mistaken: For he saith, that whensoever God did accept the Sacrifice, the Onyx-stone on the Priest's left shoulder shone with an admirable splendor; but this, saith he, ceased ἔτεσι διακοσίοις two hundred years before his time. And no wonder; for when the Sun of righteousness drew near unto his rising, those dimmer Urim and smaller stars must needs lose their light. Now that which Josephus affirms of the Onyx-stone on the left shoulder, I suppose was mistaken for the Thummim on the left part of the Breast-plate, * Aniquit.

Jud. lib. 3.
cap. 19.

And lastly, as I said before of Urim, so I think of Thummim, That it was in use among the Patriarchs of old; and that by some such means as this Abel knew that God accepted his Offering, and Cain that his was refused.

And thus much of Urim and Thummim considered Personally in the High Priest; now I come to consider it Typically: for as the High Priest himself was a Type of Christ, so must these Adjuncts of his also be Types of something in Christ. Which we shall not be long a finding out, if we remember again the signification of the words, and the use of the things themselves: Urim is Light and Illumination; Thummim Integrity and Perfection. By Urim the Jews were ascertained of the counsel and will of God; by Thummim of his favour and good will towards them. All this agrees to Christ both in himself, and in regard of us.

Deut. 33. 8.
Col. 2. 3.
* Heb. 1. 2.
John 1. 3.

In himself. His Breast is full of Urim, full of Light and Understanding: In him are hid all the Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledge, as S. Paul saith; He is the Wisdom of the Father * by which the world it self was made. His heart is also endowed with Thummim, with all kind of Perfections: He was conceived without Original sin, lived without Actual sin; fulfilled the whole Law of God, which is the Law of Thummim, the Law of all Perfection.

John 1. 9.
Vers. 5.

Thus to Christ himself agrees both Urim and Thummim: and so it doth also in regard of us; for he is an Urim and Thummim both to us and for us. To us he is Urim, a Light which enlightneth every one which cometh into the world: He is the Light which shone in darkness, but the darkness could not comprehend it: He was that Light by which the people (as it is said in Matthew 4. 16.) which sat in darkness saw great light. And of this Light John came to bear witness, that all might believe in him, John 1. 7. In sum, Christ is λογος & λογεον Patris, the Word and Oracle of his Father, by whom we know and learn the Father's will: for so S. John saith, ch. 1. 18. No man hath seen God at any time; the only-begotten Son who is in the bosom of the Father, he hath revealed him unto us.

Luke 2. 15.

Neither is Christ only an Urim, but also a Thummim to us. For as by Thummim the Jews were ascertained of God's favour toward them in accepting their Sacrifice; so by Christ coming in the flesh is revealed the unspeakable Mercy of God to Mankind, in that he would accept his Sacrifice once offered for the expiation of the sins of the whole world. This is that Good-will toward men which the Angels sung of as soon as he was born; Glory be to God on high, Peace on earth, and Good-will towards men: Yea, Glory be to God on high for this Peace on earth, and for this Good-will towards men.

Matt. 3. 7.

1 Cor. 1. 30.

Thus we see Christ an Urim and Thummim to us: now let us see how he is the same for us; and that is when his Wisdom and Righteousness is made ours by imputation. So his Urim becomes our Urim, his Thummim our Thummim; that is, his wisdom is made ours, his righteousness and favour with God made ours; for, This is my well-beloved Son (said a Voice from Heaven) in whom I am well pleased. In brief, S. Paul comprehends both these together, where he saith, Christ Jesus is made unto us Wisdom, Sanctification, and Redemption. And so, Lord, Let thy Urim and thy Thummim be with thy Holy One.

AND thus much for the special consideration of this Urim and Thummim, both Personally and Typically: Now I come unto the general meaning thereof, as it concerns not the High Priest only, but the whole Tribe of Levi; for this is the Blessing of that whole Tribe. And in this large respect the meaning cannot be Proper, for so it belongs unto the High Priest to have Urim and Thummim; nor Typical, because the Priests only, and not the under-Levites, were Types of Christ: but the sense must be Analogical, signifying some endowments common to all Levites which resemble the Urim and Thummim upon the Breast of the High Priest.

Now what these are the words themselves import: namely, Light of Understanding and knowledge, this is their Urim; and Integrity of life, this is their Thummim. The first makes them Doctores Teachers, the second Duces populi Guides and Leaders of the People. He that wants either of these two, wants the true ornament of Priesthood, the right character of a Levite.

Mal. 2. 6, 8.

For though these endowments may well beseech all the Tribes of Israel; yet Moses specially prays for them in Levi, because by him they were to come to all the rest: and the want of them in him could not but redound to all the rest: Ita populus, sicut sacerdos, such as the Priest is, such will the People be; the Priest cannot erre, but he causeth others to erre also; the Priest cannot sin, but he causeth others to sin also. And this is it that Malachi saith from the Lord unto the Priests of his time, Ye are gone out of the way, and have caused many to stumble at, or in, the Law. But the Levites of old, (saith the same Prophet) The Law of Truth was in their mouth, and iniquity was not found in their lips: they walked with God in peace and equity, and turned many from iniquity. Here you see when the Levites erre, the people erre also; when the Levites walk in equity, the people are turned from iniquity.

Matt. 5. 14.

Mal. 2. 7.

Acts 2. 3.

The Ministers of Christ must be Lux mundi, the light of the world; Vos estis lux mundi, Ye are the light of the world, Ye are the world's Urim, saith Christ unto his Apostles: For the lips of the Priest should preserve knowledge, and they should learn the Law at his mouth. This light of knowledge, this teaching knowledge is the Urim of every Levite; and therefore Christ when he inspired his Apostles with knowledge of heavenly mysteries, he sent a new Urim from above, even fiery tongues, tongues tongues of Urim from Heaven : He sent no fiery heads, but fiery tongues ; for it is not sufficient for a Levite to have his head full of Urim, unless his tongue be a candle to shew it unto others. There came indeed no Thummim from heaven, as there came an Urim ; for though the Apostles were secured from errors, they were not freed from sin : And yet we who are Levites must have such a Thummim as may be gotten upon earth, for S. Paul bids Titus in all things to shew himself an example of good works : Tit. 2. 7. and this is a Thummim of Integrity. Deut. 33. 8.

But besides this Thummim, the Ministers of the Gospel have received from God more especially another Thummim, like unto that which was proper to the High Priest ; namely, the power of binding and loosing, which is as it were a power of Oracle to declare unto the people the remission of their sins by the acceptance of Christ's Sacrifice. And this directly answers to Thummim in the first sense.

DISCOURSE XXXVI.

JEREMIAH 10. 11.

Thus shall ye say unto them, The Gods that made not the Heavens and the Earth ( even ) they shall perish from the Earth, and from under these Heavens.

TH E S E words are written in the Chaldee tongue, whereas the rest of the Prophecy is in the Hebrew : the reason whereof you shall then have, when we have first seen the Occasion, Coherence and Summe of the words ; which is as followeth. The Prophet having in the end of the last Chapter threatned the Jews and all the neighbouring Nations with captivity, Edom, Ammon, Moab, with the Arabians of the wilderness : in this Chapter leaving out the rest he singles out the Jews, to instruct them for their demeanour and carriage in their captivity ; to wit, that they should not learn the way of the Heathen whither they should be carried, that they should not be dismayed at the signs of Heaven, nor regard their Gods of Gold and Silver, which could do neither evil nor good. Verse 2.
Verse 5.

But lest they should think they had acquit themselves well if they abstained from what they should see the Heathen do ; he tells them, they must yet do more than this, they must make open profession against their Gods ; they must proclaim against their Idolatry and false worship : and therefore in the middle of his exhortation he enterlatheth these words in the Chaldee tongue, Thus shall ye say unto them, &c.

These words then contain a Proclamation which the Jews are enjoined from God to make against the Gods of the Gentiles, when they should be carried captive to Babylon : wherein are to be considered two things. 1. The Proclaiming it self. 2. The Summe of the Proclamation. The Proclaiming, in these words, Thus shall ye say unto them : The Summe of the Proclamation in these, The Gods which have not made the Heavens and the Earth, ( even ) they shall perish from the Earth, and from under these Heavens. In the Proclaiming are three things considerable. 1. The Persons Who. 2. The Persons To whom. 3. The manner, How. The Persons Who, in the word Ye ; that is, Ye Jews, who are the worshippers of the living God ; Ye captive Jews carried out of your own land, and living as slaves and vassals under your proud Lords the Babylonians ; Ye shall say unto them. 2. The Persons To whom ; To them : what Them ? even your Lordly Masters of Babylon ; Ye shall say unto them. 3. The manner, How ; Thus : that is, not in cryptick or mystical terms, or in your Hebrew mutterings, a language which they understand not ; but in the vulgar tongue of Babylon, in plain Chaldee, Thus shall ye say unto them, — &c. אלהיה רי-שמיא וארקא לא עברי, The Gods which have not made the Heavens and the Earth, &c.

In the second part, which I called The Summe of the Proclamation, are two things contained. 1. A description of false Gods, in these words, The Gods which made not the

Jer. 10. 11.
I.

the Heavens and the Earth. 2. Their doom, in these, They shall perish from the Earth, and from under these Heavens.

I shall speak of these in order; and first of the Persons who must make this Proclamation, namely, The Israelites: Ye Israelites; Ye Servants of the God of Heaven; Ye Sons of promise, and peculiar heritage of the Lord of hosts; Ye, upon whom the dew of grace is shed from heaven; Ye, to whom the most High hath given his Oracles, and made his Name known amongst you; Ye shall say unto them. Hence I observe,

That it is the office of every one who is a member of God's Church and the child of Grace, to endeavour to bring others to the knowledge of God and godliness. First, All things in nature desire and covet the propagation of that kind wherein themselves are ranked. The Fire is no sooner kindled, but presently it will turn all it lays hold upon into its own nature. As it is with the Fire of Nature, so must it be with the Fire of Grace: it is as possible for the Sun to want light, and the Fire to be without heat, as the Fire of Grace to be kindled in their hearts who endeavour not to inflame others with the same heavenly fire.

Do we not see every Citizen, every member of any Company or Society, how eagerly they desire, and how forward they are to further the enlargement of that Commonwealth and Society whereof they are members? What one nobly descended but desireth the enlargement of his house and kindred continually? What true English-man but desireth the encrease of our King's subjects, the amplifying of his dominions, and the Revenues of his Crown? We would account them monsters who should be otherwise affected; nay unworthy to live any longer as members, or enjoy the rights of Subjects. How canst thou then be a member of God's kingdom and not labour the encrease of God's Subjects? or how dardest thou usurp the name of a Christian, or think thy self a child of Grace, who endeavourest not the propagation of that heavenly Hierarchy whereof thou callest thy self a member? The woman of Samaria had no sooner found the Messias, but she runs and calls the whole City to be partakers of her happiness, John 4. 29. Christ bids Peter (Luke 22. 32.) When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.

S. Paul in nothing more expressed the Character of a Christian than in this: In the presence of Agrippa so fervent was his wish that all who heard him that day were even as he was: so great was his zeal, Rom. 9. 3. that so his loss might have been recompensed with the gaining of the whole Jewish Nation unto Christ, he could have been willing to be taken out of the Roll himself; I could wish (saith he) that my self were accursed from Christ, for my brethren my kinsmen according to the flesh.

The Devil was no sooner fallen, but he presently laboured to bring Man to the same ruine; nay the restless compasser still goeth about like a roaring Lion, seeking continually whom he may devour. His Instruments are like him. The sons of Belial, how busie are they in debauching others and making them like themselves? The Pharisees ran over sea and land, and spared no labour to bring numbers to their Sect, though but to make them, as Christ speaks, filiis Gehennæ, sons of Hell. The Jesuits how run they up and down into all corners of the world, from the Sun rising unto the going down thereof, to propagate their Heresies? Nay, the very Mahumetans run about the world to gain Profelytes for their beastly Prophet Mahomet. And shall the children of the Kingdom of Heaven only want this desire, this zeal, this endeavour? Impossible: And if any such seem to be, who do it not, surely they are but bastards, and such as God will never own to be his.

Some report of Mules and other such like creatures of Mongrel and mixt generation, that they beget not again: Even such Mongrels are those Christians who beget not unto God, who labour not the conversion and drawing of others unto Christ. We pray unto God every day, Let thy Kingdom come: Let that which is our daily prayer, be also our daily endeavour, even of all that say to God [Our Father;] else he will be no Father of ours. Indeed the Kingdom of God shall come in despite of the Devil and all his Regiment, but happy are those who further it: For those that turn many unto righteousness, shall shine as the stars in the firmament for evermore. Thus much shall suffice for the first Observation.

One thing more I have yet to observe from the condition of the persons to whom this word [Ye] hath relation: Ye shall say; namely, Ye captives, Ye whom the Lord your God hath given into the hands of your enemies, and made you as the off-scouring and refuse in the midst of the people; Ye whose City, the glory of the whole earth, is consumed with fire, whose Priests and Princes are all slain with the sword, and

Dan. 12. 3.

and the remnant of your people carried into a strange land; Ye a people overwhelmed with the floods of affliction, and (as far as the eye of flesh can see) forsaken of the God whom ye worshipped; Ye, even ye, shall say unto them, The Gods that made not the Heavens and the Earth, &c. Hence observe, No men so fit to glorifie God, whether by confession of the mouth or devotion of the heart, as his servants when they are humbled by affliction. The Reasons are plain: For

Jer. 10. 11.

1. It is the Love of the World which quencheth our love toward God. So long as the World pleaseth us, so long our Love to God is weak and feeble: but if once we are weaned from our delight and content in worldly things, then (if ever) we cleave firmly unto God; then are our hearts inflamed, and our whole spirit fixt in Heaven, which before stuck fast in earth. Even as the Fire in coldest weather scorseth most; so doth the zeal of God's servants burn most in the midst of affliction. The righteous are like the Palm-tree, which then riseth highest, when the burthen laid thereon weigheth heaviest: So it is with them, the weight of their affliction makes them rise up to Heaven.

2. In affliction only it will appear whether men feared and loved God for his own sake or no, or whether for some worldly respect only. It is the property of a true Christian not to disclaim God in affliction, as hypocrites do; but then to confess him most, when the world sees least cause why they should at all. Until the storms and winds came, the house built upon the sand seemed to stand as strong as that upon the rock.

Math. 7. 26.

This trial was it that Satan would have God put Job unto: Doth Job (saith he) fear God for nought? Hast thou not made a hedge about him, and about all he hath? &c. But put forth thy hand now, and touch all that he hath; and he will curse thee unto thy face. As if he had said, While all things prosper in his hand, who knows whether he be a man that truly feareth thee? but strike and afflict him, and then it will soon appear what he is. And indeed the Devil saw soon what Job was unto his little liking, when the weight of his afflictions pressed these words out of his mouth, Though he kill me, I will trust in him.

Job 1. 9, 10, 11.

Job 13. 15.

For this cause, That it might appear the Church was reared upon no earthly foundation, the Wisdom of God would have it planted in Martyrdom, and watered with the blood of his Saints. For the same cause also was the glorious name of Confessors in the Primitive Church given unto those who had held their Faith in the time of trial and persecution: and for this cause would God have his people here to avouch him in the land of their captivity; that the more the world wondred, the more he might be glorified.

Seeing therefore we are most fit to glorifie God in the time of our affliction, Let this be a Motive unto us both of Comfort in the depth of sorrow, and of Patience in the midst of pain; always when the hand of God is upon us, confessing with David, Psal. 119. 71. Bonum est, Domine, quod humiliasti me, It is good, Lord, that thou hast humbled me.

AND thus I come to the Persons to whom this Proclamation is to be made, intimated in the word [Them;] Thus shall ye say unto them: what Them? even your Lords and Masters, even your Lordly Masters, your Rulers, your proud Conquerors.

Sins therefore against the Person of God are to be reprov'd without all respect of Persons. Such sins are sins of Idolatry, or sins of the first and second Commandment: For when false Gods are worshipped, whether mediately or immediately, the Person of God is dishonoured. In these sins therefore the Cautions concerning persons who should reprove, and persons who are to be reprov'd, which in other sins Wisdom makes considerable, have no place at all: Be the person reproving, or the person to be reprov'd, publick or private, greater or lesser, it skilleth not; for in case of Idolatry, the poorest begger on the earth may admonish the greatest Emperor in the world. Indeed the quality or condition of persons may be opposed to all other respects whatsoever, and so make some time and some place unfit for reproof or admonition; nay the quality of the persons of men may be such as doth exclude some persons from reproving them: But when the case concerns the Person of God himself, then to spare or regard the persons of men is Idolatry it self; for this is to honour men more than God himself; this is to suffer God to be dishonoured, lest the honour of men should be impeached. I confess the danger is great in regard of the flesh; but we must know what our Saviour saith, He that loveth father or mother, yea his own life, better than me, is not worthy of me.

Math. 10. 37.

Thus the glorious Martyr Ignatius reprov'd Trajan the Emperor, whilest he was sacrificing sacrificing to his Gods, even at the very Altar, and in the face of his whole Army, being at Antioch. And for the same sin we see here the poor captive Jew was to reprove his great Babylonian Lord, the miserable and contemptible slave the conqueror of the world, the miry foot the head of gold: For thus shall ye say even to them, The Gods which made not the heavens and the earth, &c.

Jer. 10. 11.

3.

AND so I will leave the Persons both Ye and Them, and come to the third and last circumstance I considered in this act of protesting or proclaiming against the Gods of the heathen, and that is, The manner how it should be done, intimated in the word Thus; Thus shall ye say unto them: that is, in plain Chaldee; not in Hebrew, how holy a tongue soever, but in the vulgar tongue of Babylon; Thus shall ye say unto them. Here we see That God will have his Church to utter his Oracles in the vulgar tongues of the Nations. When ye inform the Gentiles of any part of the knowledge of me, Thus shall ye say unto them. Surely our Prophet's sudden changing of his Dialect here was a Preludium to that great publishing of God's name to the Gentiles in their vulgar tongues after the Messias should come; which * Theodoret avoucheth to have been when he saith, that the words of the Apostles and Prophets were turned into the languages of the Romans, Egyptians, Persians, Indians, Armenians, Scythians, Sauromatans, and all the languages which any Nation used.

* Therapeut. 5.

Certainly, to keep the Scriptures in an unknown tongue, is of all other the most unreasonable madness; but to teach Pagans the Articles of their Creed at their first conversion in the Latine tongue, as the Spaniards have done with the Indians, is a most ridiculous folly. Is not the Word of God his revealed will unto his whole Church? But how is it revealed in an unknown tongue? Or is the Word of God a revealed will unto those only who are learned, and hidden to others?

Object.

But if the Scriptures were in vulgar Tongues, they might be occasions of many heresies, by the mistakes of the vulgar, if they might read them.

Ansv.

This is strange. Can every Frier in a Pulpit, when he preacheth, warrant his words from being mistaken or perverted to heresie? and are the words and sayings of God himself so obnoxious that they may not be read? Nay, if God himself may not speak in a vulgar tongue, I see far less reason why a Frier should: And so should the people know nothing at all concerning God, if a good may not therefore be done because some will abuse it to evil.

NOW I come to the second main part of my Text, The Summe of the Proclamation, containing in it two things. First, A description of false Gods, The Gods which made not the heavens and the earth. Secondly, Their doom, They shall perish from the earth, and from under these heavens.

To begin with the first, The Gods which made not, &c. He saith not, Those who were not Abraham's Gods, or Jacob's Gods, nor the Gods which brought not Israel out of Egypt, or such like; but, The Gods which made not the heavens and the earth. Whence note,

1.

That men are to be dealt with and perswaded out of the Principles they acknowledge and are addicted to. Ethnicks, out of the Principles of Reason and Nature, or the like; Jews, out of Moses and the Prophets; Christians, out of the Gospel: In summe, All sorts of men, from that they are addicted to. This is a Maxime of wisdom which God himself hath approved.

Esay 7. 14.

So the Jews acknowledging Prophetical doctrine, are dealt with out of the Prophets; A Virgin shall bear a son. But the Magi of the East, being addicted to Astrology, are drawn to Christ by the apparition of a Star: and therefore the Star appeared not in Judea, because the Jews used not to heed such things, they had the Oracles of God; but it appeared in the East, that is, was seen by them only who dwelt in the East; which made the wise men wonder and joy so much, when afterward it went before them going to Bethlehem.

Verse 10.

Acts 17. 23.

So S. Paul, being to preach a God the Athenians knew not, avouched and defended his fact by an Altar of their own, inscribed Ἀγνώστῳ Θεῷ, To the unknown God; whence they might be convinced, that a God whom their fathers knew not might yet be a God to be worshipped. The same Apostle teacheth Titus to convince the Cretians out of their own Poets,

Titus 1. 12.

Κρῆτες αἰεὶ ψεύσας, κατὰ συνέξιν, γαστέρες ἀργαί.

* Verse 16.

* Verse 25.

On the contrary, S. Peter having to deal with the Jews and Profelytes, Acts 2. useth no other grounds but the Prophecies of * Joel and * David.

Again, S. Paul being to enter with the Ethnicks of Lystra, Acts 14. 15. who would needs have sacrificed to him as to a God, insinuateth with an Argument from Nature and and from the Creation of the world ; Why do ye (saith he) these things? we are also men of like passions with you; and preach unto you, that you should turn from these vanities unto the living God, which made heaven and earth, and the sea, and all things that are therein.

Jer. 10. 11.

As it is with diverse Sects in Religion, so is it with divers sorts and conditions of men ; an Argument or Motive suitable to one sort is altogether unfit for another. All Vessels are best handled by their anse or ears, on what part soever they stand : he that handleth them otherwise, handleth them but awkwardly : So it is with mens minds ; there are in every man's opinion or affections certain anse or ears, whereon a wise perswader should lay his hold, to draw men unto him. For this cause Aristotle in his Rhetoricks describes the several dispositions of several sorts of men ; of men, of women ; of young, of old ; of rich, of poor ; of noble, and ignoble ; that a Rhetorician might lute his motives accordingly. A Dog is toll'd with a bone, a worm is a bait to catch a fish, a pigeon brings the hawk unto the Falconer's lure : So must every wise fisher of men, every wise angler of souls, make choice of Motives according to the several dispositions and conditions of the hearers ; according to that of S. Paul, 1 Cor. 9. 20, 21, &c. Unto the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might save the Jews ; to them which are without the Law, as without the Law, that I might gain them that are without the Law : To the weak I became as weak, that I might gain the weak : I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some. And thus much shall suffice for this first Observation.

My second Observation from these words is this, That the true God may be known by the Principles of Nature, or the Creation of the Heaven and Earth. For that which is a character or note of false Gods must needs likewise imply an argument for the true ; Reſum est index sui & obliqui : If those who made not the Heaven and the Earth are false Gods, he then that made them is the true.

2.

This is that which some call Natural Theologie ; others, the Ascent of the Soul to God by the Scale of the creatures, the steps whereof are to be ordered as followeth.

1. All men by God do understand some Person, or a living and Reasonable Essence. 2. All men will grant that which is God to be the most excellent of all Persons or Living Essences. 3. The Perfections of a Living and Reasonable Essence are threefold ; In the Understanding, In the Will, and In the Faculties of working : In the Understanding is Wisdom ; In the Will, Goodness ; In the Faculties, Power : Whatsoever therefore hath a Sovereignty in these three, is the most excellent of Living and Reasonable Essences. All men therefore, if they want not the ordinary use of Reason, will assent, That under the name of God they mean Him to whom belongs a Sovereignty of Wisdom, a Sovereignty of Goodness, and a Sovereignty of Power and Might. Thus far we agree and walk together : But the error of the Nations hath been in the Application ; namely, To whom belonged this Sovereignty, and whether it belonged to many, or to one alone.

How the Understanding ascends to God by the Scale or Ladder of the Creatures.

But howsoever the Gentiles in this Application became vain in their Imaginations, and transformed the glory of this incorruptible Sovereignty into the image of corruptibility ; yet, as the Apostle saith, * God left them not without a witness, in that those invisible things of him are seen by the creation of the world : For a workman is known by his work. The greatest work and the goodliest work that ever was, is the Creation of the world. He then that made the Heaven and the Earth is he alone to whom this threefold sovereignty belongeth : He alone is Almighty, He alone is All-good, He alone is All-wise.

Rom. 1. 21, 23.

* Verse 20.

What greater Power can there be than to make the Heaven and the Earth of nothing ? what Might so mighty as that which made whatsoever else is mighty ; even so many millions of powers as are in the Heavens above ; so admirable variety of faculties as are found in the Earth below ? Is there any Wisdom like unto his, who in so manifold a work made nothing superfluous or vain, but all things for their end ; who ordered and appointed such means for every end as better could not be devised ; who settled so goodly an Order, and gave to every thing a Law and Rule which it should observe ? What Goodness so unspeakable, as to have bestowed upon every thing some portion of goodness, and to have sufficiently furnished them with endowments to attain and preserve the same ? What Goodness can be like unto that which he hath shewn unto us, in making and ordaining all that ever he made for our use and service ? Thus we see the admirable Power, the incomparable Wisdom, and unspeakable Goodness of him that made the Heavens and the Earth. He therefore is the true and living God, and lives for ever. Those Gods which made not the heavens and the earth earth

Jer. 10. 11.

earth are no Gods, and shall perish from the earth, and from under these heavens.

Thus have I let you see one part of The Scale of the creatures, by which the Soul ascends unto God. But there is another half yet behind, to make a compleat Jacob's ladder: For the Ascent of the Soul unto God by the contemplation of the creatures, is either the Ascent of the Understanding, to know him, or the Ascent of our Will, through obedience to worship him. The first is that which I have hitherto spoken of: The second, though it be not here used and applied by our Prophet, yet it is implied by his example in the former, in that he hath therein taught us what use to make of the consideration of the creation of the world, and creatures of God.

How the Will ascends to God by the Scale of the Creatures.

The Ascent therefore of the Will consists in its conformity, and the conformity of all our Affections and Actions to the Will of God, so far as it may be seen in the works of the creatures: For God, in that he hath given them a Law, hath as it were stamped in them the character of his Will, which is the Law and Rule they observe in working. By this Ladder we may ascend two ways; either by express Example, or by Analogie. By express Example, where the Law which the Creatures observe in their workings is the very same which we ought to express in our actions. By Analogie, when the properties or actions of the Creatures, especially if they be otherwise unsuitable unto our nature, are emblematically and by way of resemblance applied to admonish us of our duties. To this kind belong Parable-fimilies, framed according to the will of the applier; whereof we shall find examples in the Scripture. But because the Ascent by Example is the firmer and surer, I will only shew some few Examples of it.

We see all Natural agents neglect their private good and proper end, to maintain the publick good of the Universe; the Water ascends upward, the Aire downward, against nature, to maintain the connexion and indivulsion of the parts of the world: So should every good member of a Commonwealth or Society pass by his private profit and private pleasure, to further the common good of the weal publick. Every natural body will rend and break in pieces, rather than the Order of the world should be violated by a penetration of dimensions: So should every good member hazard, yea lose, both his life and estate, for the common behoof of that body whereof he is a member. All things of inferior nature give place without reluctancy to those which have a sublimity of nature above them; the Water willingly submitteth unto the Air, the Air unto the Fire, &c. yea, the one doth further, as far as it can, the ascent of the other above it: The like should we express in the subordination of degrees and conditions amongst men. All things which grow upon the earth turn their heads and faces upward, toward that by whose influence they grow and are preserved: So should we unto him in whom we live, and move, and have our being.

Acts 17. 28.

These are only general Instances for a taste, drawn from the general rule of the Creatures, to admonish us of general duties. If I should from hence take a view of every several creature in his kind, I might shew you in clay all Ethical and Oeconomical vertues sampled in one kind or other of them. Go to the pismire, thou sluggard, saith Solomon. * Be wise as serpents, saith a wiser than Solomon. * The Ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his masters crib; but Israel hath not known me, saith the Lord by the Prophet Esay. The Stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times; the turtle, and the crane, and the swallow observe the time of their coming, saith our Prophet Jeremy. Go to the lilies of the field, and learn of them, saith our Saviour. To say no more, There is no creature in the world but upbraids us with sin, in daily and continually breaking the Law of our creation, which they so inviolably observe.

Prov. 6. 6.

* Matt. 10. 16.

* Esay 1. 3.

Jer. 8. 7.

Matth. 6. 28.

We should therefore hence learn to use these Creatures not for our bodies only, to array them and feed them, and such like, but for the spiritual good of the inward man; that so in them and with them we may glorifie our Creator. God made all the Creation for the service of man: but not for the service of his Body alone, as most conceive it; but also for the service of his Better part, the Soul and Understanding. We should never therefore use, behold or look upon any one of our fellow-creatures, but we should be raised by them unto God, invited to devotion, and spurred to conform our Wills and Affections to the pattern of that Eternal Will which they any way express.

1 King. 4. 33.

I doubt not but the Philosophy of Solomon was of this strain, when he spake of herbs and trees, and of living creatures; the fragments which here and there remain in the Proverbs may give us some taste thereof.

If we would do thus, it would abate our Pride, and make us know our selves better. Lord, what is man but the most unreasonable creature upon the face of the earth, earth, the most unjust, lawless, irregular creature that walks under the Sun? Consider the marches of that Royal host of Heaven; look upon the fowls of the Air and fishes of the Sea; survey all that springeth, all that moveth and creepeth upon the Earth; and tell me, from the circumference above unto the centre below, what one creature, what worst creature of God's making, what silly worm doth so transgress the Law of his creation as Man doth? And yet Man hath Reason given him, whereby he knoweth the Law and Rule he is to follow; Man hath also a liberty of Will: But what doth he with them? His Reason he abuseth to most unreasonable actions; his Will, to most licentious and abominable liberty. It is a wonder the Earth can endure to bear him so vile a burthen, or the Sun to shine upon him the most unworthy creature in the world. Thus much concerning The description of the false Gods, in the words, The Gods that made not the Heavens and the Earth.

Jer. 10. 11.

It remains I should speak of their Doom, in the last words, They shall perish from the Earth, &c. Wherein I shall observe two things: 1. Their destiny it self, which is perishing; They shall perish: and 2. The circumstances of this perishing; from the Earth, and from under these Heavens. I make them two, because they will yield different Observations and Instructions.

To begin therefore with the first, The Doom or Destiny it self, which is perishing; They shall perish. These words you see were a Prophecy of what was to come upon the Gods of the Heathen in after-times; for at the time and age wherein they were spoken, things in the world were far otherwise than here is foretold they should be: For the dominion and jurisdiction of Jehovah, the God of Heaven, seemed exceeding small; his Name being only known in Jacob, and his Greatness and Throne amongst the Sons of Israel; whereas Idols, false gods, and false worship, overwhelmed as it were the face of the whole earth. The kingdom of God was but a small parcel; whereas Devils and Idols commanded and swayed all the Nations of the earth besides. The dew of grace lay only upon the fleece of Gideon; but all the earth besides was dry. This was the state of the times when this Prophecy was uttered, nay worse at that time than ever it had been before: For even that small portion of men which acknowledged the Lord God of heaven, was now almost quite extinguished and devoured by the vassals of the Gods of the Nations; Israel being carried away captive into a strange land, with much unlikelihood of return, and the most High God as it were mastered by the Gods of the Nations.

The State of the Times when this Prophecy of the downfall of Ethnicism was delivered.

Ye have heard the state of the times wherein this Prophecy is commanded: Now let us consider of the Event; and this we shall find partly already accomplished, and partly yet to come. For the first, We have seen with our eyes, we have heard with our ears, and our fathers have told us the wondrous works of the Lord. We have heard and daily read of the admired Oracles of the Gentiles, of Apollo at Delphos, of Jupiter Ammon in Egypt, and many more, too long to be named: but all of them are long since perished from the earth, and from under these heavens. We have heard of the names of many Gods in former times of great renown in these Islands of the Gentiles; Jupiter, Mars, Apollo, Neptune, Juno, Vesta, Venus, Minerva, Diana, &c. all Europe, Italy, Greece, and the lesser Asia, swarming with their Temples and Ceremonies: and yet now are they perished from the earth, and from under these heavens. Where is now Bel the God of Babylon, Nisroch the God of Assyria, Baal and Ashteroth the Gods of the Sidonians, Rimmon the God of the Aramites? Where is now Dagon of the Philistines, Milcom of the Ammonites, Chemosh of Moab, and Tammuz of the Egyptians? Even these also, whose names we hear so frequent in Scripture, are perished with their very names from this earth, and from under these heavens. And the Nations which once worshipped them, worship now the great God, Creator of heaven and earth, once all of them, and yet the most of them, truly and savingly in Christ Jesus the Saviour and Redeemer of the world.

The beginning of this strange and wonderful Change was about the Birth and Incarnation of Christ our Saviour, at which time the Gods of the Gentiles grew speechless in their Oracles: or if at any time they answered, it was to testify the nearness of that time wherein they were to be cast out, and the presence of him who should do the same. As it is reported of Augustus, who consulting the Oracle of Apollo, who should reign after him, received this answer;

Vide Suidam in Augusto. Niseph. l. i. c. 17. & Cedrenum in Synopsi histor.

Γαί: Ἐβραϊστέ· κέλεται με, θεοῖς μακάρεσσιν ἀνάσσω,
Τόνδε δομον προλιπεῖν, καὶ αἶδην αὐτοῖς ἰκέσθαι.
Λοιπὸν ἀπὸ θι σιγῶν ἐκ βωμῶν ἡμετέρων.

S

The

Jer. 10. 11.

* In his Πτελ πρὸς ἐκ λογίων φιλοσοφίας, quoted by Eufobius and Theodoret.

The meaning whereof is this ; The Hebrew child, which rules the blessed Gods, bids me leave this house, and presently pack to hell : From henceforth depart thou with silence from our Altars. Whereupon it is said that Augustus reared an Altar in the Capitol with this Inscription, ARA PRIMOGENITI DEI, The Altar of the First-begotten of God. * Porphyrie, though an enemy of Christians, reports three farewell Oracles of Apollo. The first whereof is this :

Οἱ οἱ μοι, τρίποδες ὄναχῆσέτε, οἶχετ' Ἀπόλλων,
Οἶχετ', ἐπεὶ φλογέον με βιάζεται οὐράνιον φῶς.
Ἦν Ζεὺς, ἔστι τε νῦν, καὶ ἔσσεται, ὦ μέγαλε Ζεῦ.
Οἱ οἱ μοι, χρησμός ὑπολείπεται ἡερῶν.

In English thus ; Owo is me ! lament ye Tripods, for Apollo is gone, he is gone, he is gone ; For the burning light of heaven, that Jupiter which was, is, and shall be, O mighty Jupiter, he compels me. Ah wo is me ! the bright glory of my Oracles is gone from me. And to the Priest which last consulted him, his demand being, Which was the true Religion, he answered in this manner ;

Μηδὲ φελες πύματόν με καὶ ὕστατον αὐτὸς ἐρέδει,
Δύστην ἐρπύλλων, περὶ θεσπεσίῃ γενετῇ ῥῶ,
Ἀμφὶ τε τηλυγέτοιο παιομφαίῳ βασιλῇ ῥῶ,
Καὶ Γνοίῃ : ἢ πάντα πέραξ βοτρυδὸν ἐρίχει, &c.

Then,

Οἱ με, καὶ ἐκ ἐθέλοντα δόμων ἀπὸ τῶνδε διώξει,
Αὐτίκ' ἐρημαῖον ὃ λελείφεται ἕδῃ ἀφῆτωρ.

In English thus ; Thou unhappiest of the Priests, oh that thou wouldst not have asked me, being now at my last, of the Divine Father, and of the dear begotten of that famous King, nor of the Spirit which comprehendeth and surroundeth all things. For, wo is me ! He it is that, will I, nill I, will expel me from these Temples ; and full soon shall this dividing seat become a place of desolation. And if at any time he were extremely urged by incantments and exorcisms to break off this uncouth silence, he answered, * Γυθῶν ῥῶ δ' ἐκ ἔστιν ἀναρρῶσαι λάλον ὄμφην,

Ἦδ' ἢ γυδοιχοῖσιν ἀμαυρωθεῖσα χρόνοισιν
Βέβληται κληῖδα, ἀμαντεύτοιο σιωπῆς.
Ῥέξατε δ', ὡς ἔβῃ ἔστι, θεόπροπα δύματα φοῖβω.

Apollo's voice is not to be recovered, it is decayed through length of time, and locked up with the keys of never-divining silence : but do you, as ye were wont, such sacrifices as it becometh Phœbus to have.

The ceasing of Oracles, in ancient times so frequent, made the Heathen wonder what the cause should be ; for being grown very rare as the coming of Christ drew near, and at the time of his being upon the earth, the chiefest of all, the Oracle of Delphos, grown speechless, as Strabo living at that time witnesseth, before the end of that Age all the Oracles of the world in a manner held their peace.

Plutarch, as ye all know, at that time writ a Tract of the decay of Oracles, wherein he labours to find the cause of their ceasing ; and after much search and many disputes he concludes the Reason partly to be from the absence of his Demoniacal spirits, who by his Philosophy might either die through length of years, or flit from place to place, either exiled by others more strong, or upon some other dislike ; and partly from the alteration of the soil where Oracles were seated, which might not yield such Exhalations as in former times they had done. This is the Summe of the Reasons in that Discourse.

But as we embrace this Testimony of Plutarch for the use and decay of Oracles ; so we are better enabled to give a true reason thereof than he was or could be : namely, As Meteors and smaller lights vanish and appear not when the Sun begins to rise ; So did these false lights of the Heathen vanish when the Sun of righteousness, Christ Jesus, arose unto the world. As Dagon fell down when the Ark of God was brought into his Temple ; so when the true Ark of God, Christ Jesus, came into the world, all the Dagons of the Nations fell down : The time was come when ( as our Saviour saith John 12. 31. ) the Prince of this world was to be cast out ; The night was past, and the day was come ; and therefore such Bats and Birds of darkness as these were not any longer to play such reaks as in times past they had done.

Now began that War in heaven between Michael and the red Dragon, whereof we read in the Revelation, Michael and his Angels fought against the Dragon and his Angels : that is, Christ our Lord and his undaunted souldiers fought with the Devil and all his Ethnick forces led by the Roman Emperors. Which War, though

* Eusebius Præpar. Evang.
lib. 5. cap. 16.

Plutarch's account of the Causes why
Oracles ceased.

The true Cause of their ceasing.

1 Sam. 5. 3.

Rom. 13. 12.

Rev. 12. 7.

it lasted long, and cost the blood and lives of many a thousand valiant Martyrs; yet in the days of Constantine the Dragon received so great an overthrow, that he never could recover it: and though in the days of Julian he made head again and kept the field a while; yet was he soon fain to quit it, and leave the victory unto Michael's army: Which defeature of his was accompanied with an ominous sign of his utter overthrow, his Throne or Temple at Delphos with earthquakes, thunder and lightening, being utterly ruined. For as by the rending of the veil of the Temple was signified the abolishment of Legal worship: so by the prodigious destruction of the chieftest Temple the Devil had in all the world, was, as it were, sealed the irrecoverable overthrow of Ethnicism, which in the Event immediately following proved true. For though he retained some strength under Valens in the East, by still enjoying his wonted sacrifices; yet in the days of Theodosius he was utterly and finally vanquished, when his last champion Eugenius, who threatned to be another Julian, and to restore Ethnicism again, with his whole Army was discomfited by the prayer and prowess of Theodosius, about the year of our Lord three hundred and ninety. For after this time Ethnicism was never publicly maintained in the Roman Empire, nor any open attempt made for restoring it again; whereby it seems the red Dragon was cast down to the earth, and that now was perfected the Triumph of Michael's victory, when the Gods that made not the heaven and the earth were fully perished, as concerning their Empire, from the earth and from under these heavens.

Jer. 10. 11.

Rev. 12.

As the War was long, so the Victory was not gotten all at once, but by certain degrees, as it were; beginning with Constantine Anno 300. and ending in Theodosius, about (as I said) the year 390. And though it be hard to pitch the time of this Trophée exactly; yet I doubt not but it falleth in some part of the time included in the foresaid limits.

Thus then have we seen the Truth and Power of God in fulfilling of this Prophecy, for so much as is already past, and may say with David, Psal. 48. 8. As we have heard, so have we seen in the city of the Lord of hosts, in the city of our God; God will establish it for ever. But who would have believed this at the time when the words were spoken, when the worshippers of the most high God were at so low an ebbe? Hence therefore must we learn to believe the Promises of God, be they never so unlikely to humane Reason: For he it is that says, Esay 46. 11. I have spoken, and I will bring it to pass. It is he that says, Jer. 32. 27. I am the God of all flesh, and there is nothing too hard for me. Though Abraham be never so old, and Sarah's womb be dead; yet if the Lord says it, he shall be Father of many Nations. Though * Gideon be the least of the house of Manasses; yet if the Lord says it, by him shall Israel be delivered from the Midianites. Though * David follow the sheep; yet if God promise, he shall be King of Israel. Be the famine in Samaria never so extreme, that women eat their own children; yet if God say it, within twenty four hours shall corn be so cheap, that a measure of fine flour shall be sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, in the gates of Samaria. Let us take heed therefore we say not with him on whose hand the King leaned, If God would make windows in heaven, it could not be; nor with the Israelites, when the spies brought them news of the strength of the Inhabitants of Canaan, of chariots of iron, and the giant-like sons of Anak, let us not say with them, we shall not enter: For that Lord who set humane reason against the Word and Promise of God, never eat of the abundance of Samaria; and the Jews which distrusted God, never entered the land of Canaan. But let us know, for a conclusion, that God is faithful and true, and his Promises yea and amen.

Gen. 17. 17. & 18. 11, 12.

* Judges 6. 15. * 1 Sam. 16. 11.

2 Kings Chap. 6. & 7.

Chap. 2. 7.

Numb. 13.

* 1 Cor. 2. 20.

HITHER TO we have spoken of the accomplishment of this Prophecy for so much as is already past; now let us see What that is which we expect as yet to come. For though in regard of former times, when Ethnicism was so large, and the worshippers of the living God so small a scantling, the Extent of the Church be now at this day a goodly and large portion of the world: yet if we consider the numbers of nations yet Pagans, or not Christians, it will seem too scant as yet to be the accomplishment of this and other Prophecies concerning the Largeness of Christ's Kingdom before the end of the world.

For one hath well observed, That Christianity at this day is not above the sixth part of the known world; whereas the Mahumetans have a fifth, and all the rest are Ethnicks and Pagans. So that if we divide the World into thirty parts, Christianity is but as five in thirty, Mahumetanism as six, and Ethnicism as nineteen: and so is Christianity the least part of all, and plain Heathenism hath far above the one half of the known world; and the better part of the other is also Mahumetans. And though Christianity hath been embraced in former times where now it is not, yet it is now spread in those places where in those times it was not. And therefore all laid together, we may account Christianity at this day as large, I think, as ever it was since the Apostles time.

Jer. 10. 11.

But that this is not that Universal Kingdom of Christ, that flourishing and glorious estate of the Church, which yet we expect and hope for, my Reasons are these.

1.

First, Those frequent places of Scripture which intimate that the Lord should subdue all people, all kingdoms, all nations, and all the ends of the earth unto himself, and that all these should one day worship and acknowledge him. Psal. 22. 27. All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord, and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before him: for the Kingdom is the Lord's, and he is governour among the nations. And Psal. 47. 1, 2, 3. Clap your hands all ye people, — for the Lord is a great King over all the earth: He shall subdue the people under us, and the nations under our feet. And again, v. 7, 8. God is King of all the earth — and reigneth over the Heathen. Psal. 66. 1, &c. Make a joyful noise unto God, all ye lands — Through the greatness of thy power shall thine enemies submit themselves unto thee. All the earth shall worship thee, and sing of thee; they shall sing unto thy Name. The whole 67. Psalm, which we read every day, is as it were a Prophecy and Prayer for this great Kingdom: That the way of God may be known upon earth, and his saving health among all nations. Let the people praise thee, O God, let all the people praise thee. Then shall the earth yield her increase, &c. God shall bless us, and all the ends of the earth shall fear him. And Psal. 86. 9, 10. All nations whom thou hast made, shall come and worship before thee, O Lord, and shall glorify thy Name. For thou art great, and doest wondrous things; Thou art God alone. And Esay 2. 18. (which is a Prophecy of Christ's kingdom) it is said, that the Idols the Lord shall utterly abolish; or, as some read, the Idols shall utterly pass away. So Esay 54. 5. speaking of the Amplitude of the Church of the Gentiles, Thy Redeemer, (saith the Prophet) the holy One of Israel, the God of the whole earth shall be called. Certainly this constant style of Universality implies more than this scantling which yet is, it being but one of the least parts of the whole earth.

2.

Secondly, The same conclusion may be gathered from 1 Cor. 15. 25, 26. compared with Heb. 2. 8. Christ must reign (saith S. Paul in the first place quoted) till he hath put all his enemies under his feet. The last enemy which shall be destroyed is death. Hence it follows, that Christ shall subdue all his enemies, whereof the Prince of this world is the chief, before the last rising of the dead: For the subduing of death, that is, the rising of the dead, shall not be afore the rest shall be done; the vanquishing of death being the last act of Christ's reigning; which done, he shall yield up the Kingdom unto his Father.

In the other place, Heb. 2. 8. the Apostle speaking of the same thing, alledgeth that of Psal. 8. 6. Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet; (and then adds) For in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. But now (mark it) we see not yet all things put under him.

If any say that the Apostle speaks here of the Kingdom of Glory in heaven, and not of the Kingdom of Grace on earth.

I reply 1. out of the former place, That he speaks of such a subjection whereof the rising of the dead shall be the last act of all, and which shall be before he yields up the Kingdom to his Father: But neither of these can be affirmed of the Kingdom of Glory, but the contrary; viz. The rising of the dead is at the beginning, and not at the end of the Kingdom of Glory; and so is also the yielding up of his kingdom unto his Father.

2. I reply out of this place, That the Apostle speaks of that Kingdom and subjection of the Earth, or state of the Earth, which was to come. For so he speaks, *ver. 5. * Unto the Angels he hath not put in subjection ἢ οἰκουμένην ἢ μέλλουσαν, the Earth, or state of the Earth, which shall be, περὶ ἧς λαλῶμεν, of which we speak.* Here he affirms, that οἰκουμένη μέλλουσα is that of whose subjection he meaneth. If then οἰκουμένη signify only the Earth and the Earth's inhabitants, and is no where in the whole Scripture otherwise used; I cannot see how this place can well bear any other exposition.

First then to confirm this, οἰκουμένη is the same which the Hebrews call חַבְלָה; for so the Septuagint render it, whose use of speaking I doubt not but the Apostle follows. But חַבְלָה most constantly signifies the habitable earth, or the earth with the things that live and dwell thereon: whence the Septuagint, though they commonly render it οἰκουμένη, yet sometimes they render it ἡ γῆ, The earth; sometimes ἡ ὑπὸ τῶν ἐσχατῶν, That * See this more fully explained in a particular Tract of his, οἰκουμένη μέλλουσα, in Book III.

That which is under heaven. Therefore with the Septuagint Οἰκουμένη is ἡ γῆ, and ἡ ὑπὸ τοῦ οὐρανόων, The earth, and That which is under the heavens. Jer. 10. 11.

If this suffice not, we may yet consider, That Οἰκουμένη is a Participle of the feminine gender, and therefore understands ἡ γῆ, quasi γῆ ἡ οἰκουμένη, the earth which is inhabited.

Lastly, Wheresoever elsewhere this word is found in the New Testament, it is most expressly used of the earth and inhabitants thereof. In the beginning of this Epistle we read, Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundations of the earth & οἰκουμένης, and the heavens are the works of thine hands. Matth. 24. 14. This Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ οἰκουμένῃ, over all the earth, and then shall the end come. Luke 2. 1. Then went a decree from Augustus that all the world should be taxed, πᾶσαν τὴν οἰκουμένην. The rest behind are far more express; but I leave them to your own leisure, and will only add this one thing, That our English rendring in this place of the Hebrews, Οἰκουμένη ἡ μέλλουσα, The world to come, makes it not only ambiguous, but seeming to mean The Kingdom of Glory. But we shall find that The world in that sense is always αἰὼν ἐρχόμενος, and αἰὼν μέλλων, but no where in all the Bible οἰκουμένη ἡ μέλλουσα. And so I leave this, with submission to the judgement of others. Heb. 1. 10. Heb. 2. 5.

My next Reason shall be from that we read in the Revelation, where the Church, by the conquest of Michael, set free from the Dragon's fury, is said to escape into the wilderness; that is, into a state, though of safety, peace and security, yet of hardship, misery and scarcity: For it seems to be an allusion to the Israelites escaping the tyranny of Pharaoh, by going into the wilderness. In this wilderness, or place of hardship, scarcity, misery and much affliction, the Church must remain (saith S. John) a time, times, and half a time; or, as he elsewhere speaketh, a thousand, two hundred and threescore days; that is, a year, years, and half a year: and when this time shall be expired, (that is, as learned Divines think, when so many years shall be ended as those days are, taking the beginning of our reckoning from Michael's Trophee) then, saith our Apostle, shall the kingdoms of the world become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever, Rev. 11. 15. Whereby it should seem that the Church is yet in the Wilderness; and that the promised happiness of the ample and flourishing glory thereof before the end of the world, is yet to come. 2. Rev. 12. 6. Verfe 14. Verfe 6.

My last Reason shall be from Rom. 11. where S. Paul speaking of the future restoring and calling of the Jews, saith it shall be when the fulness of the Gentiles is come in; I would not (saith he) that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, &c. v. 25. Now because the Jews are not yet called, it followeth that the fulness of the Gentiles is yet to come: and what should then this Fulness be, but the Fulness of the Gospel's extent over all the nations of the world; which our Apostle, ver. 15. of the same chapter, calls life from the dead? For if the casting away of the Jews be the reconciling of the world; what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead? As if the Church of the Gentiles were as yet half dead, if it be compared with that glorious vigour and accession which shall come unto it when the Jews shall be again received into favour. 4.

In brief, The Fulness here spoken of is either a Fulness of grace, a Fulness of extent, or a Fulness of time. A Fulness of time only it cannot be, because our Apostle saith, this Fulness shall enter in; namely, shall enter into the Church of Christ: but this I see not how it can be spoken of a period of time. As for a Fulness of grace and spiritual gifts, that was greater when S. Paul spake than ever it was since; and therefore if it be meant, it must be yet to come. And for the Fulness of extent, it was as large for the number of Nations in the Apostles times as it is now in ours; (For as for the American Christians, they are only so in name, being forced only to seem so by the Spaniards.) Whatsoever Fulness then the Apostle here meaneth, is yet to come. Verfe 25. εἰς τέλος.

I will add only one thing more, and so end this point. Some think that S. Paul in this place hath reference unto that speech of Christ, Luke 21. 24. where he foretells, That the Jews should fall by the edge of the sword, and be led captive into all nations, and Jerusalem should be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles should be fulfilled, or accomplished. But it seems to me, that the Fulness of the Gentiles and the Fulfilling or Accomplishment of their times should not be the same, howsoever they may be coincident. It should rather seem that our Saviour hath reference, as to a thing known, unto the Prophecy of Daniel, where the Times of the Gentiles, or the times wherein the Gentiles should have dominion, with the misery and subjection of the Jewish Nation, are set forth in the Vision of a fourfold Image, and four Dan. Chap. 2. & Chap. 7.

Jer. 10. 11.

Chap. 7. 18.

Beasts, which are the four Monarchies, the Babylonian, Persian, Greek and Roman. The first began with the first captivity of the Jewish Nation, and through the times of all the rest they should be in subjection or in a worse estate under them : But when their times should be accomplished, then, saith Daniel, The Saints of the most High God shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever and ever ; that is, there shall be no more kingdoms after it, but it shall continue as long as the world shall endure. Three of these Monarchies were past when our Saviour spake, and the fourth was well entered. If then by saints there are meant the Jews, which we know are called the holy People in that sense their country is still called the holy Land, and their city in the Scripture the holy City, viz. relatively ; then is it plain enough what Daniel's and our Saviour's words import, namely, a glorious revocation and kingdom of the Jews, when the time of the fourth Monarchy, which then remained, should be expired and accomplished.

Rom. 11. 25.

But if here by the Saints of the most High are in general meant the Church, yet by coincidence of time the same will fall out on the Jews behalf ; because S. Paul saith, that at the time when the Fulness of the Gentiles shall come in, the Jew shall be again restored.

Chap. 7. 8.

Chap. 13. 15.

For a conclusion ; The last limb of the fourth Monarchy is, in Daniel, The Horn with eyes which spake proud things against the most High, which should continue a time, times, and half a time ; that is, a year, years, and half a year. In the Revelation it is The Beast with so many heads and horns, full of names of blasphemy, which was to continue forty two months : the same period with the former, which was exprest by times or years, and the same time with a thousand, two hundred and sixty days of the Church's remaining in the wilderness.

Rev. 12. 6.

Rev. 11. 15.

When these Times, whatsoever they be, shall be ended, then is the period of the Times of the Gentiles and of the Jews misery, whereto our Saviour seems to refer in the Gospel : then, by S. Paul, shall the Fulness of the Gentiles enter in : then, saith S. John, shall the kingdoms of the earth be the Lord's and his Christ's : then, saith Daniel in the former place, chap. 7. 27. shall the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, be given to the people of the Saints of the most High ; whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him.

The Use we are to make upon this long Discourse is Hope and comfortable Expectation. Experience (saith S. Paul, Rom. 5. 4. ) worketh hope : Let therefore our experience of God's Power and Truth in that which is past, be as a pledge and pawn unto us of the future. We have seen a great part of this Doom of false Gods fulfilled already : what though we see not the means of the full accomplishment ? If thou shalt say in thy heart, (saith Moses, Dent. 7. 17, 18. ) These nations are more than I ; how can I dispossess them ? Thou shalt not be afraid of them, but shalt remember what the Lord thy God did unto Pharaoh and unto all Egypt. So if any of us shall say, How can this be ? let us remember what the Lord hath done already, in subduing so great a part of the world unto himself, which once sate in darkness and in the shadow of death.

DISCOURSE XXXVII.

PROVERBS 4. 23.

Keep thy heart with all diligence [Heb. מִכָּל-מִשְׁמֶר above all keeping:] For out of it are the issues of life.

VERY way of man (saith the same mouth which uttered this) is right in his own eyes : but the Lord pondereth the hearts, Prov. 21. 2. And chap. 16. 2. All the ways of man are clean in his own eyes : but the Lord weigheth the spirits. Which words have this Discretive sense, that Although the eyes of men judge of the rightness of the ways of men by that which appeareth to the eye : yet God he is not as man, nor judgeth like him ; but he pondereth the heart and spirit. Therefore in Scripture he is styled A God that searcheth the heart and reins : Jer. 17. 10. I the Lord search the heart, I trie the reins ; even to give every man according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings. Which words our Saviour useth Rev. 2. 23. in his Epistle to Thyatira, I am he which searcheth the reins and the hearts ; and I will give unto every one of you according to your works : that is, Men esteem of works as they see ; but I judge and reward them as I see. Men punish and reward according to the outside only, which comes under the view and stands in awe of men : but God judges and rewards according to the Heart or inward man, which he only sees, and which therefore stands in awe and fear of none but him. For as for the outward act, it may as well be done for the praise and awe of men, as for love and fear of God ; and therefore by it cannot be discerned whether our obedience be to God or man : But the Heart is that divine Touch-stone, as that which hath none to fear, none to please, none to approve it self unto, but him who alone sees it and is only able to try and examine it,

If therefore any Precept, any Admonition in the whole Book of God deserve the best of our attention to hear, and greatest care to put in practice, this of my Text is worthy to be accounted of that number ; Keep thy heart above all keeping : For out of it are the issues of life.

The words divide themselves into two parts ; An Admonition, and A Motive. The Admonition, Keep thy heart above all keeping : The Motive, For out of it are the issues of life ; that is, Even as in the life of nature, the Heart is the fountain of living, and the well-spring of all operations of life ; so in the life of grace, we live to God through it.

In the Admonition consider 1. The Act, Keep : 2. The Object what we are to keep, our Heart : 3. The Manner and Means how it must be kept, with all diligence, or above all keeping.

I.
The Admonition. Keep thy Heart, &c.

I.
The Act, Keep.

Of the Act Keep I shall not need say much ; it is an easie word, and we shall not forget it in that which follows, but ever and anon have occasion to repeat it. Only here observe in general, That our Hearts are untrusty, unruly, and obvious to be surprised ; for such things we are wont to keep : and so much therefore is implied, in that they are to be kept, else they needed no keeping. This is therefore the condition of our Hearts. 1. They are untrusty. The heart is deceitful above all things, Jer. 17. 9. Therefore it stands in hand to watch it, to suspect it, and deal with it as we would with a notable Jugler or with an untrusty and pilfering servant, to have a jealous and a watchful eye over it : For if our eye be never so little off, it will presently break out into some unlawful liberty or other. 2. It is an unruly thing ; if it be once lost, a man cannot recover it again without much time and labour. For it is like unto a wild horse ; if the bridle be once let go, he will be gone, and not gotten again in haste ; yea it may be we shall be forced to spend as much time in recovering him, as would have served to have dispatched our whole journey : So if the bridle of watchfulness be once let go, and our Hearts get loose, they will not easily be regained ;

Prov. 4. 23.

gained; it will ask us no small time to temper and tune them again for the service of God. Lastly, our hearts are continually liable to surprise; we walk in the midst of snares, encompassed with dangers on every side. What is that almost which will not entice and allure so fickle a thing as the Heart from God? We can be secure of it at no time, neither sleeping nor waking; in no place, neither house nor street, neither bed nor board; not in our Closet, no not in the Church and Pulpit.

T H U S much shall suffice to have been briefly observed by way of implication from the Act, Keep.

II.

The Object,
Thy Heart.

Now I come to the Object it self, The Heart, Keep thy Heart. By Heart we must understand the inward thoughts, motions and affections of the Soul and Spirit, whereof the Heart is the Chamber. But not a natural man's Heart, for that is not worth a keeping; but such a Heart as lives to God-ward, a good and gracious heart, which consists in two properties, in Purity and Loyalty. This is the state and temper we must keep our Hearts in. I will speak of them in order.

I.

Matt. 5. 8.

And first of Purity and Cleanness: We must keep our Hearts in Purity and Cleanness; For Blessed are the pure in Heart, for they shall see God; and none but such shall ever see him. It behoves us therefore to know what this Cleanness is, the having or not having whereof concerns us so nearly. Know then, A clean or pure Heart is that which loaths sin, and loves righteousness. For the better understanding whereof, we must further know, That an absolute cleanness and pureness of the heart and soul from sin is not attainable in this life: Prov. 20. 9. Who can say, I have made my heart clean, I am pure from my sin? Yet is there a cleanness of heart which must be had, and without which we shall never see God, as you heard before. Such was that which David prays for, Psal. 51. 10. Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me. And 2 Tim. 2. 22. true Christians are described to be such as call upon the Lord out of a pure heart. 1 Tim. 1. 5. The end of the Commandment, saith the Apostle, is charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned. And himself 2 Tim. 1. 3. thanks God whom he served from his forefathers with a pure conscience.

But if this Purity of the heart were no other than a total freedom thereof from all unclean thoughts and sinful motions and desires, in such sort as a man should never be troubled and defiled with them; alas! who then should see God? who should be saved? That Cleanness therefore, that measure of Purity which God requires to be in the heart of every one who shall see him, and with whom he will vouchsafe to dwell, is (as I told you) the loathing of sin, and the love of righteousness: that is an accepted Cleanness through Faith, when the hate of impurity and love of cleanness in the heart is accepted with God for cleanness and pureness it self. Though not a cleanness of all our affections, yet at least (and what can God require less?) an affection to all cleanness: For God accepts the will for the deed. If we love, if we desire, if we delight heartily in that which is clean and pure in the eyes of God; if we hate and abhor, if we loath in our selves all sinful impurities and pollutions both of flesh and spirit; howsoever we find in our selves a great want of the one, and our hearts much and often vexed and troubled with the other; yet is this affection of our hearts accepted with God for a pure and cleansed heart indeed. And where this disposition is, the heart cannot chuse but grow cleaner and cleaner, even with real and formal cleanness. For a man cannot but cherish that which he loveth, and rid himself as much as may be of what he loatheth. So he that loveth and affecteth cleanness of heart, will cherish and make much of every good motion which the Spirit of God shall put into it; and if he indeed loath and abhor unclean and sinful thoughts, will do his best to stifle them and remove them far from him.

This Cleanness and Purity of Heart is that which the Scripture styleth Holiness, even that Holiness without which, S. Paul tells us, Heb. 12. 14. no man shall see the Lord. For in the Law, the legal cleansing, washing and purging of that which any way belonged to God or was prepared for his presence and service, is called sanctifying or hallowing, Exod. 19. 10. When the Lord was to come down upon Mount Sinai, Go unto the People, (saith he to Moses) and sanctify them to day and to morrow, and let them wash their clothes. 2 Chron. 29. 5. Hezekiah saith to the Levites, Sanctify now your selves, and sanctify the house of the Lord God of your fathers, and carry forth the filthiness out of the holy place. And accordingly in the 16. ver. the Priests go in to cleanse it; which cleansing in the next verse is called their sanctifying it. In Dent. 23. 14. where a law is given for cleanness and neatness in the Camp, the reason is rendered in these words, For the Lord thy God walketh in the midst of the Camp, to deliver thee,

Dis. XXXVII. Apprehension of God's presence causeth Purity of heart. 201 thee, and to give up thine enemies before thee: therefore shall thy Camp be holy, that he see no unclean thing in thee, and turn away from thee. The same expression S. Paul applies to spiritual cleansing, 2 Cor. 7. 1. Let us (saith he) cleanse our selves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. Here, with S. Paul also, Holiness is Cleansing, and Cleansing is Holiness. So Eph. 5. 26. That he might sanctifie and cleanse it, &c.

Prov. 4. 23.

As therefore under the Law that place was not fit to entertain the presence of God, nor any thing duly prepared to approach or come near him, which was not thus externally cleansed and sanctified: Such is the case of the inward cleansing of the heart; unless it be sanctified with purity and cleanness, God will never dwell in it, nor suffer ought from it as acceptable to come near him. Wherefore it is not without good reason we pray in our Liturgie, O Lord, make clean our hearts within us; And take not thy holy Spirit from us: For God's Spirit will not dwell in a sty; it is a clean Spirit, and will have a clean habitation. That which S. Paul speaks of the whole man (2 Cor. 6. 16, 17.) Ye are the Temple of the living God, wherefore touch no unclean thing, and I will receive you, is principally true of the heart and spirit. The rest of the Body is but as the Court of the Temple; but the Seat of his presence in the spiritual man, as the Holy place, is the Heart: even as it is also the Seat of life in the natural; primum vivens & ultimum moriens, the first that lives and the last that dies.

But by what means should a man get and keep such a Heart as this? How is this Holiness and Cleanness of heart to be come by? I answer, The General means on our part to obtain this and all other Graces of God is faithful and devout Prayer; But this being common to all Graces, is not proper to be spoken of in this place. Let us therefore see a means more special and peculiar for obtaining this Cleanness and Purity of heart; such a one as though it may have some use for other Graces, yet I think is more proper unto this than unto any other whatsoever; and that is, For a man always to possess his heart with the apprehension of God's presence, and to walk before him as in his eye. Wheresoever thou art, there is an Eye that sees thee, an Ear that hears thee, and a Hand that registreth thy most secret thoughts: For the ways of man (saith Solomon, Prov. 5. 21.) are before the eyes of the Lord, and he pondereth all his goings. How much ashamed would we be that any one we loved and honoured should surprise us in our corporal uncleanness, to see and behold any nasty pollution either of our bodies or chambers? How would a man blush and be confounded to be taken and seen * in the manner, as we speak? But every unclean thought, wicked desire and motion of our heart, is more open and revealed to the eyes of God than the works themselves, if we should put them in execution, could be visible to the eyes of men. Yea and these thoughts and desires wherewith our hearts are besmeared are as foul, ugly and loathsome in his sight, as the works themselves would appear shameful in the eyes of men, if we should commit them openly in the street and in the sight of the Sun. Nay suppose that men could see our hearts as well as they may our out-works would we not be as much ashamed they should behold the foulness of the one, as see the shamefulnes of the other? Consider it; What if such a Patron, such a Friend, such a one to whom I desire to approve my self, should know what I now ruminate in my heart; what unchast pollution, what other abhorred desire and thought it now wallows and delights in? should I not blush and be ashamed?

* εναντιος

What horrible Atheism doth this argue, That the presence of man, yea sometimes of a little child, should hinder us from that wickedness which God's presence cannot? If we did thoroughly and indeed believe this Ubiquity of God's Eye, and let it make a firm impression in our minds, how would it quash the first rising of evil thoughts in our hearts? The eye of man draws from us a care of our outward behaviour; why then should not the All-seeing Eye of God, if we loved him, if we honoured him, if we desired at all to approve our selves unto him, draw from us a care of the inward behaviour of the Heart? since he sees thy Heart better than man sees thy Face, and understands thy Thoughts better than any man thy Works and Words. Little children when in the midst of their disorders they spie once their Father's eye, they are hushed presently: So should it be with us, when, through forgetfulness of this All-seeing Eye of our Heavenly Father continually overlooking us, our Hearts begin to break loose and to sport themselves in vain and idle thoughts and desires, then should we consider that all this while God looked upon us and beheld our misbehaviour; then should we cry him mercy with Jacob at Bethel, surely God was here, and I was not aware. Gen. 28. 15.

And

Prov. 4. 23.

And thus I come to the second requisite of that gracious Temper a good Heart must be kept unto, which is Loyalty unto God; We must keep a loyal heart. The Loyalty of the heart to God consisteth in an universal purpose of obedience, and resolution against all sin, without Reservation and Exception. Sceptra non ferunt socium; Kings can endure no copartners. Nor can a purpose of obedience mingled with Exceptions and Reservations stand with a true faith and allegiance to Christ our Lord. In anima in qua peccatum regnaverit, non potest Dei regnare regnum, saith S. Jerome; In the Soul where sin reigns and has got dominion, God's Kingdom can never be set up nor established. For how can he be a faithful servant of Christ, who still holdeth correspondence with, and is a Pensioner to, his Arch-enemy the Devil? Even such an one is he who hath any sin which he holds so dear, that he hath no purpose nor will to part with it. What will it profit thee to keep thy Heart at all, unless thou keepest it loyal? Will God accept a piece of thy Heart? No, he will have a whole Heart and a whole Soul, or none. Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with thy whole heart, and whole mind: otherwise thou keepest not thy heart to God, but betrayest it unto the Devil. For one breach in the walls of a City exposeth it to the surprise of an enemy; one leak in a Ship neglected will sink it at last into the bottom of the Sea.

Eccles. 10. 1.

1. If thou wilt therefore have a Loyal heart, know that such a heart cherisheth no darling sin, no Herodias, no bosome-sin; such a dead fly as this will mar the whole box of ointment.

Matt. 23. 24.

2. A Sound and Loyal heart is not that which boggles and scruples at small sins, but makes no conscience of greater, like the Pharisees straining at a Gnat, and swallowing a Camel; nor the contrary, whose conscience is only for the greater matters of the Law, Mercy and Judgment, without any regard of Mint or Anise. A Loyal heart is like unto the Eye troubled with the least mote.

2 King. 10. 18, &c.
* Ver. 29.

3. A Loyal heart as it hates all sins, so at all times. Sometimes the unsound heart will hate sin, when there is no benefit by it; but if it chance to be once beneficial to our selves, then we love it. Here is the trial of a Loyal heart to God, to prefer virtue before vice then, when in humane reason virtue shall be the loser, vice the gainer. This note discovered Jehu, who destroyed the worship of Baal with a great shew of zeal; but when it came to * Jeroboam's Calves, he dispensed with them, lest it might prove dangerous to his Kingdom, if the Israelites should go worship at Jerusalem.

A Loyal heart and a Perfect heart the same.

שלם

4. To conclude; A Loyal heart is that which the Scripture calls in the old Testament A perfect heart, לֵב שָׁלֵם, or תָּמִים. Not perfect in respect of degrees, for such a perfection is not attainable in this life; but perfect in respect of parts; Cor integrum, a heart wherein no part is wholly wanting, howsoever weak and a great deal short of due proportion. 1 Kings 11. 4. when *Solomon was old, his wives turned away his heart after other Gods, and his heart was not * perfect with his God, as was the Heart of David his Father*: not because he served not the Lord at all, but that he served him not only and intirely. Joshua 24. 14. Now therefore, saith he, fear the Lord, and serve him in sincerity and truth, (Heb. בְּתָמִים in perfectness and truth,) and put away the Gods which your Fathers served: which was as much as to say, Serve the Lord wholly, and quite renounce all service to others. 2 Kings 20. 3. *Hezekiah prays in his sickness, Lord, I have walked before thee in truth, and with a * perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy sight*. He saith not, he had done perfect Actions, or performed perfect service, (for who can do such?) but yet that he walked with a perfect heart, that is, with a loyal heart before God. So 1 Kings 15. 14. it is said, That though Asa failed in his Reformation, and the high places were not removed; nevertheless his heart was * perfect (that is, loyal) with the Lord all his dayes.

שלם

שלם

THUS much shall suffice to have spoken of the Act, Keep; and of the Heart, the Object of our keeping: which are the two first things I considered in this Admonition.

III.

The manner
how the Heart is to be kept.
With all diligence.

The Third remains, which is the Manner or Means how our heart is to be kept, viz. with all diligence, or above all keeping saith the Text: that is, with the best, the surest, the chiefest kind of keeping; which is not only now and then to look unto it, but to set a continual guard about it. Nature hath placed the Heart in the most fenced part of the body, having the Breast as a natural Corset to defend it. If the Heart be in fear or danger, all the blood and spirits in the body will forsake the outward parts, and run to preserve and succour it. If Nature be so provident for that which is but the Fountain of a natural life, what care should the spiritual man have to keep his heart and soul guarded and fortified against all annoyances spiritual? The life

life we lose, if this be wounded or poisoned, is inestimable; the other of Nature is of no great value.

Prov. 4. 23.

Yea but perhaps a natural man's heart is liable to more natural dangers than the heart of a man that lives to God-ward is to spiritual annoyances. I answer, The contrary is true: For the Heart we speak of, whence the Issues of the life of grace proceed, is like a City every moment liable both to inward commotion and outward assault: Within, the fountain of original Impurity is continually more or less bubbling with rebellion; Without, the World and the Devil continually either assault it, or lye in Ambuscado to surprise it. The world batters it with three great and dangerous Engines, of Pleasures, Riches, and Honours, wherewith she endeavoureth to lay it waste, and rob it of all heavenly treasure. The Devil watcheth every opportunity to hurl in his fiery darts, to cast all into a combustion, and thereby farther to invenome and enrage the already-too-much impoisoned vitiousness and impetuosity of our corrupt nature. How needful a thing is it therefore to follow this precept of Solomon, to keep our hearts with all diligence, or above all keeping; to keep them with a continual guard, to keep a continual watch and ward, lest the enemies surprise them? Watch and pray, (saith our Saviour, Matt. 26. 41.) that ye enter not into temptation. Watch in all things, saith S. Paul to Timothy, 2 Tim. 4. 5. Be sober, be vigilant, (saith S. Peter, 1 Pet. 5. 8.) because your adversary the devil as a roaring lion walketh about, seeking whom he may devour. If the heart be to be kept with all diligence, or above the keeping of any thing else, then is this Watch we hear commanded, and this Guard of Prayer (and this is a strong Guard) to be chiefly and above all applied unto it.

But for a more particular direction of this guarding of the Heart, we must be careful to observe this order following.

1. As those who keep a City attempted or besieged by an Enemy have special care of the Gates and Posterns whereat the Enemy may get in: So must we in this Guard of the Heart watch especially over the Gates and Windows of the Soul, the senses; and above all the Eye and the Ear, whereat the Devil is wont to convey the most of those pollutions wherewith the Heart is wasted. First, concerning the Eye, David's example may warn the holiest men to the world's end to keep a watchful jealousy over it. What a number of Cut-throats did one idle glance upon Bathsheba let in, who made that Royal Heart, whose uprightness God so much approved, to become a sty of uncleanness, and robbed it of those heavenly ornaments wherewith it was so plentifully adorned? For the Ear, take heed of obscene and wanton talk, which by those Doors or Windows entering like Balls of Wild-fire, inflame the Heart with lust. We must beware also of the slanderer's mouth and backbiters tongue, whose lying reports and malicious tales, if they get in, would sow in thine heart the seeds of heart-burning spight and mental murder, which in that sinful soil will fructifie very rankly. And think them no small sins which make thee guilty of innocent blood; for thine heart and tongue may kill thy brother as well as thy hand.

2. As those who keep and defend a City make much of such as are faithful, trusty and serviceable; and if any such come, will entertain and welcome them with much kindness; but a Traitor, or one of the enemy's party, they presently cut short as soon as they discover him: So must we make exceedingly much of all good motions put into our hearts by God's Spirit, howsoever occasioned, whether by the Word of God, mindfulness of death, good Admonition, some special cross or extraordinary mercy, any way at any time: These are our Hearts friends; we must cherish, encrease and improve them to the utmost with meditation, prayer and practice. But, on the contrary, we must resist and crush every exorbitant thought which draws to sin at the first rising. Tutissimum est, It is most safe (saith S. Austin Epist. 142.) for the Soul to accustom it self to discern of its thoughts; & ad primum animi motum, vel probare, vel reprobare, quid cogitat; ut vel bonas cognationes alat, vel statim extinguat malas; and at the first motion thereof either to approve or else to disallow what the Mind is thinking of; and so either to cherish and improve the thoughts and motions of the Mind if good, or presently to extinguish them if evil.

3. Lastly, Let him that will indeed guard his Heart as it should be, take heed of familiar and friendly converse with lewd, prophane and ungracious company. There is a strange attraction in ill company to poison and pervert even the best dispositions. He that toucheth pitch (saith * the Son of Sirach) shall be defiled therewith. Can a man take fire in his bosom (saith Solomon) and his clothes not be burnt? For believe it, when a man is accustomed once and wonted to behold lewd and ungodly behaviour, there steals upon him insensibly, first, a dislike of sober courses; next, a plea-* Ecclus. 13. 1.

Prov. 6. 27.

ling

Prov. 4. 23.

1 King. 12. 27.

II.

The Motive.
For out of it are the Issues of life.

sing approbation of the contrary ; and so presently, an habitual change of affections and demeanour into the manners and conditions of our companions. It is a point that many will not believe, but few or none did ever try but to their cost. It was wise counsel, had it not been in a sinful business, which Jeroboam advised; If this people (saith he) go up to sacrifice at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this people turn again to their lord, even to Rehoboam king of Judah, and they shall kill me, and go again to Rehoboam king of Judah. O that some men would be as wise for their good as he was for his sin!

THUS I have done with the first part of my Text, The Admonition, Keep thy heart with all diligence, or above all keeping: Now I proceed to the Motive, For out of it are the issues of life; that is, All spiritual life and living actions issue from thence. All living devotion, all living service and worship of God issues from the Heart, from those cleansed and loyal affections and dispositions of the Soul and inward man whereof I spake before. Where such a Heart is not the Fountain, there no action to Godward liveth, but is spiritually dead, how gay and glorious soever it may outwardly seem. No outward performance whatsoever, be it never so conformable and like unto a godly man's action, yet if it be not rooted in the Heart inwardly sanctified, it is no issue of spiritual life, nor acceptable with God. Even as Statues and Puppets do move their eyes, their hands, their feet, like unto living men; yet are they not living actions, because they come not from an inward Soul, the fountain of life, but from the artificial poise of weights and device of wheels set by the workman: So is it here with heartless actions; they are like the actions of true Christians, but not Christian actions; because they issue not from a Heart sanctified with purity and loyalty in the presence of God who tries the heart and reins, but from the poise of vain-glory, from the wheels of some external respects and advantages, from a rotten heart which wrought not for the love of God but for the praise of men. As therefore we judge of the state of natural life by the Pulse and beating of the Heart; so must we do of spiritual. No member of the body performs any action of natural life, wherein a Pulse derived from the Heart beats not: So is it in the spiritual man and the actions of Grace; That lives not, which some gracious and affectionate influence from the Heart quickens not.

Now this Issuing of our works and actions from the Heart is that which is called Sincerity and Truth, so much commended unto us in Scripture: For this Sincerity and Truth which is said to be in the works and actions of all such as fear and serve the Lord with acceptance, is nothing else but an agreement of the outward work seen of men with the inward and futable affection and meaning of the heart, which God and our selves alone are privie to. For as our words and speeches have truth in them when we speak as we think; so our works and actions are done in sincerity and truth, when they are done according to our heart's affection. Sincerity therefore and Truth is the life of all our works of devotion and obedience unto God; without this they are nothing but a carcase; they are dead, they live not, neither doth God accept them: For he desireth truth in the inward parts, Psal. 51. 6. that is, truth which proceedeth or issueth from the inward parts. The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him, that call upon him in truth, Psal. 145. 18. For God is a Spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth, John 4. 24. Whatsoever ye do, (saith S. Paul, Col. 3. 23.) do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men. Our faith must be unfeigned, 1 Tim. 1. 5. that is, in truth and in sincerity. Also our Love must not be in speech and tongue only, but in deed and truth, 1 John 3. 18.

And this is the highest Perfection attainable in this life, for which God accepteth of our obedience as perfect which springeth from it, though it be stained with much corruption and full of imperfection: That which is wanting in the measure of obedience and holiness, is made up in the truth and sincerity thereof. If it have not this, whatsoever it be, it is good for nothing, because it wants the Issue of life.

And such Actions are all the Actions of Hypocrites: For Hypocrisie is the contrary to Sincerity; and wheresoever Sincerity and Truth is not, there Hypocrisie is, being nothing else but a counterfeiting and falsehood of our actions, when they come not from a Heart futable affected: and therefore is otherwise in Scripture understood by the name of Guile; when those who serve God in sincerity and truth, are said to be without guile, that is, without hypocrisie. So Nathanael (John 1. 47.) is called an Israelite indeed, in whom there was no guile. And of the Virgin-Saints (Rev. 14. 5.) it is said, that in their mouth was found no guile; for they are without fault before the Throne of God: that is, they served God without hypocrisy, in sincerity and truth; and therefore God accepted of their obedience as if it were without fault and imperfection; as he is wont to do the works of those who serve him in that manner. If therefore Sincerity be the life of our obedience, and that which makes it graceful in the eyes of God; then is Hypocrisy the death thereof, which makes him loath and abhor it as a stinking carcase.

Throne

Prov. 4. 23.

Hitherto have I spoken of the Influence of life into a Christian's actions in general. But as in natural life, so in spiritual, are many Branches, as the words of my Text imply; speaking not singularly of one Issue, but plurally of many Issues of life. For that which lives, exerciseth many living acts, as so many streams flowing from the Fountain of life; none of which belong unto that which liveth not. These Issues in Nature are five; Health, Nourishment, Growth, Sense, and Motion: and the Heart is the Fountain of them all; without it they are not, they cannot be; but as it fareth, so fare they all. The like unto these are to be found in our spiritual life, of which I will speak somewhat in special, the rather because every of them are as so many Motives to incite us to the attainment of this life to God-ward, by serving him in Sincerity and Truth.

1. The first Issue of spiritual life, flowing from the Heart, is spiritual Health. For the curing of our Souls of their Spiritual diseases must begin at the Heart, and the inward causes of corruption must thence be purged, before there can be any true Reformation or sound Health in the outward parts: Even as the heat of the Face is not much abated by casting water and cooling things upon it, but by allaying inwardly the heat of the Liver. Again, That which seems to spring and flourish in our lives, unless it be rooted in the Heart, will wither and die. The Fig-tree that only made a shew with leaves, having no fruit; in the end, being cursed, lost the leaves too wherewith it deceived our Saviour. So the Seed which sprouted upon the stony ground is said to have withered, because it had no root. And if an Apple seem never so beautiful, yet if it be rotten at the core, it will quickly putrifie.

Matth. 21.

Matth. 13. 6.

2. The second Issue of spiritual life is spiritual Nutrition, whereby the Soul continually feeds upon Christ in his Word and Sacraments. But this is in none whose works and actions issue not from the Heart by Sincerity and Truth. For where Hunger and Thirst is not, the body is not nourished: He must have a stomach to his meat that will have good by it: Chewing in his mouth will not do it, though he swallow it; if his stomach be against it, he will vomit it up again. And can this spiritual hunger and spiritual thirst be where the inward man is not sanctified? Can he have a Spiritual stomach whose heart is not cleansed?

3. The third Issue of spiritual life is spiritual Growth. It is God's wont to reward the sincerity of a little grace with abundance of great graces. Nathanael, a man of no great knowledg, yet being a true Israelite, void of guile, is further enlightened by our Saviour, who gives him a sight of the true Messiah, endues him with true faith, and promises him still greater matters. A weak and dim knowledg had the Eunuch and Cornelius in the Mystery of Godliness: yet because they worshipped God sincerely, an Evangelist was sent to the one, and an * Angel and an Apostle to the other, to give them clearer light of the Gospel and a fuller largess of spiritual gifts. The curse of God is upon Hypocrisy, to destroy a great deal, a great stock of grace; but his blessing is upon Sincerity, to improve a little portion to a greater measure. A little Spring is better than a great Pond; for in Summer, when Ponds are dried up, little Springs will still hold out.

Acts 8. 29.
* Ch. 12. 3. 20.

4. The fourth Issue of spiritual life is spiritual Sense, the Sense and feeling of the favour of God: This no man shall ever find who lives not the life of sincerity. For this is the most sound and undeceivable evidence of our portion and interest in the power and purity of Christ's saving passion and sanctifying bloodshed.

5. The fifth Issue of spiritual life is spiritual Motion; such I call Alacrity and Courage. Sincerity is the cause of these: It makes us cheerful in all duties of service and obedience unto God; it makes us valiant and courageous in all dangers, trials and temptations; begetting in us a true, manly, generous and heroical spirit. The wicked (saith Solomon, Prov. 28. 1.) flee when no man pursueth, but the righteous are bold as a Lion.

DISCOURSE XXXVIII.

ISAIAH 55. 7.

Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.

Will not speak of the coherence of these words, for they are an entire sense of themselves, and contain in them two parts: First, The Conversion of a sinner; Secondly, The Condition of one so converted. The Conversion of a sinner is exprest in three degrees: In the forsaking of wicked ways; In the forsaking of evil thoughts; and thirdly, In returning again unto the Lord. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return to the Lord. The Condition or State wherein he stands who hath done all this, is no state of Merit, but of Mercy; no not so much as a little Merit, but even abundant Mercy. If the Lord after all this accepts him, it is because he will have mercy upon him: if our God forgive, he doth even abundantly pardon.

- I. Of these I intend to speak in order: and first of the First, which is The Conversion of a sinner, which is (as I have said) laid down in three degrees or steps, the latter always excelling the former. Even as in the Temple of Solomon, he that would approach the Mercy-seat of God must ascend through three parts of the Temple, the Court, the Holy Place, and the Holy of Holies: So must he that will attain this Condition of Mercy mount these three steps of Repentance, that he may enter into that glorious Sanctuary which is not made with hands, where the great God that shews mercy unto thousands lives for ever and ever.

The first two of these forementioned degrees [ To forsake a wicked way, To rid the heart of evil thoughts ] lest they seem but one thing exprest in many words, I must handle both together, that by comparing I may the better distinguish them.

As for the latter therefore of these words, they have no great difficulty, and therefore will not need much explication; but in the former [ Let the wicked man forsake his way ] the Metaphor of way causeth some obscurity, which I think is thus to be unfolded. Every way implies a walking, a way being that wherein men use to walk: In whatsoever sense therefore the Metaphor of walking is taken elsewhere in Scripture, in the same is way taken here. But To walk, in Scripture, seems in a special and proper sense to signify the outward life and conversation of men. For as in the natural man the act of progression or moving to and fro is the most external act of all others, and the most obvious to the sense of every one: So in a man spiritually considered, his way or walking should be the outward actions of his life, which are or may be seen of others. And as in the natural man, his moving to or fro is the execution of the hidden intendments of his Fancy: So in a man spiritually considered, To walk is to put in execution outwardly what the Heart conceives inwardly.

I will not deny but this phrase of walking, or treading out a way is in Scripture sometimes taken more largely for the whole course of our Life whatsoever: but here the Antithesis of the words following, viz. evil thoughts, do manifestly imply that the former, viz. a wicked man's way, is to be taken for an evil Conversation, in the sense I have spoken. So also in Psal. 1. 1. Blessed is the man that hath not walked in the counsel of the ungodly; the collation of walking with ungodly counsel may warrant the like expression, that the counsel of the ungodly should signify evil thoughts and purposes, walking in these counsels the practice and execution of them.

Moreover, if I did delight in such subtilties, I might confirm this Exposition by the word here used for a wicked man, רשע, which signifies properly Ποιητής, a laborious sinner, a practitioner in sin; the verb רשע signifying to make a stir, to be be exceeding busie, unquiet, or troublesome: whence * some do expound that Eccles. 7. 17. אל תרשע Be not too wicked, for Be not too busie or too stirring; Keep not too great a coile, namely in things of this world. Semblably here, Let the wicked man forsake his way, is, Let him that bestirs himself in the execution of sinful counsels, leave his busie practice; and in the next place, he that hath but evil thoughts or bad desires, purge his heart of them also. Let the man who walks wickedly in his outward conversation, forsake his evil way; this is the first step of a Convert: But more than this, Let him that hath but an evil heart, though his actions were outwardly blameless, banish even all his evil thoughts and cogitations; and this is the second degree of a sinner's conversion.

Isaiah 55. 7.
* Vide Mercerum in locum, & R. Kimch.
lib. Radicum in voce רשע

This Exposition therefore being taken for a ground, now I come to the Observations I collect from thence. The first Observation I gather, is common to both these degrees of a sinner's conversion; and that is from the word [forsake:] For to forsake is an Emphatical word; To forsake sin is more than a bare refraining from sin, or a withdrawing a mans self from doing wickedness; To forsake sin is to give over all acquaintance, all dealing with sin, or to foregoe it altogether: For a man that refrains a friend's company, is not by and by said to forsake him; no more can he that only refrains from sin be said to forsake it.

Hence therefore we learn, That whosoever retains any one darling sin, is no forsaker of sin, though he refrain from all other; for this is not to break off all acquaintance with sin, but rather to make choice of his sin, to chuse what sin he will use, and what sin he will refuse. Thus did Herod in the Gospel, he reformed many things at the preaching of John Baptist, but still he kept Herodias his brother Philip's wife Mark 6. 19, 20. But we must know that he that keeps any one sin, hath forsaken none: so saith S. James, chap. 2. vers. 10. He that offends in one point, he is guilty of all. God must have our whole heart or none, he will not be served by halves: For that were to say as David said to Mephibosheth, 2 Sam. 19. 29. concerning his lands, Thou and Ziba divide the lands; so we, God and the Devil his slave divide our hearts between them.

What will it profit to guard never so strongly all the other parts of a City walls, if any one part be left open for the enemy to enter? or what is a Ship the safer, though all other parts be strong and sound, if but one leaking hole be unstopped? will not this sink the whole Ship, be it never so sound? Even just so will it be with us, if we leave any one place in our Soul for any one sin to enter. Do we not know that a little crack in one place of a Bell mairs the sound as well as if it were clean through? So will any one crack of sin marr the musick of our Souls in the ears of Almighty. Do we not know that the laying but a finger upon the edge of a thing which giveth sound, damps the sound, as well as the whole hand? Even so if the Devil lay but his finger upon our heart, he damps all our actions of devotion, and makes them give but a dead sound in the hearing of the Lord of Heaven. How true this is, I appeal unto every man's conscience who hears me this day, whether he finds not, in his own experience, that the cherishing of any one Sin makes him dead-hearted toward God, dull and heavie in all works of devotion.

THUS much of this general Observation: Now I come to several Observations I gather from the several parts. The first whereof was (as you may remember) The forsaking of wicked ways, which I expounded in this place, The forsaking of sin in our outward walkings and conversation before men. If this therefore be the First degree of Conversion, then may we learn, That those who want this, have not gone the first step of a new life. Indeed in the eyes of God, who sees that which no body else can see, no man appeareth blameless or free from sin: But that those who are entred the way of a new and holy life should walk so, that men may not accuse them of open crimes, this, I say, is required of every true Convert. So it is said of Zachary and Elizabeth (Luke 1. 6.) that they walked in the Commandments of God blameless; yea even many Heathen men have comethus far, that men could not accuse them, and yet they perished everlastingly.

Let no man therefore deceive or flatter himself; Those who fall into open and grievous sins, are not yet in the state of a true convert sinner. If any man (saith S. James 1. 26.) seem to be religious, and bridles not his tongue; he deceiveth his own heart, his religion is vain. What S. James saith of wicked speakers, may be said of open wicked doers: if any man who is a drunkard, an extortioner, or falls into such open sins, if he seem religious, he deceiveth his own heart; his Religion is in vain. Remember therefore what Christ saith in the Gospel, and let your light so shine before men, that they seeing your good works, may glorifie your Father which is in heaven.

Matth. 5. 16.

Isaiah 55. 7.
2.

Matt. 10. 33.

II.

I.

Rom. 7. 7.

Secondly, If a Reformed conversation before men be required of every true Convert, then are they deceived who think it sufficient if they keep their hearts to God, though they apply their outward and bodily actions unto mens liking. No matter, they think, what their speeches and gesture and their outward seeming be, so that in their hearts they condemn and abhor such sinful actions as outwardly they seem to approve. This is the opinion of too-too many: But let us hear what our Saviour Christ saith, He that denieth me before men, him will I deny before my Father which is in heaven. Would any man excuse his wife's adultery, though she should say never so often she kept her heart and love only unto him? No more will Christ excuse us, when we yield our outward man to wickedness, though we say we keep our hearts intire to him. Christ suffered not only in Soul, but also in Body, that he might redeem us both Body and Soul from everlasting destruction: and shall not we glorifie him with both? Yes verily; and since God hath given us both a Body and a Soul, it becomes us (as S. Paul saith, 2 Cor. 7. 1.) to cleanse our selves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.

T H U S having spoken sufficiently of the first degree of Repentance, I come unto the second, which is contained in these words, Forsaking of evil thoughts. Whence first I observe, That Concupiscence, or the evil dispositions or motions of our hearts, are sins before God, though we never consent to put them in execution. For this is the style of the holy Ghost in my Text, not only to call the bad liver a wicked man, but the owner too of evil motions, unrighteous. If we seek for a Law whereof they are a breach, it is the last Commandment of the Decalogue, which prohibits all irregularity of our desires and thoughts whatsoever. Non concupisces, Thou shalt not so much as covet any thing amiss; if thou dost, it will be sin. The natural man could not know thus much; S. Paul himself confessing, that he had never known concupiscence to be sin, had not the Law said, Non concupisces, Thou shalt not covet. Concupiscence he calls not the Faculty or nature of the Act it self, but the Anomaly of the Act; not the desire only, but every motion of the heart not agreeable to the will of God; and that from the Style of this Commandment, Non concupisces. If any shall say that the inward motions of our Mind are involuntary, and past the command of the Will, and therefore not sinful; I answer, Ab initio non fuit sic, It was not so from the beginning: we procured this evil unto our selves in the sin of our first parents, and therefore the fault is our own. Secondly, It is not necessary that whatsoever is sin should be under the mastery of our Will, for so original sin should be none: But this is necessary that all should in some sort belong unto the Will; and so do our desires, affections, and all other motions (as we call them) of the Mind. If any shall further add, that the Apostle James, 1. 15. saith of Concupiscence, that it bringeth forth sin, and therefore it self not like to be sin, the Cause being always diverse from the Effect: I answer, The Apostle saith not, it is the cause of sin simply or all sin, but only of outward sins or sins of fact: and howsoever, this reason is so far from proving Concupiscence not to be sin, that it argueth the mere contrary; for that so bad an off-spring as sin cannot find a more natural parent than sin it self.

The serious consideration hereof should be a cooling to the pride of our nature, and a strong motive to Humility in the esteeming of our selves and our best actions. Alas! what are we, that any good work we do should make us so highly conceit of our selves! Let us examine our inward thoughts, our hopes, our fears, our by-respects, our vain-glory, the whole Regiment of Concupiscence; and it will make us even ashamed to think what we have done, howsoever that which is seen outwardly be blameless and glorious in the eyes of men. If the Peacocks-wings of a laudable work, or the gay feathers of seeming worth do make thee swell; do but cast thine eyes a little upon the legs whereon thou standest, upon the rotten post whereon thou hast reared thy work so glorious without, and then thou wilt cast down thy high looks, and cry with S. Paul, Rom. 7. 18. Lord, whatsoever men see without me, I know there dwelleth no good thing within me,

2.

The second thing I observe from hence is, The Priviledg the Law of God hath above the Laws of men. It is true, in the Laws of men, that Thoughts are free; but with God's Law it is not so. Mens Laws are not broken though only the outward man observe and keep them; but God's Laws are broken, if the inward man alone transgress them, be the outward man (I mean, man in outward conversation) never so conformable. And this is our meaning when we say That the Law of God only doth bind the Conscience, meaning the inward actions of the soul and spirit, those actions actions which only God and our Conscience are privy unto: But the Laws of men do bind only the outward man, that is, to the performance of outward actions, which men either do or may take notice of. Isaiah 55. 7.

Which that we may the better understand, we must know that Laws are said to bind in two regards: 1. in commanding the doing of some actions, which else were at our choice; and 2. in making liable to an agreeable punishment if they be transgressed. Now whosoever commandeth, must be Lord of what he commandeth; whosoever maketh liable to punishment, must both be able to take notice of the fault, and of power to inflict the punishment. Seeing then God alone is Lord of the soul and spirit, he alone can bind them by Commandment: Seeing God alone can take notice of the sins of the heart, and is only able to inflict the punishment, namely, everlasting death and damnation, the proper punishment which the conscience feareth; he alone may command upon pain of eternal damnation. Man's Law therefore, in this sense which I have spoken, binds not the Conscience or inward man, because no man is Lord of another's conscience, nor can take notice of the actions thereof; nor yet hath in his power to inflict the punishment which it only feareth.

In one word, conceive it thus; The actions whereunto the Conscience alone is privy are not the object of the Laws of man, but only such actions as fall within the notice of men. And yet this is also true, Though the Laws of men do not bind the Conscience, yet a man is bound in Conscience to obey the Laws of men; but this bond is from the Law of God, which commands us to use futable affections in obeying the Laws of men: Obey every ordinance of men, not for fear of punishment, but for conscience sake.

If now we did truly acknowledge this Prerogative of the Laws of God, we would witness the same by our extraordinary care in keeping them, in an extraordinary fear of breaking them. But what do we? even the clean contrary; we fear man more than God, those that can but kill the body, above him that hath power to cast both body and soul into hell-fire. Who would not be loth to break a King's laws in a King's sight? and yet for God's Laws who fears, though our most secret thoughts be always in his sight? In the outward work which men see, we are careful to restrain our hands and tongues from slipping, lest man's Law might take hold of us; but the thoughts of our heart we with all security let run at random, and never once curb them. What is this but to account the Laws of God as cobwebs, the Laws of men as chains of Iron; or openly to profess that of men we have some little fear, where they command with God; but where God commands alone, no fear at all? Even as those wicked ones whereof David speaks in the 94. Psalm, v. 7. who say, The Lord shall not see, neither shall the God of Jacob regard it. But he that planted the ear, (saith David v. 9, 10, 11.) shall he not hear? he that formed the eye, shall he not see? He that teacheth man knowledge, shall he not know? (yes) The Lord knoweth the thoughts of man, &c. Who then art thou (to use the words of Esay) that art afraid of man who shall die, and of the son of man who shall be as the grass? and forgettest the Lord who made thee, who stretched out the heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth? Ch. 51. 12, 13.

The last thing I mean to observe from these two first degrees of a sinner's conversion is, Wherein the life of a true Convert doth exceed the works both of the heathen and the hypocrite. Glorious things are spoken of Aristides, of Scipio, of Socrates: But their best works are but like unto counterfeit coin, the outside glistering with gold, but the inside lead or worse metall; their hands, their feet, their walk like the Gate of an Israelite, but their heart was uncircumcised like the heart of a Philistine; for they wanted the purity of the heart seasoned with the love of God, they wanted these cleansed thoughts, these holy affections, and therefore were their best works no better than glorious sins. Even as statues and puppets do move their eyes, their hands, their feet, like unto living men; and yet they are not living actions, because they come not from an inward soul, the Fountain of life, but from the artificial poise of weights and wheels set by the workman: Even such were the virtues of the heathens, very puppet-plays, like unto the actions of Christian men, but not Christian actions; because they came not from a pure heart, which gives life unto a Christian, but from the poise of vain-glory, from the wheels of corrupt affections, from a rotten heart, which wrought not for the love of God, but for the praise of men.

And no better are the works of Hypocrites, nay worse: for they knew not that the heart was to be cleansed, or how it should be cleansed; but these know that God requires the heart, and yet their works are nothing but shews unto men. Such were the Pharisees, of whom Christ saith, Matth. 23. 27, 28. Wo unto you, Scribes

Isaiah 55. 7. and Pharisees, hypocrites; for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead mens bones and of all uncleanness: Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisie and iniquity; and v. 25. ye make clean the outside of the Cup and platter, but within ye are full of extortion and excess. But if we are loth (as who would not?) to share our portion with the Gentiles, or to have our lot fall with the Hypocrites; let our righteousness then exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees: let us remember that God challenges the heart and inward man as his peculiar due; Let us not therefore only forsake the walk and external gate of wickedness, but even bad thoughts and evil motions, with all the occasions of them: Let us (I say) with Solomon, Prov. 4. 23. Keep our heart above all keeping, for out of it are the issues of life: But the joy of the hypocrite (saith Zophar, Job 20. 5.) is but for a moment. v. 6. Though his excellency mount up unto the heavens, and his head reach unto the clouds; v. 7. Yet shall he perish for ever, like his own dung.

III.

Having spoken of the two first degrees of Repentance, I come now to the third, which is Returning unto God. It is not enough to forsake the works of wickedness, or the heart to forgoe the thoughts of unrighteousness; but this is more required of a sinner, that he should return unto the Lord. He that hath gone out of his way, (and knows it) will not only make a stop and go no farther in the wrong way; but if he means to arrive at the place he desireth, will seek the new and right way and follow it; for he that standeth still, will never come at his journey's end: Even so must every sinner do in his journey of Repentance. The putting off the old man we heard before, now come we to the putting on of the new. In the two former steps we had eschewing of evil; in this we have doing of good; and without this the other is altogether vain. That tree is not called a good tree which bringeth forth no ill fruit, but that is a good Tree which bringeth forth good fruit; and Every Tree that bringeth forth no fruit, shall be hewn down and cast into the fire.

Matt. 7. 17, 19.

But for the better understanding of this, we will consider two things proper to a man that returneth; 1. To go away clean contrary to the way he went before; 2. To out-tread and obliterate his former steps. Both of these every one must perform who truly returns unto God by Repentance.

First, (I say) He must go a way clean contrary to his former way. Many men think that the way to Hell is but a little out of the way to Heaven, so that a man in a small time with small ado may cross out of the one into the other; but they are much deceived: For as Sin is more than a stepping aside, viz. a plain and direct going away from God; so is Repentance or the forsaking of sin more than a little coasting out of one way into another; crossing will not serve; there is no way in the world to come to the place we seek, but to go quite back again the way we came.

The way of pleasure in sin must be changed for as extreme a sorrow for the same. He that hath superstitiously worshipped false Gods, must now as devoutly serve the true; the tongue that hath uttered swearings and spoken blasphemies, must as plentifully sound forth the name of God in prayer and thanksgiving; the covetous man must become liberal; the oppressor of the poor as charitable in relieving them; the calumniator of his brother, a tender guarder of his credit; in fine, he that hated his brother before, must now love him as tenderly as himself.

Psalm 58.

What traveller is there that knowing himself to be in a contrary way, and admonished that he must go back again, would not return speedily? Who but a fool would not consider that the longer he went forward, the further he had to go back again; the sooner he returned, the easier would be his return; the longer he went forward, the more hard and difficult? Why, this is the case of every sinner; every step he takes, the further he is from God: How painful then and tedious will that return be which is not speedily undertaken? Nay, when looking back we shall behold the infinite distance between God and us, how can our heart almost but fail us and despair utterly that so long a way can ever be accomplished? The stork in the heavens knoweth her appointed time, (Jer. 8. 7.) the Turtle, and the Crane, and the Swallow observe the time of their coming: Let the wise man be ashamed that knows not, the sinner that considers not the time of his Return.

2.

The second thing proper to a man's returning is, to obliterate and tread out his former footing. This is also required of every truly repentant sinner, that wheresoever any footing remains of his former works, he should tread them out; for a repentant sinner must return by a line in the very path and tract of his sins. Now some sins do vanish in the act, and so leave no print behind them; and such, because they perish perish in the doing, remain not to be undone by repentance. But other sins there are which pass not away in the very doing, but leave as it were a footing behind them; I mean the work of the sin remains when the act is past, and these works are to be undone in repentance. Of this sort are sins most-what against the eighth Commandment, Robbery, Couzenage, all ill-gotten and ill-withholden gain; for in these, Restitution is as it were the recalling, undoing, and treading out the mark of the sin committed. He that hath taken a man's purse, may give it him again; but he that hath blasphemed, cannot recal his blasphemy, nor the refractory his former disobedience. He that hath taken his brother's life, cannot give it him again; nor he that hath defamed him, undo the word he hath spoken. In these and such like Restitution hath no place; but only [God forgive me] and doing the contrary hereafter. But in Robbery, Bribery, Couzenage, and all ill-gotten goods, the goods we have taken from our neighbour remaining in our hand and power, there is no repentance, no forgiveness, no returning, without restoring what we have gotten.

Italian 55. 7.

In what things Restitution takes place.

Upon this I will dwell a while, because I verily think that many men do not believe it, but think it enough to cry God mercy; but as for restoring of ought, he must pardon them. Surely Zaccheus the Publican had never learned this Evasion, who (to make good his Repentance) gave half his goods unto the poor, and promised fourfold Restitution of what he had gotten from any man wrongfully. But if we will live by Laws, and not by Examples, hear the express Law of God, Levit. 6. 2, &c. where the Lord thus speaks unto Moses: If a soul sin in fellowship or dealing, or in a thing taken away by violence, or hath deceived his neighbour, &c. or hath found that which was lost, and lieth concerning it, &c. Then it shall be, because he hath sinned and is guilty, that he shall restore what he hath taken violently, or the thing that he hath gotten deceitfully, &c. he shall even restore the principal, and adde the fifth part more thereunto in the day of his trespass-offering. The day of our trespass-offering who are Christians, is the day wherein we offer Christ unto his Father by a lively Faith for atonement for our sin; the day of our repentance or our turning to God. If the Jew's sacrifice could not be accepted without thus doing, no more shall a Christian's repentance.

Luke 12. 31

Neither will it be enough to confess our sins and cry God mercy as we say; For Numb. 5. 7. (where this same law is repeated) Those, saith the Lord, which have thus sinned, shall confess their sin which they have done, and yet recompense his Trespass too with the principal thereof, &c. Yea so rigid is the Lord in exacting this, that if the man himself who was thus wronged were dead, and had no kinsman living; yet the party offending was not so excused, but was to make a recompence unto the Lord himself, by giving it to his Priest; as ye may see in the same place, v. 8.

Hence it is that the Lord, Ezekiel 33. 14, 15. maketh Restoring a main part of Repentance or Returning unto him; If the wicked (saith he) turn from his sin, and do what is lawful and right, if he restore the pledge, give again what he hath robbed; then he shall surely live, he shall not die: If he will not do this, it is easie to imagine what will follow, namely, that he shall surely die, and not live.

But thou wilt say, I am not able to make Restitution. Why, then shew thy self willing unto thy power, for in this case God accepts the will for the deed. But take heed thou dissemble not with him that knows thy most inward thoughts; for he it is that trieth the heart and reins, and nothing can be hid from him: upon peril therefore of thy salvation deal truly with him that made thee; for he is not as man that thou shouldst mock him, or as the son of man that he should be deceived.

But thou wilt say, I cannot do it, unless I leave my wife and children to beggary. Alas! wilt thou venture thy own Soul to perish eternally, to save thy house from beggary? I must say unto thee as Peter said to Simon Magus, Acts 8. 21, 23. Thou hast neither part nor lot in the life to come, for thy heart is not right in the sight of God: Thou art in the gall of bitterness and in the bond of iniquity; thou preferrest the momentary glory of thy house before the everlasting safety of thy self. Thou fool, what will it profit thee to win the whole world, and lose thy own soul?

But I shall (thou wilt say) in so doing proclaim mine own shame unto the whole world. What then? wouldst thou not be willing to undergo a greater penance than this for thy Soul's safety? or how comes it to pass thou art more loth that men should know thy shame, than God himself who made thee? Lord, how hard will it be for a rich man to enter into the Kingdom of heaven!

If men would think of this in their unjust dealing, if they would remember this who scrape unto themselves riches by unlawful and ungodly means; if those who get by extortion, by consenuing tricks of Law, by bribery, by sacrilegious Simony, would think think

Isaiah 55. 7.

think of this ; methinks it should make them pull back their hand. For what joy and pleasure should a man take in that gain which he knows he must one day forgo as willingly as now he desireth covetously? when he might thus say with himself, "The time must come, that I must wish from the bottom of my heart that this I now do had never been done, if ever I mean to find mercy at the hands of God: The time must one day come, that I must restore all this I have thus unlawfully gotten, yea make recompence besides for the injury I have done ; or else woe worth the time that ever I was born, and cursed be the night wherein I was conceived. If men would consider this, Alas ! I shall never say unto God on my death-bed, I repent from the bottom of my heart, if I breathe one jot of this I have thus gotten ; I shall never say unto God, I wish from my soul this sin I have done were undone ; or if it were now to do again, no motive in this world should make me do it. Alas ! how can I say this, whiles it is in some sort in my power to undo sin by restoring, if I will not ? Surely he that had this in his mind, would think it would not quit the cost to attain any of this world's goods unlawfully. But let them think as they will, as sure as God is true, Without Restitution Repentance can never be true, and without true Repentance it is impossible to be saved. And thus much of this Third degree of Repentance, and of the First part of my Text.

II.

I COME now to the Second, which is The Condition and State he comes unto who hath done all this, and that (as ye hear) is a State of Mercy ; The repentant sinner is capable of the Mercy of God to pardon and forgive his sin : If the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous his thoughts : The Lord will have mercy on him, our God will abundantly pardon.

The Mercy of God is here (as you see) his loving-kindness unto a sinner, to set him free from that evil he is liable to through sin, and to restore unto him the good he hath lost thereby ; that is, with commiseration of his misery to forgive him, and restore him to that blessedness which is in the favour of God. This mercy or mercifulness of God is here exprest, first simply, in the words, The Lord will have mercy on him ; and secondly, with a degree, he will pardon abundantly. Of these I will speak briefly, and so make an end.

And first of the first : If the forgiveness of our sins, and the accepting of us into the everlasting favour of God, be a work of Mercy ; then not of any Merit or deserving on our part ; for these two cannot stand together. So saith S. Paul, Tit. 3. 5. Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he hath saved us. For if when we have done all we can, we are still the subjects of pity ; it needs must be we are still in misery ; for no man shews pity or commiseration but to those that are in a pitiful case ; wheresoever Mercy is shewn, the party aileth something : But to be in case of Merit, is no pitiful case ; what can he aile for his sin, to whom Heaven is due for his merit ? who need not be beholden to God for his kindness, but may challenge him for justice ? If this then be the manner of God, to shew mercy unto those who deserve nothing at his hands, it is our part to be like unto him : We are not in actions of charity to look upon the merit, but the misery : the bestowing of Alms is no paying of wages, or giving of rewards, but an act of holy pity. The like I might say of forgiving the offences of our brethren : If he repent him of the injury, thou art not to exact a merit of forgiveness ; but let thy love be as ingenuous unto thy brother as God's was free unto thee. ●

The last thing to be considered is, The degree of God's mercy in delivering us from our sins : It is no small favour, for he pardoneth abundantly. Amongst all the works of God his works of Mercy toward mankind are in surpassing measure : Hence it is that he proclaims himself by this as by his principal style, Exod. 34. 6. The Lord, the Lord God, merciful, gracious, long-suffering : which David expounds ( Psal. 103. 8. ) The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy : S. Paul describes him, Ephes. 2. 4. a God who is rich in mercy.

This may appear by the admirable way of our Redemption, in sending his own Son from Heaven to suffer the ignominious death of the Cross for our sake : Even so God loved the world, saith S. John, that he gave his only-begotten Son for the same. This may appear by his patience and long-suffering in enduring sin : In the 65. chap. of this Book, v. 2, 3. He spreadeth out his hands all the day unto a rebellious people, which walketh in a way that was not good, yea, which provokes him to anger continually to his face. Lastly, It may appear by that huge proportion wherein his Mercy exceeds his Vengeance. He visits the sins of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of those that hate him, but sheweth mercy unto the thousandth generation of those who love him and keep his Commandments. This may serve for our consolation in the most grievous grievous temptation about the greatness of our sin: The Lord is rich in mercy, and therefore he will forgive the most grievous sin; for the mercy of the Lord is greater than the sins of the whole world. This Argument of comfort Moses bringeth in Dent. 4. 31. Because the Lord thy God is a merciful God, he will not forsake thee, nor destroy thee, nor forget the Covenant of thy fathers which he swore unto them. Isaiah 55. 7.

John 3. 16.

Exod. 20.

DISCOURSE XXXIX.

S. MATTHEW 7. 21.

Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven; but he that doth the will of my Father which is in Heaven.

HERE are three sorts of men in the World: Some which call not Christ their Lord, as Turks, Jews and Infidels: Some which call him Lord, as all Christians; but not all in like manner: for there are two sorts of them, some which call him Lord, and that is all; others which both call him Lord, and do the will of his Father, the administration whereof is committed to him. The first of these three sorts, Those who do not so much as call Christ their Lord, it is plain they cannot be saved; for there is no other name under heaven to be saved by but by the name of Christ only. Acts 4. 12. For the second sort, Those who call Christ their Lord, that is, are Christians, and profess to believe in Christ, and hope to be saved by him, and yet do no works of obedience unto God; though such as these may think themselves in a good estate, yet our Saviour here expressly excludes them from entering into the Kingdom of Heaven. But the third sort, which do not only call Christ their Lord, but do the will of his Father, these are the only true Christians; for these there is hope, but for none other: Not every one (saith our Saviour) that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, &c.

Our Saviour foresaw there would be, among those who believed on his Name, such as would think their Faith sufficient; &c. that as for Works they might be excused, having him for their Lord and Captain of their Salvation, who himself had both undergone the punishment due for their sins, and fulfilled that obedience which they should have done; so that now there remained nothing on their part for to obtain Salvation, but to trust and rely upon him, without any endeavour at all to please God by Works, as being now become unuseful to Salvation. If ever there was a time when Christians thus deceived themselves, that time is now; as both our practice sheweth plainly by a general neglect of such Duties of Piety and Charity which amongst our fore-fathers were frequent, as also our open profession, when being exhorted to these works of Piety to God and of Charity towards our brethren, we stick not to alledge we are not bound unto them, because we look not to be saved by the merit of works, as they, but by faith in Christ alone: As though Faith in Christ excluded Works, and did not rather include them, as being that whereby they become acceptable unto God, which of themselves they are not; Or as if Works could no way conduce unto the attaining of Salvation but by way of merit and desert, and not by way of the grace and favour of God in Christ, as we shall see in the handling of this Text. We greatly now-a-days, and that most dangerously, mistake the error of our Forefathers, which was not in that they did good works; I would we did so; but because they knew not rightly the End why they did them, nor where the Value of them lay: They thought the End of doing them was to obtain eternal life, as a reward of Justice due unto them; whereas it is only of Grace and Promise in Christ Jesus: They took their Works to have such perfectness in them as would endure the Touchstone of the Law of God, yea such Worth and Value as to merit the Reward they looked for; whereas all the Value and acceptableness of our works issues from the Merits of Christ, and lies only in his righteousness communicated unto us and them by Faith,

Matth. 7. 21.

Faith, and no otherwise. But setting aside these errors of the End and of the Value of works, we must know as well as they, That not every one that saith unto Christ, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven; but he that doth the will of his Father which is in Heaven.

Now for the Explication of the Words. To call Christ Lord, is to believe in him, to acknowledge him, to look for Salvation by him, or ( as the Scripture expresseth it, Luke 6. 47. ) to come unto him; Every one (saith our Saviour there, explaining this very Text we have in hand) that cometh unto me, and heareth my words, and doth them, I will shew you who he is like: where To come unto Christ is put in stead of that which in the former was To say unto him, Lord. The doing of his Father's will is the doing of those works of obedience which his Father hath commanded in his Law, and now committed to his Son, whom he hath made the Head and King of his Church, to see executed and performed by those he bringeth to Salvation. But how, and in what manner, we shall see by and by.

Observat. 1.

The Text consists of two parts: The one negative; Not every one that saith unto Christ, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of heaven; The other affirmative; But those who do the will of his Father shall only enter thither. But these are so nearly linked together, that they cannot be handled asunder. And the Observations which I shall draw thence depend on the whole Text. The first and chiefest whereof is this, That Faith in Christ without works of obedience and amendment of life is not sufficient for salvation, and consequently not that Faith whereby a Christian is justified. For if it were, it would save us: If it be not sufficient to save us, it cannot justify us. This floweth directly from the Text, and cannot be denied; if ye remember what I said before, That to call Christ Lord, is to believe in him.

For the better understanding of this, you must take notice that there is a threefold Faith whereby men believe in Christ. There is a false Faith: there is a true Faith, but not saving: and thirdly, there is a saving Faith. A false Faith is, To believe to attain Salvation through Christ any other way than he hath ordained; as namely, to believe to attain Salvation through him without works of obedience to be accepted of God in him: which is a Faith whereof there is no Gospel. A true Faith is, To believe Salvation is to be attained through obedience to God in Jesus Christ, who by his merits and righteousness makes our selves and our works acceptable to his Father. A saving and justifying Faith is, To believe this so as to embrace and lay hold upon Christ for that end: To believe to attain Salvation through obedience to God in Christ, so as to apply our selves and rely upon Christ for that end; namely, to perform those works of obedience which God hath promised to reward with eternal life. For a Justifying Faith stayeth not only in the Brain, but stirs up the Will to receive and enjoy the good believed, according as it is promised. This motion or election of the Will is that which maketh the difference between a saving Faith which joyneth us unto Christ, and that which is true indeed, but not saving, but dogmatical and opinionative only. And this motion or applying of the Will to Christ, this embracing of Christ and the promises of the Gospel through him, is that which the Scripture (when it speaks of this faith) calleth coming unto Christ, or the receiving of him. John 1. 12. As many as received him, to them he gave power (or priviledge) to be the sons of God, even to them that believe on his Name: where, receiving and believing, one expound another. So for coming; Come unto me (saith our Saviour, Matth. 11. 28.) all ye that are heavy laden, and I will ease you. This last is very frequent. John 5. 40. Ye will not come to me (saith our Saviour) that ye might have life. And Chap. 6. 37. All that the Father giveth me, shall come unto me. Ver. 44. No man can come unto me, unless the Father draw him. 45. Every man that hath heard, and learned of the Father, cometh unto me; and such like. All which express the specification of a saving Faith, which consists in the embracing, receiving and applying of the Will to the thing believed.

What this embracing, receiving or applying unto Christ is, I will farther make plain thus. He that believeth that Christ is an atonement to God for the sins of all repentant sinners, ( and surely he is an atonement for none else, ) must repent and turn from all his sins, that so Christ may be an atonement for him; else he embraceth not what he believeth. He that believes that God in Christ will accept and reward our obedience and works of Piety, though short of perfection and of no worth in themselves, must apply himself accordingly to do works of Religion and Charity, that God in Christ may accept and reward them. For our Belief is not that saving Belief, until we apply our selves to what we believe. To believe to attain Salvation through through Christ without works of obedience to be accepted in him, is (as I have already said) a false Faith, whereof there is no Gospel, no Promise: To believe the contrary, That Christ is given of God to such only as shall receive him, to perform acceptable obedience to God through him, and yet not to apply and buckle our selves thereto, were indeed to believe what is true; but yet no saving Faith, because we embraced not the thing we believed as we believed it. Matth. 7. 21.

Thou sayest then thou hast Faith, and believest that Christ is the atonement to God for the sins of all such as leave and forsake their sins by Repentance: why then repent thee of thy sins, that Christ may be an atonement for thee. Thou sayest thou hast this Faith, That God in Jesus Christ will accept thy undeserving works and services unto eternal life: why then embrace thou Christ, and rely upon him for this end, that thou mayest do works of Piety towards God and Charity towards men, that so God in Christ may accept thee and them unto eternal life.

Now if this be the Faith which is Saving and unites us unto Christ, and no other; Observat. 1. then it is plain That a saving Faith cannot be severed from good works, because no man can embrace Christ as he is promised, but he must apply himself to do them. For out of that which hath been spoken three Reasons may be gathered for the necessity of them.

First, It is the end of our Faith and Justification by Christ, yea the end why he shed his blood for us, that we being reconciled to God in him, might bring forth fruits of righteousness, which else we could never have done. This is no Speculation, but plain Scripture. S. Peter 1 Ep. 2. 24. telleth us, that Christ his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we being dead to sin, should live unto righteousness. S. Paul, Tit. 2. 11, 12, 13, 14. The grace of God (saith he) that bringeth salvation, hath appeared unto all men; (wherefore?) Teaching us, that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, and righteously, and godly in this present world; Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Saviour Jesus Christ, Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purifie unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. These words contain the Summe of all I have hitherto told you; That Christ is therefore given us to be a Propitiation for our sins, and to justifie us, that in him we might walk before God in newness of life; so to obtain a Crown of righteousness in the world to come.

Answerable is that place Ephes. 2. 10. where the Apostle having told us, v. 8, 9. we are saved by grace, through faith, and not of works, lest any man should boast: he adds presently, (lest his meaning might be mistaken, as it is of too many) That we are God's workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained (προποτοιμασεν) that we should walk in them: as if he should say, Those works of obedience ordained by God aforetime in his Law for us to walk in, which we could not perform of our selves, now God hath as it were new moulded us in Jesus Christ, that we might perform them in him; namely, by way of acceptance, though they come short of that exactness the Law requireth. And thus to be saved is to be saved by Grace and Favour, and not by the Merit of works; because the Foundation whereby our selves and our services are approved in the eyes of God, and acquitted of guilt, (which the Scripture calleth to be justified,) is the mere Favour of God in Jesus Christ, and not any thing in us. And this way of Salvation excludes all boasting: for what have we to boast of, when all the righteousness of our works is none of ours, but Christ's imputed to us; whereby only, and not for any merit in themselves, they become acceptable and have promise of Reward? But that men should be saved by Christ, though they be idle and do nothing, I know no such Grace of God revealed in Scripture.

Now that in Christ we may perform works of righteousness which God will accept and crown, is plain by the tenour of Scripture. S. Paul, Phil. 1. 11. desires that the Philippians might be filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ unto the glory and praise of God. And the same Apostle tells the Romans, Rom. 6. 22. That being made free from sin, and become servants to God, they have their fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life; that is, as the Syriack turns it, איה להון פארא קרישא. they have holy fruits, whose end is life eternal.

And if we would seriously consider it, we should find, That the more we believe this righteousness of Faith in Christ, the more reason we have to perform works of service and obedience unto God, than if we believed it not. For if our works would not be acceptable with God unless they were compleat in every point as the Law required; if there were no reward to be looked for at the hands of God unless we could

How the Doctrine of Faith in Christ includes the greatest Enforcement and Engagement to Good works.

Matth. 7. 21.

merit it by the worthiness of our deeds ; who that considers his own weakness and insufficiency would not sooner despair, than go about to please God by works? He would think it better to do nothing at all, than to endeavour what he could never hope to attain, and so lose his labour. But we, who believe that those who serve God in Christ have their failings and wants covered with his righteousness, and so their works accepted as if they were in every point as they should be ; why should not we of all men fall to work, being sure by Christ's means and merit we shall not lose our labour ?

2.

A second Motive why we should do good works is, Because they are the Way and Means ordained by God to obtain the Reward of eternal life, without which we shall never attain it. Without holiness no man shall see God, Heb. 12. 14. Look to your selves (saith S. John Ep. 2. ver. 8.) that ye lose not those things ye have wrought, but that ye may receive a full reward. The Angel's message from heaven to devout Cornelius was, Thy prayers and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God : whereupon S. Peter inferred, That in every Nation, he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted with him, Acts 10. 4, 35. In 1 Tim. 6. 17, 18, 19. saith S. Paul, Charge them that are rich in this world — That they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate, Laying in store a good foundation against the time to come ; ἵνα ἔσται ἡμεῖς τῆς αἰωνίου ζωῆς (ut accipiant, nanciscantur) that they may receive, or obtain, eternal life.

Matth. 25. 34.
&c.

Hence it is that we shall be judged and receive sentence at the last day according to our works. Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world : For I was hungry, and ye gave me meat ; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink ; I was a stranger, and ye took me in ; naked, and ye clothed me ; I was sick, and ye visited me ; I was in prison, and ye came unto me. For inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of my brethren, ye have done it unto me. Lord, how do those look to be saved at that day, who think good works not required to Salvation, and accordingly do them not ! Can our Saviour pass this blessed Sentence on them ? think they he can ? If he should, they might truly say indeed, Lord, we have done no such matter, nor did we think our selves bound unto it ; we relied wholly upon our Faith in thy merits, and thought we had been freed from such services. What ? do they think Christ will change the form of his Sentence at that great day ? No certainly : If the Sentence for Bliss will not fit them, and be truly said of them ; the other will, and must, for there is no more ; Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the Devil and his Angels : For when I was hungry, ye gave me no meat, &c. This must be their doom, unless they suppose the righteous Judge will lie for them.

Verse 41.

And it is here further to be observed, That the Works named in this sentence of Judgment are works of the second Table, and Works of Mercy and Charity ; feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, visiting the sick ; all Almsdeeds, which men are now-a-days so much afraid of, as if they looked toward Popery, and had a tang of meriting ; for now-a-days these costly works of all others are most suspicious : But will it be so at the day of Judgment ? True it is, they merit not the Reward which shall be given them : but what then ? are we so proud we will do no works unless we may merit ? Is it not sufficient that God will reward them for Christ's sake, though they have no worth in themselves ? And thus much of the second Motive why we should do good works, Because howsoever they merit nothing, yet are they the means and way ordained by God to attain the Reward of eternal life.

3.

The third and last Motive to works of righteousness is, Because they are the only Sign and Note whereby we know our Faith is true and saving, and not counterfeit. For 1 John 1. 6. If we say we have fellowship with Christ, and walk in darkness ; we lie, and do not the truth. Chap. 2. ver. 3. Hereby we know that we know him (viz. to be our Advocate with his Father, and the Propitiation for our sins,) if we keep his Commandments. And Chap. 3. 7. Little children, let no man deceive you : He that doth righteousness is righteous, even as Christ is righteous. The same almost you may find again, Chap. 2. 29. For if every one that believeth in Christ truly and savingly believes that Salvation is to be attained by obedience to God in him, and not otherwise, and therefore embraceth and layeth hold upon him for that end ; how can such an one's Faith be fruitless ? How can he be without works, who therefore lays hold on Christ that his works and obedience may be accepted as righteous before God for his sake, and so be rewardable ? It is as possible for the Sun to be without his light or the Fire to want heat, as such a Faith to be without works.

Dis. XXXIX. Abstaining from ill not enough to bring one to Heaven. 217

Our Saviour therefore himself makes this a most sure and never-failing Note to build our assurance of Salvation upon, Luke 6. 46. where the mention of the words of my Text gives the occasion, Why call ye me Lord, Lord, (saith he) and do not the things which I say? 47. Whosoever cometh to me, and heareth my sayings, and doth them; I will shew you to whom he is like. 48. He is like a man which built an house, and digged deep, and laid the foundation on a rock: And when the flood arose, the stream beat vehemently upon that house, and could not shake it; for it was founded upon a rock. 49. But he that beareth, and doth not; is like a man that without a foundation built an house upon the earth; against which the stream did beat vehemently, and immediately it fell, and the ruine of that house was great. Whom these three Motives or Reasons will not perswade to good works, let not my Soul, O Lord, be joyned with theirs, nor my doom be as theirs must be.

A SECOND Observation out of these words, and near a-kin to the former, is, That it is not enough for a Christian to live harmlesly and abstain from ill, but he must do that which is good. For our Saviour excludes not here those only who do against the will of his Father, but those who do not his Father's will. It is doing good which he requireth, and not the not doing evil only. This is an error which taketh hold of a great part of men, even of those who would seem to be religious. He is a reformed man and acquits himself well who abstains from fornication, adultery, who is no thief, no couzener or defrauder of other men, who will not lie, or swear, or such like: But as for doing any works of Piety or Charity, they think they are not required of them.

But they are much deceived: For God requires some duties at our hands, which he may reward, not out of any merit, but out of his merciful promise in Christ. But not doing ill is no service rewardable. A servant who expects wages, must not only do his Master no harm, but some work that is good and profitable: otherwise the best Christian would be he that should live altogether idly; for none doth less harm than he that doth nothing at all. But Matth. 25. 30. He that encreased not his Master's Talent, though he had not mis-spent it, is adjudged an unprofitable servant, and cast into outer darkness, where is weeping and gnashing of teeth. So also Matth. 3. 10. The tree that beareth no good fruit is hewn down, though it bore none that was evil: The axe is laid to the root of the tree; Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewn down and cast into the fire. Matth. 21. 19. The fig-tree was cursed for having no fruit, not for having evil fruit. And the Sentence of condemnation, as you heard before, is to pass at that great day for not having done good works, not for doing ill ones: Go ye cursed, for when I was hungry, ye fed me not, &c. Matth. 25. 41, &c.

THUS having let you see how necessary it is for a Christian to joyn good works with his Faith in Christ; I will now come to shew you How you must do them, hoping I have already perswaded you that they must needs be done.

First therefore, We must do them out of Faith in Christ, that is, relying upon him only for the acceptance and rewarding of them: for in him alone God is well pleased with us and with what we do, and therefore without faith and reliance upon him it is impossible to please God. We must not think there is any worth in our works, for which any such reward as God hath promised is due: For, alas! our best works are full of imperfections, and far short of what the Law requires. Our reward therefore is not of merit, but out of the merciful promise of God in Christ: which the Apostle means, when he says, We are saved by grace, and not by works; that is, It is the grace and favour of God in Christ which makes our selves acceptable and our works rewardable, and not any desert in them or us.

Having laid this foundation; The next thing required is Sincerity of heart in doing them: We must do them out of the fear of God, and conscience of his Commandments; not out of respect of profit, or fear, or praise of men; for such as do so are Hypocrites. Not every one, saith our Saviour, that saith unto me, Lord, Lord; but he that doth the will of my Father: Now it is the will of our heavenly Father that we serve him in truth and uprightness of heart: I know (saith David, 1 Chr. 29. 17.) that thou my God triest the heart, and hast pleasure in uprightness. And so he said to Abraham, Gen. 17. 1. *I am the Almighty God, walk before me, and be thou * upright, or, be thou * sincere.* This manner of serving of God Joshua commended to the Israelites, Josh. 24. 14. Fear the Lord, (saith he) and serve him in sincerity and truth: and the Prophet Samuel, 1 Sam. 12. 24. Only fear the Lord, and serve him in truth with all your heart. This sincerity, uprightness and truth in God's service is, when we do religious and pious duties, and abstain from the contrary, out of conscience to Godward, out of an heart possessed with the love and fear of God. It is otherwise called in Scripture Perfection, or Perfection of heart: For it is a lame and unperfect service where the better half is wanting, as the Heart is, in every work of duty both to God and men. And therefore it is called perfection, when both go together, when conscience as the Soul enlivens the outward work as a Body. And indeed this is all the perfection we can attain unto in this life, To serve God in truth of heart, though otherwise we come short of what we should: and therefore God esteems our actions and works, not according to the greatness or exactness of the performance, but according to the sincerity and truth of our hearts in doing them: as appears by the places I have already quoted, and by that 1 Kings 15. 14. where it is said, that though Asha failed in his reformation, and the high places were not taken down; nevertheless his heart was perfect with the Lord his God all his days.

Matth. 7. 21.

How to know
Sincerity.

A note to know such a sincerity and truth of heart by is, If in our privacy, when there is no witness but God and our selves, we are careful then to abstain from sin, as well as in the sight of men: If when no body but God shall see and know it, we are willing to do a good work, as well as if all the world should know it. He that findeth himself thus affected, his Heart is true, at least in some measure; but so much the less by how much he findeth himself the less affected in this manner. When we are in the presence and view of men, we may soon be deceived in our selves, and think we do that out of conscience and fear of God, which indeed is but for the fear or praise of men; either lest we should be damnified, or impair our credit, or the like: But when there is none but God and us, then to be afraid of sin and careful of good duties, is a sign we fear God in truth and sincerity, and not in hypocrisy.

How to attain Sincerity.

The special and principal means to attain this sincerity and truth of heart is, To possess our selves always with the apprehension of God's presence, and to walk before him as in his eye. Wheresoever thou art, there is an Eye that sees thee, an Ear that hears thee, and a Hand that registreth thy most secret thoughts: For the ways of man (saith Solomon Prov. 5. 21.) are before the eyes of the Lord, and he pondereth all his goings. How much ashamed would we be, that men should know how much our hearts and our words and actions disagreed? How would we blush that men should see us commit this or that sin, or neglect this or that duty? What horrible Atheism then doth this argue, that the presence of man, yea sometimes of a little child, should hinder us from that wickedness which God's presence cannot? This having of God before our eyes, and the continual meditation of his All-seeing presence, would, together with devout Prayer for the assistance of God's grace, be in time the bane of hypocrisy and falshood of heart, and beget in stead thereof that truth and sincerity which God loveth.

3. Another property of such obedience as God requires is Universality: we must not serve God by halves, by doing some duties and omitting others; but we must, with David, (Psal. 119. 6, 20.) have respect to all God's Commandments; to those of the second Table as well as to those of the first, and to those of the first as well as those of the second. The want of which Universality of obedience to both Tables is so frequent, as the greatest part of Christians are plunged therein, to the undoubted ruine of their souls and shipwreck of everlasting life, if they so continue.

For there are two sorts of men which think themselves in a good estate, and are not. The one are those who make conscience of the duties of the first Table, but have little or no care of the duties of the second. And this is a most dangerous evil, by reason it is more hard to be discovered; those which are guilty thereof being such as seem religious, but their Religion is in vain. Such were those in the Church of Israel against whom the Prophet Esaie declaimeth, Chap. 1. from the 10. verse to the 17. To what purpose are your sacrifices and burnt-offerings? saith the Lord: your oblations and incense are abomination. Your New Moons, Sabbaths, calling of Assemblies, even the solemn meeting, I cannot away with; it is iniquity. Would you know what was the matter? see the words following, Learn to do well, seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow. Lo here a want of the duties of the second

Matth. 9. 13. &
12. 7.

Table. Such is that also of Hosea 6. 6. I desired mercy, and not sacrifice; which is twice alledged by our Saviour in the Gospel against the Pharisee's hypocritical scrupulosity in the same duties of the first Table, with a neglect of the second. But here perhaps some may find a scruple, because that if sacrifice in this or the like places be opposed to the duties of obedience required in the second Table, it should hereby seem that the duties of the second Table which concern our neighbour should be preferred before the duties of the first which concern the Lord himself; forasmuch as it is said, * Hos. 6. 5.

* I desired mercy, and not sacrifice, that is, rather Mercy, which is a duty of the second Table,

Table, than sacrifice, which is of the first. I answer, The holy Ghost's meaning is not to prefer the second Table before the first, taking them singly; but to prefer the duties of both together before the service of the first alone: Be more ready to joyn mercy or works of mercy with your sacrificing, than to offer sacrifice alone. Matth. 7. 21.

To go on. The duties of the first Table are by a special name called duties of Religion; those of the second Table come under the name of Honesty and Probity. Now as a man can never be truly Honest unless he be Religious; So cannot that man (what shew soever he makes) be truly religious in God's esteem who is not honest in his conversation towards his neighbour: Religion and Honesty must be married together, or else neither of them will be in truth what it seems to be. We know that all our duty both to God and our neighbour is comprehended under the name of Love, as in that Summe of the Law, Love God above all things, and thy neighbour as thy self. This is the Summe of the whole Law contained in both Tables. But S. John tells us 1 Ep. 4. 20. If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar; which is as much as if he should say, He that seems religious towards God, and is without honesty towards his neighbour; he is a liar, there is no true religion in him. Matth. 22. 37. 39.

If you would then know whether a man professing Religion, by diligent frequenting God's service and exercises of devotion, keeping sacred times and hearing Sermons, be a sound Christian or not, or a seeming one only; this is a sure and infallible note to discover him, and for him to discover himself by: For, if notwithstanding his care of the duties of the first Table, he makes no conscience to walk honestly towards his neighbour; if he be disobedient to Parents and lawful Authority, if he be cruel and uncharitable, if he be unjust in his dealings, fraudulent, an oppressor, a falsifier of Covenants and Promises, a backbiter, a slanderer, or the like; his Religion is no better than an Hypocrite's: For such was the Religion of many of the Pharisees, whom therefore our Saviour termeth Hypocrites, Wo unto you Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites. They were scrupulous in the duties of the first Table, they paid tithe even of mint and anise, they fasted twice a week, they were exact observers of the Sabbath and other ceremonies of Religion; but judgment, mercy, and faith in their conversation towards men, our Saviour tells them they regarded not. Matth. 23. 13. Sc. Verse 23.

Besides our Saviour's woe denounced against such, there are Two dangerous Effects which accompany this evil disease, which should make us beware thereof.

1. Those who are addicted to Religion without any conscience of Honesty, are easily drawn by the Devil to many intolerable acts under colour and in behalf thereof, as they imagine. We see it in the Papists and Jesuits, whose preposterous zeal to their Religion makes them think Treasons, Murthers, Rebellions, or any other such wicked acts, are lawful and excusable, so they be done for the good of the Catholick cause, as they call it. And if we search narrowly amongst our selves, we shall light upon some examples of indirect and unlawful courses undertaken otherwhile on the behalf of Religion; and all through want of this conscionable care of maintaining Honesty towards our neighbour, together with our zeal for Religion towards God. Even as we see an Horse in some narrow and dangerous passage, whilst he is wholly taken up with some bugbear on the one side of the way, which he would eschew, and in the mean time mindeth not the other side, where there is the like danger, he suddenly slips into a pit or ditch, with no small danger to himself and rider: So is it here with such as look only to the first Table, and mind not the second; whilst they go about, as they think, to advance the duties of the one, they fall most foully in the other.

2. The second evil is a most dangerous Scandal which follows profession of Religion without honest conversation towards men: It is a grievous stumbling-block and stone of offence, making men out of love with Religion, when they see such evil Effects from it and those who seem to profess it. Those who are not yet come on, are scared from coming; resolving they will never be of their Religion, which they see no better fruits of: Those who are entred, are ashamed and discouraged, forsaking the duties of Religion, that they might shun the suspicion of hypocrisy and dishonesty. But woe be unto them by whom scandal cometh. Let us all therefore take heed to adorn Matth. 18. 7. and approve our profession by bringing forth fruits, not only of Piety and Devotion towards God, but of works of Righteousness and Charity to our neighbour.

DISCOURSE XL.

GENESIS 3. 13.

And the Lord God said unto the woman, What is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, The Serpent beguiled me, and I did eat.

THE Story whereof the words I have read are part is so well known to all, that it would be needless to spend time in any long Preface thereof. Who knows not the Story of Adam's Fall? who hath not heard of the Sin of Eve our Mother? If there were no Scripture, yet the unsampled irregularity of our whole nature, which all the time of our life runs counter to all order and right reason; the woful misery of our condition, being a Scene of sorrow without any rest or contentment; this might breed some general suspicion that ab initio non fuit ita, from the beginning it was not so; but that he who made us Lords of his creatures, made us not so worthless and vile as now we are; but that some common Father to us all had drunken some strange and devilish poison, wherewith the whole race is infected. This poison, saith the Scripture, was the breach of God's commandment in Paradise, by eating of the forbidden fruit: for which Adam being called to an account by the great Judge, and laying the fault upon the Woman which God had given him for an helper; God vouchsafes (as ye hear in my Text) to examine the Woman, saying, What is this that thou hast done? And she answers, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat.

These words contain in them two parts: First, God's Inquisition accusing; Secondly, The Woman's Confession excusing her fact. The first in the first words, And the Lord said unto the woman, &c. The second in the last words, And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, &c. For the first words which God speaks, being considered absolutely, are an Indictment for some crime; as they are Interrogative, they are an Inquisition concerning the same; and therefore I call them an Inquisition accusing. So the second are a Confession, as the Woman says, I have eaten; but with an excuse, when she says, The serpent beguiled me; and therefore I call them a Confession excusing.

In the Inquisition are two things to be considered. First, The Author and Person who makes it, which is the Lord God himself; so saith my Text, And the Lord God said unto the woman. Secondly, The Inquisition it self, What is this that thou hast done?

In the Person who comes and makes this Inquest, being the Lord God himself, we may observe and behold his φιλανθρωπία, his wonderful Goodness and unspeakable Love to mankind, which here reveals it self in four most remarkable Circumstances.

- I. First, In his forbearance; And the Lord said: When said the Lord? namely, not till Adam had accused her; she who was first in the sin, was last questioned for the same; and that too because her husband had appealed her. God knew and observed well enough the first degree and every progress of her sin, he needed no information from another: yet as though he were loth to take notice thereof, as though he were loth to find her guilty, yea as though he were loth to denounce the punishment which his Justice required, he comes not against her until now; and that as though he were unwilling to come at all.

If we look back into the Story, we shall yet find a further confirmation thereof. How long did God hold his hand before he stripped the woman especially of that glorious beauty of her integrity, and made her with opened eyes to see her shameful nakedness? She had at the first onset of her Conference with the Serpent sinned a sin of Unbelief of God; and yet God spared her: In the progress she sinned more in her proud Ambition of being like to God himself, and to be wise above what was given her; and God yet spared her: She sinned when she coveted and longed once to eat of the forbidden forbidden fruit, when it began to seem more pleasing and desirable unto her than Obedience to God's Commandment; and God yet spared her: At last she takes and eats thereof, and so came to the height and consummation of her sin; and yet behold and see the Clemency and Longanimity of our good God, he paused yet a while until she had given unto her husband also; and then, and not till then, he opened their eyes to see their woful misery.

Gen. 3. 13.

A Lesson first to us men, if so be we think the Example of God worthy our imitation, to bear long with our brother, as God bears with us; to admonish him, as it is in the Gospel, the first, second and third time, before we use him like an Heathen or a Publican; to forgive him seven times, yea, (as Christ says to Peter) if he repent and ask forgiveness, seventy times seven.

Matth. 18. 15. &c.

Secondly, This may be a cordial of spiritual comfort unto us sinners; Though we make a shift to keep our selves from the execution of sin, yet we find our hearts full of sinful thoughts, ungodly desires and unclean lusts, and such like sinful motions from the infirmity of our flesh: which notwithstanding we cannot ever expel or be rid of; yet let us hope that God out of his mercy will bear with our weakness, and pass by our infirmities, who bore with the sin of our first Parents until it came to execution.

The second Circumstance is The temper of his Justice; in that he vouchsafes first to enquire of the offence, and examine the fact, before he gives Sentence, or proceeds to execution. The like example we have Gen. 11. 5. where it is said, The Lord came down to see the City and Tower which the children of men had builded, afore he would confound their language, or scatter them abroad from that ambitious Babel upon the face of the earth. Again, Gen. 18. 20, 21. the Lord says, Because the cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great, and their sin is very grievous; I will go down, and see whether they have done altogether according to the cry of it which is come unto me; and if not, I will know. He from whom no secrets are hid, he that formed the heart of man, and knows all the works we do, he that trieth and searcheth the heart and reins, even he will first examine the fact, will first hear what miserable man can say for himself, before his Sentence shall pass upon him: not out of ignorance of what was done, for how should the omniscient God be ignorant? but out of his wonderful clemency, and unspeakable moderation towards Man: I say, towards Man; for to him alone he shews this favour; for as for the serpent, we see he vouchsafes not to ask him one question, nor to expect what he could say for himself, but presently without examination proceeds to judgment against him.

Doth the great God, the Almighty Creator of heaven and earth, deal with so unspeakable a temper with his creature; and is vile man, a base earth-worm, so austere unto his brother? It was the height of Eve's whole ambition to be like unto God; but her off-spring's ambition is to be most unlike unto him: He glories in mercy and clemency, we in rage and rash austerity; He hears his creature speak before he condemns him, we condemn our brother before we hear him speak. Be wise, be instructed, ye Judges of the earth, let this great Example of God be the pattern of your imitation: yea let no private man condemn another rashly, until he hath heard what he may say for himself, as God himself here vouchsafed to go before us.

Psal. 2. 10.

The third Circumstance is God's condescendence unto man, in that he sends neither Angels nor Ministers to examine our first Parents and to make inquisition of their offence, but he comes himself in person to take notice thereof. When men are offended, especially great men, they will not deign to look upon or to admit into their presence those that have offended them: How great therefore is this indulgence of Almighty God, who deigns here his presence to our most wretched and most naked Parents who had so grievously sinned against him? How happily graced would a poor offender think himself, if he might be admitted to the presence of his Prince, there to say what he could either for his defence or excuse, or else to sue for mercy and move compassion? By how much therefore God is greater than the greatest Monarchs of the world, even as much as they are greater than nothing; so much is this indulgence of God here expressed in my Text to Eve, as before to her husband, surpassing all the favour and condescendence of men, who sent not for man, but came himself unto him; yea who vouchsafed then to seek them out when they ran away from him.

3.

Now all this is spoken ἀνθρωποπαθῶς, after the fashion of men, and therefore not so much to express what God himself did, as what men ought to do. Let it be a Lesson therefore to those who are set over others, not to be too hard of access to such as are obnoxious unto them. If God himself vouchsafed so far unto his creature so wretched, much more should man unto his brother.

U 3

The

Gen. 3. 13.

4.

The fourth Circumstance is The manner of his speech to Eve, in that he that was the Lord God should so mildly speak unto her, What is this thou hast done? The Lord God said it, saith my Text; but who would not think it rather the speech of a familiar and condoling friend, than of so great a Judge so greatly offended? Here is no word of asperity, but of lenity; no menacing, no upbraiding terms, but only, What is this thou hast done?

And should not we learn hence not to insult over such whose offences make them liable either to us or others? should we upbraid, rail, triumph, and vomit our impotency upon them? Certainly we seem not to remember what a gentle and commiserating Judge God is, or that our selves are men, and have to deal with humane frailty, and man's miserable condition, which we ought to behold with pity, and not handle with bitterness.

THE next thing is, The Inquisition it self; What is this thou hast done? Some read, * Why hast thou done this? expounding למה-זאת for למה-זאת. But Eve's answer following, where she saith, I have eaten, plainly argues the question was What she had done, and not Why she had done it: And therefore I take the words as our * Translation hath them, and understand this manner of asking by God to be a Scheme of admiration, and to imply an exaggeration of the woman's sin; as if he had said, O what an horrible sin is this thou hast committed! How grievously hast thou transgressed! O what hast thou done! And therefore, God enquiring of her sin with exaggeration, she makes answer with diminution; Indeed she had offended, because she had eaten; but yet the offence was the less, for the Serpent had deceived her.

This then being the meaning of the words, let us behold in them the greatness of the sin of our first Parents; which made the Lord God himself to say, What is this thou hast done? The greatness of this sin I will first consider as it concerns them both in general, and then as in particular. The greatness of the sin in general appears in these four Considerations.

1.

First, It was a transgression of such a Law as was given only to prove man whether he would be under God or no. For the Moral Law which was written and engraven in the Hearts of our first Parents was for the doing of things simply good, and abstaining from things simply evil; such things as a good man would do were there no Commandment; and such things as he would not do were there no Prohibition; so that in these there was no trial whether man would obey God or no, only because he commanded him and merely for obedience sake. And therefore had God ordained this symbolical Law, prohibiting a thing in it self neither good nor evil, neither pleasing nor displeasing unto God, but indifferent; that man's observance thereof might be a profession and testimony that he was willing to submit himself to God's pleasure, only because it was his pleasure. And that it might yet the more appear, God made not choice of such a thing as man cared not for, but of a * pleasant and desirable thing; whereunto the more his inclination was carried, the more by his abstaining might his willing subjection be approved. The violating therefore of this Law was an open profession that he would not be under God, and renouncing of him to be his Lord. And this is the first respect wherein appears the greatness of Adam's sin.

2.

The second Consideration arguing the same is, That he on whom God had bestowed so many glorious endowments, whom he had as it were stuffed with so many excellent abilities, and adorned with so many precious graces, that he should sin against him, and set so light by his commandment: For of those to whom God had given so much, he might justly require and expect much. Therefore those whom God hath furnished with the best gifts, either of knowledge or other abilities, they, if they sin, sin most grievously: So that in this respect the sin of Adam and Eve exceeded the sins of their posterity, as much as their integrity did our corruption. The || greater the person, the greater his sin: The sin of a Prince greater than the sin of a vulgar person; and therefore in the * Law there was a * greater Sacrifice to be offered for the sins of the Prince and Priest than of the people.

¶ Quanto splendoris honoris celsior quisque est; tanto, si delinquit, peccato major est. Hieron.

* In Levit. 4. 3. the Sacrifice for the anointed Priest (that is, the High Priest; ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς, כהן רב, as the LXX. and the Targum of Onkelos render it) was a Bullock: and the same Sacrifice was to be for the whole People or Congregation, Ver. 14. The Sacrifice for the Ruler or Prince, was a Kid of the Goats, a male, Ver. 23. The Sacrifice for one of the common people, was a Kid of the Goats too, but a female, Ver. 28. For any one private person was inferior to the Prince who was to bring a male, as Aben Ezra here observes.

3.

The third circumstance aggravating his sin was, The easiness of the commandment, and the easiness man had to keep the same; Both in regard of himself, whom no itching Concupiscence urged, as being altogether free therefrom, and not as we his off-spring are continually vexed with the boiling thereof: Secondly, in regard of the thing it self

he

he was to abstain from being only one fruit, in so great a liberty of all the garden besides. How easily might he have abstain'd from one, to whom God had given the use of all saving this one? He wanted not to feed him, he wanted no variety of food, he had even enough to surfeit on; only to approve his obedience to Him who had given all the rest unto him, he was to abstain from one, and yet he would not.

Quanta fuit (saith S. Austin) iniquitas in peccando, ubi tanta erat non peccandi facilitas? How great an iniquity was it there to sin, where it was so easie a thing not to sin?

Gen. 3. 13.

De civit. Dei lib. 3. cap. 15.

The fourth circumstance aggravating this sin was The place, which was Paradise, as it were in God's own presence, even afore his face: For as Heaven above other parts of the world is the place of God's special presence; so was Paradise above other parts of the earth as it were an Heaven upon earth, the place wherein he singularly revealed himself, and therefore an Holy place and the Temple of God. Do not men, otherwise giving the loose rein to wickedness, yet abhor to commit it in God's Temple? How impudently contumelious was this Sin therefore which was committed in God's very presence-chamber?

All these Aggravations are common to both our Parents, which all laid together make their Sin as great as ever any was, saving the sin against the Holy Ghost; for so the best Divines do think. But Eve adds one Aggravation more to her weight, in that she was not content to sin her self alone, but she allured and drew her husband also into the like horrible transgression with her; whereby she was not only guilty of her own personal sin, but of her husband's also. And this added so much unto her former sum, that S. Paul (1 Tim. 2. 14.) speaks of her as if she had been the only transgressor; Adam was not deceived; but the woman being deceived was in the transgression. So great and horrible a thing it is in the Eye of God to be cause or mover of another's sin. Wo be unto them who by any means are the cause of another's fall. And justly might God say to Eve for this respect, though there had been no more, What is this that thou hast done?

NOW I come to the Woman's excuse, The Serpent beguiled me. In which words are three things considerable. The Author, The Serpent. The Action, Guile. The Object, Me.

Concerning the Author, The Serpent, two things are inquirable. First, What the Serpent was indeed. Secondly, What Eve supposed him to be.

For the first, I think none so unreasonable as to believe it was the unreasonable and brute serpent: For whence should he learn, or how should he understand God's commandment to our first Parents? and how is it possible a Serpent should speak; and not only so, but speak the language which Eve understood? For though some there be who think that Beasts and Birds have some speech-like utterings of themselves; yet none, that a Beast should speak the language of Men. It remains therefore that according unto the Scriptures it was that old deceiver the Devil and Satan, who abused brute Serpent, either by entering into him, or taking his shape upon him. The last of which I rather incline unto, supposing it (as you shall hear presently) to be the Law of Spirits, when they have intercourse and commerce with men, to take some visible shape upon them, as the Devil here the Serpent's; whence he becomes styled in Scripture, The old Serpent.

Rev. 12. 9. & 20. 2.

Now for the Second question, What Eve took him to be, whether the Serpent or Satan. If we say she thought him to be the brute Serpent, how will this stand with the perfection of Man's knowledge in his integrity, to think a Serpent could speak like a reasonable creature? Who would not judge her a silly woman now that should think so? and yet the wisest of us all is far short of Eve in regard of her knowledge then. Again, If we say she knew him to be the Devil; I will not ask why she would converse at all with a wicked spirit, who she knew had fallen from his Maker; but I would know how we should construe the meaning of the Holy Ghost in the beginning of this Chapter, where he saith, The Serpent was the subtillest of all the beasts of the field which God had made, and so implies the woman's opinion of the Serpent's wisdom was the occasion why she was so beguiled; otherwise to what end are those words spoken, unless to shew that Satan chose the Serpent's shape, that through the opinion and colour of his well-known wisdom and sagacity he might beguile the Woman?

For the assailing of which difficulty I offer these Propositions following. First, I will suppose There is a Law in the commerce of Spirits and Men, that a Spirit must present himself under the shape of some visible thing. For as innatural and bodily things there is no intercourse of action and passion, unless the things have some proportion each to other; and unless they communicate in some Common Matter: So it seems God hath hath ordained a Law that invifible things fhould converse with things vifible in a fhape as they are vifible: which is fo true, that the converfing prefence of a Spirit is called a Vifion or Apparition. And Experience with the Scriptures will fhew us, that not only evil Angels, but good, yea God himfelf converfeth in this manner with men. And all this I fuppofe Eve knew.

Gen. 3. 13.

Secondly, I fuppofe further, That as Spirits are to converse with men under fome vifible fhape; fo is there a Law given them, that it muft be under the fhape of fome fuch thing as may lefs or more refemble their condition. For as in nature we fee every feveral thing hath a feveral and futable Phifognomy or figure, as a badge of their inward nature, whereby it is known as by a habit of diftinction: fo it feems to be in the fhapes and apparitions of Spirits. And as in a well-governed Commonwealth every fort and condition of men is known by fome differing habit, agreeable to his quality: fo it feems it fhould be in God's great Commonwealth, concerning the fhapes which Spirits take upon them. And he that gave the Law, that a man fhould not wear the habit of a woman, nor a woman the habit of a man; becaufe that as he had made them diverfe, fo would he have them fo known by their habits: fo it feems he will not fuffer a good and a bad Spirit, a noble and ignoble one, to appear unto men after the fame fhafion. And this alfo I fuppofe Eve knew.

Mar. 16. 5.
Math. 28. 3.

Now from thefe grounds it will follow, That good Angels can take upon them no other fhape but the fhape of Man, becaufe their glorious excellency is refembled only in the moft excellent of all vifible creatures; the fhape of an inferior creature would be unfutable, no other fhape becoming thofe who are called the sons of God, but his only who was created after God's own image. And yet not his neither according as now he is, but according as he was before his fall in his glorious beauty of his Integrity. Age and deformity are the fruits of Sin; and the Angel in the Gofpel appears like a young man, his countenance like lightning, and his raiment white as fnow, as it were refembling the beauty of glorified bodies in immutability, fublimity and purity.

Hence alfo it follows on the contrary, That the Devil could not appear in humane fhape whileft Man was in his integrity, becaufe he was a Spirit fallen from his firft glorious perfection, and therefore muft appear in fuch fhape which might argue his imperfection and abafement, which was the fhape of a Beaft: otherwife no reason can be given, why he fhould not rather have appeared unto Eve in the fhape of a Woman than of a Serpent; for fo he might have gained an opinion with her both of more excellency and knowledg. But fince the fall of man the cafe is altered, now we know he can take upon him the fhape of Man; and no wonder, fince one falling ftar may well refemble another. And therefore he appears it feems in the fhape of Man's imperfection, either for age or deformity, as like an old man, (for fo the Witches fay:) and perhaps it is not altogether falfe which is vulgarly affirmed, That the Devil appearing in Humane fhape, hath always a deformity of fome uncouth member or other; as though he could not yet take upon him Humane fhape entirely, for that Man himfelf is not entirely and utterly fallen as he is.

By this time you fee the difficulty of the Queftion is eafed. Now it appears why Eve wondered not to fee a Spirit fpeak unto her in the fhape of a Serpent, becaufe fhe knew the Law of Spirits apparitions better than we do. Again, when fhe faw the Spirit who talked with her to have taken upon him the fhape, though of a Beaft, yet of the moft fagacious Beaft of the field, fhe concluded, according to our forelaid fuppositions, That though he were one of the abafed Spirits, yet the fhape he had taken refembling his nature, he muft needs be a moft crafty and fagacious one, and fo might pry farther into God's meaning than fhe was aware of. And thus you may fee at laft how the opinion of the Serpent's fubtilty occafioned Eve's fall; as alfo why the Devil, of all other Beasts of the field, took the fhape of a Serpent, namely, to gain this opinion of fagacity with the Woman, as one who knew the Principles aforefaid.

Here I obferve That overmuch dotage upon a conceived excellency, whether of Wifdom or whatfoever elfe, without a fpecial eye to God's commandment, hath ever been the Occafion of greateft Errors in the world; and the Devil under this mask ufeth to blear our eyes, and with this bait to inveigle our hearts, that he may fecurely bring us to his lure. It was the mask of the Serpent's wifdom and fagacity, above the reft of the Beasts of the field, whereby he brought to pafs our firft Parents ruin. The admired wifdom of the long-living Fathers of the elder world, having been for fo many ages as Oracles to their off-fpring grown even to a People and Nation while they yet yet lived, was the ground of the ancient Idolatry of mankind, whilst they supposed that those to whom for wisdom they had recourse being living, could not but help them when they were dead. This we may learn out of * Hesiod ; The men, saith he, of the golden age being once dead, became Δαίμονες, Gen. 3. 13.

Hes. lib. 1.

— οὐρανὸς ἑστῶν ἀνδράπων,

Οἱ γὰρ οὐρανὸς δίκας καὶ χάριτα ἔργα.

they became Godlings and Patrons of mortal men, and Overseers of their good and evil works. So the opinion of the blessed Martyrs superlative glory in Heaven was made the occasion of the new-found Idolatry of the Christian Churches, wherewith they are for the greater part yet overwhelmed. And the esteem which Peter had above the rest of the Apostles in regard of chief-dome, even in the Apostles times, was abused by the old Deceiver to instil the man of sin. This made S. Paul to say, The mystery of iniquity was even then working ; and therefore he laboured as far as he could to prevent it, by as much depressing Peter as others exalted him. Nay, he puts the Churches in mind of this story of the Serpent's beguiling Eve, that her mis-hap might be a warning to them. 2 Cor. 11. 2, 3. I am jealous over you (saith he) with a godly jealousy ; for I have espoused you to one husband, that I might present you as a chaste Virgin to Christ. But I fear lest by any means, as the Serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ. And to come a little nearer home ; Have not our Adversaries, when they would get Disciples, learned this of the Devil, to possess them first with an opinion of superlative Learning in their Doctors surpassing any of ours ? I will say no more in this point, but that we ought so to prize and admire the gifts and abilities of Learning which God hath bestowed upon men, that the Pole-star of his Sacred Word may ever be in our eye. 2 Thes. 2. 7.

THE next thing to be spoken of is The Action, Guile : And first, I shall shew what it is. To beguile is, through a false faith and persuasion wrought by some argument of seeming good, to bereave a man of some good he had or hoped for, or to bring upon him some evil he expected not. Practice hath made it so well known, that I should not need to have given any definition or description thereof, but only for a more distinct consideration. Whereas therefore I said, that Guile wrought by forelaying a false persuasion or belief ; I would intimate, that it was nothing else but a Practical Sophism, the Premisses whereof are counterfeit motives ; the Conclusion an erroneous execution. Now as all Practice or Action consists in these two, The choice of our End, and The execution of Means to attain thereunto : So is this Practical Sophism we call Guile, found in them both ; either when an evil End is presented unto us in the counterfeit of a good, and so we are made to embrace Nubem pro Junone, and find our selves deceiv'd in the event whatsoever the Means were we have used ; or else we apply such Means as are either unlawful or insufficient to attain our End, as being so mask'd that they appear unto us far otherwise than they are. With both these sorts or parts of Guile the Devil wrought our first Parents ruin. First, by making it seem a thing desirable and by all means to be laboured for, To be like unto God : which was an ambition of that whereof man was not only not capable, but such as little beseemed him to aspire unto, upon whom God had bestowed so great a measure of glorious perfections, as he seem'd a God amongst the rest of the creatures. What unthankfulness was this, that he upon whom God bestowed so much, as he was the glory of his workmanship, should yet think that God should envy him any degree of excellency fit for him ? For this was the mask wherewith the Devil covered both the unsuitness and impossibility of the End he insinuated ; but he beguiled them. Secondly, He put the same trick upon them in the choice of the Means to be used, which was to transgress the severe commandment of Almighty God. Had the Aim been allowable, yet could not the Means have been taken for good, but only of such as were beguiled ; in that the Devil made the Woman believe with his questioning the truth of God's commandment, that the danger was not great, nor so certain as it seem'd ; or that evil which might be in the action, would be countervailed with the excellency to be attained thereby ; the gloriousness of which End the Devil so strongly sounded, that it drowned in her imagination the least conceit of evil in the Means. And as a man which always looks upward sees not the danger in the path and way he walks in, until he tumbles into a pit : so was it here with our first Mother, when thus the Devil beguiled her.

This first act of the Devil is that wherein we may behold as in a glass the * art he still useth to tempt us unto sin, and bring us to utter destruction : All his method is * Eph. 6. 11.
τὴν μέθοδον
τῆς πειρασμῆς. nothing

Gen. 3. 13.

2 Cor. 11. 14.

Gen. 27. 36.

nothing else but Guile; he presents all things fair unto our face, and suffers not evil to appear before us in its own ugly shape; for so every man would fly from it. When he would tempt a man to Covetousness, he calls it Thrift; when to Bribes, he calls them Gratuities; when to Intemperance, forsooth it is Good-fellowship; when to Cruelty, it must be called Justice; when to Prodigality, it must be taken for no other but Liberality, and such like. This is that which the Scripture saith, The Devil transforms himself into an Angel of light: when he draws to Vice, he would seem to mean nothing but Vertue; when he tempts to works of darkness, he presents them as the works of light; when he plots our ruin and everlasting undoing, he bears us in hand that all aims at our welfare and felicity.

This is that which is meant in the following verse, where it is said, The seed of the woman should bruise the Serpent's head, but the Serpent should bruise his heel: as though the Serpent should love to assault at unawares, and so as he might not be seen to intend any such matter before he had done the feat; and therefore his fashion should be to come behind a man, and as it were to catch him by the heel. For that this was the Embleme of Guile and deceitful dealing, it may be gathered from the story of Jacob and Esau, when as Esau being beguiled of the blessing by the craft of his brother Jacob, makes an allusion to his name; Well (saith he) may he be called Jacob, for he hath beguiled me now these two times. Now Jacob had his name in the beginning, because he caught his brother by the heel when he came out of the womb; for כָּפַץ signifies the heel, and קָפַץ is as much to say as an Heeler: whence the allusion of Esau hath this sense, if we take it verbatim, My brother may well be called an Heeler, for he hath heeled me these two times. Now because to come behind a man and take him by the heel was foul play, therefore of קָפַץ an heel comes הַקָּפֶץ (dolus, fallacia) guile, and קָפַץ, a verb signifying to deceive or beguile; which is the second sense that Esau would imply by his allusion, That his brother might well be called a Beguiler, because he had beguiled him now these two times. But of this I shall have occasion to speak more hereafter.

Since therefore we have seen the Devil's practice, and learned that he works altogether by deceit; how wary should the consideration hereof make us to be in all the ways of our life? If we knew we had to deal with a man that used to beguile all that came into his fingers, in what continual jealousy and suspicion would we be? how would we cast about to find which way he might not circumvent us? how wary would we be to entertain any proffer from him? there could be nothing made seem so fair, but we would suspect some foul meaning to be in it. If we would be thus disposed in matters of lesser moment, how careful should we be in greater? if where the ability of deceiving is lesser, what manner of men should we be when we know the Arch-deceiver of the world is continually attending upon us, labouring to beguile us? Should we here adventure upon any action rashly? No surely; but be first well advised. We should not be too confident in our own persuasions, lest they may prove the Devil's suggestions: And though the reasons we apprehend be never so good, and the case seem never so clear, and the way we are to walk in never so secure; yet ought we to make some pause, and act a fit of jealousy afore we adventure.

AND thus much of the Serpent's action, Guile: Now I come to The Object, Me, the weaker of the two. Me, so much endeared in the affection of my Lord, that he could not but do any thing at my request. Of these two respects I will speak in order; and first of the first.

The Devil assaults us there where he finds us weakest; as here in this first sin he attempts the Woman, the weaker vessel; The Serpent beguiled me: for he knows this is the readiest way to overcome. A skilful Commander being to take a City, will not make his battery on that part of the wall which is strongly fortified, (for so he might make his shot in vain;) but will assault it there where it is least defensible, where a breach will be easily made, and yet entering he becomes Master of the whole how well fortified soever; even so the Devil will be sure to force us there where we are least able to resist; if he finds any part not well bulwark'd with resolution, there he plants the Canon of his temptation, and with an easie breach becomes Master of the whole piece.

Hence we may learn what to esteem of those imperfect courses concerning the Commandments of God, too frequent among the sons of men: There are many who resolve firmly against diverse kinds of sins, that they will never be drawn by any means to commit them; but they have always some one wherein they demur whether they should resolve to yield to it or not, if occasion should be offered. Many will fortifie fortify themselves very strongly against the assaults of bribery, of covetousness, of theft, of promise-breaking, of drunkenness; but as concerning their lust they are unresolved what to do, if a temptation should assault them: and so in others, there is some other inclination but slenderly guarded, when for the rest they could glory how strongly they are fortified. But we must know, that when the Devil comes to assault us, he will pass by us where we are strong, and attempt us only there where our weakness lies; and then we shall find all our labour lost, and all our other strength to have stood us in little stead: For what will it boot to guard the walls of our City never so strongly, if but one part be left unguarded for the enemies to enter? Is not all the enemy's? A Ship, though in other parts never so sound, will sink if but one leaking hole be left unstopped. Let us therefore survey our Hearts diligently, and finding where we lie exposed to danger, there most strengthen our selves with resolution.

And thus I come to the second respect why the Devil made choice of the Woman, namely, because of the vehemency of her Husband's affection towards her; so that to have gained her was to have gotten him also. For he seemed to think that her strength in her Husband's affection was more powerful to prevail with him than his subtle motives were to overcome him: and indeed the Event prov'd he was not much deceiv'd. Hence we are to observe, That the Devil taketh advantage of the vehemency of our Passions to work our overthrow; if he once find these to fasten his hold by, he then thinks he may lead us whither he list. To have gained our affections is as it were to have gotten a party within, which is a dangerous advantage to further the invasion of an enemy; especially when most of our Passions are our Favorites, which we can deny nothing they ask; and if they be once bribed, will work us wholly to the dispose of our Arch-enemy. Gen. 3. 13. Eph. 4. 27.

That we may not therefore afford the Devil this advantage, and as it were reach him a rope to hang us withal, it behoves us so to govern and temper our Passions and Affections that they transport us not into the Devil's jurisdiction: which that we may the better do, it will not be unfit to set down some Rules for performance thereof.

First therefore, It is best to resist our Passions at the beginning, and to use the same policy which Pharaoh did with the Israelites, that they might not over-run his Country, in killing all their Infants as soon as they were born. While the sore is green, Chirurgeons seldom despair; but festered once, they hardly cure it: So it is with the Passions of our Mind; when they are first growing, they are soon curbed; but being a little entertained, they will hardly be subdued.

The second means is, To inure our selves to cross our Passions when there is no danger, and to bridle our selves sometimes from ordinary and lawful desires, that we may do it with more ease when we are in danger. For how can he hope to be able to master his Passions when dangerous temptations assault him, who never used them to it in the time of his security? We know that men who would fit themselves for the Wars, will practice in the time of Peace when there is no enemy near, and will toil and labour when they might be at rest, will lie hard when they may command a soft bed, will watch when they might sleep, and all to make them able to endure the like when they shall have need: The like must we do, that we may get an habit to cross and subdue our Passions when we shall have need. 1. 2.

The third means is, To fly occasions which may incense the Passions whereunto we are inclined. Occasiones faciunt latrones, saith the Proverb, Occasion makes him a thief, which else might have been an honest man. Wherefore he that commits himself to Sea in a boisterous tempest is worthy to suffer Shipwreck; and he that willingly puts himself in the company of infected persons may blame himself if he fall into their diseases. 3.

Lastly, but chiefly, When thy Passions are most vehement, then seek for succour from Heaven: Fly under the wings of Christ as the Chickens under the Hen when the Kite seeks to devour them: Beat at the gates of mercy, and crave grace to overcome thy misery. He is thy Father, and will not give thee a * Serpent, if thou ask him * Math. 7. Fish. Humble thy self before him, open thy sores and wounds unto him; and the good Samaritan will pour in both wine and oyl, and thy Passions shall melt and fall away as clouds are dispelled and consumed by the Sun. 4.

DISCOURSE XLI.

GENESIS 3. 14.

And the Lord God said unto the Serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattel and above every beast of the field: upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life.

THESE words contain in them the Serpent's Doom and Destiny, pronounced upon him by the great Lord of Heaven and Earth. They contain in them two parts: First, The Reason of this Sentence, in the words, Because thou hast done this: Secondly, The Sentence it self, in the words following, Thou art cursed above all cattel, &c.

The Reason of this Heavy doom is, Because thou hast done this: What This? namely, Because he had beguiled the Man and Woman which God had made, and caused them to transgress his great Commandment. He therefore that is the cause and occasion of anothers sin is as hateful to God as the doer, and is liable to as great or rather a greater punishment than he: For the Serpent here for causing hath this doom, as well as the Man and Woman for doing. Nay, which is to be observed, his doom is the first read unto him, as if he were the Arch-offender, and not to the Man or Woman till he was done with. What should this mean, but that his fault, being the mover, was more grievous in the eyes of God than theirs? which is the reason also why the Woman comes in the next place to have her Sentence, because she had been a sin-maker, and was guilty, not only of her own personal sin, but of her husband's also; whence the Man who had sinn'd only himself, and not caused others to sin, had his judgment last of all. I might also confirm the same from the quality of their several judgments, in that the Serpent alone is doom'd to be accursed, and no such word spoken either of the Man or the Woman.

But I shall not need to tarry here to prove How horrible and fearful a thing it is to be the Author of another's sin. We know they are the words of our Saviour, Matt. 18. 6, 7. Wo unto the world because of scandals, and wo unto the man by whom a scandal cometh; it were better for him that a milstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the Sea. And S. Paul (1 Cor. 8. 13.) would eat no meat as long as the world lasteth, rather than make his brother to offend. Would they would consider this who are not content alone to sin themselves, but play the Devil in corrupting others. It seems they long to be double damn'd. I would also they would think of this who make no conscience at all by extremities and vexations, and other grievances, to drive a man to Perjury and other grievous sins, and yet think themselves free; when they should know, that he that is the Author of another's sin makes another's guilt his own, and shall share in the punishment every whit as deep as he.

But this shall suffice to have observed in the first part, The Reason of the Serpent's doom. Now I come to the second, The doom it self: wherein the words, as you see, have all relation to the Serpent; For the Lord said unto the Serpent, Thou art cursed, &c. Thou shalt go upon thy belly, &c. But because this Serpent was more than a brute Serpent, the Devil himself being the chief Agent in this his Instrument; it is a thing much controverted, Upon which of these this curse is here pronounced. 1. Some would have it spoken only of the brute Serpent, because here is a comparison made with cattel and beasts of the field, thereby accounting the Serpent one of that number. Besides, Satan (they say) was accursed before this time, and some of the words in this Curse cannot well be applied to any but the brute Serpent, as that he should eat the dust of the earth, &c. 2. Others would have this Curse pronounced only upon the Spiritual Serpent, the Devil; because the brute Serpent was only an Instrument abused by the Devil, and neither knew what was done, nor could do withal; and why should it therefore be punished? 3. Others would divide the Controversie, applying the first part of the Curse (in the 14. verse) to the brute Serpent, the latter (in the the 15. vers. ) to the Devil or Spiritual Serpent : because as the latter words, Of the promised seed of the woman which should destroy the serpent and his seed, must needs be meant of Christ and Satan ; so the former words are most fitly applicable to the brute Serpent only. But against this may be said, That the same Thou and Thee spoken of in the first part of the Curse is all one with the Thou and Thee in the latter ; and therefore of whatsoever the first is meant, of the same is also meant the latter. 4. There is therefore a fourth opinion, That this Curse is throughout pronounced upon both, both upon the Serpent and the Devil. In which though there be some difference about the manner how, yet I embrace it as the truest, as not only conceiving it may be so, by the fitness of all the parts so applied to both ; but think moreover that this only ought to be the meaning and no other, if it be conceived as I am now to shew.

Dis. XLI. The Curse pronounced both upon the Serpent and the Devil. 229

Gen. 3. 14.

For in the first place, The Devil when he beguiled man came not as a naked Spirit, but in the shape and figure of a Serpent, ( as I have shew'd heretofore ; ) and therefore that his punishment in the manner might be futable and answerable to his offence, he was to receive his doom likewise under the figure of a Serpent, and the style thereof framed unto a Serpent's condition : For God useth in his wisdom * to brand the Punishment with the stamp of the Sin, that the offender thereby might not only know what he felt, but also read why he suffered. Why were Adonibezek's thumbs and great toes cut off, but that he might read therein, as he did, his former cruelty ? Threescore and ten Kings, having their thumbs and toes cut off, gathered meat under my Table : As I have done, so God hath requited me. Why was Pharaoh with his Host rather drowned in the Sea, than slain in the Field, but that all the world might read it was for his cruel Edict to drown all the male children of the Hebrews ? Why did Abalom lie with David's Concubines, but to put David in mind that he had lien with Uriah's wife ? And why was the Curse of the Devil shaped here in and unto the condition of the serpent, but because he had beguiled man in a serpent's shape ?

* See Discourse 28. p. 144 &c.

Judges 1. 7.

Secondly, For the Serpent ; The known excellency and subtilty of the serpent, above all the Beasts which God had made, the Devil had abused to gain credit with the woman, that he was an excellent and a most sagacious Spirit, and therefore might be able to pry farther into God's meaning than she could ; which was the cause of her attention, and so of her ruin. For I have shewed * heretofore that the Woman in the state of Integrity knew well enough, That as it was the Law of Spirits in their commerce with men to present themselves under the shape of some visible thing ; so it must be likewise under the shape of some such thing as may more or less resemble their condition : And that as the glorious spirits might take no other shape but of Man, the glory of visible creatures ; so the fallen spirits could not then afore Man's fall take any other shape but of a Beast, thereby to bewray his abasement : Yet because the Devil here took upon him the shape of the most wise and most excellent of Beasts, he so bleared the Woman's eyes with an opinion of his Excellency and sagacity, that in a manner she forgot, or regarded not, that he was one of the evil and abased spirits ; which was the ground of her miserable ruin and overthrow.

* In the foregoing Discourse.

Now because the Excellency and sagacity of the serpent had thus been the occasion of man's confusion, by being made the lying counterfeit of the Devil's Excellency and Wisdom, and the mask whereby he so covered his vileness, that the Woman took him not to be as he was indeed ; therefore God in his wisdom thought good to change the copy, and henceforth to blur and deface that unhappy Physiognomical letter, and by abasing the Serpent for the time to come, to make him an everlasting embleme and monument, wherein man might hieroglyphically read the malice, vileness and execrable baseness of that wicked spirit which had beguiled him ; to hate him ( as now we do the Serpent ) with mortal hatred, and by his unlucky fortune to expect the Devil's deadly destiny : In a word, that which was once used for a mask to cover the Devil's knavery, should for the future be a glass wherein to behold his villany.

These being the Reasons which have led me to understand this Curse in an equal sense, both of the brute Serpent and the Devil ; and in the literal sense applied unto the Serpent, yet therein shaping out the Malediction of the Devil, as truly as the Devil had taken upon him the serpent's shape : Let us now come to a more particular handling of the words. And first we will consider them, As they are the Curse of the unreasonable Serpent ; Secondly, As they include the Devil's malediction.

But for the better understanding thereof, before we can proceed, two things are to be resolv'd. First, How it could be just with God to punish the brute Serpent, who was Instrumentum aproprietor, and had neither will to sin, nor yet knowledge of what the Devil had done; especially if we suppose, as I have done hitherto, that the Devil took only the shape of a Serpent, which the Serpent could not do withal. For this argument hath driven some to affirm, That the whole Curse was to be understood only of the Spiritual Serpent, and not at all of the Natural. But why should this stumble them more as concerning the Justness of God, than that in Adam's censure in the 17. verse where the whole Earth is cursed for Adam's sake? Cursed be the Earth for thy sake, &c. But what had the Earth done? or how was it guilty of Adam's transgression? Again, Chap. 6. v. 5, 7. it is expressly said, That because God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, he said, I will destroy both man and beast, and the creeping things, and the fowls of the air. But how were the beasts, the creeping things, and the fowls of the air partakers of man's wickedness? what had they done more than been abused by him? which they could not avoid, he being their Lord and Master. And should not we think that Law of God just, Lev. 20. 15. where if a man commit abomination with a beast, the beast is commanded to be slain as well as the man, who only had sinned? This proves that Objection to be wholly insufficient. But yet the difficulty of the resolution, How this may stand with God's justice, remains as before; which therefore comes now to be resolved.

Gen. 3. 14.

* Rom. 8. 21.

* Ibid.

Gen. 3. 17, 18.

1. We know that all the Beasts of the Field, and the Fowls of the Air, and the Fishes of the Sea were made for the use and service of Man in one kind or other, as he should have occasion to use them. 2. If Man had stood in his first creation, the service of the Creatures should have been suitable to his excellency and integrity, and so far more noble than now it is, that even the creatures might be partakers of his happiness then, in that sense they yet \ look for the glorious liberty of the sons of God* to come. 3. But when man was once fallen, the service of the creature was altered, and became a bondage of corruption, as \ S. Paul* terms it, that is, ignoble, and suitable to the corrupt condition of man under sin: Those which should have been employed excellently for the use of his integrity, are now to serve him ignominiously according to his sin and misery; namely, either to be the means to punish him for his sin, or to relieve him in his misery. To punish him, all the Creatures for his use are become base, corrupt and unworthy, and so nothing so useful for him as they had been: the Earth will not bring forth for him, but with his labour and toil; and then too when it should bear him corn, it brings forth thorns and thistles: the Creatures which should serve and honor him, do often seize upon him, and destroy him. And thus are the Creatures employed for man's use indeed, but a woful use, to afflict and punish him for his sin all the days of his life. Another way notwithstanding they are useful and serviceable for his good, as helps to relieve and better him in this his condition of sin; as to be made Documents of the wrath of God to move him to Repentance, and Emblems to know the condition of his most deadly enemy the Devil, and how he ought to abhor and hate him, and the hope and expectation of conquering and triumphing over him in the Blessed seed of the woman. And for this use and service was the Serpent abased and made vile, according to his Curse in my Text; That as he was made excellent, to serve him in integrity; so he was now abased, to be made fit to do him the best service in his misery. And what Injustice could this be in God? when he made him at first, he made him so as he made him for the service of man; and now when he marr'd him, he marr'd him likewise for man's service.

The second thing to be resolved is, Whether this Curse were pronounced only upon one individual Serpent, or whether upon all Serpents in general, or upon some one only kind which the Devil had thus abused. Of one individual Serpent it cannot be, because there is mention here of the enmity of the seed of the Serpent and the seed of the woman; which implies a generation of many Serpents: and besides, this Curse was to be a Monument not only to Adam, but to all his posterity, as long as the world lasted; but one individual Serpent lived not so long. Neither is it credible to be spoken of all kinds of Serpents in general; Because there is almost as great a variety of Serpents as of four-footed beasts of several kinds and species; and why should any kind suffer save that only which had been abused to offend? Besides, I make no doubt but divers kinds of Serpents went at the first Creation upon their breasts as now they do, and were every whit as base as now they are, excepting the general decay of all Creatures since the Fall. It remains therefore that it was only one kind of Serpent which bore this special Malediction; and that such a kind as was not only the noblest of all the kinds of Serpents, but as it seems far excelling all the Creation besides (Man only excepted) for beauty, wisdom and sagacity; but afterward by this Curse became not only baser than the rest of the beasts of the field, but even as base and and vile as the vilest kind of Serpent. And therefore it could not be the Basilisk, as some have held, though it be the most poisonful of all others, and as it were a King among Serpents, as the name imports: for if Plinie and Solinus, who report the former, say true, this Serpent here accursed should rather be any other kind than that, because the Basilisk (upon their report) goes with his breast and fore-part of his body advanced, (erectus à medio incedens, saith * Plinie; or, as * Solinus, mediâ corporis parte serpit, mediâ arduus est & excelsus;) but this Serpent here was from the hour of his doom to go for ever upon his breast: which I wonder they considered not, who from the advanced posture of the Basilisk's body have conceived the clean contrary. For as by this example we may believe that the Serpent now accursed did so before his curse; so that he should still do so, it is a most direct gainfaying of Scripture to imagine.

But to come to the words of the Doom; which, as you see, are first General, then Particular. General in these, Thou art cursed above all cattel, and above every beast of the field. What it is to be accursed, we shall know, if we first understand what it is to be blessed. To be blessed or happy is nothing else but an all-fruition of good, or to have a sufficient provision and furniture of good both for being and well-being. So then that Creature is happy and blessed which hath a sufficiency of all good for the being and preservation of it self; which wants neither endowments inward, nor means outward for the attaining of that End whereof it is by nature capable. To be accursed is to have the contrary to this; to be despoiled either of endowments internal or inherent, without which it hath no dignity among the creatures; or external, without which it cannot live and preserve it self, but with much penury, difficulty, toil and danger. Whatsoever therefore among the Beasts of the field (for with such only is the comparison made) is for inherent perfections of all the most unworthy and base, or for the outward furniture of means for the preservation of that ignoble Being, by unprovision, of all others the most wretched and miserable, this is that which is accursed above all cattel and above every beast of the field. And such was the Serpent's condition to be for the general.

And now for the particulars; let us go on and see how they are expressed: and that is in three things. 1. To go upon the breast, or to have the posture of the Body groveling on the earth; whereby (as I shall shew presently) is implied the abasement of the creature. 2. To have for meat the dust of the earth; wherein is shewn its unprovision of food for the maintenance of its life, being of all Beasts of the field to have the basest and courtest fare. 3. To be in continual, mortal and irreconcilable enmity with man, both his Lord and the Lord of the rest of the creatures; from whom it should be in continual danger, and fear of its life, and once espied be sure to have its brains dash'd out by him: And which makes the misery so much the greater, to be no way able to be revenged of his enemy other than to come unawares behind him, and then also not able to reach above his heel; as being most unequally matched, he walking aloft with his head and whole body advanced, while the miserable Serpent shall lie groveling on the ground, ready to be trodden apieces under his feet.

Of these three Particulars let us speak severally; and first of the first, Upon thy breast shalt thou go. In the Hebrew it is על-בטן, which some turn, Upon thy belly: which interpretation hath been one great cause of the difficulty to understand the meaning of this Malediction. For if the shape of the Serpent were after the fashion it is now, it is not possible to imagine how it could ever have gone otherwise than upon the belly; for to think that ever it went an-end, were a conceit more worthy to be derided than to be believed. By which means there appeared no other way to evade this difficulty, but to affirm that the Serpent indeed went upon his belly from the beginning; but either that it was not so toilsom to him, or not for a curse unto him till now: which, for my part, it being so far from the letter of the Text, I could never yet believe. I had much rather in this follow the Vulgar or Jerome's Translation, which reads, super pectus tuum gradiêris, upon thy breast shalt thou go; for upon the belly I believe the Serpent went from the first Creation, but not upon the breast until this present malediction. The breast of the Serpent I call the upper part of the Serpent's body, from the navel up to the head; The belly, the other part or the other half downward, with which though at the first he walked prone to and upon the earth, yet was the other part, his breast and head, reared up and advanced, until for having been abused to the ruin of mankind, he was now with his whole body to creep groveling upon the earth. And perhaps thus much the Septuagint meant to insinuate by their Translation, which is, ἐπὶ τῷ ὤμῳ καὶ τῇ κοιλίᾳ σου, upon thy thy breast and thy belly; where it may seem that they rendred two words for one in the Text for illustration, and for intimation of this, That whereas the Serpent before went only upon his belly, ἐπὶ τῇ κοιλίᾳ, now he should from henceforth walk ἐπὶ τῷ στήθεϊ καὶ τῇ κοιλίᾳ, upon his breast and belly too.

Gen. 3. 14.

As for the Hebrew נָחַן here used, there is no necessity at all to translate it the belly, but rather some probability of the contrary in the Etymology of the word. For though in the Hebrew the Theme be not used, yet in the Chaldee נָחַן, which signifies incurvatus fuit, to bow downward, seems to mean the inclination of the head and breast, or upper part of the body, to the earth; as may be gathered from that of Elijah, 1 Kings 18. 42. where it is said, that Elijah went up to the top of Carmel, & pronunz se abjecit in terram, and cast himself down upon the earth, and put his face between his knees: for here the Targum useth this word נָחַן. the Radix of נָחַן. Again Mark 1. 7. in those words of John Baptist, There is one cometh after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose; here for the Greek word κύνει, stoop down, the Syriack hath נָחַן. of as near a kin to נָחַן as is the Syriack to the Chaldee. The word נָחַן it self is of rare use in the Bible besides in this place, and therefore we can receive no great help from the comparing of places. It is read again Levit. 11. 42. and that in a singular mark, as the Masorites have observed; for the Vau cholem in the last syllable is וְאוֹרֵכְתִי a great Vau, and exactly the middlemost letter of all the Law of Moses, if their Arithmetick failed them not. But no particularity of signification can from that place be gathered, the speech being of creeping things, which go as well upon the breast as the belly, and the belly as the breast.

Since therefore the word here used neither hindreth our opinion, nor much furthereth it, we will come to such other grounds as may prove our assertion, for the Serpent's going with breast advanced afore the Fall of man, and not groveling till his Malediction. And first let it be considered there is no impossibility of it in regard of the frame of the Serpent; which appears both by their advancing themselves when they assault a man, (which the Painters express in their Pictures) and also when they swim through the water, which is with their head and some part of their breast raised above water, even as a Swan holdeth up her neck; as I have heard affirmed by such as have been eye-witnesses: and lastly, Plinie and Solinus report of the Basilisk, that the Basilisk walks so still; as I shewed a little before. And it may be, as when the Giant-like stature of mankind was diminished after the Flood in a manner throughout the world, and for many ages, yet was there by God's disposition still a race of Giants left even till the time of David, for a monument and witness of the truth of a far bigger stature, in former times, which else could not so easily have been believed or imagined; (Such were the * Zanzummims in Abraham's time, the sons of Anak in Moses's, and Goliath in the time of David; and it may be there are yet some in some part of the world to be found) as, I say, these seem to have been preserved by God, as a memorial unto men that they were not now as at the first: So it may be it was the will of God and is, amongst so many kinds of Serpents to preserve this one, that it should not as the rest go groveling upon the earth, but might be as a monument of the truth of the malediction of the rest to all posterity. Thus much of the possibility, which would be far greater, if we should with S. Basil, Ephrem Syrus, Moses Bar-Cephas, and many others, affirm that the Serpent had feet, namely, some short ones beneath the navel: For feet are not essential to the nature of a thing, as appears by the lame, who can live without them, and by others sometimes by the defect of nature born without them. And those who can believe the wonderful change of Man by his fall, of an immortal creature to become mortal; of one to have been born with all glorious endowments both of body and soul, now to be brought into the world the most unfurnished of all the creatures; those who believe the great alteration of the Earth it self when it was accursed for man's sin, the diminution of the time of man's life and of his stature ever since the flood; can any who believe these things, think it so incredible for the Serpent once to have had some small feet, and afterward to have had none, being a creature wherein God intended to leave a monument for ever? But of this I will determine nothing, neither doth my assertion simply depend upon it, but may well enough consist without it.

But because possibility is not sufficient of it self alone to infer a probability, I have therefore one thing to add more thereto, namely, the reason and cause even in nature (supposing still God's abasing of the Serpent's first creation) of this alteration of the posture of the Serpent's gate from that it was at the beginning.

First,

* Some think these to be the Zuzims in Gen. 14. 5.

First, We know the more excellent and sublime the nature of a creature is, the more it raiseth it self upward; the more ignoble and base, the more it falls downward. This we see in the Elements themselves: the Fire, the most excellent and operative of the four, raiseth it self above the rest; the Earth, the basest and most unactive of all, is also of all the most dejected.

Secondly, As there is this difference in the Elements, so there is in the mixed bodies; some consisting of a more sublime and excellent temper, others of a more base and ignoble mixture; and that as in other, so amongst such creatures as live and move upon the earth.

Thirdly, This their nobleness within discovereth it self in the Body without, by advancing them naturally in their gate and gesture: whence Man, being of all creatures living upon the earth of the most excellent temper and sublimed condition of nature, is therefore of all other the most advanced in body;

*Pronāque cum spectant animalia cetera terram,
Os homini sublime dedit, &c. Ovid. Metamorph. l. 1.*

*And whereas others see with down-cast eyes,
He with a lofty look did man indue,
And bad him Heav'n's transcendent glories view.*

Cic. l. i. de Iegibus. Cum natura ceteras animantes abjecisset ad postum, solum hominem erex-it, &c.

Yea experience will tell us, that even amongst men themselves, those who are of a more exalted nature, either by heroick temper or predominancy of heat, are also more advanced in the posture of their bodies. Among Beasts themselves the basest is the most creeping; the noble Lion advanceth his head and breast so far as the frame of his body is thereof capable, and so the rest: and of all creatures we may observe besides, that those creatures have the most sagacity who come most near to walk up-right as Man doth.

If therefore the Serpent were of so sublime a nature at the first, as thereby it was more subtle than any beast of the field which God had made; how could so excellent a temper, the ground of so much sagacity, but advance the body thereof as far as the frame and shape thereof could admit? On the contrary, if afterward the Serpent became the most abased and accursed of all the beasts of the field, how should not this alteration of his former temper and disposition of nature make the gesture of his body also sutable, by stooping and groveling upon the earth? Who knows not that the natural position of Man is erected agreeable to his excellency above other creatures having life and motion? and yet notwithstanding so much hath the dejection of his primitive nature for sin weakned in him this propension, that were it not for education, it is supposed, yea and by experience confirmed, that he would walk upon all four like a beast. And shall we wonder that the malediction of the Serpent, exceeding that of Man's, should produce as much as this?

So then to conclude this first particular of the Serpent's curse; I understand it, from the ground aforesaid, as insinuating the cause by the outward and sensible effect, according to the manner of the Scripture; namely, the abasement and fall of the Serpent's whole nature from his primitive perfection, discovered by the fall of his once advanced body, thenceforth to go groveling upon the earth: even as the despoiling of the nature of Man of the inward indowments of perfection, is by the same sacred Trope insinuated by his outward nakedness; that is, the obscuration of that glorious and celestial beauty which he had before his sin: The difference whereof was so great, that he could not endure afterward to behold himself any more; but sought for a covering, even to hide himself from himself.

And now I come to the second particular, Dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life. The courtest diet that any living creature hath allowed him. None of the Beasts of the field with whom he is compared are thus poorly provided for; nay not any other, unless the base Earthworm, not worthy to be named among the creatures. Even with this vilest of creatures is now ranked that once so noble a creature, the Serpent. Which yet is not so to be understood, as though the Serpent did not sometime eat something else, for they sometime devour birds, frogs, and such like; but that this is the ordinary fare which God hath provided him, and if at any time he getteth any other, he goeth beyond his limits. Whence Esay 65. 25. among the blessings of the new Jerusalem this is reckoned for one, that the Serpent should eat dust; that is, be made to be contented with the diet God had appointed him, and not to encroach upon the food appointed for others.

Gen. 3. 14.

But why did God appoint him this Food? I answer, Even to continue him in that accursed and vile condition to which he had dejected him: For Food is for the repairing and preservation of nature, and the goodness or badness thereof doth make the temper of the body better or worse. Hence according to the degrees of excellency in the creatures, their Food is finer or courser: Plants suck the moisture of the earth; Beasts live most upon plants; but Man of the flesh of cattel, fowl, and fishes. Since therefore the serpent was to have no better fare than the dust of the earth; as it argues the baseness of his nature which can with such food be nourished, so doth it necessarily imply his continuance in that his dejection and vileness: whereas otherwise it were not impossible, because his nature for the essence is still the same it was, if his diet were as it had been, for him to improve himself more near to his primitive temper than now he is. But God, who had decreed he should ever remain under this malediction, appointed also the means to retain him therein.

DISCOURSE XLII.

GENESIS 3. 15.

And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel.

THE third and last particular remains to be treated of; I will put enmity between thee and the woman, &c. This no doubt intendeth in some things more directly the spiritual serpent than the brute; yet for the general it may and ought, as well as the rest, to be expounded of the brute serpent, as a Glass wherein to behold the malice and destiny of the other, the Devil. It containeth two parts; The Enmity, and the Event and Managing thereof. For the Enmity, how it is verified concerning the brute serpent experience telleth. It is some part of the happiness of the creature to be the Favourite of Man who is the Lord thereof; what honour could betide it greater than this? But between the Serpent and Man is the most deadly enmity, and the strongest antipathy that is amongst the Beasts of the field; such an one as discovereth it self both in the natural and sensitive faculties of them both. For the first, Their humours are poison each to other: the gall of a serpent is Man's deadly poison; and so is the spittle of a Man affirmed to poison the Serpent. For the sensitive antipathy, it appears in that the one doth so much abhor the sight and presence of the other. Man's nature is at nothing so much astonished as at the sight of a Serpent; and like enough the Serpent is in like manner affected at the sight of Man; and that more especially, as the Naturalists affirm, of a naked man than otherwise. As though his instinct even remembered the time of his malediction, when he and naked man stood before God to receive this sentence of everlasting enmity.

And whereas the words of the Text do in special point out the Woman in this sentence of enmity; the Naturalists do observe, that is greater and more vehement with that sex than with the male of mankind: Insomuch that Rupertus affirmeth, That if but the naked foot of a Woman doth never so little press the head of a serpent before he can sting her, both the head and body presently dieth; which no cudgel or other weapon will cause, but that some life and motion will still remain behind. Hoc (saith he) ita esse, ipsorum qui per industriam exploraverunt fidâ relatione comperimus. Lib. 3. de Trin. c. 20. You know my Author, who affirms that he had this from the faithful report of such as had purposely bestow'd their pains to find out the truth thereof.

The remaining words of my Text do express the Managing and Event of this enmity, which is far more dangerous and unlucky on the Serpent's part than on Man's: for Man is able to reach the Serpent's head, where his life chiefly resideth, and where where a blow is deadly ; but as for the serpent, he shall not be able to prevail against Man otherwise than privily and unawares, and that but in the lowest part, namely, when he shall pass him unseen, to sting him by the heel. And that this is the nature of a Serpent it appeareth in the words of Dan's blessing, Gen. 49. 17. Dan shall be a Serpent by the way, an Adder in the path ; that biteth the horse-heels, so that his rider shall fall backward. And to make an end of this discourse also, it is a thing to be observed in the nature of a Serpent, that as soon as he perceiveth man ready to throw or strike at him, he will presently rouse his body for a buckler to save his head ; even as though he had some impression of that doctrine which God here read him in my Text, Ipsæ conteret tibi caput, He shall bruise thy Head ; Beware thy head. Gen. 3. 15.

AND thus hitherto I have considered these words as they are the curse of the brute serpent : Now I am to go over with them again, to shew how they are propounded unto us by God as a Glass wherein to behold the Devil's malediction ; the serpent being made now the discovery of his vileness, which once he abused for a mask to hide it from the woman. As therefore the serpent is the most accursed of all the cattle and beasts of the field ; so is the Devil the most accursed spirit amongst all orders and degrees of Spirits : namely, of the highest of Angels become the abjectest of Spirits ; more base and accursed than the most cursed damned Soul ; having little or nothing left him of that good which was suitable to a spiritual condition : and this is the state of the Devil for the general, answerable to that of the serpent.

Now for the particulars. The first is, Upon thy breast shalt thou go. How doth this besit the Devil ? The Devil hath no bodily breast to go upon : But as I shewed in the serpent, that this groveling signified the abasement of his whole nature from its primitive excellency ; so in the Devil it signifies his stooping down and falling from his most sublime and glorious condition. A wonderful stoop this was, when that which had been advanced as high as heaven, was made to fall down as low, yea lower than the earth it self. This is the Devil's going upon his breast, this the groveling of that once so highly reared posture : according to that description of Jude ver. 6. who calls them the Angels that kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation ; agreeable to that of S. Peter 2 Ep. 2. 4. God spared not the Angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell.

The second particular is, The dust of the earth shalt thou eat all the days of thy life. The food wherewith Spirits are fed is analogical, spiritual and not corporal ; we must therefore here seek out that which in them hath the fittest resemblance with corporal food. The life of Angels consists in the continual contemplation of the excellent Greatness, wonderful Goodness, and glorious Beauty of the Essence of God, both as it is in it self, and as it is communicated unto his creatures. This is that which our Saviour intimates, Matth. 18. 10. Their Angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven. The food of Angels, whereby this their Intellectual life and vegetation is strengthened and continued, is that unspeakable joy and delight which accompanies their contemplation of God, and which they find in the beholding of whatsoever else hath any conformity and suitableness with him, his Power, his Wisdom, his Glory, his Goodness : according to that in the Gospel, There is joy in heaven, and in the presence of the Angels of God, for one sinner that repenteth. This is that Manna Luke 15. 7, 10. which feeds the blessed Angels, and which makes them unweariable and unsatiable in their contemplation and imitation of God, as corporal food enableth the body for the continuance of corporal actions and works.

And such as this had been the Devil's fare, had he not fallen from his first estate by sin : whereas now in stead of that Manna, he is fain with the serpent to feed on a food as coarse and as base as the dust of the earth. For as of a glorious Angel he is fallen to be a damned Spirit ; so is his diet answerable to continue him in that damnable estate ; namely, a food clean contrary to that of the blessed Angels, and a very earth to their heaven ; a most execrable joy and a malicious delight in whatsoever is opposite to the Power, the Wisdom, the Goodness, the Glory of God his Creator : this is that he hungeth and hunteth after, and nothing but this. If there were no sin, no confusion, no misery of creatures in the world, the Devil would be soon starved ; for this is that he preys after, this is that carrion he seeks for, when he goeth about (as S. Peter saith) like a roaring Lion seeking whom he may devour. I have read of a people of America that will eat no flesh before it be stinking rotten, and then it seems to them most tender and delicate : These are of a diet like unto the Devil, for nothing but garbage and carrion are his dainties ; the more rotten with sin, the more pleasing to his palate ; that which stinks most in God's nostrils, that smells the sweetest in his. 1 Pet. 5. 8.

Thus much of the second part of this Curse.

The

Gen. 3. 15.

The last part remains, I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed, &c. In which we will first consider The parties who are to be at this deadly feud: Secondly, The event and success they have one against the other.

For the first, The parties are on one side said to be the Serpent and his seed; on the other side, The woman and her seed. By the Serpent we are to understand Satan the Prince of darkness and Father of Devils. The Serpent's seed in the first place are the whole crue of Devils and damned spirits, who are fallen from their first estate and condition. These are the Serpent's first-born, begotten by him not by corporal generation, nor as they are Spirits, but by spiritual deformation, as they are Devils. For it is the opinion of Divines, That Satan fell first himself, and afterward propagated his Apostasie by drawing others after him, over whom therefore he worthily deserveth to have the principality and chiefdom; in which respect also, were there no other, yet he might be called their Father, and they his sons or seed, as we know the use of the Scripture is to call Princes Fathers, and Subjects Sons. The latter offspring of the Devil, being a second brood, are the whole company of wicked and reprobate worldlings: for that such as these are the spawn of that foul Fiend, it appears clearly by the words of our Saviour to the Pharisees, Joh. 8. 44. Ye are of your Father the Devil, and the lusts of your Father ye will do. And again, 1 John 3. 10. The children of God are opposed to the children of the Devil. Therefore Christ calls Judas a Devil, John 6. 70. And Paul Acts 13. 10. calls Elymas the Sorcerer a child of the Devil. The case is plain: And as the Vanguard consisted of the first crue, so these latter are the Rere of Satan's Army.

Esay 7. 14.

Now on the other side, against this Army of Hell-hounds stand The Woman and the Woman's seed. The Woman though only named, excludes not the Man, who was to be at enmity with the Devil as well as the Woman: But the reason of this unusual Trope, which calls the Kind by the name of the weaker and inferior Sex, is because of the words following [of the seed] wherein is contained the great Mystery of Christ's Incarnation, under whose colours and in whose power alone this Army is both to march and overcome. For this great Captain was to be, as you know, the seed of the Woman only, and not of the Man; A Virgin should conceive a Son, whose name is called Emmanuel. Whence it comes to pass, that some by seed will have no other seed to be understood but the person of Christ only: both because he is alone that seed of the woman, which is not the seed of man; and because S. Paul, Gal. 3. 16. on those words (v. 8.) In thy seed shall all the Nations of the earth be blessed, expoundeth seed singularly and individually of Christ himself alone. But if it be well observed, the case here is not the like; for the seed of the Woman is opposed to the seed of the Serpent, which seed cannot chuse but be taken collectively for Satan and all his regiments of Devils and Hell-hounds. And why should not also the seed of the Woman be understood of Christ mysfical, that is, of Christ the Head with all his members, who are incorporate into him by Faith into one mysfical body? For although they are naturally the seed of Man as well as of the Woman, yet spiritually by this incorporation they are the seed of the Woman only, as is their Head with whom they are one. And this it is which makes them of the party against the Serpent; for till they once became the seed of the woman only, there was no enmity betwixt them.

The seed therefore of the Woman I expound to be Christ and his Members: He κατὰ φύσιν, the seed of the woman by nature; they κατ' ἐφ' ἑμμοσιν, by their spiritual engraftment into him. Hence appears the difference of these two Armies. First, In Satan's Army all march under their Father who begot them; but Christ's Army fighteth under the Colours of their elder brother, the first-begotten seed of the woman. Secondly, In their ranging, Christ and his Army are as one body informed by one Spirit; the Devil's is far more disunited. Thirdly, In their fighting: for in Satan's Army every Souldier useth his own strength, and fights with his own weapons; but in Christ's Army the whole strength lies in Christ their General: all our armour is on his back, and our weapons guided by the power of his hand. So we may learn out of S. Paul, Ephes. 6. 11, 12. Put on (saith he) the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the Devil. For we wraastle not against flesh and bloud, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places.

Thus then having seen the marshalling of these two Armies which are at so deadly an enmity, let us at last see The success of their skirmishes and of the stratagems which they practise one against the other. These are described on the Devil's part very terrible, that his head should be mauled; but on Christ's side the loss should be very small, the Devil prevailing but to the wounding or bruising of his heel. But

But what is this Head of the Serpent? and what the Heel of the Woman's seed? Those who understand The seed of the woman singularly, of the person of Christ only, make his Head to be the Godhead, against which the Serpent could prevail nothing; but his heel to be the Manhood, which the Serpent so bruised at his Passion, that the grave became his bed for three days together. This indeed is true, and no marvel, for the Head is as it were the whole Bodie's Epitome. But we who have expounded The seed of the woman collectively, of Christ and his Members, must also in this mystical Body find a mystical Head and a mystical Heel; and so in like manner for the Serpent and his seed. Gen. 3. 15.

The Head therefore, or, if you had rather, Headship, is nothing else but Sovereignty: The Serpent's head is the Devil's Sovereignty, which is called Principatus mortis, the sovereignty of death, namely, both objective and effective; that is, such a Sovereignty as under which are only such as are liable to Death both temporal and eternal; and such a Sovereignty whose power consists not in saving and giving of life, but in destroying, and bringing unto Death both of body and soul. Under the name also of Death understand, as the Scripture doth, all other miseries of mankind, which are the companions of this double Death I speak of. This is that damnable Head of the Serpent, the Devilish Sovereignty of Satan. Now the Sword whereby this Sovereignty was obtained, the Sceptre whereby it is maintained, or, as S. Paul speaks, the sting of this Serpent's head, is Sin: This is that which got him this Kingdom at the first, and this is still the right whereby he holds the greatest part thereof. Imperium iisdem artibus conservatur quibus acquiritur, By the same arts and methods is an Empire conserved by the which it was at first obtained. 1 Cor. 15. 55.

This Sovereignty of the Devil, which once overwhelmed nigh all the world, the Woman's seed should break in pieces and destroy; which (according to this Prophecy) we see already performed in a great measure, and the grounds laid long ago for the destruction of all that remaineth. As saith S. John Ep. 1. c. 3. v. 8. The Son of God was manifested for this purpose, that he might destroy the works of the Devil. And Christ himself said, that the time was come that the Prince of this world should be cast out; and bade his Disciples be of good cheer, for he had overcome the world. If you would see what a wonderful victory he hath long ago gotten of the Serpent, when after a terrible battel he overcame and destroyed the Sovereignty of the Serpent in the Roman Empire, see it described in the 12. of the Revelation, v. 7, 8. where Michael (that is, Christ) and his Angels fought against the great Dragon and his Angels, till the Dragon with all his Army was discomfited, and their place found no more in heaven, that is, he utterly lost his Sovereignty in that state; whence there was a voice in heaven, v. 10. Now is come salvation, strength, and the Kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ. And what he will at the length do with the remainder yet of the Devil's Sovereignty, you may find in the 19. and 20. chapters of the Revelation: For he must reign, as S. Paul saith, until he hath put all his enemies under his feet, until he hath destroyed all power, rule, and authority adverse unto him: And then last of all destroying Death by giving immortality to our raised bodies, shall surrender up his Kingdom unto his Father, as it is 1 Cor. 15. 25, &c. John 12. 31.
Chap. 16. 33.

But Satan, saith my Text, shall prevail something against him, for the Serpent shall bruise his heel. What is this Heel? Those who understood the seed of the woman singularly, as I told you, made it Christ's Manhood: But now we expound the seed Christ's Mystical Body, what shall we make the Heel thereof? I could say that by it were only meant a light wound, or the Devil's assaulting the Body of Christ ex insidiis, at unawares; for that is his fashion since the great overthrow which our Michael gave him, to work his feats underhand, and to undermine our Lord in his members. But this, though true, is not full enough. It may seem therefore the fittest to make hypocritical Christians, who profess Christ outwardly, but inwardly are not his, to make these the heel of his Mystical Body: for against such the Devil we know prevaleth somewhat, and by them annoyeth the rest of the Body with his venom, though he be far enough yet from impeaching our Lord's Headship and Sovereignty. But will you give me leave to utter another conceit? If the Blessed souls in heaven be the upper part of Christ's mystical Body, the Saints on earth the lower part of the same; may not the Bodies of the Saints deceased which lye in the earth be accounted for the heel? For I cannot believe but they have relation to this mystical Body, though their Souls be severed from them, and yet must that relation be as of the lowest and most postick members of all. If you will admit this, then it will appear presently what was this hurt upon the heel, when Christ had once mauled the Devil's head; for the Text seems

to

Gen. 3. 15.

to intimate that the Devil should give this wound after his head was broken.

I will hold you in suspense no longer. Read the 13. of the Revelation, and see what follows upon Michael's Victory over the Dragon, what the Devil did when he was down: He forms a new Instrument of the wounded Roman Empire, by whose means, under a pretence of the Honour given to the precious Reliques of the Saints and Martyrs, he conveyed the poyson of Saint-worship and Saint-invocation into the Kingdom of Christ; with which wound of the heel, the Devil coming on the blind side, the true Church had been long annoyed, and limpeth still.

DISCOURSE XLIII.

2 PETER 2. 1.

But there were false Prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false Teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable Heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction.

ANY are the Prophecies in Scripture wherein the Holy Ghost forewarns us of a great and solemn Defection and Corruption of Faith, which should one day overspread the visible Face of the Catholick Church of Christ, and eclipse the light of Christian Verity and Belief. S. Paul (2 Thef. 2. 3.) foretels us, that there should be an Apostasy or Falling away of Christians, and the Man of sin be revealed, before the coming of the day of the Lord. The same Apostle (1 Tim. 4. 1.) tells us, that though the great Mystery of Godliness (spoken of chap. 3. 16.) were then preached among the Gentiles, and believed on in the world; yet the Spirit spake expressly, that in the latter times some should depart from the Faith, giving heed to seducing Spirits and * doctrines of Devils (or Demons.) S. John tells us (Rev. 17. 5.) that the Christian Rome, of the spouse of Christ should become a Babylonish strumpet and the Mother of the fornications and abominations of the Earth. At the same mark aimeth this Prophecy of my Text, though perhaps less taken notice of than the rest: The evidence whereof I hope you will confes with me, when I have unfolded the same.

Understand therefore that the Words I have read are A prediction of a Corruption of Faith which should one day surprise and overcloud the visible Church, or that company of men upon whom the name of Christ was called, and who outwardly professed him to be their Lord and Redeemer. This Corruption is here set, First, generally, both for the matter and the manner: For the matter, There shall be false Teachers among you, who shall bring in damnable Heresies; For the manner, it should be done privily, Who privily shall bring in damnable Heresies. Secondly, The Apostle also specially informs us of what kind and sort these damnable Heresies should be, that so we might not only know that Heresies should be, but be forewarned also what they should be; and that by a double mark and description. For first, They should be like unto those which we read have befallen the people and Church of Israel: There were false Prophets also among the people *; (i. e. the Jews,) even as there shall be false Teachers among you. The second mark is, That these Heresies should be of such a kind, as men who openly professed themselves Christians and servants of Christ should yet deny Christ to be their Lord and Master: for, saith our Apostle, They shall deny the Lord that bought them; that is, professing themselves to be of that number of men whom Christ had purchased with his blood, or the bought servants of Christ, they should nevertheless deny their Lord who

* That these words are to be translated thus, see it proved in Bo. III. in the Discourse of The Apostasy of the latter times, Chap. 1.

* In the New Testament of Acts or the people is more than once put for the Jews; as in Acts 21. 28. and in Chap. 26. 17. Acts & Thom. the people and the Gentiles are opposed: the like in Verse 23. as in Chap. 9. 15. are opposed the Gentiles and the children of Israel called in the two foregoing places the people. See also Chap. 28. 17.

bought them. The last thing he tells us is, the Doom which should befall such as had interest in these Heresies; They should bring upon themselves swift destruction.

2 Pet. 2. 1.

To begin with the general description of the matter, There shall be false Teachers among you, which shall bring in damnable Heresies. The time should be when the Doctors of the Church should teach falsely, and the people with them believe damnably. For we must understand that these false Teachers should not be a few, only here and there one, nor these Heresies scattered only in some few places; but that this Corruption was to be such a one as should cover and overwhelm the face of the visible Church. For the Great Defection was to be a general and solemn one, such a one as should stain the whole body with the foul name of Whore of Babylon, Rev. 17. 5. Such a one as whereby the Court of the Temple of God should not only be prophaned, but even trod down by Gentilism, Rev. 11. 2. Such a one as the World is said to wonder after the Beast, and worship him, Rev. 13. 3, 4. Such a one as should not only make War with the true Saints, but overcome them, Rev. 13. 7. Otherwise if S. John and S. Paul should mean no more but the errors of particular men, and their trouble from the Church; they should make no Prophecy at all, or a needless one. For who knows not that in S. Paul's, S. John's and the Apostles own times were divers Heresies and Hereticks, here and there dispersed and grown up as Weeds in the wheat-field of Christ? but the wheat yet overtopped them, and the known body of the visible Church disclaimed them. Of such as these therefore they could not mean, when they foretell of a corruption to come in after-times, or (as Paul speaks, 1 Tim. 4. 1.) in the latter times; for no man uses to foretell of things which are already, as if they were to come. Nor would the Apostles foretell of Heresies as it were special to the after and latter times, if they were but such and in such manner as was but usual and no novelty in their own time. The corruption and defection therefore so much prophesied of was another manner of one, such a kind of one as before neither had been in the Church nor was to be; namely, such a one as should not be disclaimed by the body of the Church, but should surprise, eclipse and overwhelm, and as it were overcloud the visible Church itself; which should be as when the Heavens are overcast, so as the bright Firmament with the stars and lights therein can no more be seen.

If this be so; then may we hence observe how vain and idle that challenge of our Adversaries is, when they bid us shew our Church to have been always visible, and to give them the names of those who have been of our Belief in all Ages since Christ and his Apostles times. What? may they not have been, although we cannot name them? This is as unreasonable a demand, as to require a man to shew him and point him where the Sun is, when the whole face of Heaven is overcast with Clouds: would you not believe the Sun were in the Firmament and risen in a cloudy day, though no man could point and shew you with his finger where she is? yes, I am sure you would, and say too, that there may be other signs thereof, though a man cannot see her; as namely Day-light, which never is without the Sun; yea and now and then we may have a glimpse of her through a thinner cloud, which assures us thereof. Even so when the great Defection as a Cloud overspread the face of the Christian Firmament, the visible Church of Christ, for divers Ages together, though the Cloud be for a great part so thick as it will not suffer us to discern the company of those who still kept intire the true and unstained Faith of the Gospel, yet we rest assured that it was under the Cloud, because some Day-light of Christianity still appeared; which argued the Sun was in the Firmament, though the great Cloud overshadowed her; yea and now and then we can shew and spy some glimpse of her, as often as any breach happened in the Cloud which overcast her.

I might also make use of that Parable of our Saviour, where the Church or Kingdom of God (for both is one) is compared to a Field, where the Master sowed good seed; but while men slept, the Enemy, that wicked one, came and sowed tares among the Wheat. If the tares once grow so many and so high that they quite overshadow the wheat, whereof there is but little left, can a man who stands a good way off shew the wheat from the tares with his finger? I think not; though, if the wheat overmasters the tares, he easily might. This is the very case of the true Church so long as the Apostasy prevailed: And we who live now are something far off; if we had been nearer, as those were who lived then, we might have discerned the wheat a great deal better.

Math. 13. 24, 25.

But if you would yet be more fully informed how the true company of Believers could live under this woful state of the visible body, and not be extinguished, and by what Signs and Arguments we may fully conclude it was there all that time; though

I have

2 Pet. 2. 1.

I have given some taste of this last already, yet you shall hear more of them both anon, as my Text will give me occasion.

In the mean time I must tell you, That there needed not all this stir about Visibility, if our Adversaries were ingenuous : For the difference between them and us is not so much about the point of Visibility, as about the point of Time. They hold the glorious Visibility of the true Church to have continued from the beginning until this present ; and the overshadowing of the light, and eclipsing of the glory thereof under Antichrist, to be a thing yet to come ; and when it comes, they and the Fathers too say as much of the eclipsing of the Church as we do for our hearts. For then they say the use of the Sacraments should cease, no Eucharist, no Mass, no publick Assemblies, yea all Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction should be extinguished. Is not here enough ? Now on the contrary, we hold the Clouding of the Church's Visibility to have been already, and a great part of the Glory thereof to be yet to come. Both agreeing in this, that in that fatal Apostasie the Church's Visibility and Glory should cease : But we say, that time hath been already ; they say, it is yet to come : we say, that that time was to last many Ages ; they say, when it comes, it shall be but three single years and a half.

Why then are they not ashamed to offer to choak us with this Argument of Visibility and Glory, when themselves confess there is a time to come when the same Argument would be as well used against their supposed Catholick Church as it is now alledged against ours ? This is too great partiality. Seeing therefore the whole Controversie lies in this, Whether the Church's fatal Apostasie be already past or yet to come, it is a great deal the quicker course for them and us not to wrangle about Visibility, but to examine the condition and quality of both Religions by the Scripture ; where we have ( as S. Peter speaks in the foregoing Chapter ) a most sure word of prophecy, whereunto we shall do well if we take heed, as to a light shining in a dark place. And this shall suffice to have observed concerning the matter in general, A General Desection or Corruption of the Church by false Teachers and damnable Heresies.

2 Pet. 1. 19.

* μαγεσιονισμῶν
m.

NOW I come to the Circumstance of this general description of the Church's Apostasie, namely, The manner how these false Doctors should bring in these damnable Heresies ; which is not Openly, but Privily. For to the * word here used for bringing in signifies, who privily shall bring in damnable Heresies : Not so that it should be observed and espied at the first ; but so by degrees, and with such a mask of plausible pretences and good meaning, that the Church was overwhelmed before it knew what it ailed : Even as some diseases steal so upon a man, that he never knew he was sick until he see himself past recovery ; and then perhaps he will begin to call to mind, though too late, at what time and by what means this sickness grew upon him.

This Observation therefore will furnish us with an Answer to another Objection of our Adversaries. For if ( say they ) the Catholick visible Church altered so much from the Primitive sincerity of Faith and Christian worship as we say it did ; how comes it then to pass that it was no more observed and opposed by those who then lived ? For it is strange so great an alteration should find admittance with the general consent of all. I answer out of my Text, That it came in privily, and so was not observed nor opposed till it was too late, and that the Apostate Faction was grown too strong for the sound. A fire, we know, if it be espied at the first, may be easily smothered and quenched ; but if the cry rise not till all be on a flame, no man then dare come near to help it : So was the case here.

And yet in some Corruptions somewhat sooner espied than the rest ; as Worshipping of Images, Transubstantiation, the Pope's Godlike Supremacy, the establishing of these was not without great opposition, even to the changing of States and Kingdoms. But here also the opposers came too late ; for these Heresies also were at the first brought in so privily, that the Faction was not espied till it was grown too strong to be overmastered by opposition.

THUS having seen the General part of this description, both for the matter, false Teachers and damnable Heresies, and also for the manner, they should be privily brought into the visible Church ; I come now to the special part of the Prophecy, which tells us in particular What kind of Heresies these should be, of what sort, which should so generally over-cloud the Church of Christ. And this our Apostle here sets forth by a twofold mark. First, They should be such as we read to have been amongst the Jewish people under the Old Testament : There were ( saith he ) false Prophets among the people, even as there shall be false Teachers among you. This is a good ear-mark, having so infallible history as is the story of the Bible to know it by : For if this this of Christendom were of the same stamp with that of Israel, it cannot lie long hid from us; which that it may not, let us confine our discovery to these two heads. First, Let us learn what Heresies were those which the false Prophets of Israel brought in amongst them, as we find it recorded in the Scripture; for thither our Apostle sends us *. In the second place, We will examine whether the Heresies of Christendom, brought in by the false Doctors of Babylon, be not exactly like them.

2 Pet. 2. 1.

* Εἰς αὐτὸν 3.
Sec.

To begin with the first, I cannot find in the Old Testament any other Heresies there recorded as brought in by false Prophets, but only Idolatry and the worshipping of other Gods besides the true and living God: I doubt not but the Jews had other Errors, but this is that which so great a part of the Bible is taken up in forewarning of, in relating of, and in declaiming against it. This is that we are sure the false Prophets had a hand in; of the rest nothing that way is recorded. This is that Moses forewarned the people of Israel of, Deut. 13. 1. If there arise among you a Prophet or a dreamer of dreams, and give thee a sign or a wonder, 2. And the sign or the wonder come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee, saying, Let us go after other gods, (which thou hast not known) and let us serve them; 3. Thou shalt not hearken to the words of that Prophet, &c. Here you hear of the false Prophets, and what should be their Doctrine, viz. Let us go serve other gods and worship them.

But if you ask whether there were any such in that people, Elijah shall tell you, 1 Kings 18. 22. I only (saith Elijah) remain a Prophet of the Lord, but Baal's Prophets are four hundred and fifty men. And, 2 Kings 10. 19. Jehu made a foul fray amongst them when he said, Call unto me all the Prophets of Baal, and all his servants, and all his Priests, let none be wanting; for I have a great sacrifice to do unto Baal: but he served them in their kind. And of this kind of Prophets were those of which Elisba bade Jeroham the King ask counsel, 2 Kings 3. 13. when being in distress in his march against Moab, he had sent to him for advice what to do, *Get thee (*saith he) to the Prophets of thy Father, and the Prophets of thy Mother,* that is, the Prophets of Ahab and Jezabel.

* By way of irony.

And you may know these Prophets taught the people the same Religion of Idols which themselves followed. Hear what the Lord saith, Jer. 2. 8. The Priests said not, Where is the Lord? and they that handle the Law, knew me not; the Pastors also transgressed against me, and the Prophets prophesied by Baal, (or, for Baal) and walked after things that profit not. And after, verse 26, 27. As the Thief is ashamed when he is found; so is the house of Israel ashamed; they, their Kings, their Princes, their Priests, and their Prophets; saying to a stock, Thou art my Father; and to a stone, Thou hast brought me forth, &c. And chap. 8. 1. At that time (saith the Lord) (i. e. when the Jews shall be carried captive) they shall bring out the bones of the Kings of Judah, and the bones of his Princes, and the bones of the Priests, and the bones of the Prophets, and the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem out of their graves: verse 2. And they shall spread them before the Sun and the Moon and all the Host of Heaven, whom they have loved, and whom they have served, and whom they have worshipped. Chap. 23. 13. I have seen folly in the Prophets of Samaria, they prophesied in Baal, and caused my people Israel to erre. — verse 15. For from the Prophets of Jerusalem is profaneness gone forth into all the land. verse 26, 27. How long shall it be in the hearts of the Prophets that prophesie lies? — which think to cause my people to forget my Name by their dreams they tell every man to his neighbour, as their Fathers have forgotten my Name, for Baal.

You know by this time what kind of false Prophets were among the people; where I would desire you to take notice of one thing more, That for all this, these Prophets prophesied these things in Jehovah's name: For so it is said of those I last quoted in the verse immediately before the words I quoted — the Prophets that prophesie lies in my name. So also shall you read, 1 Kings 22. of Ahab's Prophets, who being Prophets of Baal, yet prophesie in the name of Jehovah the true God, Thus saith Jehovah: which being foreseen by the Lord himself before it came to pass, seems to be the ground of the Law, Deut. 18. 20. But the Prophet which shall presume to speak a word in my name, which I have not commanded him to speak, and which shall speak in the name of other gods, even that Prophet shall die.

False Prophets pretended the name of God.

Seeing therefore we find these to have been the false Prophets among the people of the Church of Israel, and their Heresies to have been the Doctrines of Idols, of worshipping the Host of Heaven, of Baalim, of Gods of wood and stone; of these undoubtedly S. Peter means, when he saith, As there were false Prophets among the people, so shall there be false Teachers among you, which shall bring in the like damnable Heresies.

HAVING therefore brought the matter thus far, let us now see whether S. Peter's Prophecy be fall out true or not; whether the Apostasie whereunto false Teachers have brought the Christian Churches be not like that almost in every respect whereunto the false Prophets once brought the Church of Israel. But first I must instruct you a little in the old Idolaters and the Heathens Divinity, both concerning the sorting of their Gods; and secondly, for the way and manner to worship them.

1 Pet. 2. 1.

For their Gods, the Heathen and those who followed their fashions had two sorts of them: First, Sovereign and Supreme Gods, which the Scripture calls The Host of Heaven; Secondly, Under-gods, or, if you will, Godlings, which the Greeks call Dæmon-gods, the Scripture calls them Baalim, that is, Lords.

Now the Sovereign Gods, or the Host of Heaven, were such as they supposed to remain always in the Heavens, yea to dwell in the Heavenly lights, in the Sun, Moon and Stars, as it were Souls in bodies, and there to keep their stations immovably without change of place or presence. Which Celestial and Heavenly Gods as they were Eternal, without beginning or ending; so they supposed them to sublime and pure, as they might not be prophaned with the approach of earthly things, or with the care and managing of mortal mens businesses.

* An inferior Order of Gods.
* In his Symposium.

And therefore they bring in that * second Order of Gods, called Dæmons or Ea-lims, as a middle sort of Divine Powers between the Sovereign Gods and mortal men, whose office is to be as Mediators and Agents between them, and, as * Plato speaks, reporters and comers from men to the Gods and from the Gods to men; without whom there could be no commerce and intercourse between the Gods and men: For they say, it befits not the Majesty of the Sovereign Gods to manage these things of themselves. And therefore though all things come by their Will, Power and Authority, yet is it by the mediation and ministry of these Dæmons in Scripture called Baalim. I could prove you this at large out of the Heathen Philosophers, but I shall not need *.

* See this proved in Book III. in the Treatise of The Apostasie of the latter times, in Chap. 3.

Note that what immediately followed here in the former Edition is in this omitted, because it is verbatim, and with additions, express in the forementioned Apostasie of the latter times, in Chap. 3. & Chap. 4.

Thus therefore having seen the Heathen Doctors conceit of their Gods, now let us see briefly the other point I promised to speak of, viz. The manner how to worship them, and as it were to bring them to the lure of men, when they had occasion of devotion with them; and this was done by sacrificing of Images. You shall hear it from an ancient Author, and passing skilful in these mysteries, even Hermes Trismegistus, who in his Aselepius speaketh in English thus; *It is a wonder beyond all wonders, that man should find out a way to make Gods, (that is, Images,) &c. **

* See the rest of this large Testimony in Book III. in The Apostasie of the latter times, in the beginning of Chap. 5.

Another way to worship them was in Religious graves and sepulchres, for there they hoped to find their Ghost-gods especially; as we yet suppose that Spirits frequent Church-yards and places of the dead.

THESE were the Mysteries and conceits of the Ancient Idolaters, which the false Prophets of Israel brought in amongst the people of God, and made them also (as the Scripture speaks) to provoke the living God to jealousy with the abominations of the Heathen round about them. Now then judge impartially, whether this Prophecie in my Text be not long ago fulfilled amongst us Christians, the new people of God. There were false Prophets among the people of Israel, even so (saith my Text) were there to be false Teachers among Christians, who should bring in damnable Heresies.

Which that you may the better do, Know first, that the Israelites did at no time altogether renounce the true and living God, not in their worst times; but in their conceit and profession they acknowledged him still, and were called his people, and he their God, though they worshipped others besides him. So Christians in their Apostasie neither did nor wereto make an absolute Apostasie from God the Father and Christ their Redeemer; but in outward profession still to acknowledge him, and to be called Christians.

1 Kings 15. 30. 34. and elsewhere.

1 Kings 12. 28.

Secondly, There are two main Apostasies of Israel recorded in Scripture. The First is styled The sin of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, as a principal establisher thereof: And this was to worship the true God himself under an Image; For he set up Calves at Dan and Bethel, and consecrated them in this manner, Behold, Israel, the Gods which brought thee out of the land of Egypt. For those are Calves indeed which here think he took the Calves themselves to be Gods. The truth was, Because he would not have the people go to the Temple of Jerusalem, where the Ark, the pledge of God's presence, was; therefore he made these Calves in stead thereof, supposing, as the Gentiles did did of their Gods, that the true God would have yielded his presence to an Image made in honour of him : And therefore they used, when they came to make vows or oaths at the Calf, to swear Jehovah liveth ; as Hosea 4. 15. When therefore our Papists worship God the Creator under an Image, and Christ their Redeemer in a Cross, Crucifix, or in a piece of Bread ; this is the very same Apostasie with that of Jeroboam the son of Nebat who made Israel to sin : And as false Prophets taught Israel that, so have false Teachers brought into Christendom the very same as you see was prophesied. 2 Pet. 2. 1.

The Second main Apostasie of Israel is called The way of Ahab, not because he was the first bringer in, but the chief establisher thereof. And this was not only to worship the true God idolatrously in an Image, as Jeroboam did, but to worship other Gods besides him, namely Baal-gods or Baalim ; supposing either by these to have easier access unto the Lord of Hosts the Sovereign God, or that these he might resort unto at all times, and for all matters, as being nearer at hand, and not of so high a Dignity ; whereas the Sovereign God, Jehovah the God of Israel, either managed not smaller and ordinary matters, or might not be troubled with them : For such, as I told you, was the conceit of the Heathen, as that the souls of some great ones after death had the honour to be as Agents betwixt the Sovereign and Superior Gods and men, as being of a middle nature between them ; which in Greek are called Demons, in the Scriptures Baalim. When therefore those who are called Christians, and have given their faith to Christ Jesus, to be their only Mediator and royal Agent between them and his Father ; when these do worship and invoke Saints or Angels, whether with Images or without, to be as under-Mediators with God for them, or of themselves to bestow some favour upon them ; those who do this (as you know who do) are fallen into the Apostasie of Ahab, and are worshippers of Baalim : For the Idolatry of Saints is altogether the same with that of Baalim. 2 Chr. 22. 3.

HAVING therefore thus seen the verity of S. Peter's Prophecy for the first mark to know of what kind of Herese should be the Christian Apostasie, even like unto that of Israel ; now let me tell you what use to make of S. Peter's comparison and thus coupling the one by the other.

First, That wheresoever you read in Scripture of the Idolatry of Jeroboam's Calves and of Ahab's Baalim, you think of what I have told you ; and know that whatsoever God speaks against those things there, the same he speaks of the Apostate Christians under Rome, whose case is in all respects the same. If therefore other points be hard and such as you cannot understand, yet this of Idolatry is an easie mark for you to know the true Church from the false by ; and almost every leaf in the Scripture will help you. Bless the Lord therefore, and never cease to bless him, who hath delivered us from those woful abominations and Idolatries wherewith the Church was so long overwhelmed, and hath restored unto us the sincerity of his Gospel.

Secondly, Seeing the Holy Ghost hath taught us here to compare the Christian's Apostasie with that of Israel, we may hereby learn also what was the state and condition of true Christian Believers under the Apostasie of Antichrist, namely, the same with the true Israelites under the Apostasie of Israel.

Where was the true Church in Ahab's time ? was it not covered so under the Apostate Israelites, that Elias himself, who was one of it, could scarce find it ? 1 Kings 19. 10. Where was the company of true worshippers in Manasses time, the worst time of all ? or had the Lord no Church at all ? Yes he had a Church even then, even hidden in the body of that Idolatrous Nation ; yea a strong party, though not seen ; as appeared presently upon Manasses death, when Josiah came to reign, who at eight years of age, a very child, yet was able to reform all again. When therefore the Papists shall ask us where our Church was before Luther, let us answer, She was, as the true Israelites were then, buried under the Apostate body of Christendom ; she was even there whence God in his good time called her out, viz. she was in the Spiritual Babylon. If Rome now be Babylon, and your Mother-Church that ancient Spouse of Christ, which hath been so long an abominable Strumpet committing Fornication with strange Gods, as we are sure she is ; we cannot chuse but know where ours was in the meantime, until it pleased God to call her thence ; even amongst you she was then ; and where she is now you know, and shall one day feel, until you bite your tongues for pain. See this more fully exprest in the Apostasie of the latter times, in the end of Chap. 10. 2 Kings 22.

But how could the faithful company of Christ live in the midst of Idolaters, and have means of Salvation ? I answer, Even as the true Israelites lived in the midst of the Apostasie of Israel. See Comment. in Apocal. Chap. 17. in Book III.

Edition, is now omitted as being the very same with that in The Apostasie of the latter times, about the middle of Chap. 10. where there is an Answer to this Question, Whether, and in what manner our Church was Visible under the Antichristian Apostasie, and in what respects it was not visible ; and in both agreeable to the true Church under the Apostasies of Israel. Note that what follow'd here in the former

2 Pet. 2. 1.

But you may ask further; When the face of the Church and the whole visible worship therein was so universally stained with abominable Idolatries, how and whereby should a man gather that there were any such sincerer company amongst them who had not defiled their garments? I might tell you that Histories, though written by our enemies, do mention many such discovered at several times: But I will give you another sign to know it, namely, The light of God's word, and some other Divine Truths still remaining: For it was not so much for the Apostate Faction, as for the sake of some chosen ones, that this blessing was continued. Had there been nothing but Egyptians there, darkness should wholly have surprised them; but for Goshen's sake, for a few righteous in Sodom, God would not take this blessing from them. He that espies any day-light, will conclude the Sun is in our Heaven, though for the clouds he see her not. If we should see a candle hang up in a room, and see it full of blind men; yet would we say, surely there is some amongst them can see, why else hangs the candle there? So must we reason from the day-light and candle-light of Divine Truths still appearing and hung up in the Church. For, as S. Paul said, What if some did not believe? shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect? Rom. 3. 3. And Rom. 9. 4, &c. when the body of the Jewish Nation refused Christ, yet he reckons their privileges as many as Rome could ever challenge; Whose is (saith he) the Adoption, and the Glory, and the Covenants, and the giving of the Law, the service of God, and the promises; whose are the Fathers, &c. Not as though (saith he) the word of God had taken none effect: For they are not all Israel, which are of Israel, &c.

NOW I come to the second mark here laid down in my Text, to know what manner of Heresies should be in the great Apostasie of the Christian Faith; Even denying the Lord that bought them. They should give up their names as Christ's servants, as his purchase; and yet deny their Lord and Master: For Servants in times past used to be bought with a price, and so were as their Masters proper possession; Christ buys his servants with his blood. The meaning therefore is, they should profess themselves his servants, and yet deny him to be their Master. What Heresies should these be? Even the very same the first mark told us of, Christian Idolatry. For as a Wife who hath given her faith to one Husband, if she commit adultery with others, denies him to be that she calls him, though she call him Husband never so much: So the Church, the Spouse of Christ, having given her faith to him alone, to be her only Lord and Mediator, in whom and through whom alone she would approach the Throne of Majesty in Heaven; if she bows down her self to other Mediators, whether Saints or Angels, if she invokes and worships the Father in any other thing save Christ alone, the only Image we must worship, (the Image of the Father) and the only Agent we must imploy to God before the Throne in Heaven; she commits Spiritual Adultery, that is, Idolatry, and denies the Lord which bought her. That this should be the meaning here, let this one reason serve the turn, That that is always the meaning of the like Phrase in the Old Testament, where in stead of the Lord that bought, we have the Lord that brought them out of the land of Egypt. Let us compare them; * I am the Lord thy God which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, Thou shalt have none other Gods but me: In the New Testament thus saith Christ, I am Christ the Lord which bought thee, Thou shalt have no other Christ but me. Are not these alike? So when the Israelites fell to Idolatry, and to worship Idols and strange Gods, hear how the Lord speaks then, Deut. 32. 15, 16. Jeshurun waxed fat, forsook God which made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his salvation; they provoked him to jealousy with strange gods. So may we say, the Christian Mother waxed fat, forsook God which redeemed her, &c. Judges 2. 12, 13. They forsook the Lord God of their Fathers, which brought them out of the land of Egypt; and followed other gods, and served Baal and Ashtaroth. And this expression is frequent, Psal. 81. 10, 11. 1 Kings 9. 9. 2 Kings 17. 7. Just so might the Lord speak of Christians; They forsook the Lord which brought them out of the spiritual Egypt, and worshipped Saints and Angels.

* Exod. 20. 2.

See Deut. 29.
25.
2 Kings 17. 35.

I meant to have spoken much more of this, but the time will not suffer me. I desire we may observe from this twofold mark of the Christian Apostasie, What that is, among so many Corruptions both now and heretofore overwhelming the Church of Christ, wherein the Holy Ghost placeth the essence, and which he accounteth as the Soul of the great Apostasie under the man of sin, and would have us to make the Polestar of our discovery thereof: Not every Error, not every Heresie how gross soever, but Idolatry and Spiritual Fornication. As for other Heresies, though accompanying this, yet are they but accidental, and not of the essence of the great Apostasie which was to come. Even as Whores are seldom without other foul faults, which yet are no parts parts of Whoredom : so hath the Spiritual Whore many other Heresies, but her Whoredom is Idolatry. * Idolatry is the only Character and Note whereby the great Apostasy of the visible Church is discovered and distinguished from all other Blaphemies, Seditions and Heresies of what age or time soever. Which is the reason why Babylon is intituled in the Revelation of S. John, not the Liar of Babylon, nor the Tyrant of Babylon, nor the Heretick of Babylon, nor the Murtherers of Babylon, ( though she be all these ) but the Whore of Babylon ; yea the Great Whore, and the Mother of the Fornications and Abominations of the Earth, Chap. 17.

2 Pet. 2. 1.
1 Thes. 1. 9.
Conversion to Christianity is called a turning from Idols to serve the true God, and to wait for his Son Jesus Christ: Therefore Apostasy is a return to Idols from the true God and his Son Jesus Christ.

DISCOURSE XLIV.

1 COR. 10. 3, 4.

And they did all eat the same Spiritual meat ; And did all drink the same Spiritual drink : ( For they drank of that Spiritual Rock that followed them : and that Rock was Christ. )

THE first part of this Chapter is a Comparison of some Sacramental Types in the old Law with the two Sacraments of the new, and that in two respects ; namely, 1. For the same nature or substance of the Mysteries in both, and 2. For the same condition of the Receivers, if either they abuse them or walk unworthy of them. The words which I have now chosen are in special an agreement of some of the foresaid Types of the Law with the Eucharist or Lord's Supper : First, in substance of the Mystery ; And they ( that is, the Fathers in the Wilderness ) all ate the same Spiritual meat, and all drank the same Spiritual drink : Secondly, in the dangerous condition of unworthy Receivers either of this or the other Sacrament, in these words ; But with many of them God was not well pleased : for they were overthrown in the Wilderness.

And first I will speak of the first of these, which you may see is also double ; first, concerning our Spiritual meat, and secondly, concerning our Spiritual drink ; in both which the Apostle affirms those of the old Fathers to have been the same with ours. For the understanding whereof, we will first speak of the Spiritual meat, ( as the words lie ) and then of the Spiritual drink ; and in both, first what is required to be known for Explication, either of the words, or of what is contained in them ; and after come to such Observations as will follow and be gathered therefrom.

For Explication therefore, three things are to be enquired of.

1. Of what Meat and of what Rock the Apostle speaketh.
2. Wherein both the one and the other were Spiritual or Sacramental.
3. In what sense those Sacraments are said to be the same with ours.

For the first, The Meat here spoken of most certainly was Manna ; for it appears in the fifth verse, as also in the beginning, that he means of the time they were in the Wilderness, where the only Food was Manna, sent from Heaven. The word Manna either signifies a Portion, it was their dimensum or daily allowance given by God ; or Food made ready, because God prepared it, without any labour or industry of theirs : and this is thought to be the truest reason of the name. For as for that of S. Jerom, who thinks it had the name Man from the question asked upon the first sight thereof, מה הוי what is it, and so they called it מן in Chaldee, being the same with מה in Hebrew ; this opinion, though the * Seventy have translated so, yet is found unlikely by some learned in those Languages. 1. Because no reason can be given why the Israelites should then speak Chaldee. 2. Because in Chaldee the word מן is a question of persons, not of things ; and signifies Quis Who, not Quid What ; being the same with מי in Hebrew, which always asketh of persons, but never of things.

But to leave the name, and speak something of the nature : we must know that this Manna was not that which Dioscorides and Galen so call, namely, certain fragments

* Exod. 16. 17.
וַיִּשְׁאָלוּ וַיֹּאמֶר

I Cor. 10.
3, 4.

* Psal. 78, 24,
25.

Two Rocks out of which Israel drank.

* Exod. 17, 7.
Numb. 20, 13.

* Num. 20, 19
Deut. 2, 6.

Vide Psal. 78.
16. Psal. 105.
41.

of Frankincense : nor was it that which the Arabians call Manna, though it somewhat resembleth it ; For they call by this name a certain ἀερόμελι or hony-dew falling on some mountains of Syria ; and it seems they gave this name unto it by allusion unto the Sacred story. But this Manna wherewith God fed the Israelites was a miraculous thing, the Corn of Heaven and Bread of Angels, as * David calls it ; it fell only in the Wilderness of Sinai, it rained all times and days of the year saving the Sabbath ; it was so hard that it might be ground in a Mill, beaten in a Mortar, or baked in an Oven ; it melted in the Sun, and putrified with one night's keeping ; lastly, it was Food, and not Physick : not one of all these properties agreeing to the Apothecarie's Manna or Manna of the Arabians.

Come we now to the Rock, whereof the Apostle saith our Fathers drank : which speech any man may see is not proper, and therefore some say it is a Metonymie, Rock, for the water which came out of the Rock : perhaps it will be more easie to say here is an Ellipsis of the word πόμα or drink, to be supplied out of the words next before, and so to be construed thus, ἐπὶ τὸν πόμα ἐκ πνευματικῆς πέτρας. For they drank the drink of that spiritual Rock. Now for the Rock, there are two Rocks mentioned in Scripture out of which the Lord gave water unto the Israelites ; one at Rephidim, two years after their coming out of Egypt, Exod. 17. another at Kadesh, almost thirty eight years after, Numb. 20. It is doubtful which of these our Apostle meaneth. We may safely say he meaneth them both, the story of both being so like, as the places of both had one name * Meribah, of the murmuring and contending of the people. But if he meaneth only the one, I would say it is the former ; the miracle whereof was presently upon the raining of Manna.

But here is one word yet needs to be explained ; for our Apostle adds unto Rock ἀκολουθεῖς, the Rock following, or, which followed them : which some would have spoken of Christ, being the Rock which accompanied the Israelites, ( for so ἀκολουθεῖν signifies ) or the Rock which was to come and follow in after-times : others more truly expound it literally of the Rock in the wilderness, thinking it reasonable that the Apostle who spake literally of Manna which was truly eaten, should also in the same sense speak of the water of that Rock which was as truly drunken. And therefore they say the Apostle adds the word [ ἀκολουθεῖς following, ] to intimate that when the Rock was smitten, a stream gushed therefrom, which followed the Israelites many years as they journeyed in the wilderness : and therefore our Translation with others for explication-sake adds the word [ them ] which is not in the Greek ; and so the Syriack likewise translates the words, כאפא דרוחא דאחיא הוה עמהן that spiritual Rock which went with them.

But against this some object two things. 1. That it is not like the Apostle would affirm any thing as History which is nowhere mentioned in the Old Testament, where it is like so miraculous a thing would not have been concealed. 2. That the thing it self is otherwise unlikely, even by reasons out of Moses story. For they say, If it be meant of the first Rock at Rephidim, how came they to want water at Kadesh, if a river from the first Rock had followed them ? And if we say it is spoken of the second Rock at Kadesh, how comes it to pass that they offered to * buy water at a price of the Edomites, if water followed them at the heels ?

But unto the first it may be answered, That it may be elsewhere shewn in the New Testament, something to be alledged for Story which is not expressed in the Old Testament, especially when there is some ground whence some such thing may be drawn by good consequence ; and then I think we ought to believe the Illation of the Holy Ghost. And that this thing we now speak of may be inferred from the Story of Moses, it will appear thus : For seeing it was about two years after their coming out of Egypt, when the first Rock was smitten to give them water, and that in all their change of Stations for almost thirty eight years after we never find the least mention of any want thereof, though they travelled further in a dry and unwatered Wilderness : It will follow from hence, That either they stored themselves with water for so many years, which is impossible ; or else the water of the Rock ran after them ; and it may be their journeys were so ordered by the lower grounds, that it might naturally do so, so long as the miraculous Fountain lasted.

As for the other Objection, How they came again to want water at Kadesh, it is easily answered : For God might, for a new trial of his people, make the first Miracle cease when it pleased him ; and seeing at that Station they had taken a clean contrary way unto the former ; it may be the position of the Earth hindered it, God so ordering their journeys of purpose. And as for their buying water of the Edomites present-ly ly upon the smiting of the second Rock at Kadesh; it may be said that this Rock was not like the former; and so our Apostle by the word [ἀκολουθήσῃ] did imply he spake of the first only: or howsoever, those words of buying water of the Edomites are spoken in case they passed through the Edomites land, where it was not like the Miracle should have followed them, it being a watred Countrey.

1 Cor. 10.
3, 4.

Thus much I thought good to speak in defence of that Exposition which our Translation seems to approve by adding the word [them,] unto which (you see) we may without difficulty yield our assent: Otherwise it were easie yet to add, among such a variety, a fourth Exposition diverse from all the former, namely, That by leaving out the word [them] the word [Following] should be expounded not of following in regard of place, but of time and story, and that with relation unto Manna, because in order of time the smiting of the Rock followed presently upon the raining of Manna; and so the Apostle's sense, saying, ἐκ τῆς πνευματικῆς ἀκολουθήσῃ πέτρας, of the Spiritual Rock following, should be understood as following upon the raining of Manna, the myserie of drink following the Miracle of heavenly bread, as the giving of the Cup is to follow the breaking of Bread in the Lord's Supper. But this you may esteem as you please.

NOW I come to the second thing I propounded, wherein this Manna and this Rock were spiritual, that is, sacramental; and this was in regard they were Signs signifying Christ, and Pledges assuring the faithful Receivers of their enjoying him with all his Benefits. For a Sacrament is not a naked or a single Sign, but a Sign assuring, that is, a Seal or a Pledge of the thing signified, a signifying Pledge, or an assuring Sign. Now these Seals do always suppose, and are in some sort grounded upon, a resemblance which the Sign hath with the thing signified. For as Plato in Cratylus sayes, That the wisdom of the first imposers and inventors of the names of things was such in their choise, that they made the letters and syllables to agree with and to express the qualities of the things called by them, expressing soft things with soft sounds, harsh with harsh, &c. and so forth: So God in the Sacraments, which are as visible words, hath chosen such Signs as carry in them the Character and very Image of the things they are Pledges of. For a warrant therefore that this Manna and this Rock were such Sacraments and such spiritual things as our Apostle speaketh of, let us consider a while how they carried in them the marks of Christ whom they signified.

1. Then, to begin with Manna. As Manna was a meat * provided of God without the labour and industry of the Israelites: So is Christ given unto men, not out of any work or merits of theirs, but of the free gift and goodness of God. 2. As Manna came from Heaven besides the ordinary course of nature: So Christ's birth was wonderful, and not as the birth of other men: For his Divine nature he fetcht from above, and his Humane body was not begotten of mortal seed, but by the influence of the Holy Ghost from Heaven. 3. Manna was distributed unto all alike; one had not more and another less, but all an equal share: Even so Christ communicates himself unto all alike without acception of persons; For in him is neither male nor female, bond nor free; the Beggar hath as great a part in Christ as he who sits upon the Throne. 4. Manna when it came first was an unknown thing, for the Israelites (saith the Text) knew not what it was; no, they knew not whence it came, nor that it was the food the Lord had sent them: So Christ when he came into the world was unknown; For if they had known, (saith S. Paul) they would not have crucified the Lord of Glory. 5. Manna was Food, and a plentiful Food, there was enough for every body: So is Christ the Food and Bread of our Souls, and sufficient to feed many, yea even the whole World. 6. Manna was of a most sweet and pleasing taste: And so is Christ unto that Soul which can truly relish him; My yoke (saith he) is most sweet and easie, and my burthen light; And most true of him is that which the Psalmist writes, O taste and see, for the Lord is sweet. 7. Manna was of a white colour; even as our Saviour also was white and pure, as being free from all stain of sin: for (as it is 1 Pet. 2. 22.) He did no sin, neither was there any guile found in his mouth. 8. Also Manna, before it was eaten, was brayed in a Mortar or broken in a Mill: So was Christ our heavenly Manna broken upon the Cross, that he might become the Spiritual Food wherewith our Souls are fed unto everlasting life. 9. As Manna was given only in the Wilderness, and ceased as soon as they came into the land of Promise: So is Christ our Spiritual Food in the Eucharist, so long as we travel in the Wilderness of this world; but when we shall arrive in the heavenly Canaan, we shall have no more need of Sacraments; for there we shall have Christ present with us, and shall no longer understand in part as now we do, but we shall see God as he is.

* Wild. 16. 20.
Thou didst send them from heaven ετοιμα-σεν αὐτοὺς ἀνω-θεν bread prepared without their labour.

Gal. 3. 23.

Exod. 15. 15.

1 Cor. 2. 8.

Matt. 11. 30.
Fugum meum
suave est.
Gustate & vi-dete, quoniam suavis est Dominus, Pal.

34. 8.
1 Cor. 13. 9.
1 Joh. 3. 2.

Thus

1 Cor. 10.
3, 4.

Thus much shall suffice to have spoken of Manna: and so we come unto the Rock, which our Apostle affirms to have been Christ, that is, a Sign of him. Neither is this the only place where he is so called, but it was a name given him in the days of old. In the 32. of Deut. he is four several times called by that name. ver. 15. Jeshurun forsook the God which made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his Salvation: and v. 18. Of the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast forgotten God that formed thee: and v. 30, 31. Again, in Dan. 2. 34, 35. he is expressed by a Stone cut out without hands, which became a great Mountain and filled the whole earth. Let us therefore see what resemblance of Christ is in a Rock; first generally, and then specially in This Rock whereof our Apostle treateth.

First then, As a Rock is the surest Foundation to build upon; so is Christ the immovable Foundation whereupon his Church is reared: whatsoever is built upon him, no storms, no floods, no winds can shake or move. And that in this very respect Christ is called a Rock, it appears out of Esay 28. 16. quoted in part by S. Paul Rom. 9. 33. & S. Peter 1 Ep. 2. 6. Behold, I lay in Sion a foundation, a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner-stone, a sure foundation; he that believeth on him, shall not be confounded nor ashamed. 2. A Rock is a strong Fortrefs against the assaults of an Enemy; and so is our Saviour an impregnable Bulwark unto his Elect against the hottest assaults of Sin, Satan and Death; all the Cannons of Hell can never hurt him who hath gotten this Rock to shield him. 3. A Rock is a place of stumbling unto those who look not well to their feet; and so was this spiritual Rock of our salvation unto the proud high-looking Jew, a stumbling-block, a Rock of offence, according unto the Prophecy in the 8. of Esay 14, 15. quoted also by our Apostle Rom. 9. and S. Peter 1 Ep. 2. A stone of stumbling, and for a Rock of offence unto both the houses of Israel: And many among them shall stumble and fall, &c.

But more especially, This Rock which our Apostle speaks of resembles Christ in three things.

I. As that Rock gave no water before it was smitten with the Rod of Moses; so was Christ smitten upon the Cross, that out of him might flow that sovereign stream, which he who drinketh of shall never thirst any more. 2. As the Rock was smitten with the Rod of Moses, so was Christ our Redeemer with the Rod of the Law, all the curses and penalties due by the same being laid upon him for our sakes. For he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; and the Lord laid on him the iniquity of us all. 3. Lastly, As this Rock is said to have yielded water not only to those who were then present at the place where the Rock stood, but followed them in all their Stations in the Wilderness, unto the utmost ends thereof: So that water which gushed out from our smitten Saviour, neither served nor stayed with those alone who were present at the time and place of his suffering, but it ran and spread into all places of the world where the sons of men had any abiding, and followeth them all the days of their Pilgrimage in this Wilderness, even from the day of his Passion unto this very hour. Ho (saith the Evangelical Prophet Esay) every one that thirsteth, come ye unto the waters, (yea even) he that hath no money; come ye—yea come buy Wine and Milk without money and without price. In what part of the earth soever thou art, in what time of the world soever thou livest, Christ our Rock is ever with thee, and his water streameth after thee; which whosoever drinketh, it shall be in him a Well of water springing up into everlasting life.

Add, who knoweth whether the cleaving of the Rocks when he yielded up the Ghost, were not for a Sign of the accomplishment of the mystery?

III.

AND thus much for the second point. Now we come unto the third, In what sense those Sacraments are said to be the same with ours. For the understanding whereof, we must chiefly consider two things in every Sacrament, the visible sign, and the invisible thing thereby signified and confirmed: which invisible thing is always double; first, the Root or Fountain; secondly, the gracious blessings and promises which spring and flow from it. The Root and Fountain is he through whom and by whom we receive all the blessings and benefits we enjoy from God our Father, and without whom he vouchsafes us nothing. And therefore as God confers no manner of blessing upon us but through Christ: so the manner and nature of a Sacrament is to assure and confirm unto us whatsoever it assures us only through him. For all sacramental signs both old and new carry in them the Image and marks of Christ: hereby shewing, that by signifying him they seal and convey the Promises in and through him. For example sake: In the Passover the favour and benefit which

God

Esa. 53. 5, 6.

Chap. 55. 1.

John 4. 14.

God would therein seal and assure was, that he would spare and pass by the Israelites when he smote the Egyptians: and yet the Sign ordained expressed nothing either of passing by or sparing, but of him only in whom and through whom God passed and spared them, namely, that immaculate Lamb slain before the foundation of the world; whose blood when God beholds upon the posts of their houses, he will spare and not destroy them. The like we shall find in all their Sacraments and Sacrifices; that is their manner, by signing the Root and Fountain, to assure and convey the Promises which come through it.

1 Cor. 10.
3, 4.
Exod. 12.
Rev. 13, 8.

Out of this therefore which hath been spoken we may easily assail the Question of the agreement or sameness of the Jews Sacraments with ours. For it is apparent that the Signs differed, and in most they were of a clean differing kind from ours; I mean divers kinds of things, the bloody signs of slaughtered beasts: and where the Signs of both had more affinity, yet was there some apparent difference, as appears in the examples our Apostle bringeth here. For howsoever a cloud hath some affinity with water, yet is it not the same with water we use in Baptism; neither was Manna the same thing with bread, though in stead thereof; nor the water of the Rock the same with wine in the Eucharist. It is plain therefore out of our Apostle's own words, that he means not they were the same in Signs. It follows then, they should be the same in the spiritual thing signified, which is as the soul and spirit of a Sacrament. And this is plain, in that he saith not simply, they are the same Meat and same Drink, but, the same spiritual Meat and the same spiritual Drink: and it is past all doubt, when he saith the Rock was Christ, that is, a Sacrament of him, which ἀπὸ κοινοῦ is to be understood of all the rest, the Cloud, the Sea, the Manna; all were Sacraments of Christ as well as ours, and Seals of the same spiritual promises whereof ours are; all aimed at the same twofold invisible gift, the same Fountain through whom, Christ Jesus, and the same Rivers of spiritual graces, Reconciliation with God, Remission of sins, and Life eternal, through him alone.

And yet for all this agreement we must know there was some difference even here also: For howsoever the things (as ye have heard) were the same signified in both, yet was the manner and fashion of them different; they beheld not their Signs the same that ours do. For as for the Root of blessings, Christ, he was signified as future and yet to come; which in their ordinary Sacraments was stamped upon the very Sign; I mean, the Signs had some badge in them, whereby might be known that what they signified was future.

As for example; In Circumcision was signified the taking away of the superfluity of sin in and through him who was yet in the loins of his Ancestors, as the place circumcised sufficiently implies. And this is the reason why S. Paul saith, if ye are circumcised, Christ profits you nothing: Because, namely, he that received Circumcision did as much as affirm that Christ was not yet come, but still hoped for.

Gal. 5, 2.

The like we may see in their Sacrifices, some whereof, as the Eucharistical, were justly answerable to our Eucharist, as I shall have occasion to shew hereafter. In the mean time I speak generally of them, and say, They carried a badge in them that Christ was not yet come and offered for sin. A ground whereof I have from the story of Abraham going about to sacrifice his son: For there Abraham being ready at God's Commandment to sacrifice the promised son, his dear and only son Isaac; the Angel of God stayed his hand, and shewed him a Ram in a bush to sacrifice in stead of his son; thereby implying, That while God deferred the offering of that Blessed one which should be a Son of Abraham, he would accept as in stead thereof the offerings of Bulls and Rams for the expiation of sin; and therefore he that offered this offering in stead, did therein acknowledge that the offering of the Blessed seed of Abraham was yet deferred. A second mark of this may be also in the slaying of the sacrifice offered: For in that they were as often as they offered, to slay their sacrifice, it appeared that the Son of Abraham was not yet slain for sin.

And thus have we seen how Christ the ground of all spiritual blessings was otherwise signified under the Sacraments of the Law than now in those of the Gospel. Now we must also shew a differing manner and fashion in the spiritual Promises themselves, which were given through him. For these were not open as now they are, but involved and wrapped up in Temporal benefits: For all the Promises under the Law in a manner were for the outside Temporal; their Redemption was their deliverance from the Egyptian thralldom, their forgiveness and remission was the escaping of Temporal plagues and bodily death, their favour with God was worldly Prosperity, their place of blessed rest was the earthly Canaan, and immortality, long life and fulness of days

in

1 Cor. 10.
3, 4.

* S. Austin de Civ. Dei, l. 18. c. 11. & idem in Pl. 73. multisq; aliis in locis. S. Hieronymus, l. 2. com. in Gal. 5. 6. Isidor. l. 2. de differentiis Spirituum, dist. 28. * This is frequently observed by S. Austin, as in Ep. 120. ad Honoratum & l. 10. de Civ. Dei, c. 15. & l. 4. contra Iulianum Manich. c. 11. & l. 1. de Baptismo contra Donat. c. 15.

in the land which the Lord had given them. This is so apparent, that there was a Sect amongst them about Christ's time which maintained there were no other Promises to be looked for; and some Christians * even of note have almost affirmed that the Jews had no spiritual Promises, but only Temporal. But we must know that under these outward things were veiled the spiritual and Eternal Promises*. Not that these Temporal were only Shadows of the Eternal, and were not literally to be understood; but that the enjoying of these outward things, unto the Jew was a pledge of the spiritual as it were inwrapped in them: For it pleased God, according to the œconomy of that time, to convey his spiritual benefits under and with the Temporal; as he also ordained the loss of the one to be as an evident mark of losing the other, unless God were extraordinarily merciful unto them. The knowledge of this made the Jew so highly to esteem of worldly prosperities, and of those who enjoyed them, as of God's special Favourites; and on the contrary, to be so cast down with earthly adversities, as if those who fell into them were quite deprived of the favour of God. This made them so loth to forgoe the Earthly Canaan, as though with it also they had forgoe all interest in the Heavenly.

And was it not strange that the Roman Empire, which carried no other Nation captive, yet should cast the Jew out of his own country? unless God, according to his wonted rule with this people, would have it a woful evidence that he had quite cast them off from having any longer right or claim unto the Kingdom of Heaven. But since Christ was revealed, these spiritual and Eternal Promises are no longer veiled and covered in this sort, but are laid out to open view, and they are no longer so link'd with Temporal, but severed one from the other; For the veil upon Moses face is done away, and we all with an open face behold as in a glass the glory of the Lord, 2 Cor. 3. 14, 18.

Thus you see how the Sacraments of the Law, howsoever they sealed the same Promises with ours, yet not so immediately as ours do, but in the covers of outward blessings. Now I will answer some Objections concerning this discourse.

And first, Some will say that this is unlikely, in that the Jews seemed to apprehend no such thing as we speak of, specially in these extraordinary Sacraments which our Apostle treats of. I answer, That without doubt the Patriarchs and Prophets had a more clear sight of these things; as for the rest, they were in general taught this Principle, That in such things God did convey some unseen blessings unto them, especially if they were so extraordinary as this of Manna and the Rock; and howsoever they knew not expressly what these secret things should be, yet they believed they were far more glorious than what they saw. Those who require more than this, forget how Moses was veiled, and that the Mysteries of the Kingdom of God were exceedingly obscure in the times of the Law. And that the Jew could not but conceive more in them than the outside, it appears in that they had a great expectation of the Messiah, at whom all these aimed; as we know the speech of Nathanael, * We have found the Messias, of whom Moses and the Prophets wrote. Besides, the Prophets often reprehension of those who thought God was pleased with the outward offering of Bulls and Rams, must needs make them apprehend there was a faith of some unseen thing required.

But S. Paul (will some say) calls them Gal. 4. 9. weak and beggarly Elements, whereby it should seem they were empty of all spiritual meaning. I answer, such they were become indeed when Christ was once come, of which time S. Paul speaketh; when the grace signified in them was brought out in the light, when the inwrapped Promises were unfolded and revealed, they were then as empty shells, whose kernels were taken out, and like carcases whose Soul is gone. So long as a shell contains a kernel unseen, so long it is full; when the kernel comes forth to outward view, then the shell is empty: even so is it with the Elements of the Law. Again, as long as the Soul is buried in the Body and covered with flesh, the Body lives; but when the Soul separates from flesh and subsists by it self, then the Body proves a stinking carcass: So is it with the Elements of the Law, whose Soul was these spiritual things, now severed from such fleshly Elements, and offered unto us without such covers as heretofore they were.

Luke 2. 25, 38.
1 Pet. 1. 10. 11.
* John 1. 45.

DISCOURSE XLV.

1 COR. 10. 3, 4.

— And they did all eat the same Spiritual meat : And they did all drink the same Spiritual drink.

HAVING spoken at large of the Three things which I enquired of for Explication of these words, viz. 1. Of what Meat and of what Drink the Apostle speaketh, namely, of the food of Manna, and the water of the Rock, wherewith God sustained the Israelites in the Wilderness; 2. Wherein both the one and the other were Spiritual or Sacramental, namely, in being signs resembling and assuring Christ with the Spiritual Blessings through him; 3. In what sense these Sacraments are said to be the same with ours, to wit, not in the Signs, but in the Spiritual thing signified, which is the Soul and Essence of a Sacrament: We come now to such Observations as these Words and Explications will afford us.

The first whereof is, That if the Seals and Sacraments under the Law were the same with ours, then must they also have the same Covenant of Grace with us; for the Sacraments are Seals of the Covenant: If the Seals then were the same, as our Apostle affirmeth, how should not the Covenant also be the same? and seeing their Sacraments were differing in the Signs from ours, how could they be any way the same with ours, but only in what they sealed and signified? The Fathers therefore were saved by Grace and through Christ as well as we: So true is that the Apostle says Acts 4. 12. There is no other name under Heaven given amongst men whereby we must be saved. For Jesus Christ (as it is Heb. 13. 8.) is the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever; that is, He was a Saviour of old, is still, and shall be for ever hereafter. This is that which S. Peter yet more expressly affirmeth, Acts 3. 25. saying, Ye are the children of the Prophets, and of the Covenant which God made with our Fathers, saying to Abraham, And in thy seed shall all the Nations of the earth be blessed. Yea not only from Abraham, but even from that time when God said, The seed of the Woman shall break the Serpent's head, was this Covenant made with men, and at length diversly shadowed in the Types and Sacrifices of the Law, until Christ himself was revealed in the flesh.

For the better understanding of this, we must know what a Covenant is, and what are the kinds thereof. A Covenant is as it were a Bargain between God and man, wherein God promises some Spiritual good to us, so we perform some duty unto him: if not, then to incur everlasting punishment. This Covenant is of two sorts; the one is called The Covenant of Works, the other The Covenant of Grace. The Covenant of Works is, wherein God on his part makes us a promise of Eternal life, if we on our part shall perform exact obedience unto his Law; otherwise to be everlastingly condemned, if we fail. The Covenant of Grace or of the Gospel is, wherein God on his part promises us sinners Christ to be our Saviour and Redeemer, if we on our part shall believe on him with a lively and obedient faith; otherwise to be condemned. The Covenant of Works God made with man at his Creation, when he was able to have kept the conditions he required; but he through his disobedience broke it, and so became liable to death, both Corporal and Spiritual. And though the Covenant of Grace then took place, (as we have said) yet was the former Covenant of Works still in force, until Christ who was promised should come in the flesh. And therefore was this Covenant renewed under Moses with the Israelites, when the Law was given in Horeb; as Moses says, Deut. 5. 2. The Lord God made a Covenant with us in Horeb. For all the time under the Law the open and apparent Covenant was the Covenant of Works; to make them the more to see their own misery and condemnation, and so to long after Christ who was yet to come, and at whose coming this obligation should be quite cancelled:

The 2 Covenants described, of Works, of Grace.

What was the open, and what the secret or hidden Covenants under the Law.

Yet

1 Cor. 10.
3, 4.

Yet nevertheless, together with this open Covenant there was a secret and hidden Covenant, which was the Covenant of Grace; that they might not be altogether without the means of Salvation whilst Christ yet tarried.

This truth is plain, Gal. 3. 17, &c. where the Apostle affirms, That the Covenant of Grace in Christ was four hundred and thirty years before the Law was given, and that therefore the Law could not disannul it or make it of none effect; but that the Law (so he calls the Covenant of Works) was only added to it because of transgressions, until the blessed Seed should come, v. 19. and that it might be a Schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, v. 24. For in the Moral Law of God, under whose curse they stood bound, they might as in a Glass see their sin, their guilt, their want of Righteousness; and in their Ceremonies and Sacrifices they might again, as in Shadows of Heavenly things, behold the means of their Reconciliation, through his blood who was to be slain and offered to God for them.

Now though this Covenant of Grace before Christ be the same for substance with that under which we are now since his coming; yet the circumstances and outward fashion thereof are so varied, that the Scripture for this regard makes of this one Covenant two Covenants, calling one the Old Covenant for the old manner thereof under the Law, and the other a New Covenant for the new manner thereof now the Gospel is revealed.

Having therefore already seen the agreement and oneness of them for the inward part, let us now behold their differences for the outward fashion: and so we shall see that as the Fathers ate the same Spiritual meat and drank the same Spiritual drink, and yet there was some difference in them; so the Fathers were under the same Covenant of Grace with us, and yet after a different fashion.

This difference S. Paul, Gal. 4. 1. &c. setteth forth thus by a similitude; The heir as long as he is a child, &c. i.e. The difference of the condition of those before Christ and since, is but as the condition of Heirs when they are under age, and when they come to full years. They are Heirs and Lords of all in both conditions, as well in one as the other; only the difference is, that in the one condition they are in the state of Servants under Tutors and Governors, in the other they enjoy the freedom of Sons: So the faithful in the Law enjoyed the same Covenant of Grace with us, but under the bondage of worldly Elements; but we now have the same in a state of freedom, as not held under such burthensome Elements and Pedagogies as they were.

Jer. 31. 33.

But elsewhere he shews this difference more expressly both on God's part and our part. First, On our part, Heb. 8. and elsewhere, thus; The Old Covenant, which required so many external services, is called a carnal Covenant; the New, wherein no such are required, but works of the Spirit only, is a Spiritual Covenant, whereof God means when he saith, v. 10. I will put my Laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts; and so he will be their God, and they shall be his people. For in the Old Covenant he wrote a Law as it were upon their hands and fleshy members, in that he required so many fleshy washings and sprinklings and sacrifices for expiation and cleansing of sin: whereas in the New he writes his Law only upon the soul and spirit; in that he now stipulates only the service of Faith, which is an action of the inward man, and not of the outward: not of the hand or bodily members, but of the Soul within. For by Law here I suppose is meant the condition which God stipulates in the Covenant, and through which he makes good his promise unto us. Not as though this spiritual condition was not also required under the Law in the Covenant of Grace then; but because it was not only, nor so openly, therefore is it made as a formal difference of the New Covenant and the Old.

Secondly, On God's part the Scripture shews the difference of the Covenants thus: The Old Covenant was a Covenant of worse promises, the New a Covenant of better Promises, and so a better Covenant, Heb. 8. 6. Indeed they in the Old Covenant had the same Spiritual Promises we have, and so it was one and the same Covenant; but they had them not open and uncovered as we have, and so our Covenant is not the same, but a better Covenant. So S. Paul makes his comparison in the same argument, 2 Cor. 3. 11. If that (saith he) which is done away was so glorious, much more that which remaineth. As if he had said, If the Cover seemed so glorious, much more shall the Jewel within so seem, when the cover is taken from it, as now it is. For all the open Promises in the Old Covenant seem to be no other than Temporal blessings; as for Spiritual, they had them only as enwrapped in them; so that they could look for them no otherwise but in and through the Temporal, which they had as Pledges of the Spiritual veiled under them: But in the New these are all revealed and no longer hid from us by such curtains; the veil is taken from the face of Moses, and we behold with open face face the glory of the Lord, as the Apostle speaketh 2 Cor. 3. 14, 18. Remission of sins, Reconciliation with God, Everlasting life, these are our Promises; not deliverance from Temporal enemies, worldly prosperity, nor the land of Canaan, or long life in the land the Lord hath given us. So the case here is quite altered: For then Earthly blessings were as Pledges of spiritual; but now unto us, spiritual are Pledges of Temporal, so far as God sees good for us; For the tenour of the Gospel now is, Seek first the Kingdom of God, and all these things shall be added unto you. 1 Cor. 10. 3, 4.

And it is now time we should say with S. Paul, Rom. 11. 33. O the depth of the riches both of the Wisdom and Knowledge of God! and with David, Psal. 40. 5. Many, O Lord my God are thy wonderful works which thou hast done, and thy thoughts which are to us-ward: and Psal. 92. 5. O Lord, how great are thy works! and thy thoughts are very deep. Matt. 6. 33.

THUS I come to a second Observation which these words afford us; namely, Observat. 2.
If the Fathers ate the same Spiritual Meat and drank the same Spiritual Drink which we do, then eat we not the real Body nor drink the real Bloud of Christ: For the Manna they ate was the same Manna still, though a Sacrament of Christ; the Water of the Rock was verily Water still, though a Sacrament of his Bloud: If then we eat the same Spiritual Bread; we eat Bread still, though Spiritual Bread; If we drink the same Spiritual Drink, our Drink is Wine still, though Spiritual Wine. Yea S. Paul himself calls them as they are, 1 Cor. 10. 16. The Bread we break is the communion of the Body of Christ; Ergo, That which is the communion of the Body of Christ is Bread still. And unless it should be so, how could there be a Sacrament, which must consist of a Sign and a thing signified, of an Earthly thing and a Heavenly thing? For if the Sign once becomes the thing signified, it is no more a Sign, and so then is no more a Sacrament.

If it be urged, That Christ himself saies plainly of the Bread, Hoc est corpus meum, This is my Body; of the Wine, Hic est sanguis meus, This is my Bloud: I answer. He saies also * I am the Door; and in my Text is as expressly said, The Rock was Christ. * John. 10. 7. If therefore it be absurd from hence to infer the Rock left being a Rock, and was made the real Person of Christ; so will it be of our Spiritual Bread and Wine. For the manner of these speeches is nothing but a Figure of certainty or assurance: He that receiveth the Bread, as assuredly receiveth Christ's Body as if the Bread were his Body; He that receiveth the Wine, as assuredly enjoyeth the Bloud of Christ as if this Wine were his very Bloud indeed. A predication in casu recto is a predication of sameness, and therefore is used properly in things which are in a manner the same, as Genus and Species, Homo est animal; but in things which are disparate and of several natures we speak usually in concreto or obliquo: and from hence arises a Scheme or Figure of speech, when we would express a most near union of things even different, yet to speak them in casu recto, which is the predication of sameness, as it were to express they were as nearly link'd together as if they were the very same. So we are wont to say, a man is Virtue or Piety it self, meaning, they are thoroughly link'd unto him. And because of all other things the things in the Sacraments are so assuredly and thoroughly link'd together, the Holy Ghost used this Scheme for a Sacramental speech, Hoc est corpus meum, and Hic est sanguis meus, that is, a Sign so sure as if it were the very same. Mat. 26. 26, 28

AND so I will come to a third Observation; The Fathers (saith my Text) ate the same Spiritual Meat and drank the same Spiritual Drink, therefore is our Sacrament also to be eaten and drunk of us, and not only offered for us: Except we eat the flesh of the Son of man and drink his bloud, we have no life in us. And very fitly: For as our Bodies are nourished by eating of corporal meats, so our Souls are nourished by the Spiritual feeding upon Christ. Observat. 3.

This condemns that lurching sacrifice of the Mass, where the Bread and Wine are offered as a Sacrifice for the people, but they receive no one jot thereof; they are invited to a Banquet, but eat never a bit: Even like the unbelieving Ruler spoken of 2 Kings 7. 19. who saw all the plenty foretold by Elisha, but ate no whit thereof. And what is it but, as Christ said, to light a Candle and put it under a Bushel? John 6. 53.

They think it is enough if the Priest eats all himself, though he gives no body else any with him: But it is no less absurd to affirm that another should receive good by the Priest's receiving, than to hold one may be fed by the meat another man eats, or be saved by another man's Faith: Which were most ridiculous; for a man is nourished by his own meat, and the just must live by his own Faith. Matt. 5. 15.

Z

Many

Hab. 2. 4.

1 Cor. 10.
3, 4.
Matt. 26,
26, 27.

Many strong Reasons might be alledged against this so foul a corruption, but I will comprise all in three.

1. It is against the expresse commandment of Christ, whose words are, Eat ye all of this, and, Drink ye all of this. Had the Church of Rome been the true Spouse of Christ, she would never have presumed to abolish what he hath ordained, and to establish what herself hath devised, not only in this, but in many other actions; which is no less than to advance her self in Wisdom and Authority above the Son of God.

2. It is against the nature of a Sacrament, which consists in receiving: For the main difference between a sacrifice and a sacrament is, that in the one we give to God, in the other God gives to us, and we receive of him.

3. It abolishes the Mystery of our consolation, and that whereby our Faith is strengthened in the use of these Holy Signs, that mankind might have an interest in Christ and what he should do on our behalf. We know it was required he should be incarnate and take our nature upon him, which now he hath done. Every one of us can believe that what he hath done is for the behoof of mankind; and so some men shall be the better for it, since our whole kind by reason of his Incarnation is capable of the benefits of his Passion and the whole work of Redemption. But in that though Christ became man, yet he took not upon him the nature of every several man, hence no man from his Incarnation could apply these Benefits unto himself in special: For he might say, indeed Christ was made man, and so man may be the better for him, and have some interest in him; but since he was not incarnate into me, how should I apply this unto myself? Why therefore the All-wise God, who knew our weakness, hath so ordained in the Mystery of this Holy Sacrament, that it is a Mystical Incarnation of Christ into every one who receives it. Whence Gregory Nazianzen defines the Eucharist, κοινωνία ἐνσαρκώσεως τοῦ Θεοῦ, a Communion of the Incarnation of God. For in that he affirms the Bread to be his Body, and the Wine to be his Bloud; by receiving this Body and Bloud of Christ, and so changing it into the substance of our Body and into our Bloud by way of nourishment, the Body of Christ becomes our Body, and his Bloud is made our Bloud, and we become in a Mystical manner flesh of his flesh and bone of his bone. And as in his conception of the Holy Virgin, he took upon him the nature of Man, that he might save Man; so in his Holy Sacrament he takes upon him the nature of every man in singular, that he might save every man who becomes him in the Divine Sacrament of his Body and Bloud. His real Incarnation was only in one, but his Mystical Incarnation in many: and hence comes this Sacrament to be an Instrument whereby Christ is conveyed unto us, his Benefits applied, and so our Faith confirmed.

How then do they abolish this Holy Mystery, this comfortable Analogy, where Christ is offered; but those for whom he is offered receive him not, but stand as gazing Spectators, whilst the Priest alone is the Actor? But let us, who are so happy above them, who come hither as Receivers, and not as Gazers, let us, I say, consider how great a Gift it is which God gives us. Zaccheus gave a great Gift, half his Goods unto the Poor: Herod promised a greater unto the dancing Damsel: but the greatest of all is that which the * prodigal giver offered our Saviour, even all the Kingdoms of the World. But all these Gifts are fain short, and of infinite less value than this transcendent Gift which God gives unto us; which makes S. John, when he speaks of it, to express it with an Emphasis, So God loved the World, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believed in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. Lo here the greatest Gift that Heaven can yield, or the Earth can receive. Let us therefore stir up Hearts and Hands to give thanks and praise unto him of whom we receive so wonderful a Gift, saying, with the Prophet David, What shall we render unto the Lord for this admirable benefit?

Luk. 19. 8.
Matt. 14. 7.

* Chap. 4. 9.

Ch. 3. 16.

Psal. 116.

Observat. 4.

AND thus I come to a fourth Observation which these words will lend us; namely, That the Apostle warrants here by his Example the Illustration of things in the Gospel by the Types of the Law. For if the Apostle uses an Example where one would scarce suspect there was a Type, much more doth he approve an application where a Type is plain and evident; and besides, seems to insinuate thus much unto us, That all the extraordinary actions of God toward his ancient People had in them some Mystery of some things to come, as this of Manna in the Wilderness. And I make no question but the searching and futing of Allegories in these two kinds were allowable and profitable: But this is the error of Allegorizers, They seek Allegories where they are not, but where they are they seldom look for them: For although the body and verity be of it self more clear and evident than the shadow, yet always a Comparison affords more light than a single contemplation.

Now

Now because the Apostle hath led the way of this practice in the matter of the Eucharist, let me have leave to second him in another Instance of the same Argument, almost out of himself in the Chapter, not in so sublime a kind, but in a plain and vulgar Type. Amongst all the Sacrifices of the Law, there is none either for name or nature comes so near the Sacrament of the Supper as the Eucharistical. The Passover was a special kind hereof, where it is so well known that the Fathers ate the same Spiritual Meat we do, that I shall not need say any thing of it; only it shall suffice to shew the same in the whole kind of Eucharistical Offerings, which is not so much observed.

1 Cor. 10.
3, 4.

An Eucharistical Sacrifice or a Peace-offering was a Sacrifice of fire, or expiatory; a part whereof was burnt upon the Altar, as in other Sacrifices; but the remainder and greater part was eaten by the faithful people who brought it; that so their Sacrifice being turned into their bodie's nourishment might be a Sign of their incorporation into Christ to come, who was the true Sacrifice for Sin. So, whereas other Sacrifices were only Sacrifices, this was also a Sacrament; the rest were only for Expiation, but this also for application, being a Communion of that Sacrifice which was offered. Rightly therefore was it * added to all other Sacrifices: for what profit was there of expiation of Sin, unless it were applied? Well might it then be called a Sacrifice of Peace, as containing in it a Communion of Peace, and Communion with Jesus Christ, and through him with God the Father. The Greeks call it sometimes Σωτήριον or a saving Sacrifice, but commonly Εὐχαριστία, for the same reason we call our Sacrament of Peace Εὐχαριστία; both being to be celebrated with thanksgiving to God, both oral and real: For with this Sacrifice they used to offer their * Heave-offering; and of this was the Commandment, That none should appear before the Lord empty, * when they came to solemnize their peace-making and reconciliation with God.

* Peace-offerings were ever annexed to the Burnt-offerings that were for any particular persons and not קרבנות ציבור offerings for the whole Congregation.
* Lev. 7. 14. & 32.
* Deut. 16. 15.

For in place of this Eucharistical Sacrifice, whereof the Passover was a special kind, hath Christ ordained our Εὐχαριστία, wherein, as they in theirs had a communion with him who was to come, so have we a Communion with him who is already come. And of this kind were the ordinary Sacrifices of the Gentiles, of which the Christians were forbidden to eat, because they might have no peace and Communion with Devils. And therefore our Apostle in the rest of this Chapter compares these Three together; 1. The Peace-offering of the Jews, wherein they were partakers with the Altar or Sacrifice which figured Christ to come; 2. The Sacrifice of the Greeks *, wherein they had Communion with Devils; and 3. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, which is the Communion of the Body and Bloud of Christ; and so concludes, Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of Devils; ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's Table, and of the Table of Devils, verse 21.

DISCOURSE XLVI.

1 COR. 10. 5.

But with many of them God was not well pleased: for they were overthrown in the Wilderness.

HIS verse consists of two parts. 1. The condition under which the unworthy eaters of Manna and drinkers of the Rock Spiritual were; and consequently of the unworthy receivers of the Sacrament of the Body and Bloud of Christ: forasmuch as they ate the same spiritual meat, and drank the same spiritual drink which we do. This their condition is said to be Of those with whom God is not well-pleased: For with many of them (saith my Text) God was not well-pleased. 2. The second thing here is, The danger of those unworthy receivers in regard of the punishment which followed them; For they were overthrown (saith our Apostle) in the Wilderness.

1 Cor. 10. 5.

To speak of the first; I will consider the words first in general, and after in special, as they specially concern the receivers of the holy Seals of God. In general therefore it is to be observed, That it is the greatest degree and measure of unhappiness and misery in the world to be out of the favour of God, or to be one of those with whom God is not well pleased: For our Apostle here intending no other thing but to express a wretched and unhappy condition, utters it in this Phrase, of being such with whom God is not well pleased. This comprehends in it so much misery, that the very naming of it he thought was sufficient to make the Corinthians fear and tremble, when they should consider of that Spiritual Table, of that tremendum Mysterium, as the Fathers call it; and not to handle it with rash and unholy hands at the first, or to diet themselves afterward, upon so heavenly a receipt, with lusting after evil things.

* Matt. 3. 17.

How vain therefore is the opinion and practice of worldlings, who esteem the favour of men and worldly reputation the highest pitch of Blessedness; who are ambitious of no other Happiness but this; and lastly, who spend their time, their care, their means, nay lose (at least hazard) the favour of God it self, to compass the favour and esteem of men; who admire none but those who have gotten this! But alas! there is no happiness at all but to be of those Ἐν οἷς ὁ Θεὸς εὐδόκησεν, in whom God is well pleased, to be in esteem and reputation with God through Jesus Christ, * in whom alone he is well pleased. All Happiness without this is no better than extreme misery: Nay this supposed and so much desired happiness of being in reputation with the world is so far from making the owner happy, that the earnest seeking and desire thereof is incompatible with the state of true Happiness indeed. For so I think our Apostle would be understood, Gal. 1. 10. If I pleased men (saith he,) I should not be the servant of Christ. Hence ἀνθρωπάρεσκοι, men-pleasers, in our Apostle's style, are opposed elsewhere unto δούλοι τῷ Χριστῷ the servants of Christ, (Ephes. 6. 6. Not as men-pleasers, but as servants of Christ;) and to φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεόν those that fear God, Col. 3. 22. as though ἀνθρωπάρεσκοι & θεοπάρεσκοι, men-pleasers and God-pleasers, could not stand together, according to that our Saviour also saith John 5. 44. How can ye believe (saith our Saviour) which receive honour one of another, and seek not the honour which cometh from God only?

All this notwithstanding, I suppose is to be understood of high prising of the favour of men, with a neglect of the favour of God in regard thereof: which though it may seem at the first sight a most unreasonable sin, and such as no man should be guilty of; yet is it so common and so usual, that it hath gotten to be enthroned in Wisdom's chair; and many Aarons there be which worship this Calf; many who would seem wise, which are over head and ears in this folly: For it is no unusual thing to hear men excuse their neglect of pleasing God, by alledging that otherwise they must have fallen into the displeasure and disesteem of men.

Verif. 32.

Otherwise, who knows not that there are things wherein men may be lawfully pleased, such as are things indifferent, especially if it may work a further good? And therefore in these S. Paul will confess that himself had studied to please all men; and willeth others to do the like, Rom. 15. 2. Let every one of us please his Neighbour for his good to edification; and in this Chapter, Give no offence, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the Church of God. But we are not so much sick of this as of a worse disease; we deal as is reported of him in the Fable, who offered his God the shells, and kept the kernels unto himself: in trifles and things of small moment we vouchsafe God our service and obedience; but as for main matters, because they concern us so deeply and nearly, here God must be content to want our duty; whilst we apply our selves in all our words and actions as may most likely gain us the favour and good opinion of men, though hereby we earnestly run into this incomparable misery to be one of those with whom God is not well pleased.

AND thus much for the general consideration of these words. The special (which now I come to) is, That the unworthy Receivers of the Sacraments are in the number of those men with whom God is not well pleased. Of unworthy Receiving and Receivers I make two; the one à parte antè, by undue preparation, the other à parte pòst, by unholy demeanour and conversation afterward. The former is unworthy to approach this Table at all, the other to have approached it. And of both these were the Fathers in the Wilderness guilty: For Manna being both their ordinary and sacred Food, their unholy and lustful demeanor upon the former eating made them continually unprepared Receivers for the future. And so it is with us, An unholy life upon the first receiving is a great part of our unworthiness for the second; yea more unworthy are we then made than we had been upon the like conversation at the beginning: For to have have broken so solemn a Promise to God as we bound our selves in at the first time, doubles our sin; and to have already abused so precious and gracious a gift which God then gave us, makes us doubly unworthy ever to find the like favour any more. As in Physick for the body a Preparative is required before, and a good and careful diet to be observed after; so is it here: as also a distempered diet after Physick received will do more hurt than it would before; so is it here.

Now because it is sin which makes us lose the favour of God, and it alone which makes him not well pleased with us; that we may behold how justly God's displeasure is kindled by this unworthy Receiving, let us a while consider wherein the sin thereof consisteth: which will appear

1. In the correspondence of the Receiver and the thing received. It is written Deut. 22. 9, 10. Thou shalt not sow thy Vineyard with diverse kinds of seeds; Thou shalt not plough with an Ox and an Ass together: Whereby it appears, That God Almighty loves not to have things unsutable and incompatible joyned together; it is an unpleasing spectacle unto him. But what fellowship hath light with darkness? what agreement between the holy Sacrament and a prophane heart? who will put precious water into filthy vessels, or wholesome wine into foul casks? It is the ground of Joshua's speech (Josh. 24. 19.) to the children of Israel, You cannot serve the Lord, (saith he) for he is a holy God; that is, whilst you are wicked, the Righteous Lord who loveth Righteousness will not accept of your services.

1 Cor. 10. 5.

* So in Levit. 19. 19. Thou shalt not sow thy field with mingled seed. * 2 Cor. 6. 14.

Again, Almighty God hath ever required a correspondence between his holy Ordinances and those who were to be partakers of them. Thus the shew-bread was appointed only for Aaron and his Sons, because they were holy; the Trepass and Sin-offering must be eaten in the holy Place, because it was most holy. The same thing is implied by our Saviour's proverbial precept, Give not that which is holy unto the Dogs. And which of us all would not be offended at a Dog, if we should see him devour the meat appointed for our Childrens Diet? Even such in God's account, and no better, are wicked persons. Beware of Dogs, beware of Evil-workers, saith S. Paul, Phil. 3. 2. and Apocal. 22. 15. Without the City of God are Dogs, Sorcerers, Whoremongers, &c. Now we know (Exod. 19. 13.) that no Beast might touch the Mountain when the Lord appeared on Mount Sinai: So none of those whom God accounts in the number of Beasts (as all who have beastly affections) may approach in Christ's presence, or come unto his Table.

* Levit. 24. 9. * Ch. 6. 25, 26. * Ch. 7. 6. Matt. 7. 6.

Wherefore, as God saith, Be ye holy, because I am holy; so may it be said unto all communicants, Be ye holy, because the Sacrament is holy. Whence it was a worthy custome in the ancient Churches for the Bishop or Deacon to proclaim at the holy Communion τα ἁγια τοῖς ἁγίοις, Holy things for them that are holy, holding in his hand the holy Sacrament. And good reason why; For where this holiness is not, there, instead of comfort, the Heart is more and more corrupted. Even as the Spider gets strength of poison from the sweetest herbs and flowers; so the prophane Heart is strengthened in wickedness by receiving this holy and heavenly Food.

Lev. 11. 44, &amp;c.

2. The hainousness of this sin is aggravated in respect of the thing received: for our Apostle elsewhere saith, The unworthy receiver becomes guilty of the Body and Blood of Christ; that is, he is guilty of offering contumely, injury and indignity unto him. S. Paul, when he dissuades Husbands from misusing their Wives, gives this for a reason, No man ever yet hated his own flesh: And may not I reason thus, Let no man offer injury unto Christ, because he is flesh of our flesh? yea he is our Head, and a wound or maim given to the Head is more odious and dangerous than to another part. To offer violence to a common person, is a fault; to strike a Magistrate, a greater; but to wound a King, who is the Lord's Anointed, is a sin in the highest degree. O what a hainous sin is it then to offer violence to, and as much as in us lies to strike and wound the Son of God, the King of Kings and the Lord of Glory!

1 Cor. 11. 27.

Eph. 5. 29.

To be guilty of death and shedding of the blood of any innocent man, is a fearful sin; and this made David cry out, Deliver me, O Lord, from blood-guiltiness. How fearful is it then to be guilty of the Body and Blood of Christ! Whose heart is not moved against the Jews, when he hears or reads their villanies and violence offered to our Blessed Saviour? But Chrysostome gives us a good Take-heed, Take heed (saith he) lest thou be guilty in the like kind, by unworthy receiving of the blessed Sacrament: He that defiles the King's body, and he that tears it, offend both alike; The Jews tore it, thou defilest it. Here are (saith the same Father) diversa peccata, sed par contumelia; some difference of the sin, but none of the contumely therein offered.

Psal. 51. 14.

2 Cor. 10. 5.

Joseph and Nicodemus their pious devotion in begging and embalming the Body of Christ is worthily recorded and commended to all generations; Mary Magdalene in bestowing that box of precious ointment upon his holy head hath gained to her self endless honour, in stead of her former infamy: So if receive and handle worthily this Mystical Body of Christ, our portion shall be with honourable Joseph and pious Mary Magdalene; our memories shall be as theirs, blessed, and our Souls as theirs, to receive unspeakable comfort: but if we come unworthily, we joyn with Judas and the Jews, and are guilty, as they were, of the Body and Bloud of Christ.

- II. A N D thus much of the first thing I propounded, The state of unworthy Receivers of these holy Mysteries, that they are men in whom God hath no pleasure and therefore woful and lamentable. The second thing now to be spoken of is, The danger of such unworthy Receivers in regard of the Punishment which followeth them: which as concerning the Fathers, my Text saith, was, That they fell, or were overthrown in the Wilderness. In the back or outside of which words appeareth only a Temporal Punishment, which kind seemeth not so appliable in the times of the Gospel as it was in time of the Law. Howsoever we see in the general, That it is true that the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his Name in vain; Judgment shall seile either here, or at least hereafter, upon all prophaners and misreceivers of those Sacred pledges, upon which is called the Name of Christ our Saviour and Redeemer.

But for the kinds of these punishments, whether Temporal only, or Eternal, or both; I answer, The Fathers under the Law had Temporal as well as Eternal; we in the Gospel chiefly Eternal, and yet sometimes Temporal.

1 Cor. 11. 29.

That ours are chiefly eternal or of the life to come, the words of our Apostle elsewhere shew evidently, Whosoever eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh his own damnation. This is certain, and this is more than all the torments, pains and miseries that this world hath, though Phalaris and his Craftsman were alive again to invent new ones. No tongue is able to express, no heart is able to conceive the woe and miseries which the damned Soul in Hell is subject unto, which are as endless as they are caseless. And though this be great enough, yet hath not (nor is) the unworthy Receiver always been freed from suffering something even in this life. We know the Apostle would have the Corinthians take notice of the Wrath of God upon divers of them, for receiving the Sacrament unworthily. For this cause (saith he) are many sick and weak amongst you, and many are fallen asleep. Indeed Fathers correct not their children at riper years after the same fashion they did when they were young and little: So hath God not the same Discipline under the Gospel which he had under the Pedagogie of the Law, as Chrysostome saith; he doth not so often scourge offenders with the rods of Temporal chastisements, but rather reserves for them Eternal torments; yet who doubts but the hand of God is upon many unworthy Communicants, even by sorrow, sickness, death, and sundry other chastisements of this life?

1 Cor. 11. 30.

But for the times under the Law, the words of my Text speaking of being overthrown in the Wilderness, would seem to imply there was no further thing which befell the unworthy eaters of Manna in the Wilderness, and so our Apostle's argument from hence should infer no more to us in the times of the Gospel.

For answer hereunto, I must call to mind something which I have spoken heretofore, namely, That under the Law spiritual blessings were enwrapped in corporal, and conveyed under and with them as it were in pledges; which made the Jew so highly to esteem of worldly prosperities, and of those who enjoyed them, as accounting them God's special Favorites. So also were spiritual and Everlasting plagues hidden under the curtains of Temporal judgments; which were to those upon whom they fell as woful pledges of them, and therefore made the Jew account them accursed who were overwhelmed with worldly adversities. To come therefore to the words of my Text: Canaan was a Type and Pledge of the Heavenly habitation; The Wilderness signified our Pilgrimage in this wild, ragged, rocky and barren world; To fall in the Wilderness was a wofull sign of falling short of the Heavenly Canaan, and deprivation of Eternal life; those who fell there, especially upon occasion of sin, being such as to whom God sware in his wrath, that they should not enter into his rest; as it is in the Psalms we say every morning. Thus we see how the unworthy eaters of the holy Mysteries in the Wilderness were not only liable to plagues in this life, but that those plagues served them as Seals of their condemnation in the world to come; and therefore if we also also eat the same spiritual meat, and drink the same spiritual drink unworthily, we shall eat and drink our own condemnation.

Psal. 95. 11.

2 Cor. 10. 5.

Having thus seen the wretched condition and woful danger of those who come unworthily to this Spiritual Table; the serious consideration hereof may stand up like the Angel with the flaming sword, to keep every Adam from eating of the tree of Life. It should make every one tremble who approacheth the Lord's Table with unwashed hands, I mean, a foul conscience: whose hearts are full of wickedness, whose heads full of ungodly imaginations, and their hands defiled with wicked actions, how unworthy are they to come at this holy Banquet! As Jehu said to Jehoram, What hast thou to do with peace? So may I say here, What have those to do with the Sacrament, the Mystery of peace? Indeed the Sacrament is a Robe to cover the repenting sinner, but no cloak to a prophane Receiver of it: such a one shall find it like the forbidden fruit of Paradise, the bane of the Eater; and like a fair bait swallowed with a deadly hook, the death of the Receiver.

2 Kings 9. 22.

Who being guilty, would drink of that cursed water (Numb. 5. 22.) which made the thigh to rot and the belly to swell? and who being guilty of gross sin, will dare without Repentance to take that Sacrament which shall make him guilty of the Body and Blood of Christ, and become an occasion of his condemnation?

It is a pitiful thing when the Psalmist's curse befalls any, Let their Table be a snare: But that this holy Table should become a snare to a Christian soul, is more than lamentable. Our Saviour said of Judas, It had been good for him if he had never been born; and so may we say of such, It had been better they had never been Receivers of this holy Sacrament, for, alas! they have eaten and drank their own damnation: they had better have eaten some venemous thing, or drank some deadly poison; for it would only have killed the body, but by eating and drinking the Sacrament unworthily they have damned and destroyed both soul and body for ever.

Psal. 9. 22.

Math. 26. 24.

Lastly, This danger may admonish every one of us to come worthily unto this Sacrament: For as Manna was unto every man's taste according to his will, (as * S. Augustine will have it;) so is the Sacrament to every one according to his worthiness. As therefore the Chamber was trimmed wherein our Saviour kept his Passover, and ordained his holy Manna; so should the Chamber of every Christian soul be cleansed from wickedness and adorned with Grace that comes to receive Christ in this Sacrament. The washing of the Disciples feet afore Supper, what doth it else call for but a cleansing of our hearts before we communicate? We are unwilling that men should see us come to this Table with foul hands; and should we not be more careful lest God should see us come with foul hearts.

* In Ep. 118.
In prima populi
unicuique
Manna secundum proprium voluntatem in ore sapiebat.
See this emphatically expressed in Wisdom 16. 20, 21

It will not be enough to say to our Saviour with them in the Gospel, * We have eaten and drank in thy company, we have been at thy Table: We must come thither as we should. For as corporal food doth rather hurt than nourish a body abounding with evil humors: So the Soul being fraught with vices, this heavenly food rather killeth than comforts it. As Adam in the state of his Integrity might freely take and taste of all the Trees in the Garden, (one only excepted,) but after his transgression he was justly restrained: So doth the Lord admit us unto his Table, if we come worthily; otherwise we are no welcome guests unto him. Therefore as it was said to Moses when he came near the presence of God, Pluck off thy shoes, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground: So let all of us put off the shoes of our corruptions, and then we may approach with comfort to the holy Table of the Lord.

* Luke 13. 26.

Exod. 3. 5.

DISCOURSE XLVII.

DEUTERONOMY 16. 16, 17.

Three times in a year shall all thy males appear before the Lord thy God, in the place which he shall chuse: in the Feast of Unleavened bread, and in the Feast of Weeks, and in the Feast of Tabernacles: and they shall not appear before the Lord empty. Every man shall give as he is able, according to the blessing of the Lord thy God which he hath given thee.

THESE words are a commandment for the observation of the great and chiefest Festival times of the Law; not only here mentioned, but elsewhere enjoined in the Books of the Law; as I think in three several places, Exod. 23. 14. and again 34. 23. and also Levit. 23. The words I read consist of two parts: First, The Observation it self; 2. A special duty required thereat. The Observation it self comprehends four things.

1. The Work or Action commanded; which is, To appear before the Lord: 2. The Persons who, every Male; all thy Males: 3. The Place where; in a select place, in the place which the Lord shall chuse: 4. The Time when; Three times in the year; In the Feast of Unleavened bread, in the Feast of Weeks, and in the Feast of Tabernacles. The second part, A special duty required at this solemn service, and that is a duty of real thanksgiving, viz. a holy present or oblation to be given unto God, and that expressed First, in the kind, They shall not appear before the Lord empty; Secondly, in the measure, Every one shall give as he is able, &c. Of these I am to speak in order, and first of the first, The Action enjoined, To appear before the Lord.

I.

Matth. 18. 20.

To appear before the Lord, is in an Holy Assembly to perform a Religious service unto him. For in every such Assembly and Service he is present after a special and peculiar manner, according to that of our Saviour in the Gospel, Where two or three are gathered in my Name, there am I in the midst of them. And as when one man speaks unto another, or hears another speaking unto him, either is said to be in others presence: So he that comes to speak unto God in Confession, Prayer and Thanksgiving; and hath God likewise speaking unto him either in the publishing of the Law, in the promises of his Gospel, in the receiving of his Sacraments, and ministerial benediction, is truly said to appear or come into the presence of the Lord. To appear therefore in God's presence is to be assembled in his publick Worship, where there is, as it were, a mutual intercourse between him and us; and in this it is differing from private Devotion, where the one part only is acted, and not the other. Every day is a day of private Devotion, yea every hour, if occasion serveth; but a Holyday's work is the publick service of God in a Holy Convocation.

Seeing therefore as often as we come together for the Worship of God in the Holy Assembly of the Church, we appear in the presence of the Majesty of God himself, it may admonish us of the reverence we are to use in such Assemblies. If when we come into the presence of a Prince, we think an awful fear and a more than ordinary reverence doth best beseeem us in whatsoever we speak or do: much more is this required of us when we approach the presence of the King of Kings and Lord of Hosts. No gesture we use, no word we speak, no action we do, but should be framed to express the awe and regard we owe unto so great and high a presence. If Order be any where required, it is here. If idle and vain words be in a far less presence taken as contemptuous; in this they cannot be less than merely blasphemous. If any unseemly or unsuitable gesture, if any neglectful or regardless demeanour be elsewhere culpable; here it is abominable, when we are in his presence who is the God of Order and Beauty,

ty, and gives us an exprefs command to perform all points of his Service κατὰ τὰς ἐν ἐὺ ὁργανότως, according to order and with comelineſs. Deut. 16. 16.

This makes him ſay to Mofes when he appeared in the Buſh, Pluck off thy ſhoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou ſandeſt is Holy ground. Whence Solomon borrows his ſpeech, Eccleſ. 5. 1. Keep thy foot (or, look unto thy feet) when thou enterſt into the Houſe of God. This being as much as if he had ſaid, Behave thy ſelf in God's preſence reverently : Which in the words following he enlarges, ſaying, Be more ready to hear, than to give the ſacrifice of Fools — v. 2. Be not raſh with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be haſty to utter anything before God; for God is in Heaven, and thou upon Earth, &c. And hither belongs that of S. Paul 1 Cor. 11. 4, 5, &c. requiring a ſeemly habit and geſture of men and women in the Holy Aſſemblies : the woman to pray covered, in token of her ſubjection ; the man uncovered, as a ſign of his head-ſhip and ſuperiority over the woman, according to the uſe of thoſe times and places. And it is ſpecially to be obſerved which he ſpeaketh in the 10.

Verſe, *For this cauſe ought the woman to have * power on her head,* ( that is, the enſign of power to which ſhe is ſubject ) becauſe of the Angels ; i. e. becauſe of the preſence of God attended with multitudes of Angels. For theſe are the Train of the Almighty, and as it were the Guard attending and miniſtring unto his preſence ; whereſoever he keeps his ſtation, they pitch round about him. When Daniel ſaw him in the Viſion, thouſand thouſands miniſtered unto him, and ten thouſand times ten thouſand ſtood before him. Chap. 7. 10. Revel. 5. 11. I beheld, ſaith S. John, and I heard the voice of many Angels round about the Throne, and the number of them was ten thouſand times ten thouſand, and thouſands of thouſands. So when God appeared to Jacob going to Padan-Aram, he ſaw the Angels of God deſcending and aſcending upon a Ladder. Whence it appears that whereſoever God keeps his Court, his Train is with him ; and perhaps it were no error to affirm, That the peculiarity of God's preſence in one place more than another did conſiſt in no other thing but in the miniſterial retinue of his Angels. Which if true, where ſhould his Angels encamp rather than in the Aſſemblies of his Saints, in miſt of whom he hath promiſed he would be ? So will the ſpeech of S. Paul have an evident meaning, That we ought to attire and demean our ſelves with comelineſs, becauſe of the Angels, becauſe of the preſence of God in the miniſtry of his holy Angels. Gen. 28. 12. Marth. 18. 20.

Who can conſider of this ſo great a preſence, with ſo glorious a retinue, and not be ſtrucken with a religious fear, with an holy reverence, as often as he is to appear before it ? Let us then learn to ſay with Jacob, Gen. 28. 16. Surely the Lord is in this place, and be afraid as he was, and ſay, ( v. 17. ) מה נורא המקום הזה, How dreadful is this place ! this is no other but the houſe of God, and the gate ( or Court ) of Heaven.

AND now I come to the ſecond thing, The perſons who were to appear at theſe ſolemn Feaſts, Every Male ; All thy Males ſhall appear. And here we are to enquire the reaſons, Why the Females or Women had an exemption from this ſolemn duty : which ( to omit that of a Type of the Meſſiah, which ſome bring ) I take to be theſe three. II.
1. The weakneſs and infirmity of that ſex, not able without much danger and trouble to endure ſo long a journey. 2. The danger of their chaſtity in ſuch a concourſe of people as was an Aſſembly of the whole Nation in one place. 3. The care of their tender infants and young children, and other houſe-affairs, which would have been wholly abandoned, if they as well as the Males ſhould have been at the ſame time ſo far away and ſo long abſent : neither can it otherwiſe be imagined how their houſes could be looked unto, unleſs the one were to ſtay at home in the abſence of the other. Again, it may be queſtioned whether all Males without reſpect were to appear ; for it is not likely that young children ſhould, or decrepit old men could appear. I anſwer therefore, That it is to be underſtood of all Males who were within the age and years of ſervice, namely, between twenty and fifty ; for at fifty it is apparent that all were emeriti, diſcharged from that duty, even the Prieſts and Levites ſerved not after that age ; but at what years they came to be capable of ſervice, there is difference. The Prieſts might not ſerve in the Prieſts office afore thirty, Numb. 4. 3. nor the Levites in their office afore twenty five, Numb. 8. 24. but the Laity were capable of employment and ſerviceable at twenty ; as appeareth out of the 1 of Numb. 2, 3. where God commands Mofes to take the ſumme of all the children of Iſrael, from twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to War ; ſo implying that from twenty years of age they were able for that ſervice. Theſe

* S. Ambroſe ( as alſo the Greek Scholiaſts ) by ἐξουσίαν here underſtand Velamen, or κάλυμμα, quæ ſe cito ſubditam indicet. The Hebrew רִיר which ſignifies the womans veil ( and rendred by the Targum צַעִיר ) comes from רִיר that ſignifies power.

Deut. 16. 16.
Observat. 1.

Mark 2. 27.

Gal. 5. 7.

Observat. 2.

These things thus explained and supposed, we may observe, That the indulgence of God admits the case of infirmity, unavoidable inconvenience, and requisite employment, as allowable reasons of absence from holy Assemblies: For these we have seen to be the reasons of the exemption of Women from the annual and solemn Feasts. And no question but if the like cases might happen even for their ordinary and Sabbath-Assemblies, God would in like manner dispense. For weakness of body we have no reason to doubt; and for the other cases mention'd, the equity being the same with that which here dispensed with Women for the solemn Assemblies, it is not to be doubted but the indulgence of God should be the same, as well for other times as those, and as well for the other sex as for Women. And if in the time of that Law God was thus indulgent, when all these things were so severely and strictly exacted; much more in the liberty of the Gospel, Christ himself here loosing the strictness even of the Sabbath's rest, alleging that the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath: For of the two duties required in the observation of an Holy day, the calling of an holy Assembly, and bodily rest from corporal labour, the Law seemed to exact this latter of rest more severely than the other, in regard it was a figure of things to come, which the other was not. If then that which was most strict be released; much more is the other, which was less, as free now as in former time. I speak not this against a Religious diligence, for that is required of all who have no just impediment and such a one as God himself shall allow; and therefore let no man deceive himself, for God (as the Apostle saith) is not mocked: But I speak against that more than Judaical scrupulosity of some, who think it not lawful upon the Lord's day to leave any at home to keep house, or be employed in such businesses as conveniency cannot dispense with.

The second thing I observe here is, That to obey God in what he commandeth is as it were a protection (or a warrant of security) from those dangers which humane reason would otherwise think unavoidable: or, Obedience unto God in what he commandeth is a greater security than all the cautions and preventions that humane wisdom can procure us. For who would think when all the able and serviceable men of the whole land of Israel should thrice every year be gathered together at Jerusalem, but the whole land should be in great danger of invasion from their enemies, whom such an advantage could not but allure; and all their borders thus unfurnished, could not well prevent such a mischief? Nevertheless we find not in the whole Scripture that ever any such evil befell them upon this occasion: so good a protection was Obedience: But we find an express Promise to the contrary made by God himself, lest you might think this was but a surmised danger; For Exod. 34. 24. where this commandment is also mentioned, God saith, I will cast out the nations before thee, and enlarge thy borders; neither shall any man desire thy land, when thou shalt go up to appear before the Lord thy God thrice in the year. But for all this we know their last woful destruction by the Romans was at the time of the Passover, one of these solemn times: and no marvel; for when God meant to cast them off from being any more his people, he ordered even this (perhaps) to be a token that they were no longer under his wonted protection.

When God commanded Abraham to sacrifice his son Isaac, though he knew not in reason how God could then make his Promise good unto him, To make his seed by Isaac in number as the sand on the sea shore; yet he was obedient to the word of God, and beyond all hope secure of God's Promise, as placing his greatest security in his Obedience; as for the rest, יהוה יראה, saith he, Dens providebit, God will provide, Gen. 22. 8. and so he did indeed.

1 Sam. 13. 8.
&c.

Verse 13.

I shall need gather no more Examples. Let no man therefore be discouraged for fear of danger to do his duty in that calling and vocation wherein God hath set him. If God hath bid thee, hope thou likewise he will protect thee: But if thou neglect his commandment, so to avoid what thou fearest, be sure then that thou fearest or a worse will come upon thee; take heed thou goest not out of God's blessing into the warm Sun. Let Saul's example be our warning, who to prevent (as he thought) the scattering of the people from him, and the evil which longer delay might occasion, if he should stay for Samuel, presumed to offer Sacrifice himself; but he was called a fool for his labour, and made to know at length that Obedience was better than Sacrifice. And so shall every one that makes so ungodly an experience, find his policy in the end plain foolery, and Obedience to God's Commandment better than all the Policy in the world.

III. AND thus I come to the third thing considerable, viz. The place where every Male was to appear, In the place the Lord shall chuse, namely, in the place where the

Ark

Ark and Tabernacle of God should be ; which at the first was at shiloh in the Country of Samaria and Tribe of Ephraim, afterwards at Jerusalem in the Tribe of Judah, where David first pitched a new Tabernacle for the Ark of the Covenant, after it had been taken by the Philistines, and returned home again ; and in the same place his son Solomon built that glorious Temple which was the Beauty of the whole earth. Of these two places spake the Samaritan woman in the Gospel to our Saviour, John 4. 20. Our Fathers ( said she ) worshipped in this Mountain ; and ye say that Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship. By Our Fathers she means the old Ephraimites, from whom the Samaritans fallily vaunted they were descended ; upon which ground she likewise calls Jacob Our Father Jacob, v. 12. For they were indeed the off-spring of those strange Nations which Shalmaneser transplanted into the Cities of Samaria, when he had carried Ephraim and the rest of Israel captives into Affyria ; as we read 2 Kings 17. 24. By this Mountain she means Mount Ephraim where Shiloh was, and the Ark and Tabernacle of God in ancient time had been.

For when Manasses the brother of Jaddus the High Priest was excommunicated and driven from the Priesthood because he had married the daughter of Sanballat the Horonite, ( as it is in the last of Nehemiah v. 28. ) he with his faction, to vex his own Nation, procured a Temple to be built in Gerizim on Mount Ephraim, whereof himself was the High Priest ; and to draw a company of Transgressors like himself from the Temple at Jerusalem unto this, it was coloured as if this were the only place which the Lord had chosen, because the Tabernacle was first pitched at shiloh in Mount Ephraim, and not at Sion on Mount Moriah : and this was the bone of everlasting division and capital hatred between the Jews and Samaritans.

Thus we have seen where this place was first and last which the Lord had chosen. Now let us further consider why it is thus called, The place which the Lord shall chuse.

First therefore, these words imply That the place for holy Assemblies was a select place ; For they were not to assemble in every place as occasion and opportunity served, but to have a choice and select place for that purpose.

Secondly, This place for Legal worship was to be one only place, and no more ; and therefore here the * singular number is used. I say, there was but one only place for Legal worship, meaning Sacrifices and the Service accompanying them ; for otherwise they had many Synagogues for hearing the Law read and expounded. Jerusalem it self had four hundred, and in those the Scribes bore rule, as the Priests did in the Temple. But the reason why there was but one Temple, and place of Sacrifice and Prayer, was, for a * Type of that one only Mediator Jesus Christ, in whom alone our sins are expiated, and our prayers and thanksgivings accepted before God : So that in the time of the Law to build an holy Altar or offer Sacrifices any where but here, though it were unto the true God, was a Typical Idolatry, because it implied a multiplicity of Mediators, of whose Oneness the one only place of worship and the one Altar was a sign ; which was the reason why it was so unlawful to sacrifice in the high places, though it were unto the Lord their God : And yet because it was but a ceremonial sin, God did in the confused times of that Church sometimes pass by it, as it were, because of the hardness of their hearts, as our Saviour saith in another kind. But he that did dispense with an irregularity in figure because of the state of the times, will never allow Idolatry in deed, such as is that of the Church of Rome, who fulfil the very substance of that whereof the Jewish sin was but a Type, whose Mediators are so many that they are not easily numbered : and though they for excuse subordinate them all to Christ as the chief, and derive their Mediatorship from the virtue of his merits ; yet is this but like unto that of the erring Church of the Law, which, notwithstanding God's commandment to the contrary, had a conceit that they might sacrifice in any high place, so it were unto the Lord their God only.

The third and last thing which these words imply is, That this select and only place should be of the Lord's own chusing ; The place he shall chuse. But how should the Lord chuse it ? it seems, by giving some extraordinary sign of his allowance in accepting their Sacrifice ; or it may be they did consult him in this case by the Oracle of Urim and Thummim. For of the first place, in shiloh, we have nothing expressed, but only read Joshua 18. 1. That the whole Congregation of Israel assembled together at shiloh, and set up the Tabernacle of the Congregation there. But of the second place, in Mount Sion, we read, That * the Angel of God commanded Gad to say to David, that he should set up an Altar in the threshing-floor of Ornan ; and that when David offered thereon burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, * the Lord answered him from heaven by fire upon the Altar of burnt-offering ; and that David hereupon designed that place for the Tabernacle, and future

Deut. 16. 16.

1.

2.

* See Discourse XII. pag. 46, 47.

3.

* 1 Chron. 21.

* Verse 26.

Deut. 16. 16. future Temple, saying, This is the house of the Lord God, and this is the Altar of the burnt-offering for Israel, 1 Chron. 22. 1.

Luke 1. 28. Now to make some application of this to the times of the Gospel. The two last circumstances of this place concern us not: For that of one place was a Type, and so is gone: the second, of God's immediate choice, seems to be so also, and to be a figure of that which the Angel Gabriel said to the blessed Virgin, Hail thou highly favoured, the Lord is with thee; blessed art thou amongst Women: where God chuses the womb of Mary wherein to erect that pure Altar and Temple whereof the Legal were but shadows. Thus these two circumstances seem no ways to bind us. But the first, That there should be select places for holy Assemblies and the publick worship of God, this is that which was before the Law was given, and yet remains in force now the Law is ended. As long as it is required of the Church to appear before the Lord in publick Assemblies, so long is it also required to have chosen and select places for that purpose. Adam and his Sons had places whither to bring their Sacrifices; the Patriarchs used Altars, Mountains and Groves to the self-same purpose; from the very beginning of Christianity Christians have had their select Oratories. 1 Cor. 11. 22. S. Paul speaking of the Assemblies of the Church and some abuses therein, as eating and drinking, Have ye not (saith he) Houses to eat and drink in? or despise ye the Church of God? Here it appears that the place of holy Assemblies was not an ordinary place where men eat and drink, but a place select and set apart for holier purposes; which he yet more confirms when he addeth, v. 34. If any man hunger, let him eat at home: It follows hence, That the place of Holy Assemblies was no man's home, but a place hallowed unto God for the common use of the Church, howsoever these in the times of persecution so secret as not to be discovered by the Gentiles. What hath been the practice since in all Ages, he hath no eyes that sees not; and if there be any who cannot behold them without a desire to have them levelled, it were better their eyes were plucked out than so many monuments of our Forefathers piety should be thrown down and ruined, and God so unseemly and disorderly served, as he should be if (as Beggars do for lodging, so) his Assemblies were every week or month to seek a place of entertainment.

We are therefore as well as the Israelites to appear before the Lord in a chosen place. But here is the difference, that they were to have but one, we have liberty to have many; there God chose a place for himself, but we in the Gospel have liberty to chuse a place for God where we will. Nevertheless it is to be observed, that the Leaders of the Primitive Church, howsoever they acknowledged this liberty, yet they used to select for their Assemblies such Places as God had any way dignified or honoured either by some work of mercy, or the glorious sufferings of his Martyrs; whereupon the most ancient Monuments of the Christian Churches do mention the Assemblies of Christians In Cœmeteriis Martyrum, at the Cœmeteries and Monuments of their Martyrs. For howsoever God did not immediately select the place of his worship then, as he did in the time of the Law; yet they thought he had made these places of a choicer fitness than other, though none of necessary obligation: which I for my part would be loth to condemn as an error; seeing to follow the order of the Church of Israel by way of direction and not obligation, is no abridgment to Christian liberty, so it be only so far and in those things only whereof Christianity is capable, as I think this we speak of was; though I know it was afterward an occasion of damnable Idolatry, use of erecting Temples unto Saints and Angels. But what is there which the corrupt nature of man will not make an occasion of sin? Even as an unclean body of the best nourishment will breed evil humors: So out of the most wholesome ordinances our wicked hearts will contrive superstition.

DISCOURSE XLVIII.

DEUTERONOMY 16. 16, 17.

— In the Feast of Unleavened bread, and in the Feast of Weeks, and in the Feast of Tabernacles: and they shall not appear before the Lord empty. Every man shall give as he is able, according to the blessing of the Lord thy God which he hath given thee.

N these words being a commandment for the observation of the three solemn and principal Feasts of the Law, were Four things considerable. 1. The Work or action; To appear before the Lord: 2. The Persons who; All Males: 3. The Place where; In the place the Lord shall chuse: 4. The Time when; Thrice in the Year: In the Feast of unleavened bread, In the Feast of Weeks, and in the Feast of Tabernacles. Of the three first, the Action, the Persons, and Place, I have spoken. Now therefore I come to speak of the Time, The Feast of unleavened bread, &c.

IV.

The Feast of unleavened Bread is that which is otherwise called The Feast of the Passeeover, consisting of seven days, from the fifteenth of March until the twenty first. On the Even before this solemn Feast, the fourteenth day of the first month, was killed and eaten the Paschal Lamb; on the seven days following were offered the Paschal Sacrifices, and no other Bread but unleavened eaten; the first and last days being days of holy Assemblies or Convocations.

Levit. 23. 5, 6, 7, 8.

The Feast of Weeks was a Feast kept at the end of seven Weeks, or a Week of Weeks, after the second day of the Passeeover, or fifty days after the first day of the Feast of unleavened bread; and therefore called The Feast of Weeks, that is, a Feast to be kept a Week of Weeks after the Passeeover; and Pentecost, because the first day thereof was the fiftieth day after the first of the * Passeeover, as now our Whitsuntide is ἡ πεντηκστή, the fiftieth day after Easter. This Feast was likewise of seven days continuance, all spent in multitude of Sacrifices, but the first and last specially in keeping of holy Assemblies.

* Viz. Passeeover-week, or the Paschal Feast, or Feast of Unleavened bread which lasted 7. days.

The Feast of Tabernacles, Σκηνοπηγία, was a Feast of eight days continuance in the seventh month, or September, from the fifteenth day thereof to the two and twentieth, all whereof had their proper Sacrifices; and the first seven days they dwelt in Booths or Tabernacles made of Willow, Palm, Myrtle and Citron boughs, whence it hath the name of the Feast of Tabernacles. The first, and the last or eighth day, were here also days of an holy Convocation, wherein no servile work might be done.

Thus having in brief described the Time, Continuance and Service of these Three solemn Feasts, now let us also see what was the End of their institution. The End of these Feasts was partly for Remembrance of things past, and partly for Types and Figures of things to come; which I will shew in them severally.

The Feast of the Passeeover was for a thankful Remembrance of their great deliverance out of Egypt, when for haſt they were forced to carry their dough unleavened upon their shoulders; and the evening before, the Lord having slain all the first-born of Egypt, yet passed by them, because of the blood of the Paschal Lamb which he saw upon the door-posts of their houses. For this cause they were, whensoever that happy time of the year should come, to rejoyce before the Lord their God, and to hallow it after the manner afore mentioned. And thus you have the first End, The memorial and remembrance of benefits past.

Exod. 12.

The second End was for a Type and Figure of things to come, namely, of our deliverance from the bondage of Sin and Satan by that immaculate Lamb, Christ Jesus, who in the same month and day was foreordained of God to be slain upon the Cross for the sins of the whole world; whose Blood upon whatsoever Soul God shall espay applied by a lively Faith, he would spare, and not destroy it.

Thus much of the first Feast. The second, The Feast of Weeks, or Pentecost, was for a Remembrance of the Law * at that time given upon Mount Sinai, with thundering * See this p. c. ved by Pisea- tor in Exod. 19. ver. 1, 2, 11.

Deut. 16.
16, 17.

and lightning, and the sound of a Trumpet from Heaven. And secondly, for a Type of the Doctrine of the Gospel, which was published at the self-same time, when with a sound from Heaven, cloven tongues of fire fell upon the Apostles, and they all were filled with the Holy Ghost, as we read Acts 2. 2, 3, 4.

Now for The Feast of Tabernacles; the first End is plain, that it was a memorial, namely, of their long dwelling in Tabernacles in the Wilderness. Lev. 23. 42, 43. Ye shall dwell in booths seven days (saith the Lord,) all that are Israelites born shall dwell in booths; That your generations may know that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths when I brought them out of the Land of Egypt.

But of what thing concerning Christ to come it was a Type, it is not so express as in the former. But by that which S. John saith, Chap. 1. 14. Καὶ ὁ λόγος σὰρξ ἐγένετο, καὶ ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν, The Word was made flesh, and Tabernacled in us; for so signifies ἐσκήνωσεν. by this, I say, S. John should seem to intimate, That as the Passover was a Type of his Passion, Pentecost a Figure of the sending the Holy Ghost; so should the Feast of Tabernacles be for a Type of his Incarnation, when the Divine Nature tabernacled in our flesh, and the Word of God became Emmanuel, God with us. For it is incredible that this principal Feast should not be for a Type of some principal thing concerning Christ as well as the rest; it being as solemn as any of the former two, nay rather the chiefest of the three, as having a more extraordinary course of Sacrifices than either of the other, yea of one day's more continuance; this having eight festival days, the other two but seven. And there is nothing but his Incarnation and Nativity which can be applied thereunto; and it may be therefore was the eighth day added thereunto, as figuring the time of his Circumcision.

Another custom used at this Feast may confirm this: For while they gathered and carried the Boughs whereof they made their Tabernacles, there used a kind of Litany to be sung, in which the people continually cried Hosanna, Hosanna, that is, Save now; which was so usual, that in time the Feast, and Boughs, and all came to be called * Hosanna's: Whence came the cry of the people in the Gospel, when they cut down boughs to honour our Saviour's riding upon an Ass, * Hosanna to the Son of David, Hosanna in the Highest. For though it were at another time of year than the Feast of Tabernacles, yet the carrying of Boughs put them in mind of the accustomed acclamation at that Feast. All which seems of purpose so to be ordered by the providence of the Almighty, to shew, First, what this ceremony of Tabernacles aimed at, namely, the mystery of our Redemption by God in the Tabernacle of our flesh; or the Incarnation of Christ, which is that which made him Jesus, a Saviour, and us to cry unto him by Faith, Hosanna, Save now. And Secondly, that it might be known who this Tabernacle was, the people by a secret providence cried unto our Saviour, even at another time, Hosanna to the Son of David; ascribing, in their so speaking, the whole ceremony of Boughs and Tabernacles unto him.

But it will be objected, That the Birth of Christ was in December, but the Feast of Tabernacles was kept the fifteenth day of the seventh month, which answered in a manner to our September; and therefore had the Feast of Tabernacles been a sign of his Incarnation, the time should as well have agreed here as it did in the Passover and his Passion, the giving of the Law and the sending of the Holy Ghost: But between the Feast of Tabernacles and the Birth of our Saviour is three months difference.

For this Objection, give me leave to relate, not mine own, nor as my own, but the opinion of the most learned Chronologers; the summe and conclusion whereof is, That the Birth of our Saviour was in September, at the time of the Feast of Tabernacles, and not in December, as the memory thereof is now celebrated. For first, it is apparent that in the primitive Church there was neither certainty nor agreement about the time of the Nativity, as * Clemens Alexandrinus witnesseth; and himself saith, That those who enquire more exactly of the time, do assign the five and twentieth of the month Pachon, which is our twentieth of May.

Others assigned other and divers times, as Epiphanius witnesseth four hundred years almost after Christ: so long therefore there was no certainty agreed upon. And it was after the time of Constantine that the day we now observe was chosen, and first in the Latine Church; but not in the Greek till the days of Chrysostome, who made an Oration, yet extant, upon the first observing of this day, which he says they now received from the Roman Church.

If any would know how, after so much uncertainty of opinions, they came at last to resolve upon this day; they will tell you, that it was upon a false supposal and a mistaken ground: For finding in the Law, that the High Priest was once every year

to

* Elias in Tish-bi in voce
הושענא & Buxtorf. de Abbrev. Hebr.
in יהו.
* Matth. 21. 9.

* Strom. I. 1.

* Hem. 31. in Tomo Dediversis Novi Testamenti lo-cis, secundum
edit. Fr. Ducai.

to enter the most Holy place, and there to offer incense ( at the Feast of Expiation ; ) and reading in S. Luke's Gospel, that the Angel Gabriel appeared to Zachary as he went to offer incense in the Temple, they supposed that he was the High Priest, and reasoned thus ; The time of the High Priest's offering incense in the most Holy was about the middle of September, namely the tenth day of the seventh month : Now as soon as Zachary had fulfilled the Week of his Ministration, John Baptist was conceived ; which must therefore be about the end of September : Now when the Angel saluted Mary, he told her, That her Cousin Elizabeth had been with Child six months : If John Baptist then were conceived about the end of September, our Saviour must be conceived six months after, which falls about the end of March ; which if true, his Birth will fall at the end of December, nine months after his conception. This was the ground whereupon the Feast of Christ's Nativity was fixed upon the five and twentieth of December.

Deut. 16.
16, 17.

Luke 1. 35.

To which they answer who think otherwise, First, That neither the Angel appeared to Zachary in the most Holy place ; for the Altar of incense was without the Veil, at which the Text saith the Angel appeared : neither could Zachary be the High Priest ; for the Text says, he was of the course of Abia, and that it came to his lot to offer incense ; but the High Priest was of no course, neither did the incensing of the most Holy fall to him by lot, but it was his only and proper office : the ground therefore was altogether mistaken.

Luke 1. 11.

Verſe 5.

Secondly, At the Birth of Christ every man, woman and child was to go to be taxed at the City whereto they belonged ; whither some had long journeys : But the middle of Winter was not fitting for such a business, especially for women with child and children to travel in : Therefore Christ could not be born in the depth of Winter.

Again, At the time of Christ's Birth the Shepherds lay abroad watching with their flocks in the night-time ; but this was not likely to be in the middle of Winter. And if any shall think the Winter-wind was not so extreme in those parts, let him remember the words of Christ in the Gospel, Pray that your flight be not in the Winter. If the Winter was so bad a time to flee in, it seems no fit time for Shepherds to lye in the Fields in, and Women and Children to travel in.

Matth. 24. 20.

They conclude therefore, That the Birth of Christ was in September.

First, Because otherwise this third Feast of Tabernacles should have nothing answering, as the other had : which they think the more unlikely, because there was no month in the year had more legal Feasts than this ; as the Feast of Trumpets the first day, the Feast of Expiation on the tenth, and that of Tabernacles on the fifteenth unto the two and twentieth.

Secondly, Joseph Scaliger proveth it by the four and twenty courses of the Priests ; and shews, that Abia's course or week, wherein Zachary served, began the one and twentieth of July, and ended the eight and twentieth that year. Our Saviour's conception therefore, being six months after, must fall at the end of December, and so his Birth nine months after, about the end of September, the four and twentieth day whereof that year began the Feast of Tabernacles ; and so his Birth falls in the Feast-time.

Lastly, The Primitive Church of Alexandria, where were the best Calculators of times, kept the Feast of John Baptist's Nativity the eight and twentieth of the month Pharmuth, which is the three and twentieth of our April, as Cyril witnesseth in an Homily upon that occasion. Now if John Baptist were born the three and twentieth of April, the Birth of Christ, which was six months after, must fall in the latter end of September, as aforesaid. All which if true, the day we observe is not the day of his Birth, but only the day wherein we solemnly remember it : and though the time it self, if known, were the most fit for such a solemnity, yet no time can be unlawfully chosen for such a day.

And thus I have shewed you the Time, the Manner, and the Signification of these three Feasts. Now let us see what profitable Observations this Discourse thereof will afford us.

First therefore, By these Feasts it appears, that the hallowing unto God of more days in the Week than one is not against the meaning of the Fourth Commandment. Some there are who will have the words [ Six days shalt thou labour ] to be as much a Commandment as [ Keep holy the Seventh ; ] and hence argue, that it is no more lawful for humane Authority to forbid working any of the Six days, than to forbid the holy observation of the Seventh ; and then all our Holy-days besides Sunday are unlawful. But by these Three solemn Feasts, which were each of them of a Week's durance at the least, it is manifest, that [ Six days shalt thou labour ] are no Commandment, but express only an ordinary permission of working : For it could not be but some days of these holy Feasts must be of the Six; and to think that God would gain-say his own Commandment by a contrary Ordinance, is unimaginable. As therefore when he commanded that men should give him the Tenth of their increase, he forbade not Free-will-offerings, nor that men might not give half their goods to sacred uses: So when he commanded one day of Seven to be universally and necessarily kept holy, this hindreth not but the Church may hallow other days to God even of the Six.

Deut. 16.
16, 17.

But they will say, God indeed appointed some other days to be observed besides one of Seven; but the Church had no leave so to do. I answer, The contrary appears by the Feast of Purim, which Mordecai caused to be ordained, and is no where reprov'd therefore, nor the Jews who observed it as long as their Church stood. The contrary also appears by the Feast of Dedication, which Judas Maccabeus, when he had cleansed the Temple from the prophanation of Antiochus, ordained yearly to be kept in the month * Cassien (1 Maccab. 4. 59.) which was so far from reproof, that our Saviour himself while he was upon earth honoured it with his presence, as we read John 10. 22. And it was at Jerusalem the Feast of Dedication, and it was Winter; where the word [ Winter ] is of purpose put to specify this Feast of Judas Maccabeus, in the Month of Cassien, * on the 25. day thereof.

* The month Cassien of Cassien was part of our November and part of December.

* 1 Macc. 4. 59. 2 Macc. 1. 18. & ch. 10. 5.

Secondly, we may observe from these Feasts, That the fittest time to hallow unto God is that which he hath as it were honoured and made remarkable by some special work and mercy of his. For you heard that the Feast of Unleavened bread and the Feast of Weeks were ordained to be kept at those days and times of the year wherein those works of God remembred in them were performed. So God himself appointed of all the days of the Week the Seventh to be kept holy, because he finished then the great work of the Creation of the World. So in the Gospel, of all the days in the Week the First was chosen, because on it Christ rose from the dead: In like manner when the Church would hallow unto God more days than one of seven; it being the Times of his Passion, Ascension, and sending of the Holy Ghost, as also the days of their Births or Deaths whom God had made as Pillars to support his Church, and in whose sufferings it was confirmed, and himself glorified.

The third and last Observation is this, The practice and fact of man is no sound argument to prove what is and what is not jure Divino. For we see in this and three other places how expressly this Feast of Tabernacles was commanded yearly to be observed. Nevertheless, which is past all belief, it was never kept, at least in this main circumstance of dwelling in booths, from the time of Joshua until after their return from Captivity in the days of Nehemiah, which was the space of a thousand years at the least, and the most flourishing time of their Church and Commonwealth. Who would have thought but some David, Solomon, Hezekiah, Josiah, or good Jehoiada, would in so long a time as a thousand years have reformed so great a neglect of God's commandment? But hear what the holy Ghost says, Nehem. 8. 17. Since the days of Joshua the son of Nun unto that day had not the Children of Israel done so. A horrible thing to hear; but whatsoever was written in former time, is written for our learning. And who knows whether there be not in this sinful omission of this Feast alone above the rest some special Mystery; namely, that the Jew should not acknowledge Christ, whom this signified to be Emmanuel? For that Jesus of Nazareth suffered upon the Cross they acknowledge, whereof the Passover was a sign; and therefore they blasphemously call him, * Talui, the hanged God. They will not deny also that this doctrine was published at the Feast of Pentecost; though they believe not the Mystery and fruit of either the one or the other. But, That he is God in our flesh, they could never endure to hear: we know this was the cause why their Synod condemned him, because he said, || He was the Son of God. Above a thousand years they omitted the observation of the Feast of Tabernacles, and now it is sixteen hundred wherein they have not believed that the Divine nature tabernacled in our flesh. When they returned from Captivity, they began to observe this so-long-neglected Ceremony; and when they shall return again from their now-long and woful Captivity, we hope they will then with us acknowledge this great Mystery.

Rom. 15. 4.

* Abm Ezra in Gen. 27. 39. R. Bechai in lib. Kad hak-kemach in lit. 1 cap. 1. ad locum Pf. 80. 14. Litera (in voce מִיָּעַר) suspensa est, nam sic sunt עֹבְרֵי הַתְּלוּי cul-tores suspensi illius. || John 19. 7.

HAVING hitherto spoken of the observation of these Feasts; now I am, according to my first Division, to come unto a second part of my Text, wherein is contained a special duty required of all when they came to worship God at these Feasts, namely, to bring a present with them: not a sacrifice of fire, for these were of another nature, and for another end; but a Heave-offering, which kind was a Tribute of Thankfulness unto God, and withal of acknowledgment of his Supreme Lordship and Dominion over all: For without a sacrifice or a fiery-offering the Feast could not at all have have been kept, but without a Heave-offering or religious present it might, though nothing dutifully : and therefore is this specially added, That no man should appear before the Lord empty ; for the Lord our God is a sovereign King, and will be acknowledged so of all who come before him : He is not Lord over our Persons only, and therefore requires the service both of our Souls and Bodies ; but he is Lord of our Goods too, and so is to have a Tribute of them offer'd unto him in token thereof.

But for the better handling of this point without confusion, we will consider, first, What was the Jewish practice in this duty ; secondly, What ought to be our imitation. For the former, The Jewish practice was, as far as I can gather, besides some special presents at Easter and Pentecost, to perform all their Heave-offerings, First-fruits, Firstlings of Cattel, Tithes of all things, and their Free-will-offerings at some one of these three Feasts, according as the season of the year served for the things they were to offer. For the better understanding of which, we must premise something of the manner of the Husbandry of Palestine, Egypt, and those neighbour Southern Countries, because it was much different from ours.

Pliny affirms, that in Egypt ( and therefore in Palestine ) Barley was ripe in the sixth month after it was sown, and Wheat in the seventh. The same Author affirms, that their seed-time for both began in the month of November ; whence it follows, that Barley was ripe almost a month before the Wheat, the seed-time being the same, and the Wheat not ripening a month so soon as Barley. Barley then ripening in the sixth month, the Harvest thereof fell about the beginning of April, Wheat-harvest nigh a month after ; their whole Harvest by this means beginning at Easter, and ending at Whitsuntide. Which is the reason why Pentecost ( Exod. 23. 16. ) is called, חג הקציר The Harvest-Feast, or, The Feast upon the end of Harvest. This shews a reason also, why upon the Plague of Hail we read, Exod. 9. 31, 32. that the Flax and Barley was smitten, because the Barley was eared, and the Flax balled : But the Wheat and Rye were not smitten, for they were not grown up : The ear yet appeared not, for this was about the beginning of the month of March, as we may suppose a fortnight or three weeks before their coming out of Egypt, which was the fourteenth day of the first month. This was a reason also why we read, 2 Sam. 21. 9. that seven of Saul's Sons were hanged for the Gibeonites in the first days of Harvest, in the beginning of Barley-Harvest. All which suppose Barley to begin, and Wheat to end their Harvest. Which with us is contrary, because Barley is sown so long after Wheat, viz. when Winter is past, because it is a tender grain, and will not endure the sharp and piercing cold of these Northern climates.

As for their Vintage or Harvest of Oyle and Wine, it was in the seventh month, or beginning of Autumn, as in other Countries.

For their Cattel, they had two breeding times, the beginning of the spring, and the beginning of september : but the spring-breed was the strongest, and are called Beccorim, that is, not the first opening the womb only, as most take it, but the firstlings of the year ; for the latter breed was much the worse and weaker. Which Jacob knew, Gen. 30. 41, 42. when he laid his Rods before the Cattel when they were * strong, in the spring-time ; but he put them not in when they were || feeble, in the Autumn ; So ( saith the Text ) the feeble were Laban's, and the stronger were Jacob's.

This thus explained, let us now see what the Practice of the Jews was at these solemn times, that they might not appear in the Lord's presence empty handed. At the Feast of unleavened bread, or Easter, upon the second day thereof, being the beginning of Harvest, they were to bring a sheaf of the first-fruits of their Harvest unto the Priest, and he was to wave it before the Lord ; and until this were done, they might eat no Corn, whether parched or otherwise in the green ear, as appeareth Levit. 23. 10. — 14. And hence this second day of the Feast was called, This was that day whereon ( Luke 6. 1. ) Christ's Disciples plucked ears of Corn, and ate them ; for S. Luke says it was εν σαββατω δευτεροπρωτω, which is the second day of the first Sabbath, or the day after the first Sabbath ; for I told you, that the first and last days of this Feast were days of holy Assemblies, wherein no servile work might be done, and are therefore in Leviticus called sabbaths ; the day after the first of which Sabbaths S. Luke calls σαββατον δευτεροπρωτον. Whereby it may seem that the Pharisees reproved the Disciples, not so much for breaking any Sabbath's rest, as for eating the ears afore it was lawful ; for if it were lawful upon a Sabbath-day to reach meat from a Table, why should it not be as lawful to pluck ears of Corn to eat them without breach of the Sabbath ? But I leave this.

Deut. 16.
16, 17.

I.

In Agypto
hordeum sexto
a satia mense frumenta se-
ptimo metantur.
Plin. lib. 18.
cap. 7.

בִּימֵי נִיסָן
In Nisan or March.
בִּימֵי
הַחֹשֶׁל
In Tisri or September. So Aben Ezra
upon the place.

Deut. 16.
16, 17.

Secondly, At this Feast also I suppose they paid their Firstlings and Tithes of Cattel; for God was to have of the best, which was (as I told you) the Breed of the Spring at this time ready. And this is the reason, that where this Feast is commanded, there follow presently some Precepts of the Firstlings of the Cattel, because namely it concerned the same time.

* Levit. 23. 17.

* Verse 22.

Now at the Feast of Pentecost, when Harvest was ended, they are commanded to bring * two wave-loaves of their new Corn for a second First-fruits of their Harvest: At which time also they paid Tithes of Corn, so much as was threshed; and a Tribute also of a Free-will-offering of their hand, as it is called in the 10. of this Chapter. And this Feast ending their Harvest, is a reason why at the mentioning thereof you shall find precepts * of not gathering their Lands clean, but that they should leave something for the poor to glean: which also was a secondary Offering unto God himself.

Lastly, At the Feast of Tabernacles they offered First-fruits and Tithes of Wine and Oyl, which was the Offering of that season; and besides the remainders of their Tithes of the floor or of threshed corn: which is the reason why this Feast is called (Exod. 34.) The Feast of gathering in at the years end; and in this Chapter afore my Text, The Feast of gathering in of the Floor and the Winepress: For at this time all their Corn was threshed, and the Vintage done, and other Fruits were gathered, and so an Offering of them given unto God seasonably: therefore in the commandment of this Feast you shall find a precept of not gathering their Grapes and Fruits clean, in behalf of the Poor also.

Thus you see, the Offering of Cattel was at Easter, of Bread and Breadcorn in part at Pentecost, of Wine and Oyle and the remainder of Corn at the Feast of Tabernacles; whereupon we read (2 Chron. 31. 7.) that the people which paid their Tithes there at Hezekiah's command, began to lay the foundation of the heaps in the third month, that is, at Pentecost; and finished them in the seventh month, namely, at the Feast of Tabernacles.

1 Cor. 11. 29.

NOW having shewed what was the Jews practice, let us also see our duty in imitation of them, which I will only at this time shew briefly and generally. Certainly, we are bound also not to appear before the Lord with empty hand. It is not enough to give at other times, but it is a piece of the Worship required at that time. For we must know that the actions of Men in holy Assemblies are not like their private actions at other times; For all the actions here are not the actions of several men, but to be accounted as one action of the whole body: which makes S. Paul use the phrase, when ye come together ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό, to be as it were one and the same: every prayer here is not many prayers, if many, but one prayer of all as one: whether we say I in the singular, or We in the plural, all is one; for [I] here expresses one made of many, and [We] many made into one. Whatsoever worship God requires therefore of any one alone, the same he requires also of all met together as one; for he is God as well of the body of the Church as a body, as of any one in the Church as a Christian; and therefore requires some of them in both kinds, that is, Confession, Prayer, Thanksgiving, and an Offering of the hand too of the body of the Church assembled, as well as of any one at any other time.

1 Cor. 16. 2.

S. Paul ordained so in the Churches on the Lord's day, the day of holy Assembly, the day when many came together as one. Every first day of the Week, let every one lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him.

The Primitive Christians practised the same in all their Assemblies, alledging these words of my Text for the same, as we may see in Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, and others. Nay, they used to offer at the Lord's Table some handful of those Offerings and Tithes to which they would entitle the Lord; whence the ancient Liturgies run, Μνήσθητι, Κύριε, τῶν καρποφορούντων ἐν ταῖς ἀγίαις ἐκκλησίαις σου, Remember, O Lord, those who offer of their fruits and encrease in thy holy Churches.

We have also in our Liturgy a Service for the Offertory, and many places of Scripture at the same read to move our devotion every Sunday, and a Prayer to God at the end thereof, That he would accept our Alms and Prayers, when we seldom bring him any.

Jo. 13. 29.

Our Blessed Saviour, though he had nothing in this world but the contribution of good People in a Bag; yet that he might in this also fulfil the Law of God, he used at these solemn times to give unto the Poor; which we may gather from the story of his Last Supper: for the Text saith, when he bade Judas do quickly what he had to do, his Disciples thought he had bid him give something unto the Poor, because he carried the Bag; which they would not have thought, unless he had wont to do so at such times.

DISCOURSE XLIX.

GENESIS 10. 5.

By these the Isles of the Gentiles [אִי הַגּוֹיִם] were divided [נִפְרְדוּ] in their lands; every one after his tongue, after their families, [לְמִשְׁפְּחוֹתָם] in their nations.

WHEN AS after the great Deluge of waters the sons of Noab began to multiply upon the earth, it is said, That they came from the East Gen. 11. 2. into the land of Shinar, the pleasant plain of Shinar, where God at the beginning had placed the first Father of mankind, our Father Adam. But when they saw that their numbers were like to be great, and that so small a plot of ground would not contain them all; yet that they might continue within the Body of one Society, and have as it were a common right in this place of Paradise, they agreed to build them a Citie which should have been the Metropolis of an Universal Monarchy, and an exceeding high Tower, that they might be famous and renowned among posterity. But this vain purpose of man's imagination seemed evil in the eyes of God, and therefore it is said, That he came down from heaven to overthrow the counsel of the sons of Gen. 11. 5. men. And because they were so loth to break Society, it pleased God to cut from them the common Bond of one Society, and to make them speak with many languages. For as Speech is termed the Bond of Society, Oratio (saith the Philosopher) est Societatis vinculum; and as the Unity of one common Language had knit all mankind into one Community: so God in his wisdom saw that Plurality of Languages was the best means to force mankind into a Plurality of Societies. Thus therefore and by this means did Almighty God cast man the second time out of Paradise, and dispersed him over the face of the whole earth by this memorable Confusion of languages.

Now concerning the Order of this Dispersion and the Manner of this Confusion, he that is but a little conversant in the writings either of Historical or Theological Antiquaries, shall find not only one but varieties of Confusions, not of Tongues only, but of Opinions also; one saying this thing, another thinking that thing: so that some having essayed this Labyrinth, and finding neither safe getting in nor likelihood of getting out, have quite disclaim'd any further search: And as Alexander, when he could not unloose the Gordian knot, drew his sword and cut it a-pieces; so they, meaning to make an easy dispatch of all difficulties, affirm, That Curiosity in this Argument is either frivolous or altogether needless.

But I would that these had remembered, That that knowledg ought not to be accounted needless, without which the Events and Complements of the Prophetical Blessings of the Patriarchs and the particular Predictions of the after-Prophets can never be understood.

For how shall we know How and When God was the Blessed God of Sem, and How Gen. 9. 26, 27. and When God perswaded Japhet to dwell in the tents of Sem, if we know not Where were the tents of Sem, and Which were the Habitations of the sons of Japhet? How shall we tremble enough at the horrible Curse of impious Cham, and know that he was indeed a Servant of Servants and a slave to all his brethren, unless we Gen. 9. 25. know Where was the land of his abiding? Or how should we know What were those Ships of Chittim, whereof Balaam and Daniel prophesied, if we know not Num. 24. 24. Dan. 11. 30. Where was the Inheritance of the posterity of Chittim? Lastly, How should we know who is that Tyrant Gog, of whom Ezekiel speaks, who comes out of the land of Magog, and is described to be the Prince of Meshech and Tubal, if we know not Ezek. 39. 1. Where is the land of Magog, and which is the off-spring of Meshech and Tubal?

As therefore S. Paul said in another case, so I think I may say in this, That God hath not left us without a witness, but hath given us certain Notes and Marks, if we were so diligent as to mark them, whereby we may easily point out the Original habitations of the first Colonies of Mankind.

And

Gen. 10.5.

And to omit other dispersed places in the Bible, I think that this Chapter contains the principal, and the grounds of the rest. Where because Moses begins first with the line of Japhet, (and The first in every kind is a Rule to that which cometh after) and because also that we the inhabitants of the Western parts of the world have greatest interest in the stock of Japhet; I have made special choice of this Verse which I now read, which contains A description both of the Place and Manner of the habitations of the Sons of Japhet. Of these (that is, Of the seven sons of Japhet before named) were divided the Isles of the Gentiles, &c.

Now therefore I will consider the words of this Text, First, Generally, as they contain A circumscription of the Place, and a description of the Manner and Order of the dwellings of Japhet; Secondly, specially, from Grounds drawn out of this Scripture, and by the Remainders of ancient names, I will assign to every one of his sons the particular lot of their inheritance.

The Territories of the sons of Japhet are here termed The Isles of the Gentiles; Of these were divided the Isles of the Gentiles in their lands, that is, the Isles of the Gentiles throughout their lands, or, the lands of the Isles of the Gentiles.

Thus we have the Name; but What part of the World was called by this Name, that we have not. The Hebrew is אִיֵּי הַגִּוִּים, which the Septuagint and Josephus turn ἡσσοί τῶν ἐθνῶν the Chaldee and other Interpreters, Islands of the Gentiles.

We usually call Islands Regions or Countries encircled by the Sea: But because there were not such Islands enough near the place of Division to contain the Families of the house of Japhet, there being but only Crete and Cyprus until we come unto the Aegean Sea; and because it is not likely that they would overpass the main land, to seat themselves in little Islands; or if they would so have done, yet was there not then such plenty of shipping to transport so great multitudes; and lastly, because we know assuredly that some of Japhet's posterity were originally seated upon the main Continent; It followeth hence that by Islands here cannot be meant those which we call Islands.

Perhaps then there may be some Trope in these words, and that by Isles of the Gentiles are not meant indeed properly Islands, but Countries having many Islands lying about them, so that אִיֵּי הַגִּוִּים may be expounded Terra insulosa Gentium: that is, Gentildome full of Islands. And this indeed fits very well those Countries where Japhet's sons are said to dwell; witness the many Islands in the Mediterranean, Aegean and Ionian seas. But because it is manifest out of Scripture, that there are some Countries called by this name, which are neither encompassed by the Sea, nor have any Islands lying near them; this Interpretation also must be rejected.

Now there remaineth only one Exposition more; That the Hebrews called אִיֵּי or Islands all Countries divided from them by Sea, or such as they could not come unto, or used not to go unto, but by Sea. So that their word אִי is larger than our Island: for we call an Island that which can no way be come unto but by Sea, and is every where divided from the Main; but they called also those אִיֵּי which were but secundum quid Islands, which were at least by Sea divided from their main, or were in regard of themselves only not accessible but by Sea. In brief, They called Islands all beyond-sea countries, and all people Islanders which came to them and to the Egyptians by Sea. Neither did the Grecians use their word ἡσσοί only for a place encompassed by the Sea; as we see by Peloponnesus Πελοπόννησος ἡσσοί, which joyned unto the main land of Epirus; and so likewise were their Chersonesi.

And that this last Interpretation is undoubtedly true, we need no other Argument but this, That the Hebrews called all Countries which were divided from them by Sea; Islands, and converso they called no other Islands but such as were divided from them by Sea; that is, All countries which lye above the Mediterranean Sea, from the mountain of Amanus and the Hyrcaene Sea westward, were called by this name of Islands of the Gentiles, and no other were called by this name but these.

The truth of this may be seen in many places of the Bible, whereof I will quote the most pregnant. Esay 11. 10, 11. The Prophet shewing the Calling of the Gentiles by an allusion of the restoring of the Jews from the places where they were dispersed, maketh an Induction of those places and countries wherein they were scattered, saying, *The Lord shall recover the remnant of his people from Assyria, Egypt, Pathros, Cush, Elam, Shinar, Hamath, and from the Islands of the * Gentiles.* Here by the Islands of the Gentiles are meant distinct places from those before named; and places too where the Jews were scattered: but these can be no other but the countries of Armenia the less, which together with the rest that he names were under the Empire of the Assyrians, Medes and Persians. And because this Prophecy is to be understood of the Calling of the Gentiles, the Prophet in his Induction would not omit those places where he only laboured who was surnamed The Apostle of the Gentiles, and which were from the beginning and are at this day the principal seat of Christian Churches. So that at this day there is no part of the world called by the name of Christendome but that which is divided from the Jews by Sea, even the blessed Japhet and the happy Islands of the Gentiles. And this was foretold by the Prophets, in that they never spake of the Calling of the Gentiles, but they harped upon the Islands of the Gentiles. The same Prophet Esay (ch. 40. 15.) to shew God's Omnipotency and great power, speaketh after this manner, Behold, the Nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance; behold, he taketh up the Isles as a very little thing. Where if by Isles we mean those which we call Islands, the comparison of disparity will not hang together; because those which we call Islands are indeed very little things. It remains therefore that by Islands here are meant those huge Countries which were beyond the Sea in regard of Egypt and Palæstine. Again in ch. 42. he saith, * The Isles shall wait for the Law of God. What is here meant by Isles, you may easily guess by that I said before; and that which followeth in the same Chapter will help you, * Sing unto the Lord a new song, — ye that go down to the sea, that is, ye which dwell low to the Sea-ward: and if ye ask who these are, the very next words will tell you, namely, the Isles and the inhabitants thereof. Where is plainly expounded who are meant by the inhabitants of the Isles, namely those that dwell downward to the Sea-ward. Moreover Jeremy 2. 10. we find, Pass over to the Isles of Chittim; but the Island of Chittim was no Island or place encircled by the Sea, unless Macedonia be an Island; for Alexander is said in (1 Maccab. 1. 1.) to have come forth of the land of Chittim; and in Ch. 8. 5. Perseus King of Macedonia is called King of the Citims. In Ezek. 27. 3. Tyrus is called a merchant of people for many Islands, because unto Tyrus came many people from beyond the Sea for merchandise. And lastly in 1 Maccab. 14. 5. (which I hope will be a sufficient testimony to shew what the Jews called by the name of Isles of the Gentiles) among the Commendations of Simon, one of the worthy Maccabees, it is said, That he took Joppa for an haven and for an entrance to the Isles of the Sea: where it is more than manifest that by the Isles of the Sea the Jews meant those Nations which came to them by Sea.

* In the Hebrew it is אִיֵּי הַיָּם the Isles of the Sea. But that the Isles of the Sea and the Isles of the Gentiles are of a like importance, the Author shews afterwards.

* Verf. 4.

* Verf. 10.

Now if this be so, That the Jews called those Countries the Isles of the Gentiles which were divided from them by Sea, we may see how true that opinion is (though commonly received) which affirmeth that the posterity of Madai, one of the Sons of Japhet, are those Medes who were comparters with the Persians in the Second Monarchy. For he that hath any skill in Geography knows that this Media is not divided from the Jews by Sea, and therefore cannot be one of the Islands of the Gentiles, unless Mesopotamia and Assyria be also Islands of the Gentiles. And yet my Text says, That Of these (namely of the seven Sons of Japhet, whereof Madai is one) were divided the Islands of the Gentiles. The occasion of this Errour (for so I take it to be) was the mistaking of Josephus, who says that of Madai came those people which the Greeks call Μαδαίοι. But first, I doubt whether the Greeks called those Medes so famous in the Scripture Μαδαίοι, or not rather Μήδοι. Again, if by Μαδαίοι Josephus means those Medes which had title in the Second Monarchy, he can no ways agree with himself; for a little before he said that the posterity of Japhet had their seat from the mountain Amanus Westward; but these Medes lie above the Persians from the mountain Amanus Eastward. But if any man ask where then was the original seat of the Sons of Madai, I will defer mine answer till I come to assign to the several Sons of Japhet their several habitations.

HAVING found out that part of the Earth which was divided among the posterity of our Father Japhet; I come now to the Second part of my General consideration, to make another search Concerning the manner of this Division, and the Order of their dwelling and neighbourhood one with another. And here my Text answers, That they were sorted every one according to his Language, according to his Family, and according to his Nation.

Whence (before we come to particular examination of every word) we may observe, That this great Division of the Earth was performed orderly, and that they are much deceived who dream of a confused and irregular Dispersion, wherein every one went whither he listed, and seated himself where he liked best.

For

Gen. 10.5. נִפְרָדִי also, which we translate divided, will bear the force of an Argument to this purpose; in that it signifies not a scattering or a confusion, but a most distinct partition.

Or if there were no such insinuation in my Text, yet there may be many Reasons drawn from the Circumstances of this Division which will enforce the same Verity.

1. As first, The Custome, and as it were the property, of Almighty God in all those Actions wherein he hath a special hand and directs by a special providence; according to that saying, God is not the Author of Confusion, but of Order. And if in any other, surely in this God's Providence was seen most especially, it being so principal an action, and as it were the ground and foundation of the Second propagation of Mankind.

2. Another Argument lieth in the End why God multiplied the Languages of these builders, which was (as it seems) lest dwelling altogether they should confound their families, and mingle together their generations, which God in his Wisdom would have severed and kept distinct for divers purposes. And that this should be the End or one of the Ends, it followeth naturally out of the proper Effect of Pluralities of Tongues, which is to sort men into Pluralities of Societies, as the Unity of one common language before had knit them into one Community. Now if this were the purpose of Almighty God, then it needs must be that for the prosecution of this End each Family should dwell by it self, and each Nation by it self, that so there might be an orderly Division.

3. Another Reason may be drawn from the Wisdom of the Patriarchs, who were all alive at this Division, and were as Kings in their generations. Seeing therefore that there is great difference in the parts of the Earth, for the goodness of the soil and temperateness of the Air; it was their parts to prevent the danger of contention among their Sons, who should have the better parts of the Earth: which could be done no otherwise but by instituting an orderly Division; and that either by casting of lots, or chusing according to the order of their birthright, after some survey taken, of a sufficient portion of the Earth, and portions border'd out according to the number of their Nations, than of their Families, &c. For otherwise Magog would not have gone so far into the North, nor Arphaxad have been suffered to enjoy the pleasant land of Shinar.

But I leave these Generalities, and come to the Parts of this Order. Where for conveniency sake I will begin with that first which is last in the order of the words, to wit their sorting after their Families and after their Nations, or (as the words are in my Text) after their Families in their Nations.

Where first we must know what is meant by these two words in their proper use; for though elsewhere they may be promiscuously used, yet here being compared and conjoyned, they must needs have a distinct signification. Now what that is, the particle [ in ] doth insinuate. For in these words [ after their Families, in their Nations, ] Families are plainly subordinated to Nations, as Parts to a Whole, or Specials to a more General. Families therefore are Parts of a Nation, and a Nation is an Off-spring that containeth many Families. As therefore the Logicians say of their Genus, that it is either Generalissimum or subalternum: so we also may say of our Gens or Nation, that it is sometime Absolute, when there is no greater Off-spring in regard whereof it may be called a Family; or Respective, when though it be Gens in regard of those Families it comprehends, yet it self also is a Family in a greater generation. Now these Gentes or Nations are called sometimes by a more special name Tribes. For those which the Scripture in the Off-spring of Jacob calls Tribes, in the generations of Ishmael are called Nations, as we may learn, Gen. 25. 16. These (that is, these twelve which he named) are the Sons of Ishmael, and these are their names by their Towns, and by their Castles; twelve Princes according to their Nations. Now these Tribes of Israel or Nations of Ishmael, though being compared with their own Families they were Gentes; yet in regard to the generations of Arphaxad they were but Families of the eighth or ninth order. But as for Nations and their differing ranks, the Scripture hath found two words, גוֹי and שִׁבְט Gens and Tribus; so the parts of these, which be of many Orders, are not always called משפחות or Families, but sometimes בתי Houholds. So for the deprebending of Achan and election of Saul by lot, Israel first came out by their Tribes, then by their Families; where we must understand also their Sub-families; as it is easily gathered in the story of Achan, where these Sub-families are called sometimes Families, and sometimes Houholds.

Jos. 7. 14.
1 Sam. 10. 20, 21.

And

And thus we know what are Nations and what are Families, and what are the Kinds of both. Now let us see what Nations and what Families Moses here meaneth. I answer, that Moses here meaneth those which are absolutely Nations, not secundum quid Gentes or sub-Nations; and absolute Families, not Houſholds or sub-families. My reason is, Because Moses here speaketh of that division which was made when Peleg was born, which was within an hundred years after the flood: But by this time there were no Families so much encreased that they could be called Tribes or Nations; for the name of Family in Genealogies remains until the third Generation, that is, so long as the Founder of a Family may truly say, Καὶ παῖδων παῖδες, καὶ παῖδων ἀν' ἐνὶ παῖδες.

Gen. 10. 5.

And therefore when God in the second Commandment says, That he will visit the sins of Fathers upon their children to the third and fourth generation, the meaning is, that he will afflict the whole family for the sins of the Head of their Family. And when we say, De malè quaesitis non gaudet tertius haeres, we might as well say, That goods ill gotten, the same Family shall lose them which got them. Now that this Division was made before the third generation, it is sufficiently proved in that Eber, who was the Father of Peleg, and not then the Head of any house, was but the Second from Arphaxad, one of the founders of those Nations which were of the Off-spring of Sem.

The words and sense of the words being thus cleared, we see a Twofold order in this Division. First, they were ranged according to their Nations; and then secondly, Every Nation was ranked by his Families: So that every Nation dwelt and had his lot by himself, and in every Nation the Families also dwelt and had their lots by themselves. And thus much the words of Moses do imply: For in that the words stand thus [after their Families in their Nations,] it is as much as if it were said, That every Family was ranked and had his dwelling in his own Nation; which could not be unless the Division were also made to every one according to his Nation.

The Number of Nations which were of the Off-spring of Japhet we may easily find, to wit seven, according to the number of his Sons, who were all several Founders of several Nations. But the number of Families in these seven Nations we cannot so easily learn; for Moses nameth the Families only of two, Gomer and Javan, three of Gomer and four of Javan; and that because that these Nations were those that the Jews should have greatest knowledge of and most dealing with, because of their neighbourhood with the land of Canaan: and for the same end in the generations of Cham are named only the families of Canaan, Cush and Mizraim; and in Sem the families only of Aram and Joktan.

Now out of this which hath been spoken we may pick Five Rules to guide us in the finding out the original habitations of the Off-spring of Japhet.

First, We must seek for them in the Islands of the Gentiles and in Countries divided from the Jews by Sea; because by them were divided the Islands of the Gentiles.

Secondly, We must seek them within a reasonable Compass of the Earth, and not all the world over. For when this Division was made in the days of Peleg, the number of mankind was small; for besides women and children, their number in all could not be above seven thousand, as may be gathered out of this Chapter; so that it is not like they took the whole world before them.

Thirdly, Those Nations whose Families are named by Moses are to be sought for in places neighbouring to the Jews: for therefore did Moses name their Families, because they dwelt near unto the Jews, or dwelt so that the Jews might readily come at them.

Fourthly, Where we find the Nation, there also we must look for the Families of that Nation; because the Families were ranged in their Nations.

Fifthly, And therefore for the same reason, where we find any one of the Families, there we must look for the rest and for the whole Nation. But the practice of these Rules I must defer till hereafter.

Now I come to that which yet remains in my Text, viz. Languages: for Moses saith they were divided also [according to their languages.] Wherein we may see the very finger of God, who so caused them to speak with diverse tongues, that their tongues also were ordered after their Families and after their Nations. Which leaves no place at all for their opinion who suppose this Confusion of tongues to have been a privation of all language, and that they were fain to gather together by companies, and to impose new names upon things by common consent: Nor yet for their opinion who think that this Confusion was a kind of depravation of the Original tongue;

1.

2.

3.

4.

5.

Gen. 10. 5.

* [This or the like word was wanting in the Manuscript.]
* Gen. 7. 11.

so that when the builders called for brick, they brought them mortar; and when they called for mortar, they brought them brick or something else. For this last the Event confutes, in that the Confusion of tongues does not consist in using the same words diversly, but in using diverse words. And the former cannot be true, for then should God have [\ made*] mankind mute; the contrary whereto may be gathered out of God's own words where he saith, \ Let us go down and confound their language, that they may not understand one another's speech*: he does not say, that they might not speak at all. It must needs be then that God himself inspired them with diverse tongues, else how could their tongues have been ordered according to their families and according to their nations? So that the tongues of the same generation, though diverse, yet have a greater cognation amongst themselves than with the tongues of another off-spring: As for Example, The languages of sem in the East agree more one with another than with the tongues of ʔaphet in the West.

But because that some out of this Chapter would pick out the certain number of Languages, let us a little also consider of this. The number of Languages cannot be fewer than there were Nations, nor more than there were Families. If there were no more than there were Nations or Heads of Nations, then the number is easily counted; seven in ʔaphet, four in Cham, and five in sem. But if they were as many as were Families at the Confusion, their number cannot be known, because Moses does not make a recension of all the Families or Heads of families.

The common Opinion hath been, That their number was according to the number of Families; and this Moses seems to insinuate, because he joyns throughout this Chapter Families and Tongues together. But this is denied by Junius, because the Families of Canaan the first-born of Cham spake all one language at that time when the Jews cast them out. But this Reason compels not, because the Canaanites at that time spake a perfect Hebrew, as Joseph Scaliger affirms. Nay \ Plantus* brings in a Carthaginian speaking almost pure Hebrew: but the Carthaginians were of Tyre, and of the off-spring of Canaan. But without doubt the Canaanites spake not Hebrew from the beginning, this language being left only to Arphaxad the eldest son of sem, of whom came Eber, Abram and the Jews. It must needs then be brought in by some Nimrodian conquest; for the off-spring of Cham seemed to envy God's favour to Arphaxad, even as Cain envied Abel, and therefore Nimrod of the house of Cush made himself Lord of Mesopotamia, which was the lot of Arphaxad, and (as should seem) endeavoured to make this language common to others through a spight he had to the House of Arphaxad. And hence it came to pass that all those nations where Nimrod ruled spake Hebrew, or a dialect of the Hebrew, as the Assyrians, the Syrians or Aramites, the Canaanites, the Arabians and the Ethiopians. But I doubt I have waded too far in this Argument, and therefore here I'll end.

* in his Pannus, Act. 5.
Sc. 1. See Mr. Selden in his De diis Syris Prolegom. c. 2. & Petrus in lib. 2. Miscellan. c. 2. who more fully explains that passage in Plautus.

DISCOURSE L.

GENESIS 10. 5.

By these were the Isles of the Gentiles divided in their lands, &c.

WHAT was the sum and sense of these words we shewed heretofore, namely, That they contain a Chorographical Description of the dwellings of the Sons of ʔaphet after that great dispersion from the Tower of Babel, together with the manner according to which they were seated in their several habitations. From whence we picked Five Rules to be as Guides and Lights unto us in finding out their several Countries.

1. That we must seek them in the Islands of the Gentiles, that is, in Countries divided by Sea from Egypt and Palestine.

2. We

2. We must seek them all within some reasonable compais of the Earth, and not all the world over: Because that when this Division was made, the number of Mankind was very small; as we proved by weighing Sem's generations unto the days of Peleg, at whose birth it is said that the Earth was divided. Gen. 10. 25.

3. Those Nations whose Families are named by Moses are to be sought for in places most accessible and neighbouring to the Jews. For this I proved to be the reason why Moses did name their Families or Heads of Families, because the Jews were to have most dealing and commerce with them, by reason of their nearness and easiness of coming at them.

4. Where we find the Nation, there also we must look for the Families of that Nation.

5. Where we find any of the Families, there we must also look for the rest and for the whole Nation. This is very expressly contained in my Text: By these were divided the Isles of the Gentiles in their lands, every one after his tongue, after their families, in their nations. That other, which is the Third in order, I confirmed by the like in the Genealogies of Sem and Cham, in both which the Fathers of Nations neighbouring upon the Jews are reckoned up particularly, the other but generally.

These Rules then I will take for sure Grounds, and use them as a Land-compass in the discovery I now intend. But before I begin, I will add Five more, of less weight than the former, yet such as I hope will afford the like use that Cyphers have among Numbers, I mean, being joyned with the former will help us to a greater certainty.

The First then of these weaker Helps is from the use of the Prophets in naming two or more of these Nations together; which is a likely argument that they were seated both together, and were neighbouring one to the other. As we see of Meshech and Tubal, which commonly go together clean through the Prophets. And this Help Junius seems to have used.

The Second Help is the fulfilling of Prophecies by Nations foretold under the Names of their Founders, the Sons of Japhet. And Thirdly, Because it is likely that in this Division there was a regard had by the wise Fathers for their future Colonies, we are to think that they ordered their partition so, that when they were to vent their Numbers and send forth new Colonies, they should not be forced to encroach on one anothers inheritance, or one to pass through the lot of another, but that they had either the Sea or empty land every one upon some of his borders. And this he that will mark shall see observed in the Original dwellings of the Sons of Sem, which are better known and more agreed upon than those of Japhet.

The Fourth Help shall be the Testimony of the Ancients, especially of the Jews themselves.

The Fifth and last are the Remainders of ancient Names, which is the ordinary Help that every one follows. And thus we have encreased our Criteria to the number of Ten. Now that which shall be found agreeable to all or the greater part of these, if it will not be approved for Truth, I am sure there is no other means left to warrant a more likely conjecture or a greater certainty.

Let us come then to the Practice of our Rules: and First let us seek them in the Isles of the Gentiles, that is, (as I proved heretofore) in Countries divided by Sea from Palæstine and Egypt; especially from Egypt, because when Moses wrote this Book he was not yet come into Palæstine, and therefore used only such Names as the Jews were acquainted with in the land of Goshen. The Isles then of the Gentiles are all regions from the mountain Amanus and the Hircane Sea Westward.

Secondly, We must lay out some reasonable portion of the Earth to seek them in; and that we will define after this manner. 1. Our Eastern border shall be the land of Aram, that is Syria and Armenia the great, which was so called of Aram the Son of Sem: or, to speak more plainly, our Eastern border shall be from the mountain Amanus by the springs of Euphrates up to the West part of the Hircane Sea. 2. Our southern border is without all doubt the Mediterranean Sea. 3. The Western border compasseth by the Ionian Sea and back of Macedonia up unto the confines of Illyricum. 4. The North border is the river Danubius, the North part of Pontus Euxinus to the Caspian Sea.

Our Eastern border is confirmed by Moses in this Chapter, where he saith; That the posterity of Sem dwelled from Mesha Eastward. This Mesha is the mountain Mafius which is part of the mountain Amanus; and this was the Western limit of Sem's posterity, and therefore must needs be the East border of Japhet. Again in the 2 of Judith, 25. we read that Olofernes took the borders of the upper Cilicia, and came even to the borders of Japhet which are toward the South over against Arabia, that is, he came to the South-East borders of Japhet in the lower Cilicia where is this mountain Amanus we speak of. Thirdly, Josephus and the rest of the Ancients do all affirm thus much. And lastly, if we should go any further toward the East, it could no longer be called the Isles of the Gentiles in regard either of Egypt or Palestine.

Gen. 10. 5.

Our southern border needs no proof at all.

Our Western border stands upon two Reasons. 1. It is not like that they went beyond them, because there is a great Sea between them and the next land. Now 2. that they went so far, we prove from the Seat of Tiras, whom all agree to be the Father of the Thracians, which are in the North-west part of this our plot, and so point out both how far they went toward the West and up into the North.

The rest of our Northern border, as also our whole plot, may be confirmed by comparison with the Original portion of the Sons of Sem, to which it hath almost a just and equal scantling. For the farthest of the Semites toward the East is Elam the father of the Persians; now Persia lies as far from Amanus and Masius into the East as Macedonia and the Confines of Illyricum lie into the West. The breadth between North and South is from the Caspian Sea unto Phœnicia or to the Persian gulf, which is also proportionable to ours. So that within this compass we hope to find the ancient and first Seats of all the Sons of Japhet, who are seven in number, named in the second Verse of this Chapter, Gomer, Magog, Madai, Javan, Tubal, Meshech and Tiras. And to these we must divide our plot into seven portions as equal as we can guess; for it is not like there was any great difference of quantity.

And here we must observe our Third Rule, To place those whose Sons are named by Moses in places accessible and neighbouring to the Jews. Now Moses names the Sons only of two of these seven, viz. of Gomer and Javan. The Sons of Gomer are Askenaz, Riphat and Togarmah: And the Sons of Javan are four, Elishah, Tarshish, Cittim and Dodanim. The places accessible and fit for the Jews commerce are those that lie upon the Mediterranean and the Ægean Seas, of the coasts of Asia.

Now in which of these we should seek for the Seats of the Sons of JAVAN, is a matter of no great difficulty; because there is nothing more certain than that Javan was the Father of the Grecians, whose Countries lie along upon the Mediterranean Sea. And because we must there seek the whole Nation where we find any of the Families, and we know that the house of Tarshish dwelt in Cilicia; we may be assured that all the Countries lying upon the Sea belong unto the lot of Japhet, even from the Issicus sinus unto the end of Epirus, which was part of our Western border. This portion then we must divide into four parts, much of a scantling, for the four Sons of Javan.

The First part contains all Cilicia, and this was the dwelling of Tarshish; witness the City Tarsus, where S. Paul was born, which in Hebrew is called Tarshish, and it is that which Jonas was bound for when he fled from the face of the Lord: witness likewise the often naming of Tarshish in all Prophecies concerning Tyre, to whom it was a near neighbour: witness also the whole Sea upon that coast called Tarshish, because the Sons of Tarshish were Lords of that Sea. For Lucan and others report the Cilicians were great pirats, and domineer'd in all the Sea near them, whom afterward Pompey subdued and brought to better order; so that of that Victory * he saith,

Itque Cilix justâ jam non pirata carinâ.

* Antiq. l. c. 7.

* Pass ye over to Tarshish E-say 23. 6. where the LXX. is

Karphish, to Carthage.

Ezech. 27. 12.

for Tarshish the

LXX. have

Karphish, the Carthaginians.

* The Seat and portion of Cittim.

Lastly, for thus placing of Tarshish we have the consent of * Josephus and other ancients. As for the Septuagint, who often translate Tarshish the * Carthaginians, they keep never a one of our Ten Rules, and therefore we must needs reject them; especially if they mean of the original Seat of Tarshish. But as for their Colonies, we will see afterwards.

* The Second portion contains Caria, Lycia and part of Pamphilia; and this fell to Cittim or to the Citteans; for it is a name of the plural number, and so a name of a People; the singular would be Ceth or Citti, who is like to have been their founder. Reasons for placing the Citteans here are, 1. from Cetis a country in this tract spoken of by Ptolemy: 2. a people called Cetii by Homer in Odyss. d. who thinks they were so called of a river Cetius in the same quarter: 3. because there can be no other place assigned them in all the portion of Javan, as we shall see: and lastly, because their often naming in the Scripture argues they were not far from Palastine.

of

Gen. 10. 5.

The Third part of this division contains Achaia and part of Peloponnesus; and this was the lot of Elishab. Witness a great part of this tract called Ellas, the river Elissus or Ilissus, the Elysi campi, Eleusis a city near to Attica, wherein was worshipped the Goddess Ceres, and hereof named Ceres Eleusina; witness likewise Elissus a city of Arcadia, Elis a city in Peloponnesus, and Æoles a colony of Achaia; all of them to named of Elishab: and to this in some agrees Josephus and the other ancients, though some of them restrain our Elishab to the Æoles, who it is certain were but a colony from Achaia.

The Seat and portion of Elishab.

There remains the Fourth portion for the Fourth son of Javan, which contains all Epirus and part of Peloponnesus; and here we must place the Dodanim or the Dodanites. For this also is a name of the plural number. Now to place this people here, we have two special Reasons. 1. Because they are never spoken of after in any place of the Bible; whereby it seems they dwelt far off from Palastine and out of the Jews walk and knowledg: now the other Three are all spoken of, Tarshish and Cittim very often, because they were very near; Elishab but once in * Ezekiel, because he was farther off; but Dodanim never, because he was little known and farthest off. So that the common [* opinion] which places him in Rhodes, incurs many unlikelihoods. For Rhodes is an Island, whereas it is certain the Main was inhabited before the Islands. Again, Rhodes is a very small Isle, nothing answerable to the portions of the rest. And lastly, Rhodes is near and obvious to Judea, and yet this people we never here once named among the Prophets. But the occasion of this Error grew from the changing of Daleth for Resh in the first Book of Chronicles, where is read Rodanim, ch. 1. 7. as also for our Ripbath there is read Dipbath in v. 6. which out of doubt was the Scribe's fault at the first, and never after amended. The other Reason for placing this people here is the Remainder of the very name in a City called Dodona, and the famous Oracle of Jupiter Dodonæus, who was no other but this Fourth son of Javan who was the Saturn of the Græcians, and all his sons the Joves of their several families.

The Seat and portion of Dodanim.

* Ch. 27. 7.

[* This or the like word was wanting in the MS.

This was the Inheritance of Javan, whom his sons the Græcians for his wisdom and providence called Prometheus, who (as * Hesiod saies) was — εὖς πᾶσι λαπέτοιο, * in his Egy. Ἰαπέτου καλὸν υἱόν.

* in his Egy. Ἰαπέτου καλὸν υἱόν.

THE other whose sons are named by Moses, is Gomer; and to him therefore we must allot the next Regions, most accessible and fit to have commerce and traffick with Palastine. And these will be those parts of Asia which lie upon the Ægean Sea and Hellefpont Northward. And this agrees well with Ezekiel, who terms Gomer and Togarmah inhabitants of the sides of the North יִרְכָתִי צָפוֹן. And it is manifest that the Jews called the lesser Asia the North, and the Kings thereof in * Daniel the Kings of the North. We may therefore assign to these Gomerians all the North-East part of this Asia, containing Phrygia, Pontus, Bithynia, and a great part of Galatia; and this will be a portion answerable to that of Javan. And this Josephus will not deny us, who affirms the Galatians to have been called Gomeræi; and Herodotus will tell us that a people called Cimmerii dwelt in this tract, who sent a Colony to Palus Meotis, and gave name to Cimmerius Bosphorus. And * Pliny speaks of a town in Tross, a part of Phrygia, called Cimmeris. Which all have their name from this Gomer.

Ch. 38. 6.

* Chap. 11.

Lib. 4.

* Lib. 5. c. 30.

This tract then we must divide into three parts between the Three sons of Gomer, viz. Askenaz, Ripbath and Togarmah.

The First shall be Phrygia major and some part of Galatia; which, following the opinion of Josephus and others, we assign to Togarmah, of whom the Phrygians (saith Josephus) were called Tygrammenes. As for the opinion of Junius, who places Togarmah in Armenia minor, because of their Kings called Tygranes, and their Cities Tygranokartæ; this cannot stand, because Armenia minor is too far out of our tract, and therefore he breaks our Fourth Rule, in placing the Son of Gomer out of the lot of Gomer, and rending him from the house of his father. And that Togarmah should be the Author of the Turks, is a Jewish toy lately devised. But it pleaseth Jonathan the Chaldee Paraphrast by likeness of the name to turn Thogarmah תְּהַרְמַי Germania; and some go farther, and would have Thogarmah to be quasi Thegarmens or The Germans. But this opinion breaks the most and chiefest of our Rules, and therefore cannot be approved, unless they mean of after-Colonies; of which we will see afterward.

The Seat and portion of Togarmah.

Gen. 10. 3.
The Seat and portion of Afkenaz.

The Second shall be Troas or Phrygia minor, wherein was the renowned City of Troy; and this we allot to Askenaz, because of the river Ascanius, and part of the tract called Ascania, and the name Ascanius used in those parts: witness Homer in his 2. Iliad.

Φόρυκος αὐ Φρύγας ἦγε, καὶ Ἀσκανίος Διοειδὴς
τῆλ' ἐξ Ἀσκανίης, that is, Phorcys led the Phrygians, and divine Ascanius who came from Ascania. And it is as like the Greeks should turn Askenaz to Ἀσκανίος, as Coresh to Κόρης and Darjaves to Δαρειός: so that for the termination [ος] no man need doubt. Josephus would have Askenaz to be father to a people called Phrygians or Rheginenses, who were inhabitants of a City called Rhegium on the Sea-coasts of Italy over against Sicilia: but this is too far out of our walk, and breaks our Fourth Rule amain, by rending Askenaz quite from the house of his father, and placing him so far from his brethren: and it is against Josephus his own testimony, who saith that the Gomerai were inhabitants of Asia, and I am sure Gomer could be founder of no Nations but those his Sons were fathers of. But if I might be bold with Josephus, I would for Phrygians read Phrygiens, and understand the Rhetii or Rhetians a German people; and so he should agree with the opinion of the modern Jews, who call the * Germans Askenazim from Askenaz: but this must be understood of some ensuing Colonies, not of this Original Seat.

* Vid. Eliam in Tishbi in fine
litera N. &
Aben Ezr. in Obad.
The Seat and portion of Riphath.
* Plin. l. 6. c. 7.
Solim. c. 27.

The third and last portion is Pontus and Bithynia, which remains for the Third Son, Riphath: witness Josephus, who affirms that the Paphlagonians who dwelt in these parts were called Riphathai; and the Histories of * Heathen men place here their Riphai and Arimphai; and Junius thinks that the Amazones who were called Aeorpatæ were a Colony from these quarters; and besides there is a river in these parts called Parthenius, corruptly as it should seem for Riphathenius. And this portion lies only open to the Euxine Sea, in ancient time called Pontus Ἀξειός, because it was unfrequented by the Greek Nations: which opportunely shews the reason why of those Three only Riphath is never spoken of afterward, because it lay out of the walk either of Jews, Tyrians, or Egyptians. And thus much for Gomer.

* Chap. 38.
Ver. 15.
Ver. 2, 3.

THAT which remains of Asia we must divide between Meshech, Tubal and Magog: For it is certain out of * Ezekiel that Magog was seated in the North, because it is said that Gog of the land of Magog shall come out of his Northern quarters; and out of the same Chapter we gather that Tubal and Meshech were his neighbours, in that he is called chief Prince of Meshech and Tubal; and these two Meshech and Tubal are both here and elsewhere always joyned together.

The Seat and portion of Meshech or Mesoch, so the LXX.
* Antiq. l. 1. c. 7.
* Contra Sethi-
anos, hæc. 39.
* Nat. Hist.
lib. 6. cap. 4.
* Lib. 2.
* Vide etiam Clavem &
Comment. A-pocalyp. cap. 9
vers. 16.
* The Seat and portion of Thubal.
* Il. 6<sup>o</sup>.

To Meshech therefore, following the received opinion, we allot Cappadocia, the inhabitants whereof were once called Meschini, Moschi, Mossyni and Mosynæci; witness * Josephus, * Epiphanius, * Pliny and * Carmen Argonauticum. Also the chief City of Cappadocia was called Mazaca even to Tiberius his time, who called it Cæsarea, and it was afterward the Episcopal See of the learned Basilius Magnus.

* Now for Thubal, because he is neighbour to Meshech, we must allot that which lies on the South-East of the Euxine Sea, which contained the people Albani, Chalybes, and Iberi, who (Josephus saith) were anciently called Thebeli; and Ptolemy places here a City called Thabilaca. And some think that Chalybes is a name corrupted from Thabyles, by losing the first letter, and after supplying χ in stead thereof: for in Homer's time they were called Ἀλυεῖς, when he saith that the Halizones came * Τηλόθεν ἐξ Ἀλυβης, ὅθεν ἀργύρου ἐστὶ γενέθλης, from Alybe, where are mines of silver: and from this Alybe I suppose came the name Albania. And all this is agreeable to the opinion of most Writers, but that some having mistaken the name Iberi in Josephus, will have the Spaniards to be of Thubal: but we can yield them no more than this, that perhaps the Spanish Iberi were a Colony of the Iberians of Asia. And so we come to Magog;

The Seat and portion of Magog.
* Nat. Hist. l. 5.
c. 23. Cæle Syria
habet Bamy-cen, quæ alio nomine Hiera-
polis vocatur, Syriacè Ma-
gog.

Whom with the consent of all men we place North of Thubal, and make him the father of those Scythians that dwelt on the East and North-East of the Euxine Sea: and besides we have this argument from the report of * Pliny, in that Scythopolis and Hierapolis, which these Scythians took when they overcame Syria, were ever after by the Syrians called Magog. And hence we may soon learn who is that tyrant Gog whereof Ezekiel prophesied, namely the Scythian Ottoman of the East, who at this day usurps a great part of Israel, of our Israel of the Gentiles. This is that

Gog

Gog of the land of Magog, chief Prince of Meshech and Thubal. As for the name Gog, it signifies the very same with Magog, for Mem is but an Hemantick letter; and it pleased the Spirit of God to take away this first syllable, to distinguish between the people and the land of the people, calling the people Gog, and the land the land of Magog. And it is to be marked that he doth not call this Gog Prince of Magog, but rather Gog of the land of Magog (for so גֹּג הַמָּגוֹג may be turned) and chief Prince of Meshech and Thubal. For those who have done us all this evil were no Princes in the land of Magog, but mere Vagabonds and mercenaries, whom their Country spewed out because they could not live at home. And yet these Savages at the first coming out made themselves Lords of Meshech and Thubal, of Cappadocia and Iberia: and here they contained themselves long before they attempted the conquest of the rest of Asia; witness those who write the History of their beginning. I would to God we might live to see that joyful time which the same Ezekiel speaketh of, when the Lord shall make him fall upon the mountains of Israel, and smite the bow out of his left hand, and cause his arrows to fall out of his right hand: when he shall send a fire upon Magog, and among them that dwell carelessly in the Isles; that they might know that he is the Lord our God, even the Holy one of Israel.

There remain yet of the sons of Japhet, Madai and Tiras, and of the plot we first laid out, Thracia and Macedonia. If then the Thracians be of Tyras (as it is * agreed they are, both because the name Thrax is little changed, and because they worshipped one * Odrysus, who was no other than this Tiras) then it must needs follow that Macedonia is left for Madai, or else we must leave it empty, because we can assign it to none of the rest without great inequality of portions, nor yet find any other place for Madai.

Let therefore Macedonia be the lot of Madai; witness the ancient name Æmathia, as Lucan sings, Bella per Æmathios plus quam civilia campos.

If any man question how Æ came in, I could ask him likewise how Eu came into Euphrates, which the Hebrews and those of Mesopotamia call Perath; or how Æ into Egyptus, which themselves and their neighbours the Arabians call Cuphti; or how Æ into Ethiopia, which some think to be so called of Theops or Theophi. It may be that of the Hebrew מִן signifying regio the Greeks formed their αἰα terra, and so Aimagia is as much as αἰα Madai, the land of Madai; and Egyptus αἰα Cuphti, the land of Cuphti; and Ethiopia αἰα Theophi, the land of Theophi. But howsoever it be, it is no unusual thing in the changing of a name out of one [* language] into another, to prefix a Vowel or Diphthong. But besides this name Æmathia, we read of a people in this tract called Μῆδοι, or (as some will) Μαῖδοι. Aristotle in his Book * of Strange reports speaks of χωρὶς Μῆδων in the borders of Pæonia; and hereabouts was that præfectura Medica we hear of in the Roman stories. Lastly, Isocrates in one of his Orations names one Μῆδος for King of these quarters, before (as he saith) they come to be a Greek nation.

It is the common opinion, I confess, that Madai was the Father of the Medes in Asia: but this I think will scarcely agree with Moses, to remove Madai so far from the rest of his brethren, and how can that be any part of the Isles of the Gentiles, which lies beyond Armenia the great and part of Assyria? Or what should any of the sons of Japhet do among the sons of Sem? Indeed Josephus saith that Madai was progenitor of that people which the Greeks called Μαδαῖοι but I am sure they called the Medes of Asia Μῆδοι. And what though the Hebrews called them * Madai? this proves no more that there was the Original seat of Madai the son of Japhet, than that Tarshish, whither Solomon's ships went once in three years to fetch gold and silver, was the first dwelling of Tarshish the son of Javan. It may be their names were occasioned by these, either through Colonies, (which is the more unlikely,) or by the affinity of name, which the Jews corrupted to a name they were best acquainted with; which is an usual dealing of Nations of a diverse language with the names of their neighbours.

Thus then at length we have found the first Seats of the Sons of Japhet, agreeable to the Rules we first laid down; and their Portions also are so laid out, that every one hath some part of his borders lying open to the Sea or toward empty land, that so they might vent their Colonies without disturbing their brethren.

Gen. 10. 5.

Ezek. 38. 2.

Ch. 39. 3. 4. 6. 7.

The Seat and portion of Tiras. * Vid. Epiphim. advert. Hærel. l. 1. Hieronym. in Trad. Hebr. Tiras Tiras, quorum nomen in Æmathia est vocatum. * Epiphim. l. 1.

[* This or the like word was wanting in the Ms.] * Vid. Supra. cliv. dicitur quod.

Gen. 10. 5.
The Colonies
of Tarshish.

NOW let us say something of their Colonies. And we'll begin with Tarshish, who lies open only to the Mediterranean Sea, and therefore is like to have sent his first Colonies that way; but whither it is hard to say: but, if I may guess, it is likely unto the first land Westward he found unpeopled, and that may be the South part of Italy, where dwelt the Etrusci, a name coming something near to Etarshishi. But howsoever it is certain that the Hetrurians came from Asia the less, and that they were a Greek Nation, and spake the Greek language. There is a Spaniard that hath lately written a Description of Old Spain, and will have Tarshish, whither Solomon's ships went with the Ships of Hiram king of Tyre, to be Tartessus in the South of Spain near to Hercules Pillars; and indeed Aristotle in his Strange reports saies that when the Phenicians came first thither, they found so much Silver, that they were not able to carry it away, but were fain to make their Anchors and their Ship-furniture all of Silver. But if this Tartessus be that Tarshish, it seems the Phenicians so called it, because it lay unto Carthage their new Tyre as old Tarshish in Cilicia lay to old Tyre, that is North-westward: or else they called it Tarshish, because they went to it by the Sea of Tarshish. The Septuagint, who often turn Tarshish the Carthaginians, seem to allude to the name, as though Carthago were Cartarshish a City of Tarshish: but Carthage was no Colony of Cilicia, but of Phœnicia.

Urbs antiqua fuit, Tyrii tenuere coloni, Carthago

But it should seem of all these or some of these the whole Mediterranean Sea was called Tarshish, for the Chaldee Paraphrast almost always turns Tarshish נָמַלְ, that is, the Sea; whom Tremellius follows.

The Colonies
of Cittim.

* Chap. 11. 30.
For the ships come against him צִיִּים
כִּתִּיִּים ships of Cittim, or perhaps, ships from Cittim צִיִּי מִכִּתִּיִּים
as in Hol. 14. 3.
פָּרִים

שָׁפְתֵינוּ
the Lxx.
(whom the A-postle follows) seem to have read פָּרִי
מִשְׁפָּתֵינוּ
the fruit of our lips.

The Citteans lie open both to the Ægean and to the Mediterranean Seas, and therefore might send Colonies both ways. And first it is likely that they peopled Crete and the Isles at the mouth of the Ægean Sea. But because the Prophecy of * Daniel, concerning the ships of Chittim that should come against Antiochus magnus, was fulfilled by the Romans; we must grant Italy also a Colony of our Citteans, which seem to be the East part thereof which lies toward Syria, and was anciently called Magna Græcia: and yet I suppose that these Cittei went as high as Tyber unto the borders of their brethren the Hetrusci, and were those which were called Aborigines and Latini; and that part called Magna Græcia was filled with other Greek Colonies afterward and of more late time, because they spake the same Greek that other Greek nations did; but those Aborigines or Latini spake the ancient Ionian tongue, as Varro affirmeth: and it should seem besides that they were a Colony of the ancient Ionians or Greeks because they kept their Father Javan's name amongst them, calling him Janus, whom the other Grecians seem to have by some mischance forgotten: even as the ancient Germans once worshipped Terra mater, as Tacitus saies, called Erthus, and yet now they have no such name in all their language; whereas we, one of their Colonies, have still the name Earth. Munster and some others would have Janus to be Noah, with a far-fetcht reason from Vinum, because Noah planted a Vineyard and was drunken with the wine thereof. But this hath no likelihood at all, that the Greek nation alone should worship the Father of all mankind, whereas others remember only the Father of their own nations; as the Thracians Odryses, the Arabians Sabin, Assabius. And that name Janus is so plain for Javanus, that I wonder how they could miss it: And it may be that same Oenotrius, of whom Italy was called Oenotria; for both signify Vinosus, and besides that Oenotrius was one of the Surnames of Janus. Furthermore, that the Romans were Javanites or Grecians, methinks I could prove out of Rom. 10. 12. where S. Paul speaking particularly to the Romans, saies after this manner, There is no difference between the Jew and the Greek; for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him; where he seems to comprehend the Romans under the Grecians. But if any man will think otherwise, he shall have my leave.

But to return to that we are somewhat digressed from; Junius expounding this * Prophecy of the ships of Chittim, would have the Romans ships called the ships of Cittim, because they came immediately from the coast of Cittim, that is Cilicia, in the havens whereof they used to lie. But Cittim is a name of the plural number, and therefore not the name of a Country, but of a People; how then could the Romans ships be called the ships of the Citteans, unless they had a privilege that whatsoever ships come to their shores should be theirs? And again Cilicia, where the the Roman navy used to lie, was the lot of Tarshish, not of Cittim; for Strabo says the Cetii or Cetians lay West from Cilicia, where we placed them.

Gen. 10. 5.

Another Colony of Cittim Balaam will tell us of in Numb. 24. 24. where he says that ships shall come from the coasts of Chittim, and shall afflict the Assyrians, and shall afflict the Hebrews: which is meant of Alexander King of Macedonia; whereby it seems that the Macedonians were called Μαχέται from the mixture of the sons of Madai and Cittim, as it were Μαδικοῦνται or Ματιχάται, and after Μακκάται, even as for κατακαίοντες & κατκαίοντες. we say κατκαίοντες, and for κατάβαλλον & καῖβαλλον. and so Macedonia is called from Μακχέτιαν or Μαχέτιδαν, that is, Maccetims, for an, en & in are terminations plural in diverse languages. And that ye may fully believe that a Colony of Cittim went into Macedonia, ye shall read in 1 Maccab. 8. 5. Perses king of Macedonia expressly called King of Cittim; which reading Junius would fain change, if he had any authority, to make his opinion good, that those ships also are called ships from the coasts of Cittim, because they came out of the havens of Cilicia. And thus much of the Colonies of the Citteans.

Macedones olim dicti Macedonia; Gellius lib. 9. cap. 3. Enstathius in Dionysium. Hsch. Μαχέται, ἢ Μακδονία.

Now to speak a word or two of the Colonies of the rest. Of the off-spring of Gomer, who were of him called Cimmerii, and had a City in their lot called Cimmeris of these Cimmerians or Gomerians, Thogarmah lies only open by the Aegean Sea to the Mediterranean, and therefore sent his ancient Colonies that way, and gave original to the old Gauls whom the Grecians called Γαλάται, and contractly Κέλται for Καλιταί Cimbri: and of these Gauls proves Cambden came our ancient Britans, who yet retain the name of their Grandfire Gomer, and call themselves Cumrah.

The Colonies of Thogarmah.

Askenaz, another family of these Cimmerians, lies open to the North-west, and therefore sent his Colonies that way, and gave name to Cimmerius Bosphorus; and going along by Danubius, gave beginning to the Germans, whom Diodorus Siculus affirms to have their Original from the Cimmerians; and the Jews to this day call them Askenazim of Askenaz; and themselves retain the name of their Grandfire Gomer both in Cimbri, and calling themselves Germen, that is Gomerians: as the Syrians call the Arameans Armin, of which the Greeks form their Armenia; so of Gemren or Germen the Latines formed Germania; for en is a German plural, and it is no harder thing to form of Gomer Gemren, than of Brother Brethren; for we English are the Germans brethren, and therefore also the sons of Askenaz.

The Colonies of Askenaz.

Riphat lies only open to the Euxine Sea Northward, and West to Askenaz, and therefore sent his Colonies something Westward, but North of Askenaz; and so he gave beginning first to those Riphei above the Euxine Sea, and after to the Rutheni and Prutheni, both which sound of Riphat; for Pruthen is that but contractly for Riphaten, that is, Riphatheans; for en (as I said) is a termination plural. We call them Prussians and Russians, and their language is the Polonian tongue or a dialect thereof, not the Askenazim or Dutch.

The Colonies of Riphat.

Meshech also lies only open Northward, and therefore sent his Colonies beyond Palus Maotis, who are of him called Muskovians.

The Colonies of Meshech.

Tubal lies on the North-west of the Euxine Sea, and therefore sent his ancient Colonies by it; but whither it is hard to say, but it is like Northward upon the East of the Muskovite.

Magog lies open to the North, and hath scope enough, and might go, if he would, and Magog. he and Tubal both, even as high as Nova Zembla.

There remain Tiras and our Japhetian Madai: and Madai lies open both to the Adriatick Sea and to the confines of Illyricum and Mæsia; but it is not like he went by Sea so long as he might by land, and therefore I think he gave beginning to the Illyrians and to the Mæsiens, for so Pliny calls them, which methinks comes near to Mathians; for θ and σ are changeable one for the other, as we see in Rutheni and Prutheni, whom we call Russians and Prussians, and Russia and Prussia for Ruthia and Pruthia.

The Colonies of Madai.

Tiras lies open both to the North and the West; but I think he went no further Northward than a River on the edge of Russia, which of him is called Tyras: his other Colonies went more Westward, and gave beginning to the Dacians, and Getae, and their off-spring.

The Colonies of Tiras.

And thus we have seen the First Seats of the Off-spring of Japhet, and also whither they have been since scattered over the face of this Western world. And now we have occasion to consider the Blessing of Japhet, * That God would enlarge him into the tents of Sem, and that || Cham should be his servant: For there hath never yet been a son of Cham that hath shaken a sceptre over the head of Japhet. Sem hath subdued Japhet, and Japhet subdued Sem; but Cham never subdued either. And this Fate was * Gen. 9. 27. || Cham was the father of Canaan, and the father of Canaan some times put Cham; both of them being faulty towards Noah.

it

Gen. 10.5.

* That the Carthaginians were originally of the Stock or off-spring of Canaan (the son of Cham, whose posterity possessed all Africa, besides some part of Asia,) is generally agreed; and S. Austin, (one of that country) in his Comment upon the Ep. to the Romans, relates, that when any of the people about Hippo or Carthage were asked What they were; they would answer in their Punick language, Cbanani, that is, (saith he) Chanani, Canaanites.

it that made Hannibal, a child of * Canaan, cry out with the amazement of his soul, Agnosco fatum Carthaginis. (See Livy in l. 27. in fine.) The Saracens indeed once spoiled us, but they were no Chamites, but Arabians of the seed of Ishmael; and yet because a great number of their kind were after of the Moors and Chamish Arabians, we see they were in a moment shaken off by Japhet, and made to keep themselves within their African limits.

And we may see likewise how God hath enlarged Japhet into the tents of Sem, and how he that was once the God of Sem is now the Blessed God of Japhet: For almost only the Off-spring of Japhet, yea and all the Off-spring of Japhet, are at this day Christians, only Magog except; whom he seems to have reserved, as he did some of the Canaanites in the land of Israel, to prove and punish us withal. But let us desire him That he would at length deliver us from this Belial, and that he would daily enlarge us more and more into the tents of Sem, that he would remember the Blessing, and never forget his Promises so often made to the Isles of the Gentiles. Hear, O Lord, the groanings of those who are in bondage, and let their cry come up unto thy Holy Seat. Why should the Heathen any longer rage, and gather themselves together against thy Christ? How long, Lord, how long wilt thou be angry with them for ever? It is enough, Lord, it is enough; Arise and send them an Ezra, send them now an Helper, and make thine Holy Name known in the midst of thy people.

DISCOURSE LI.

PSALM 50. 14.

Offer unto God praise, and pay thy Vows unto the most High.

THE Book of Psalms is a Book of Prophecies; witness the frequent citing of them by our Lord and his Apostles; witness the Surname of King David, who being the penman of no other but this Book is styled the * Prophet David. I say the Psalms are Prophecies, and that both concerning Christ himself, and also the Church which should be after him. Concerning Christ himself it needs must be; Saith he in the Gospel, (Luke 24. 24.) These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, That all things must be fulfilled which were written of me in the Law of Moses, and in the Prophets, and in the PSALMS: and more especially concerning his Beginning, * S. Paul quotes the words of the Psalm speaking in the Person of God, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee; and again concerning his Office, * Thou art a Priest for ever, after the order of Melchisedek. Now for the Church of the Gospel and calling of the Gentiles, as many parts of many Psalms do foretel thereof, so is this whole Psalm a description of the same; 1. What manner of one it should be; 2. What worship God would establish therein. For the first, it should be Catholick and gathered out of all Nations, The God of Gods (saith the beginning of the Psalm v. 1, 2.) even the Lord hath spoken, and called the Earth from the rising of the sun to the going down thereof. Out of Sion, the perfection of beauty, hath God shined: Agreeable to the words of the * Gospel it self, That it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day; And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his Name among all Nations, beginning at Jerusalem: and that it did begin at Jerusalem where Christ himself began, where the Holy Ghost came down in cloven tongues: So out of Sion God shined, our God came and kept not silence; for a fire came before him, and a tempest moved round about him.

Now for the Worship and service which Christ would establish in his new reformed Church,

* Acts 2. 30.

* Acts 13. 33.
Psal. 2. 7.
* Heb 5. 6.
Psal. 110. 4.

* Luke 24.
46. 47.

Church, it concerns either the First or the Second Table. For the First Table, it tells us What Offerings God would abolish, namely, all Typical Offerings or all the Offerings of fire; and then What Offerings he would accept, to wit, the Offerings of Praise and Prayer; Offer unto God Praise, and pay thy Vows unto the most High. For the Second Table, it commands a right and upright conversation, from the 16. verse unto the last; and the last is the Summe or a brief summary of both Tables, He that offereth Praise, shall glorifie me; and to him that disposeth his way aright, will I shew the Salvation of the Lord.

Phil. 50. 14.

But to return again to the reformation of the First Table, whereof my Text is the Affirmative part: where (as I said) we are told both What Offerings God will not have offered, and What Offerings he requireth. He will no longer have any Typical Offerings, any Offerings of fire, or bloody Sacrifices: For * I will not (saith he) reprove thee for thy Sacrifices or thy burnt-offerings; I will take no bullock out of thine house, nor goats out of thy folds; For all the beasts of the forrests are mine, and the beasts on a thousand hills. If I were hungry, I would not tell thee; for the world is mine and all that therein is. Will I eat the flesh of bulls, or drink the blood of goats? Nevertheless he still requireth Offerings of Thanksgiving, and a Present when we come to pray unto him: so saith my Text, Offer unto God Praise, &c. And so here is an ἀποσι and a πρόσι, as S. Paul saith in a like case, He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second.

* Verse 8, 9, &c.

Heb. 10. 9.

But as in Typical Speeches it often comes to pass that the things which are spoken are true both in the Type and Antitype; as that in Hosea 11. 1. Out of Egypt have I called my son, was in some sense true both of Christ and Israel; and that in Exod. 12. 46. Thou shalt not break a bone thereof, was true literally both of Christ and the Paschal lamb; and that in Psal. 22. 18. They parted my garments among them, was true figuratively in David, and literally in Christ: Even so it comes to pass in Prophecies, and namely in this, That it so foretells of things to come, that it concerned also the time present; it foretells the estate of the Church in the Gospel, and yet meant something that concerned the present Church of the Law. To which purpose we must frame the sense after this manner, That God even then did not so much regard the Offerings of fire and Expiatory sacrifices as he did the Offerings of Praise and Thanksgiving, because the first were Ceremonial, the other Moral; the first, their End was changeable, the other, everlasting. So that in respect of the Catholick Church the words of my Text are an Antithesis or Apharesis with the former, I will in no sort have any Typical and Bloody Offerings, but only Offerings of Praise and Prayer: But in respect of the Legal Church or the Church of the Law they are a Protimefis or Estimation, I require not so much any Typical offerings, as I do that you should offer unto me Praise, and pay your Vows unto the most High. For so when God saith elsewhere, * I will have mercy and not sacrifice; it is no Antithesis, but a Protimefis, that I had rather have mercy than sacrifice. So again Matth. 6. 19. Lay not up for your selves treasures upon earth, but lay up for your selves treasures in heaven; this is no Antithesis or Apharesis, as though Christ would not have us at all provide for things of this life; but a Protimefis, he would not have us take so much care for this life as for the life to come.

Typical Speeches often true in the Type and Antitype.

Prophecies so foretell things to come in the Church of the Gospel, as that they instruct also the present Church of the Law.

* Matth. 9. 13.

The Scope therefore of my Text is, to shew What kind of Offerings God did chiefly accept under the Law, and doth only require in the Gospel; to wit, two sorts of Offerings, Eucharistical, and Enclical or Votal. Eucharistical Offerings are such whose End is Thanksgiving to God for Benefits received, which are here termed זבחי תורה Offerings of Praise. Enclical I call such as are made to God upon occasion of suit we have unto him, that is, when we come to pray before him, that he might accept our supplications and we find favour in his sight. And this is performed two manner of ways; either by promise if God shall hear us and grant our petition, which is called a Vow; or by actual exhibition at the time we do pray unto him. An example of the first kind is that of Jacob; If the Lord shall be with me and bring me back again, of all I have, the Tenth will I give unto him. The second was much used in the first times of the Christian Church, and of it in the Law we understand chiefly that Commandment, That no man should appear before the Lord empty; that is, Let no man that comes to pray before the Lord appear empty-handed. But because the first was very ordinary among the Jews, my Text by a Trope only names it in stead of the whole kind of Enclical offerings. Pay thy Vows, that is, when in praying before me thou shalt vow a gift to me or mine, if I shall hear thee; or at thy prayer dost exhibit the same before me, that thou mightest find favour in my sight; such Offerings are well pleasing unto me, such Offerings will I accept at thine hands. Offer therefore unto me praise, and pay thy vows unto the most High.

Gen. 28. 22, &c.

Deut. 16. 16.

This

Psal. 50. 14.

This last word [most High] will serve us in stead of a Reason why God should require this kind of service at our hands, Because he is the most High God : Offer unto God an Offering of Thanksgiving, because he is the most High God, that is, the chiefest and highest Cause of all that thou hast received : Offer unto God, when thou hast a suit unto him, because he is the most High God, that is, the Lord of Lords, the highest Lord ; and therefore it doth little beseem thee to appear before him without a present, when thou wouldest do it unto thine earthly Lord, if thou hadst a suit unto him.

Now also the Lord, as he is the most High God, so he ever was and ever shall be the most High ; and therefore this kind of Offering is due unto God naturally and perpetually. Therefore both Jew and Gentile must offer unto God Praise, and make and pay their Vows unto the most High. For these are Offerings made to God for a cause unchangeable, our Subjection and his Greatness ; our receipt of daily benefits and his daily showers of blessings. These therefore even among the Jews and under the Law he did accept without any regard of Type, simply and for themselves ; and these among the Gentiles he only accepts, when all the rest are quite abolished. Those other he rejects, because Christ, who was then to suffer and to be offered, is not now to be offered any more : These he will still accept, because the most High God then is the most High God still and shall be evermore.

HAVING briefly shewn the scope and meaning of these words, and what these Offerings of Praise and Votal offerings are which God did chiefly accept in the Law, and will only admit in the Gospel ; there remain yet in my purpose these things to be treated of.

[The Author in the following part of this Discourse handles the first and second particulars together.]

1. To distinguish this Moral kind of Offerings from the rest in use under the Law, I will take a short Survey of all the Offerings then used.

2. I will give some infallible marks whereby we may know this kind of Offerings from those whose End was to figure and represent things to come.

3. I will bring some Reasons to prove, That the main End of those Offerings I call Eucharistical and Votal was not Ceremonial but Moral.

4. Lastly, I will shew how far and in what sort these Eucharistical and Votal Offerings have been used in the first ages of the Church, specially about the holy Sacrament and at the celebration of the Lord's Supper : and how the blind ignorance of after-times turned them into Expiatory Sacrifices, which were only a real Thanksgiving and a kind of real Praying unto God.

The Legal Offerings were either Simply Holy, as the Terumoth ; or most Holy, as the Corbanim were. * The most Holy offering is called קרבן Corban, or אשה Isheh, that is, an Offering of or by fire.

Why some Offerings are called Simply Holy ; others most Holy.

The Corban or most Holy Offering defined. Levit. 1. 4. and often elsewhere.

* Levit. 10. 17.

To begin therefore with the First. All the Offerings in the Law were either Oblationes sanctæ simply Holy, or sanctæ sanctarum most Holy, or Holy of holies. This division is founded in the Scripture it self, and without this division it is impossible either to bring the multitude of Offerings into method, or to understand the End, Scope and Use of them aright. The Holy Offerings are called תרומות Terumoth, which we translate Heave-offerings ; the Holy of holies or most Holy Offerings are called קרבנים * Corbanim. And the Scripture is so precise in these words, as I dare affirm though one of them be used sixty times, they are never confounded ; but Terumoth is only given to Offerings simply Holy, and Corbanim only to those who were sanctæ sanctarum or Holy of holies.

Now for the reason of this difference of Holy and Holy of holies, it is this. The Heave-offering is called simply Holy, because it was only consecrate to God, and had no other Holiness but this. The Corban is called Holy of holies, because it was not only consecrate to God, as was the other ; but was also a Shadow and Type of Holy things to come : and hence it had a priviledge that whatsoever it should touch, that should be Holy also, as we may see Exod. 29. 37. & chap. 30. 29. Which was a Mystery of that Holy one who by the union of Faith should one day sanctifie us and whatsoever is ours, as it is Heb. 10. verse 10, 14.

The Corban therefore, or the most Holy Offering I define, An Offering of fire, figuring the satisfaction which Christ was one day to perform to God for us. And therefore the faithful Jew was to present this Corban before God, and lay his hand upon it, as it were presenting unto God Christ who was to come, and apprehending him by the hand of Faith. But the Priest alone was to offer it, and to eat up whatsoever remained from the fire, and that * in the Holy place ; that so the Sacrifice it self being turned into the Sacrificer, might foreshew that our great Priest and great Sacrifice should be one and the same ; that is, that Christ should offer himself for us to God his Father, and that he should do it in the Holy City whereon the name of God was called.

Now

Now every Corban or most Holy Offering was of two parts or (if you will) two kinds, זֶבַח and מִנְחָה. Zebach I define a Corban or a most Holy Offering, where by the slaughter and shedding of the blood of Beasts was figured the Expiation of sin to be wrought by the death and passion of Christ to come. For our Expiation could not be wrought but by death and the effusion of blood; and therefore God here made choice of Beasts for Types, because they were capable of death and shedding of blood. This Offering is by a special name called The bloody Sacrifice, and the LXX in Amos 5. 22. turn it * σφαγιασμός, both properly and alluding to the word Zebach: the Latines well call it Hostia and Victima.

Psal. 50. 14.

The Corban was either Zebach, or Mincha.

Zebach defined.

* And in Dan.

9. 27. (and

most commonly) Susia, which properly signifies a

Slaughter Offering, as in the Hebrew, so in the Greek, of ἑὸς Μασίος.

* Mincha defined.

John 8. 46.

* Zebach, as also Mincha, was either

Simple or Diverse. What's meant by a Simple Sacrifice.

Plal. 50. 14.

Of the Offerings which were Simply Holy, viz. Terumoth or Heave-offerings.

The Terumah defined.

The Terumah or Heave-offering was either Definite or Indefinite; and this either Commanded, or Free. The Commanded was either General, or Special. * The Free-will-offering was either more, or less solemn.

1 Cor. 10. 21. Ye cannot drink the Cup of the Lord, and the Cup of Devils; ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's Table, and of the Table of Devils. Out of which place and the Epistle to the Hebrews you may gather all that I have said hitherto of the Use and Ends of the Corbanim or most Holy Offerings. This affinity of the Eucharistical sacrifice with the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper moved the ancient Christians to frame the Office of the Lord's Supper as near as could be unto the Office of the Eucharistical Sacrifice; as might be easily shewn in most particulars.

BUT now will I leave The most holy Offerings, and come to Those which had but a single holiness, which I said before were called Terumoth or Heave-offerings, more seldom הננופות Tenuphoth or Wave-offerings; both from the manner of offering them, which was not by Fire, as in the most Holy, but by holding up or shaking them before the Lord.

A Terumah therefore or Heave-offering I define thus, An Offering made unto God of that we have received, in way of thankfulness or acknowledgement of his dominion over the whole earth; or thus more shortly, An Offering made only unto the praise and honour of God: and therefore it is Levit. 19. 24. קדש הלוים sanctum laudationum, an holy thing of praise, or an offering of praise. And to this purpose are those words of David unto God, 1 Chron. 29. 11, 12, 13, 14. whenas himself and the Princes of Israel had offered an huge Terumah of Gold and Silver for the building of the Temple; Thine, O Lord, (saith he) is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and majesty: for all that is in heaven and in earth is thine. Thine is the Kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as Head above all. Both riches and honour come of thee, and thou reignest over all — Now therefore, our God, we thank and praise (namely, by this Heave-offering) thy glorious Name — For all things come of thee, and of thine own hand we have given thee.

Now the Terumah or Heave-offering was either Definite or Indefinite. A Definite Heave-offering was the Tenth of all increase; and this alone was certain, both in regard of the things to be offered, and the measure according to which they were to be offered. The Indefinite Terumah was either Commanded, or Free. That which was Commanded was either General, as the First-fruits; or Special, as the Heave-offering of the breast and shoulder of the Peace-offerings, and of one loaf of the Meat-offering of the same; and these the Greeks call fitly ἀπαρίσματα and ἀφορίσματα. * The Free-will-offering or voluntary Heave-offering was either more, or less solemn. The most solemn and usual was that which the Hebrews call Terumah-gedola, which indeed was ordinary, but I think no where absolutely commanded. Voluntary Heave-offerings less usual were the Offerings of Gold, Silver, Land, and whatsoever else they might give unto the use of the Lord, his Temple and Ministers.

AND thus have we seen all the Kinds of the Offerings in the Law, both holy and most holy; and I think there is no Offering to be found but it belongs to some of these I have named: either to the Corbanim, the most Holy; or to the Terumoth, which were simply holy.

Concerning this last, which we translate Heave-offerings, there remain two things to be treated of: 1. Their Morality; 2. The practice of this kind by the ancient Church in the Office of the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

Concerning their Morality or Moral condition I will shew three things.

1. That they were not Typical.
2. That they were Offerings Eucharistical and Euctical, that is, addressed or used to Thanksgiving and Prayer, according to the meaning of my Text.
3. That this kind of Offering is required at the hands of Christians.

For the First, That Heave-offerings were not Typical, I argue

1. From their distinction from the rest, as being always simply holy, never holy of holies. The force of this Argument I frame thus; If all the Oblationes ignitæ or Fire-offerings are therefore called sanctæ sanctarum, Holy of holies, because they were not only consecrate to God, but further Signs and Types of holy things to come, and so had a double Holiness, one of Sanctification, another of Signification; then the Heave-offerings, which never are nor ought to be so called, were only simply holy, but no Types of Holy things to come: But the first is true, neither can other reason be given of this distinction: Therefore Heave-offerings were no Types of things to come.

2. My second Reason shall be from the differing usage of Terumoth from the most Holy offerings. For the most Holy Offerings were to be eaten only of Priests by condition, of Males by sex, and in no place but the Holy place; and that because Christ, whose Types they were, was to be a Priest, no ministering Levite; a Male, no Female; and was to offer and make his own Body a Sacrifice for sin in no other part of the

I. That the Terumoth were not Typical, and that their main End was not Ceremonial, but Moral.

the world but the Holy city of Jerusalem: But as for Heave-offerings, not only Priests, but every Levite, Singer and Door-keeper; not only Males, but the Wives and Daughters of the Levites; not only Virgins, but even Widows and divorced women; not only free Israelites, but even their Slaves and Bondmen who were not of the Sons of Israel; and not only in the Holy place, but in every place, they ate them. The truth hereof is certain and obvious through all the Law of Moses, without any one tittle crossing it. I will not trouble you therefore with quotations, but frame my second Reason after this manner; If none may eat of the most Holy Offerings but only Priests, only Males, and only in the Holy place; because only Priests, only Males, and of all places only the Sanctuary or holy place were Types of Christ: then surely those Offerings which every under-Levite ate of, every Levite's wife and daughter, widows and divorced women, every Levite's slave and bondman, and that in every place, those Offerings doubtless cannot be Typical or Signs of Christ or any thing proper to him; unless we affirm That every Levite, Levite's Wife, Daughter, Widow, divorced woman, yea Slaves and Bondmen, and every corner in the Land of Canaan, were Types of Christ.

Psal. 50. 14.

3. To this we may add in the third place, That there is no one word to be found in the whole Scripture concerning the abolishment of Terumah or the Heave-offering: but of the most Holy in express terms it is said Dan. 9. 27. That the Messias יְשׁוּעָה מְלִיכָהּ should cause to cease the Zebach and Mincha, that is, all the Offerings of fire or Holy of holies. And S. Paul, Heb. 9. 9, 10. that θυσιαί and δῶεα Sacrifices and Gifts were ordained μέχρι καιρῶς διορθώσεως until the time of reformation: he saith not so of ἀπαρχαί, which word the LXX. use almost every where for the simply holy Terumah or Heave-offering; whereas by θυσιαί and δῶεα and προσφοραί they translate Corban, Zebach and Mincha, according to * S. Paul's own quotation out of Psalms 40. 6. Θυσίαν οὐ προσφορὰν ἐκ ἡβέλησας, in Hebrew זָבַח וּמִנְחָה לֹא חָפְצָה Zebach and Mincha thou wouldst not, that is, no Offering of fire, no Corban or most Holy; and more specially of the several kinds, A burnt-offering and an offering for sin thou requiredst not.

* Hebr. 10.

4. And hence it is in the fourth place, That God no where rejects the Heave-offering or any one kind thereof; but Zebach and Mincha almost as often as they are named in the Prophets or Psalms: As in this 50. Psalm, ver. 8, 13. I will not reprove thee for thy Zebachim nor thy burnt-offerings: Will I eat the flesh of bulls, or drink the blood of goats? And in Psalms 40. 6. which S. Paul before quoted for the abolishment of Typical Offerings, Zebach and Mincha thou wouldst not, a burnt-offering and an offering for sin thou requiredst not. And Jer. 7. 21, &c. Put your burnt-offerings unto your Zebachim — For I spake not unto your fathers, nor commanded them in the day I brought them out of the land of Egypt concerning Holocausts and Zebachim: But this I commanded them, Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people; and walk ye in all the ways I commanded you, that it may be well with you. He that will, may look further in Psal. 51. 16. Esay 1. 11, &c. Jer. 6. 20. Hos. 6. 6. Amos 5. 22. where we may hear God still rejecting and disdaining Holocausts, Zebachim and Mincha, shelamim or Peace-offerings, the whole rabble of Corbanim or most holy offerings; but no word of Terumah. What force of reason this may bear with those who consider that these appellations of Offerings are never confounded in the whole Law of Moses or History of Israel, and therefore not like to be in these places only, I know not; I am sure Terumah is about sixty times found in the Bible, and no where taken for an Offering of fire or most Holy: Nor can it any where be shewn that Zebach and Mincha are put for any other Offerings but Offerings of fire, whereof I have already shewn Zebach was one part and Mincha the other.

And therefore I dare conclude, That Heave-offerings, called Terumoth and simply holy, howsoever many of them might be Ecclesiastical or Judicial sacred in regard of some circumstance, yet in their proper nature and principal end they were no Types of things to come.

AND so I come to the Second thing I propounded, to shew That these Offerings were Eucharistical and Euctical, that is, their formalis ratio and essence consisted in Thanksgiving and Prayer. For an Offering is then Eucharistical, when we give something unto the Lord's use in way of Thankfulness for Blessings received; an Offering is then Euctical, when we give something to the Lord's use, to the end that he seeing our Obedience and Thankfulness in honouring him, might grant us a further Blessing we sue for: And this is either de presenti, or de futuro: De presenti, when our Offering is presently exhibited; De futuro, when we bind our selves then to do it when we obtain our suit: And this is called a Vow, differing from the other not in nature

2.

Offerings Eucharistical and Euctical described.

Psal. 50. 14.

but in time : and this special kind, because usual, my Text puts for the whole kind, Pay thy vows, &c. Further, here is to be noted, that as Thanksgiving is joyned with Prayer, so is the Gift for Thanksgiving joyned with a Gift for Prayer ; Or the same Gift is first applied to Thanksgiving, and then to Prayer ; that so as Thanksgiving is a mean to obtain by Prayer, so a Present of Thanksgiving for a former Benefit is a mean to obtain of God a favour.

Herein then consists the Nature of an Offering addressed to Prayer, not to merit the thing we ask, but to be an argument before God that he would hear us, because he hath promised in Christ to hear them who honour him. This is not then orare satisfactoriè, as the Papists do in their Mass, but only oblatoriè. To pray satisfactoriè or meritoriè, is to offer a price worth the thing we ask for ; To pray only oblatoriè, is to offer a motive or condition in regard of God's promise in Christ to obtain our suit ; that is, to make as it were a visible or real Prayer. And such a Prayer were the Alms of Cornelius, Acts 10. of whom it is said, v. 4. That his Prayers and Alms were come up for a memorial before God.

The Qualifications of Offerings Eucharistical and Votal.

* Hof. 14. 2.
Heb. 13. 15.
The fruit of our lips.

Now before this Offering Euctical or Eucharistical can be complete, it must consist of three degrees or parts, Cordis, Oris, Operis, the Offering of the Heart, of the Mouth, and of the Hand. The Offering of the Heart is a sursum Corda, the lifting up of our Hearts to God either to praise him, or to pray unto him. The Offering of our Mouth is to express the same with our tongues, and is called *The * Calves of our lips*. The Offering of our Hand ( which is properly call'd an Offering ) is a Testimony of what our Heart conceives or Tongue can express, by honouring God with a Present of our substance. The first of these is the formalis ratio or that whereby the two last are sanctified ; without it they are no Offerings, no Thanksgiving, no Prayer : But the last is hallowed by the two former ; for a sursum corda, the lifting up of our Hearts, and the profession of our Mouths, is that which makes our Gift an Offering, which without this Consecration is no Offering at all.

How these Offerings were λογικαὶ θυσίαι.

* Apolog. 2.

Hence it is that this kind of Offerings in regard of other Offerings is called θυσία λογική not ( as some have thought ) from the thing offered, as though nothing were offered but λόγοι rationes or orationes ; but from the manner of hallowing it, which was ( as * Justin Martyr speaks ) λόγῳ ἐυχῆς καὶ ἐυχαριστίας by way of Prayer and Thanksgiving. For λογική θυσία is not ( as some have thought ) opposed to a material offering, but to an offering earthly and terrenely sanctified, as were the Typical Sacrifices of the Law by Fire and Blood ; but this Offering is offered by no other Fire but the Fire of the Spirit, by no other Blood than the precious drops of Prayer and Thanksgiving. In brief, λογική θυσία is an Offering spiritually offered, not an offering only of the Spirit ; it is opposed to αἱματική and [ * σωματική ] θυσία, not to a material and real offering : as it is easily to be seen in Justin Martyr, Irenæus, and the ancient Liturgies, who call the material offering of Bread and Wine for the Sacrament θυσία λογική καὶ ἀναιμακτός, a reasonable and unbloody sacrifice. As the most Holy offerings were called ἑσπερίαι Fiery offerings, not because they offered only fire, but because that which was offered was done by fire : so are all these Heave-offerings called λογικαὶ θυσίαι, because they were offered λόγῳ, meaning the manner, not the matter of the offering.

[ * This or the like word was wanting in the Manuscript. In the writings of the Ancient Fathers are frequently opposed θυσία σωματική or ἡ δὲ αἱματική καὶ σπενδών καὶ θυμιαμάτων, and θυσία ἀσώματος, ἀναιμακτός, λογική, &c. Vid. Justin. Mart. in Apol. 2. Euseb. Dem. Evang. l. 1. c. 10. & l. 5. c. 23. ]

To come therefore to a conclusion. That the Heave-offerings were such Offerings as I have now described, it appears plainly in three principal sorts of them, First-fruits, Tithes, and Voluntary Heave-offerings. In First-fruits it appears by the Confession which every one was to make who offered them, Deut. 26. 6, &c. When the Egyptians evil intreated us and afflicted us — and when we cried unto the Lord God of our fathers, the Lord heard our voice — and brought us forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand and out-stretched arm — and he hath brought us into this place, and hath given us this land, even a land that floweth with milk and honey. And now behold, I have brought the First-fruits of the Land which thou, O Lord, hast given me. And ( so saith the Text ) thou shalt set them before the Lord thy God, and worship before the Lord thy God. Whither tend all these words but to a thankful acknowledgment and remembrance of the Blessings they had received from God in giving them so good a Land, and doing so great things for them ?

And

And for Tithes, you may see in the same place what he was to say that offered them, namely, * I have brought away the hallowed things out of mine house, and also have given them unto the Levite, and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, according to all thy Commandments which thou hast commanded me — Look down (therefore) from thy holy habitation, from heaven, and bless thy people Israel, and the Land which thou hast given us, as thou swarest to our fathers, a Land that floweth with milk and honey. Here is an Euclical offering, an offering applied to Prayer; as if they had said, We honour thee, O Lord, with this part of our substance; that thou seeing our Obedience, mightest in mercy vouchsafe to look down from thy holy habitation, and bless us thy people, and the Land which thou hast given us.

Psal. 50. 14.

* Verse 13.

Verse 15.

I come now to the voluntary Heave-offering, of which we have a noble Pattern in that great Terumah of Gold and Silver which David and his Princes offered for the building of the Temple, in 1 Chron. 29. Where we shall find first Praise or Thanksgiving, that is, an acknowledgment of God's Dominion, Power and Goodness, from which comes all the good we have; Thine, O Lord, (saith David ver. 11.) is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the Majesty; for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine — ver. 12. Both riches and honour come of thee, and thou reignest over all — ver. 13. Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praise thy glorious name. And afterwards he cometh to Prayer (ver. 18, 19.) O Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel our fathers, — Give unto Solomon my son a perfect heart to keep thy Commandments, thy Testimonies and Statutes. I will add for a conclusion that of Nehemiah 13. 14. who being the Head and Ruler of his brethren when he commanded them to give the Heave-offering or portions of the Levites, it was as it were an Offering of his own, and therefore he applieth it Euclically, saying, Remember me, O my God, concerning this, and wipe not out my good deeds that I have done for the house of my God, and for the offices thereof.

AND now I come unto the third thing I propounded, That this kind of Offering or Terumah (the essence and formalis ratio whereof consisted in Prayer and Thanksgiving) was still required at the hands of Christians; and then afterward shall speak of the Practice of the ancient Church.

3.

That these Offerings (as I may so speak) of visible Prayer and Thanksgiving are required at the hands of Christians, I prove

1. Because the inward worship of the Heart is still due, and therefore also the outward so far as it was to be a Sign thereof: For what reason can be given why we should be still bound to honour God with the Praise and Prayer of our Hearts, yea and Mouth too, and should not be bound to do the same also by our Works and Deeds? Without doubt he that commands us to honour him with our whole Heart, with all our Mind, with all our Soul, and with all our Strength, would have us honour him in all the degrees of honour, with the honour of the Heart, of the Mouth and of the Hand; and howsoever the first of these be required simply, yet the other two are at least conveniently.

2. We know it is the Law of God, That no man should appear before him empty: And this is so natural, that we never almost come before a man, if we have a suit or would shew our selves thankful, but we think fit to honour him with a present, that we might find him the more favourable: Why should not God much more expect some fruits of our Obedience when we come into his presence; seeing he gives all things as Lord of all, not as a Steward to another; yea and of his free goodness, not as bound to give us any thing more than seems fit to his good will and pleasure? And that this Law was to have place in the Gospel as well as in the Law, it appears by S. Paul's decree concerning the Lord's day, which being the day wherein every Soul was publickly to present himself before the Lord to make his prayers and to give thanks unto his name; that this might not be done with empty hands, S. Paul gives order to all the Churches of Galatia and Corinth, That upon the first day of the week every one should lay by him in store, as God had prospered him, that is, he should give for pious uses according to his ability. Thrice in the year (saith the Law, Deut. 16. 16.) shall every male appear before the Lord, and no man shall appear empty. Once in a week (saith the New Testament) shall every Soul appear before the Lord, and no man shall appear empty. Deus non indiget eorum quæ à nobis sunt, sed nos indigemus offerre aliquid Deo; — à nobis propter nos fieri vult, nè simus infructuosi; God stands not in need of any thing that is ours, but it is needful for us to present God with some Oblation of our own — And it is not for any advantage to himself, that God would

Exod. 23. 15.

Deut. 16. 16.

1 Cor. 16. 2.

*have this to be done by us ; but for our own good and behoof, that we may not be in the number of unprofitable servants, saith * Irenæus, one of the most ancient Fathers, whose argument this is which I have brought ; urged also by M. Bucer in his censure of our Liturgy.*

3. My third Argument is something like unto the former. God is a King, and therefore to be honoured like a King. The proper honour of a King as a King is Tribute, whereby his Subjects acknowledge his Supremacy and Dominion. God is a King, a King of Kings, as well now in the Gospel as ever in the Law ; and therefore now as well as then to be honoured with a Tributary Offering. This reasoning is good, seeing God himself so reasoneth with his people ; If I am a Father, (saith he) where is mine honour ? if I am a Lord, where is my fear ? Why may we not add in the same force of reason, If God be a King, where is his Tribute, the proper honour of a King ? yea so proper to a King, that they are terms convertible in the Scripture, To be a King, and To receive Tribute or Presents of his Subjects ; To acknowledge to be a King, and To bring Presents. For those sons of Belial (1 Sam. 10. 27.) which did not acknowledge Saul to be their King, are said to have brought him no Presents. And 2 Chron. 17. 5. the Holy Ghost useth no other words to signify that Jehoshaphat was acknowledged and confirmed King of Judah but these, That all Judah brought him Presents. We know the discipline of the Persians was, *That none might come before their King without a Gift, were it never so small ; and therefore the Peasant * Sinetas offered Artaxerxes an handful of water, having nothing else to give him. And this the Magi, who came from the East to worship Christ, knew well enough, and therefore they offered him Presents of Gold, Frankincense and Myrrh ; for they came to worship a King, and worshipped him like a King : Where is he (say they) that is born King of the Jews ? for we have seen his Star in the East, and are come to worship him.* Nay the very reason why we give Tribute unto Kings is because they are God's Ministers : So saith S. Paul, Rom. 13. 6. For this cause pay you Tribute ; for they are God's Ministers. Propter quod unumquodque est tale, illud magis est tale ; If this be due unto the Vicegerent, what is due unto the Lord himself ? I conclude therefore in the words of Irenæus, Offerre igitur Deo oportet primitias ejus creature, We ought therefore to offer unto God an Heave-offering of his creatures ; for so the Lxx, and from them all ancient Writers, use Ἀπαρχαί, which the Latines turn Primitia, not meaning that which in Hebrew is called תְּרוּמָה, but every Terumah or λογιστὴν δωρεά. Irenæus a little before hath this, Per munus enim erga Regem & honor & affectio ostenditur ; For the Present shows what affection and esteem the giver hath for the King he honoureth therewith : and afterwards, Sicut & Moyses ait, Non apparebit vacuus ante conspectum Domini Dei tui ; Even as Moses saith, Thou shalt not appear before the Lord thy God empty.

But before I go from hence, it shall not be amiss to distinguish the use of this word Offering taken materially ; for our writers in the point of Christian Oblations speak somewhat confusedly thereof. An Offering therefore is taken properly or analogically. An Offering properly taken is a work of the First Table ; an Offering analogically taken is a work of the Second Table, otherwise called Eleemosyna or Alms. The first is done to God immediately, and is when we give ought to the use and maintenance of his Worship. The Second is done to our Neighbour immediately, as when we supply his wants out of our abundance : and this is done to God only mediately ; unless it be done unto the stranger, fatherless, and widow ; for they in the old Law were in a special manner Cura Dei God's care, together with the Levite. Of these two kinds I have hitherto extended the first ; though I exclude not Alms, so far as God is worshipped by the good we do unto our brother.

I COME now unto the last point I proposed, namely, The Practice of the ancient Church in the use of this Offering or Oblatory Praise and Thanksgiving at the celebration of the Lord's Supper ; and here I will shew first, What their custom was ; secondly, What ground and reason they had for the same.

To begin with the first. Among the ancient Christians the whole Office of this Sacrament, I mean the whole Body of Rites and Actions about the same, consisted of three parts, namely, as they are distinguished by \ Ignatius, Προσφορὰ, Θυσία, Δοχὴ*. Προσφορὰ was an act of Oblatory praise and prayer by addressing or applying Bread and Wine unto the use of the Sacrament, and other Gifts to the use of God's service. Θυσία or Sacrifice, the consecration or mystical changing of Bread and Wine thus sanctified into the Body and Blood of our Lord Jesus. Δοχὴ was the eating or receiving of the same in sign of Communion with Christ and all the fruits of his Incarnation ; whence Nazianzen defines this Sacrament κοινωνία ἐν ταπεινώσει τοῦ Θεοῦ, the Communion

* In Ep. ad Smyrnenfes. Of these three see more in Book II in the Treatise Of the Christian Sacrifice, chap. 4.

Communion of the Incarnation of God. To these three acts answer three words: To προσφορὰ or the Oblation, hallowed Bread and hallowed Wine; but no more: To θύσια or the Consecration, the Body and Bloud of the Lord: To the third, the Communion of the Body and Bloud of the Lord. The first act of common Bread and Wine made holy and sanctified Bread and Wine, called Εὐλογία and Εὐχαριστία, that is, the Bread and Wine of Blessing and Thanksgiving: The second act of holy Bread and Wine made most holy, that is, holy signs of the Lord's Body and Bloud: The third of holy signs in general holy signs in special applied to the soul of each receiver. The first was done by being used to Prayer and Thanksgiving: The second by pronouncing the words of Institution at the breaking of the Bread and pouring of the Wine: The third by receiving it with Amen or so be it. The first and last were acts of Priest and People; the second of the Priest alone. Thus was there as it were a mutual commerce between God and the People; the People giving unto God, and God again unto his People: the People giving a small Thanksgiving, but receiving a great Blessing; offering Bread, but receiving the Body; offering Wine, but receiving the mystical Bloud of Christ Jesus.

Psal. 50. 14.

Τὸ ποτήριον τῆς Ἐὐλογίας ὃ εὐλογούμεν, The Cup of Blessing which we bless. 1 Cor. 10. 16.

I know that the names of these are often confounded, all being used for the whole, and often one for another; but especially the Sacrament it self is called προσφορὰ the Oblation or Offering, by a Metonymie of the matter, because the matter was offered Bread and offered Wine. For the same reason is it called Εὐχαριστία, the Eucharist, because the matter of it was Eucharistia, Bread of Blessing and Thanksgiving; not, as some think, because the End thereof is Thanksgiving. It is called also θύσια or sacrifice, I think of the matter also, which was taken out of θύσια λογικὴ. though some will have it so called because it was a sign of Christ's sacrifice.

But I return again unto the Oblation, which (as you have seen) was as it were a Prologue unto the Sacrament, and had the full nature of the Heave-offering, which I have so long spoken of.

First it was in every part complete, having all the degrees or parts of a true offering, namely, of the Heart, of the Tongue, and of the Hand; all formally expressed in the ancient Liturgies. For when the people began to bring their Offering unto the Altar, the Priest was to say, Ἀγὼ τὰς καρδίας, Lift up your hearts; to which they answered, Ἐρχομεν πρὸς τὸν Κύριον, We lift them up unto the Lord: This was the use of those Versicles in ancient time. When this was done, then came the canticles of their lips offered both to Praise and Prayer.

1. To Praise and Thanksgiving. When the Priest cried, Εὐχαριστήσομεν τῷ Κυρίῳ, Let us give thanks unto the Lord; the people answered, Ἄξιον ἔστι δίκαιον, It is meet and just we should do so: and so they went on to give God thanks, or to make a thankful remembrance of the Creation of the World and all things therein for the use of man, for the Providence of God in governing the same, for the Oeconomy of his Church afore the Law and in the Law; recounting in brief as they went the principal Histories of the Bible in all these particulars. This part of Oblatory Thanksgiving is now called the Preface in the Mass, though something diverse from the ancient.

But because Christ had commanded that in this service they should chiefly remember him, they made in the next place a large Thanksgiving unto God, that he so loved the world as to give his own Son for the same, that the Son of God would abase himself so low as to take upon him the nature of sinful man, and by his death and passion to redeem us out of the jaws of death and pit of hell. And this is now for the greater part called The Hymn: and here ended The offering of Praise and Thanksgiving.

2. Next comes the Offering of Prayer, or Prayer with an Offering for Kings and Princes, the whole Catholick Church; and so along as we have it in our Litany, or in the Prayer for the whole state of Christ's Church: both which are beaten out of that mint. And our Prayer for the whole state of Christ's Church is yet Oblatory, if the Rubrick were observed, which enjoyns the Church-wardens to gather the Alms of the people, and then to make this Universal Prayer; and in the very beginning thereof we desire Almighty God to accept our Alms and to receive our Prayers. In no other sense did the ancient Church use their word [Offer] so often repeated in those Prayers, but that God would accept of their Obedience in thus honouring him, and so according to his promise in Christ to hear their Prayers. And hence it is that sometimes they say, * We offer, sometimes, * We beseech thee; one expounding the meaning of the other. But this is now made to be the Canon of the Mass, and all this Offering of Prayer is turned into an Offering of Expiation for the quick and the dead. For this offering of Bread and Wine and Alms being out of use, the Priest could apply

Tertullian, de Scap. c. 2. Cyril. Mystagog. 5.

\ προσφέρειν μὴ σκεῖν * δεόμεθα*

Pfal. 50. 14.

the word [ Offer ] to no other thing but the offering of Christ's Body and Blood.

Thus have you seen as briefly as I could the Practice of the ancient Church in their offering of Praise afore the Sacrament; for after this was done, as ye have heard, then came the Sacrament, and then the Communion of the same.

N O W it remains I should shew what ground and reason they had for this Custom; which I will do briefly.

The First ground they seem to have had is from the Office of the Peace-offering or Eucharistical Sacrifice, because they were both of the like nature and same end; the Jews in the Eucharistical Sacrifice having communion with him who was to come, by eating of their Sacrifice, as we in this Sacrament have with him who is already come, by eating of his Mystical Body and Blood under the forms of Bread and Wine: And because of this affinity they framed the office of the one like unto the office of the other. For in every Peace-offering there was first a Terumah of Praise and Thanksgiving, both of * animalia and cibaria: secondly, A part of this being reserved for the Priest's use, the rest was made a Sacrifice by sprinkling of blood, and burning some part thereof upon the Altar as a Memorial of the whole: And in the third place, That which was saved from the fire, was eaten both of Priest and people. This may be seen in the Law of Peace-offerings and the offerings of Consecration and Purification, all being of the same Law.

* The living creatures were Bulls, Sheep, or Goats, Levit. 3. The other things without life, and which were for food, that were offered up, were the unleavened cakes, and wafers, of fine flour, and oil; as also leavened bread, &c. which according to the Law (Levit. 7.) were required in every Peace-offering of Thanksgiving; whence it was called The Peace-offering that was offered with bread.

According to this Pattern was framed the Office of the Sacrament: for in this also was first offered a Terumah of Praise and Prayer, some part of which being kept for some other holy use, the rest was consecrate into a Sacrament, and then eaten both of Priest and People.

The Second reason they have is from the first celebration of this Sacrament by Christ and his Apostles, which the Evangelists record thus, That Christ took Bread, καὶ εὐλογήσας καὶ ὑψαλις, that is, having made a blessing and a thanksgiving, he said, Take, eat, This is my body which is broken for you; and then likewise of the Cup: and to both adds, Do this in remembrance of me. In these words of the Story we see three acts plainly expressed: 1. A Blessing or Thanksgiving; 2. A Consecration of a Sacrament, This is my Body, &c. 3. A Communion or Receiving of the same, Take and eat. Now because after all this Christ adds, Do this in remembrance of me, or, As often as ye do this, do it in remembrance of me; it may be a question whether he means that all these acts should be done in remembrance of him, or only some one of them. The * Singular number may argue he meant of some one; and then it is a Question which of the three; whether he would have the Blessing and Thanksgiving, or the Consecration, or the Eating done in remembrance of him. It may seem not to be meant of the Eating or Communion, for the words seem to be spoken before it was; and besides the words seem to be spoken of something himself had done, which were the two first acts only. To be short, The most ancient Fathers, Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, with others, if I understand them, they understand these words of that first act, of Blessing and Thanksgiving; as if Christ had said, Whereas heretofore in this act of Blessing and Thanksgiving you made a chief remembrance or chiefly gave thanks to God for passing by you, when he slew all the first-born of Egypt; henceforth in lieu of this ye shall do it in remembrance of me, that is, you shall give thanks to God for my Incarnation and coming into the world to save mankind, for my precious Death and Passion, for my glorious Ascension, and all the Benefits ye have from me. And so the meaning of S. Paul's words expounding the words of Christ, As often as ye eat of this bread and drink of this cup, ye declare the Lord's death until he come, is to be construed after the same manner, viz. Not by eating this bread or by drinking this cup, but at the eating of this bread and at the drinking of this cup, ye use to make a thankful remembrance of the Lord's death: meaning that this remembrance or declaration is neither the Form nor the Effect of the Sacrament it self, but a Connexum or thing joyned unto it, or used at the same time with it. For the Form of the Sacrament is a Sign and Communion of the Lord's body, the End and Effect the Confirmation of our Faith; neither of which seems to be meant by remembering of his death.

Howsoever it be, upon this Exposition the Fathers ground their Oblation of Prayer and Thanksgiving before the Sacrament as a thing enjoined by Christ himself. * Irenaeus expressly saith, That Christ in this his taking bread and giving thanks, Novi Testamenti novam docuit oblationem, did teach and appoint the New Oblation of the New Testament;

* ὅτε τοῦτο, Luke 22. 19. 1 Cor. 11. 24.

1 Cor. 11. 26.

* Lib. 4. c. 32.

Testament; and that by so doing he taught his disciples Primitias Deo offerre ex suis creaturis, non quasi indigenti, sed ut ipsi nec infructuosi nec ingrati sint, to offer unto God an Heave-offering of his creatures; not for that God had any need thereof, but that they might not shew themselves ungrateful and unprofitable servants: and that of this Malachi prophesied, when he saith, In every place Incense shall be offered unto my Name, and a pure Offering. Plal. 50. 14. Mal. 1. 11.

If you wonder how it could be so taken, I will make it plain as I conceive it thus. Where it is said that Christ took bread and gave thanks or made a blessing; it may be understood either that he gave thanks to God for the Bread, or with the Bread: If with the Bread, he made an Oblatory thanksgiving or blessing, as I have shewed the Ancients did: And in this sense the Fathers take the words, and Beza himself leans the same way, quoting the words of Theophylact, That he gave not thanks for the bread, but ἐν τῷ ἀγνῶ upon the bread, that is, he did an act of Oblatory praise by addressing Bread and Wine to the Lord's use in the Sacrament.

And that such should be the meaning of the words, this reason made great appearance, because it is like that Christ used the same kind of Blessing and the same kind of Thanksgiving which the Jews used in the Passcover, only changing the End thereof: Now their Thanksgiving was by way of Oblation; for the Passcover was a kind of Peace-offering, in which I have shewed, that which was to be a Sacrifice, was first offered a Terumah of Thanksgiving, whereof the whole Sacrifice was called Eucharistical. Whether this be the meaning of the words or no, I will not say.

The End of all this Discourse of Offerings hath been to help my self and others to understand the Fathers rightly, and to know the difference of the Romish Mass from this ancient Terumah of Thanksgiving and Prayer; which I will briefly point at, and so make an end. 1. This Offering of the Fathers was before the Consecration; the Mass is after. 2. This was of bare and naked Bread and Wine; the Mass of the Body and Blood of Christ. 3. This was an Heave-offering of Praise and Prayer; the Mass is an Offering of Expiation, or a price of redemption for the quick and dead. 4. This was an act of all the Faithful; but the Mass is of the Priest alone.

DISCOURSE LII.

REVEL. 3. 19.

As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: Be zealous therefore, and repent.

THESE words are part of one of the Seven Epistles sent by Christ unto the Seven Churches in Asia; namely an Exhortation unto the Church of Laodicea, whose disease was Lukewarmness and want of Fervency in the matter of Religion, and that accompanied with security arising from presumption of Gods love through the abundance of his outward blessings bestowed upon them (vers. 17.) That therefore which they abused as an Argument why they might be secure, (as being God's darling and so much beloved,) in my Text is retorted unto them as an Argument of fear of some Chastisement near unto them and even hanging over their heads; For those whom God loveth, he chastiseth: Certain therefore it was that they should ere long feel the Scourge of God, unless they should timely rouse themselves out of their lazy devotions, out of the hateful and dangerous temper of Lukewarmness, unless they should blow up the fire of Zeal, to love and worship God with all earnestness and fervency; in sum, unless they would amend that grievous fault by Repentance; for, As many as I love, (saith Christ) I rebuke and chasten; be zealous therefore and repent.

It belongs not much to our purpose to enquire Whether those seven Epistles concern historically and literally only the Churches here named, or Whether they were intended for Types of Churches or Ages of the Church afterwards to come. It shall be sufficient to say, That if we consider their Number, being seven (which is a number of revolution of of Times, and therefore in this Book the Seals, Trumpets and Vials also are seven : ) or if we consider the choice of the Holy Ghost, in that he taketh neither all, no nor the most famous Churches then in the world, as Antioch, Alexandria, Rome, and many other, and such ( no doubt ) as had need of instruction as well as those here named ; if these things be well considered, it will seem that these Seven Churches, besides their Literal respect, were intended ( and it may be chiefly ) to be as Patterns and Types of the several Ages of the Catholick Church from the beginning thereof unto the end of the World : that so these Seven Churches should Prophetically sample unto us a sevenfold Temper and Constitution of the whole Church according to the several Ages thereof, answering the Pattern of the Churches named here.

Revel. 3. 19.

For as in the course of Man's life diversity of ages hath diverse manners and conditions, so was it to be with the Church of Christ : Yea and as some Diseases are in regard of predominancy proper unto some men and not to others ; so is it with the Church : All of these with their praies, if good ; and remedies, if evil, are portrayed in these Seven Epistles unto the Seven Churches.

* Rev. 2. 2, 3.

Nay not only the whole Church, but even particular Churches have their Ages, Manners and Conditions answerable unto the whole Body : They have likewise their Infancy, Youth, Virility and old age, with their several Constitutions, Conditions and Diseases : The first age and spring-time of both like unto Ephesus, full of * patience, labour, tolerancy and zeal ; The last and old age like unto Laodicea, in abundance of all external things Lukewarm, and neither hot nor cold. That which the Poet saies of the disposition of old men [ Nullus Senex veneratur Jovem, ] being more true of Churches ; as they grow old, their zeal grows cold also.

So that in this regard my Text will not be unseasonable, if the Times wherein we live be either the Last times ( as most men think ) or near upon the Last ( as no man will deny. ) Howsoever since no Condition, Temper or Disease is so proper to any one Age, but that it is found sometime more or less in all : So may this of Lukewarmness be with us, what time soever of our age it be ; and therefore no question but we may in Laodicea, as in a lively Example, clearly read our own state and learn wisdom.

Without any longer Preface therefore I come unto the Words themselves, which contain, First, God's rule, Those whom he loves, he rebukes and chastens. Secondly, Our and his Churches duty, We must be zealous and repent. Lastly, The Connexion of these two ; Because those whom God loves, he will rebuke and chasten for their sin, especially Lukewarmness ; We must therefore be zealous and repent.

I.

To begin with the first, God's rule. [ As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten. ] The words need no great explanation : the two last [ I rebuke and chasten ] are rendered for ἐλέγχω & παιδεύω : the first whereof [ ἐλέγχω I rebuke ] notes a reproving and convincing by Argument ; the second [ παιδεύω I chasten ] notes such a correction as Fathers give their children ; not to hurt them, but to amend them, which we use to call a disciplining, a punishment of discipline intended ad correctionem, non ad destructionem. So that the meaning is ; Those whom I love, if after I have long reproved them and convinced them of sin, by my Word and Ministers, all be but in vain, then I use to chastise them with my rod, to afflict them with some scourge of my discipline, even as a Father doth the child whom he loveth.

Observat. 1.

Come we therefore to the Observations these words afford us ; The first whereof is, That God chastises his children out of love and for their good. For all the actions of God towards those he loves, must needs be out of love ; and whatsoever he doth out of love, must be for the good of those he loveth. Indeed men for want of wisdom often do out of love that which hurts, as the Proverb is, they kill with kindness : But with God it is otherwise ; He wants not skill to know what is best for his beloved, as men do ; and therefore as certain it is that his chastisements shall end with our * profit, as we are sure they spring from our sins.

* Heb. 12. 10.
God chastens us, ὅτι τὸ σκεπ-τόμενον ἡμῶν
ἐστὶν ἡμετέρα, ὅπως ἵνα ἡμεῖς ἁγιασθῶ-μεν ὑπὸ τοῦ
καλοῦ τοῦ
πατρὸς ἡμῶν
καὶ ἵνα ἡμεῖς ἀπολαύσωμεν
τῆς ἁγιότητος αὐτοῦ.

The ignorance of this point makes many to err, and with the friends of Job to judge amiss of God's love and hate towards men. But we must know that God hath two sorts of arrows, Arrows of judgment and Arrows of mercy : the first he shoots against those he hates ( Psal. 7. 13. Ps. 144. 6. ) the other he shoots at his own, even those whom he loves, and therewith he wounds them that he may cure them ; and such as these may apply to themselves the words of the Spouse in the Canticles, I am wounded with love : God's love hath wounded me, and the wound of God makes me love him : it begins in his love to me, and aims at and ends in my love to him. For we must remember in this case that which S. Austin well observes, That when the godly

godly and the wicked suffer the very same things to outward appearance, yet there is a great unlikeness of the sufferers, even in the likeness of suffering: the one are punished out of God's just displeasure and wrathful vengeance; the other are disciplin'd out of mercy, that God might fit them and keep them for himself, because he loves them.

Revel. 3. 19.

And that we may the better understand this, let us consider what Effects Afflictions work, and what fruits they bring forth in those whom God loveth.

1. Afflictions to them whom God loves are Medicinal, and thereby they recover their health by repentance from some spiritual disease they are sick of. For howsoever the Lord gives the rein loose to the children of wrath, and lets them enjoy their hearts desire; yet will he * hedge with Thorns the ways of those he loveth, and * Hof. 2. 6. will awaken them by some sharp rod or other out of the sleep of security. So he taught Miriam by a * leprosie to leave her murmuring; he wakened Jonah out of his * Num. 12. 10. sleep by casting him into the Sea: Zacharias his unbelief was cured with * dumbness; * Luk. 1. 22. and Blessed is the man whom the Lord this way chastens and corrects. Psal. 94.

2. Afflictions are Preservatives to keep them whom God loveth, from sin. Thus an Angel of Satan must buffet Paul, lest he should be exalted above measure, 2 Cor. 12.

7. The Earth which is not tilled and broken up, bears nothing but thorns and briers. Vines wax wild in time, unless we prune and cut them. Our hearts would be overgrown with evil affections and dispositions, as with so many noisome weeds, if God by his loving chastisements should not Till and Manure them: My Father (saith Christ) γεωργός ἐστίν is the Husbandman, John 15. 1.

1 Cor. 9. 2.
To are God's afflictions God's husbandry or tillage.

3. Afflictions make the fruitless bring forth fruit, beget many Vertues, and make God's Graces in us to bloom and bring forth works pleasing unto our Heavenly Father. The Prodigal Son (in Luke 15.) never thought of returning to his Father, till he was brought low by affliction. Hagar was proud in the house of Abraham, but humble in the Wilderness, Gen. 21. Jonah sleepeth in the ship, but watches and prayes in the Whales belly. Sicut Aromata odorem non nisi cum accenduntur, expandunt, saith Gregory; as sweet spices send not forth nor spread abroad their sweet smell untill they be burnt or beaten; so neither do the Graces of God's children send forth so sweet, so rich a fragraney as when they are exercised by Afflictions.

4 Lastly, Afflictions draw men nearer unto God. Manasses, who lived in Jerusalem as a Libertine; when he was bound with chains in Babylon, when he was in affliction, he besought the Lord and humbled himself greatly before the God of his Fathers. 2 Chron. 33. 11, 12. In the Gospel we read that Corporal diseases brought many to Christ, whereas many who had their health, neither regarded nor acknowledged him.

And thus I have let you see (according to Sampson's Riddle, Judg. 14.) how that out of the eater comes meat, and out of the * sowr (or sharp) comes sweet: Out of sowr and sharp or bitter afflictions, out of troubles and calamities that sometimes threaten to devour us, comes sweetness, comfort and refreshment.

* Funius renders IVM ab acri. Some Greek Copies render it ἐκ μαγν out of the bitter, and to this sense are the Syriack and Arabick Versions here. Sen. lib. de Provid. c. 2. Paternum Deus habet adversus bonos viros animum; & illos fortius amat, & doloribus ac damnis exagitat, ut verum colligant robur. Observat. 2. * Wild. 12. 22. Wl creas thou, O Lord, dost chasten us, ἡμᾶς ταυδεύ- ov; thou scourgest our enemies a thousand times more, ἐν μυριάσιν καταπαύεις.

The main use of all is for comfort in all our sufferings and crosses whensoever God sends them: For they are Signs of our Son-ship and Tokens of his love. So the Author of the Epistle to the Hebrews tells us expressly, chap. 12. 6. &c. Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every Son whom he receiveth; If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with Sons. But if ye be without chastisement—then are ye bastards and not Sons. Let us then learn to bless God in our afflictions; and say with David (Psal. 94 12.) Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O Lord, and teachest him out of thy Law; It is good for me that I have been afflicted; for before I was afflicted, I went astray; but now have I kept thy Word, Psal. 119. 67, 71.

My Second Observation is this, That if God spares not those whom he loveth, much less shall his Enemies escape punishment. Surely if God chastises those whom he loves, he will break in pieces those whom he hates *. If thou art God's Enemy, as thou canst not expect any of that Favour he shews unto his Friends and children, so much less hast thou reason to hope that he will not revenge himself on thee, when thou seest him so severe unto his own. Let them think on this who live in enmity against God, and never yet made their peace with him, by casting off the old man and putting on the new; but continue still to walk after the flesh, in all the ways of sin, and cast God's Law behind them. Let them not rejoyce at the afflictions of God's children, nor laugh at their sufferings; but fear and tremble; For every lash that the Children of God feel is a Warning-piece to ungodly men, and should make them dread those sorer punishments, ments, those many (and worse) stripes (Luke 12. 47.) the indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish which shall be to every one that doth evil, Rom. 2. To conclude, consider, that in 1 Pet. 4. 17. If judgment must first begin at the house of God, what shall be the end of them that obey not the Gospel of God?

Observat. 3. AND now I come to the last thing to be observed out of these words, viz. That God rebukes before he chastens. Ὅσους ἐὰν φιλῶ, ἐλέγχω καὶ παιδεύω, As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: first ἐλέγχω I rebuke, and then παιδεύω I chasten; first admonish and reprove them, and convince them of their Sin; and then chastise them: his παιδεία hath an ἐλεγχος, his disciplining goes with admonition.

It is a part of God's style whereby he proclaims himself, * The Lord, The Lord God, merciful and gracious and long-suffering. And this appears in that he strikes not a sinner without frequent forewarnings, reproofs and convincing him of sin: His Word is always the harbinger of his Sword: he rebukes and then chastens; for he desireth not our misery but our amendment. As I live (saith the Lord) I desire not the death of a sinner, but rather that he would turn from his way and live. And so in Prov. 1. Wisdom first cries out in the streets*, How long will ye Scorners delight in scorning, and ye fools hate knowledge? First she calls, before she * laughs at their calamity, before destruction comes upon them as a whirlwind, or distress and anguish fall upon them.

Before the Flood came and overwhelmed the Earth for sin, man had given him 120 years warning, so long a space for repentance; as the Chaldee Paraphrast expounds that in Gen. 6. 3. [— his dayes shall be an 120 years ] to this sense, A term of 120 years shall be given them (i. e. the men of that רְשָׁעִים evil generation) אם ישובו; if they will return or repent. Before Nineveh should be destroyed, the Prophet Jonah was sent to cry against it. Israel was not carried captive into Assyria before the Lord had testified against them by all the Prophets and by all the Seers, saying, Turn ye from your evil ways, and keep my Commandments, &c. 2 Kings 17. 13. The like is said of Judah, in 2 Chron. 36. 15, 16. The Lord God of their Fathers sent to them by his Messengers; rising early and sending, because he had compassion on his people.— But they mocked the Messengers of God, and despised his words, and misused his Prophets, until the wrath of the Lord arose against his people, till there was no remedy.

* That by wing of abominations, (for so it should be rendered rather than the overspreading of abominations) is meant here an Army of Idolatrous Gentiles, or the Roman Army that destroy'd Jerusalem, see it clearly proved in Book III. in the Treatise Of Daniel's Weeks.

The * wing of abominations [כנף שקר] whereof Daniel speaks in ch. 9. 27.] overwhelmed not the City Jerusalem, until Christ had long laboured in vain to gather them under his wings, as a Hen gathereth her Chickens; and they would not, Matth. 23. 37. Nay when other warnings have been fruitless, and God's chastisements and Judgments near, the very Heavens themselves shall by Comets and other Signs give warning of their approach, if at length by our humiliation we would stop them even at the door, or at least by our preparation to endure them mitigate them unto us.

Use 1. 1. If this then be God's manner of dealing, To warn us by reproof, of our danger, that so we might avoid it before it comes; it should behove us not lightly to pass by his warnings, his ἐλεγχοι, so often sounding in our eares in the reading or preaching of his Word. There is no Evil that hath, doth, or shall befall us for any sin we commit, but there it is foretold and threatned us: no one Example there, but it is for our learning or instruction εἰς τὴν ἡμετέραν διδασκαλίαν Rom. 15. 4. and for our admonition πρὸς νουθεσίαν ἡμῶν, 1 Cor. 10. 11. Nay the Holy Ghost doth so lively pattern by Examples the several cases which may befall men; as none scarce ever hath been or in any age shall be, which in one Example or other may not clearly read his own case and learn Wisdom. The Precepts also in the Holy Scripture are so plentiful, and the Threatnings so plain; that neither can we excuse our sins by ignorance, nor justly say that God's Judgments took us unawares.

Use 2. 2. If God so powerfully warns his Creature before he strikes him, how dare we strike our Brother before we warn him: For those who deal with men, as Experience sheweth, are often scorched with the fire before they see the smok. But the reason of this difference is plain; God strikes because he loves and would amend us, and therefore he first rebukes and warns before he chastiseth: But we punish if we have power, or procure our Brother to be punished if we have not, because we hate him, and therefore lie in wait to entrap him: He must not be admonished, lest he should take heed and grow too wary, and so escape our snare: and yet we cry nothing but Discipline and Execution of Justice, when our hearts and Consciences tell us it is but the wreaking of our Malice.

But

But God gives us a Rule to follow, fashioned according to the Pattern of his own Long-suffering: If thy Brother trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone — if again, take with thee one or two more: and if yet he amend not, Tell the Church, &c. Matth. 18. He that observeth not this Rule, little hope is there that ever God will give him grace to make use of his warning, who gives no warning to his brother.

AND thus I come to the Second part of my Text, which is our duty; We must be zealous and repent. Where first as the words lie, we will speak of Zeal, and then of Repentance.

Concerning Zeal, I will draw all I have to speak unto these two Heads. 1. What is this Zeal which is here commanded. 2. What Motives there are to urge and command it.

For the first, Zeal is the Intension and Vehemency of all our affections in matters of God and his Service. It hath its name of Zeal which is to burn and boil as water over the fire, and thence may be styled the Fervency and boiling of our affections. Such a one was Apollos, as S. Luke (in Acts 18. 25.) describes him to be ζέων τῷ πνεύματι fervent in spirit, and such S. Paul exhorts the Romans to be, ζέοντες πνεύματι fervent or burning in spirit, ch. 12. 11. For as burning is the excess or highest pitch of heat, so is zeal of our affections. The Schoolmen make it an Intension of love; which is true if Love be taken as the Scripture useth; for it comprehendeth all our Affections under that name: all of them spring from presupposing Love. No man is ignorant of this that knoweth how in Scripture all our Duty both to God and man is styled Love and Charity. But Love is a special affection, Zeal is not the Intension of it alone, but of the rest also, Hatred, Joy, Grief, Hope, Fear, &c.

So he that with David loves the Law of God more than a hony or the hony-comb, more than b thousands of gold and silver; he loves zealously. He that rejoiceth in God's Testimonies more than they that find great spoil, more than his d appointed food; he joyes zealously. He whose eyes gush out c rivers of waters, and wisheth his eyes were f a fountain of tears, because men keep not God's Law; he grieves zealously. He whose eyes fail and whose soul almost fainteth with waiting and longing for the g Salvation of the Lord; he hopes zealously. He who saies, h my flesh trembleth for fear of thee, and I am afraid of thy judgments; he fears zealously: and so of the rest.

But as in our Bodies we find Aguish burnings as well as the healthful vigour of Natural heat; and as Nadab and Abihu offered fire unto God, but not the right and holy fire, but \ strange fire which he commanded them not* (Lev. 10. 1.) So are there some counterfeits of zeal, as it were false fires, abominable unto God and odious unto men. All is not gold that glisters, no more is all Zeal which seemeth so, this zeal which God approves. Lest therefore blazing Comets be mistaken for the purer Stars of heaven, and Nadab and Abihu's strange fires for the fire of God's Altar; let us take a survey of the kinds and characters of false zeal, for the better discerning of the true.

The kinds then of false zeal may be reduced unto Three heads. 1. Hypocritical zeal, which wants sincerity. 2. Blind zeal, which wants knowledge. 3. Turbulent zeal, which wants love and moderation.

1. The First of these [Hypocritical zeal] is a meer blaze and shew of fervency, without any true and solid heat: It is nothing but the Vizor of zeal; looking a squint one way, but tending another; pretending God and his Glory, but aiming at some private and sinister end. Such was the zeal of Jehu who marched \ furiously*, and his word was, The Lord of hosts; \ Come* (said he to Jonadab) and see my zeal for the Lord: but his project was the Kingdom. Jezabel proclaimed a Fast, as out of an Extasie of zeal that God should be blasphemed; but her aim was Naboth's vineyard. So in Acts 19. Demetrius the Silver-Smith and his fellows cry, Great is Diana of the Ephesians; but meant the gain they got by making of her Silver Shrines, \ (verf. 24.)*

Idols of Diana (not for Diana as in our Translation) were little Shrines or Cabinets, made like little Temples or Chappels (and in the form of her Temple at Ephesus) wherein was the Image of Diana: These Demetrius made and sold to the people that came to Ephesus, who took them home with them to worship by.

This Zeal is soon descried by the proper Character it hath, namely, an affectation of having their works seen of men (which is said of the vain-glorious Pharisees in Matt. 6.) be it by ostentation of their zealous deeds, like Jehu; or by the excess of affected gestures, sighs, and other like actions falling within the view of men: Not but that a true zeal doth shew it self vehement, even in external actions; but it is the straining of them beyond measure which argues the Heart to be guilty of emptiness within.

2. The Revel. 3. 19.

II.

I.

The Nature of Zeal.

a Psal. 119. 10.
b Pl. 119. 72.
c Verf. 162.
d Job 23. 12.
e Pl. 119. 135.
f Jer. 9. 1.

g Pl. 119. 81.
82.
b Verf. 120.

אש נרה Ignem alienum
qui non erat
de celo missus, & sumptus ex Al-
tari aeneo, ubi
erat Ignis sacro, demissus de celo.

3 Kinds and Characters of False zeal.

* 2 Kings 9. 20.
* Ch. 10. 16.

1 Kings 21.

* The Silver vases Agrepuand in the form of Ephesus, who

Revel. 3. 19.

* Rom. 10. 2.

* Acts 26. 9.

Ch. 3. 13.

* 2 Sam. 21.
1, 2.

* Luke 9. 54.

* John 18. 10.

2. The Second kind of False zeal is Blind zeal, Ignis fatuus or Fools fire, leading a man out of the right way : when men zealously affect evil things, supposing them to be good ; or are eagerly bent against good things, supposing them to be evil. Such was the Zeal of the Jews, of whom S. Paul * witnesseth that they had a zeal of God ( that is, in the matters of God ) but not according to knowledg. And with this Zeal was he himself once carried, when he persecuted the Christians with an opinion of doing God good service, as the phrase is John 16. 2. I verily thought ( saith he * ) with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to the Name of Jesus of Nazareth. And such is the zeal of simple and devout Sectaries, who blindly run after some person they esteem, without knowing themselves either why or whither. This kind of zeal is like to metal in a Blind horse, that will speed to fall into a pit or to break his neck : The counsel I would give for avoiding this kind, is to look before we leap, and see our way clearly before we run.

3. The Third kind of False zeal is Turbulent zeal, which S. James * calls ζήλον πικρόν bitter zeal ; a kind of Wildfire transporting a man beyond all compass of Moderation ; namely when in the excess of our heat we either outgo the bounds of our place and calling, or use undue Means or wayes, or overshoot the limits of Love and Charity whether to God or our Neighbour. For howsoever Zeal be an excess of our affections in the things of God ; yet must this excess never break over the banks either of our vocation, or in choice of Means out-bound the Rule of God's Law, as theirs most certainly doth who endeavour to colour their Religion by the Massacres of Princes, overturning of Kingdoms, breach of Oaths and almost all bands of humane Society. Such was the Zeal of Saul when he slew the * Gibeonites, forgetting the Oath which the Princes of the Congregation had made unto them, Josh. 9. 15, 18, 19. And such was the zeal of James and John in the * Gospel, when to vindicate the honour of Christ they would have Fire to come down from heaven to consume a whole Village of Samaria. Such also was Peter's zeal, when he cut off * Malchus his ear : The former outwent the limits of Love and Charity ; the last the limits of his Vocation. As Clocks whose Springs are broken, overstrike the hour of the day ; So this mad and untempered Zeal the measure of Moderation.

Thus I have briefly described these False fires, that by the Law of contraries we may know who is the true Zealot whom God approveth, namely, He whose Spirit is in Fervency and not in Shew, for God and not for himself, guided by the Word and not with humours and opinions, tempered with Charity and free from head-strong violence. This is that Zeal which our Saviour calls for in my Text [ ζήλωσον ἔν Be zealous therefore. ] This is that Zeal which whoso wants, in him God hath no pleasure, but will spue him out of his Mouth, as it is said in vers. 15. a little before my Text.

But why ( will you say ) should this zeal be so needful, or why may we not worship God without it ? Let us therefore now see the Reasons and Motives which do evince and prove it needful, and should urge us to it.

1. First, therefore I will seek no further than my Text, where the want of Zeal is reckoned for a Sin, a Sin to be repented of, Be zealous and Repent : Is not that needful, without which all our works are sinful ?

Object. But Vertue ( you will say ) consists in a Mean, and not in Excess ; and why should not Piety also ?

Answer. I answer, The Mean wherein Vertue is placed, is the Middle of different kinds, and not the Middle or Mean of degrees in one and the same kind. Vertue ( so it be Vertue ) is at the best in the highest degree, and so is Religion in the highest pitch of Zeal.

2. It is the Ground-rule of the whole Law of God, and of all the Precepts concerning his Worship ; That we must love the Lord our God with all our heart, with all our soul, with all our Mind, and with all our strength. What is this else but to love him zealously, to worship him with the highest pitch of our affections and the uttermost strain both of Body and Soul ? For he is the Sovereign and chiefest Good ; what Love then can suite to him but the very top and Sovereignty of Love ? All things in God are supreme ; his Power, his Knowledge, his Mercy ; and therefore he cannot truly be worshipped, unless we yield him whatsoever is supreme in ourselves ; a supremacy of Fear, a supremacy of Hope, a supremacy of Thankfulness. For whom then should we reserve the top and chief of our affections ? for our gold ? for our Herodias, &c. How can we offer God a baser indignity ? will he endure that any thing in the world should be respected before him, or equalled to him ? The Lord our God is a jealous God, and will not suffer it. Let therefore all the Springs and Brooks of

Deut. 6. 5.
Mark. 12. 30.

Exod. 20.

of our affections run into this Main, and let no Rivulet be drawn another way. If Zeal be good in any thing, it is most required in the best things: and if in any thing it be *comely to work with all our might (Ecclef. 9. 10.) certainly in the service of God it is most comely: Be not slothful in business, but fervent in spirit, serving the Lord, Revel. 3. 19. * Επείρωσαν τὰς λαγῆς, τὰς τὰν νόστων.

Rom. 12. 11.

3. Zeal is that which carries our Devotions up to Heaven, As Wings to a Fowl, Wheels to a Chariot, Sails to a Ship; so is Zeal to the Soul of Man. Without Zeal our Devotions can no more ascend than Vapours from a Still, without fire put under it. Prayer, if it be fervent, availeth much: but a cold Sute will never get to Heaven. In brief, Zeal is the Chariot wherein our Alms, our Offerings and all the good works we do, are brought before the Throne of God in Heaven. No Sacrifice in the Law could be offered without fire; no more in the Gospel is any Service rightly performed without Zeal. Jam. 5. 16.

Be zealous therefore, lest all thy works, all thy endeavours be else unprofitable: Rouze up thy dull and heavy Spirit, serve God with earnestness and fervency; and pray unto him that he would send us this fire from his Altar which is in Heaven, whereby all our Sacrifices may become acceptable and pleasing unto him.

AND thus I come to the next thing in my Text, Repentance. [Be zealous and repent.] Repentance is the changing of our course from the old way of Sin unto the new way of Righteousness: or more briefly, A changing of the course of sin for the course of Righteousness. It is called also Conversion, Turning and Returning unto God. This matter would ask a long discourse, but I will describe it briefly in five degrees which are as five steps in a Ladder, by which we ascend up to Heaven. 2.

1. The first step is the Sight of Sin and the punishment due unto it, for how can the Soul be possessed with fear and sorrow, except the Understanding do first apprehend the danger: for, that which the Eye sees not, the Heart rues not. If Satan can keep sin from the Eye, he will easily keep sorrow from the Heart. It is impossible for a man to repent of his wickedness, except he reflect and say * What have I done? The serious Penitent must be like the wary Factor, he must retire himself, look into his Books, and turn over the leaves of his life; he must consider the expence of his Time, the employment of his Talent, the debt of his Sin, and the strictness of his Account. Jer. 8. 6.

2. And so he shall ascend unto the next step, which is Sorrow for sin. For he that seriously considers how he hath grieved the Spirit of God and endangered his own Soul by his sins, cannot but have his Spirit grieved with remorse. The sacrifices of God are a contrite spirit. Neither must we sorrow only, but look unto the quality of our Sorrow, that it be Godly, * ἡ κατὰ Θεὸν λύπη: and to the quantity of it, that it be Great. * μεγαλὴ λύπη. We must fit the plaister to the wound, and proportion our sorrow to our Sins. He that with Peter hath sinned heinously, or with Mary Magdalen frequently; must with them weep bitterly and abundantly. 2 Cor. 7. 1.

3. The Third step of this Ladder is the Loathing of sin. A Surfeit of Meats how dainty and delicate soever, will afterwards make them loathsome: He that hath taken his fill of sin, and committed iniquity with greediness, and is sensible of his * superfluity or abundance of naughtiness, and hath a great sorrow for it; he will the more loath his sins, though they have been never so full of delight: Yea it will make him loath himself, and cry out in a mournful manner with S. Paul (Rom. 7. 24.) O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from this body of death? * μετανοεῖν καὶ ἁγιασθαι Jam. 1. 21.

4. The fourth step is the leaving off sin. For as Amnon hating Tamar shut her out of doors*: So he that loaths and hates his Sins; the sight, the thought, the remembrance of them will be grievous unto him, and he will labour by all good means to expel them. For true Repentance must be the consuming of sin. To what purpose doth the Physician evacuate ill humors, if the Patient still distempers himself with ill diet? What shall it avail a man to endure the launcing, searching and tenting of a wound; if he stay not for the cure? So in vain also is the Sight of sin, and the Sorrow for and Loathing of Sin, if the works of darkness still remain, and the Soul is impatient of a through-cure. And therefore as Amnon not only put out his loathed Sister, but bolted the door after her (as it is said in the forequoted place): So must we keep out our sins with the Bolts of Resolution and Circumspection. Noah pitched the Ark within and without (Gen. 6. 14.) So to keep out the waters: and a Christian must be watchful to secure all his Senses, External and Internal, to keep out sin*. * Origen, hom. 2. in Gen. 6. Vult se archi- rebus Ecclesie, Christus, & corpore Sanctum esse extrinsecis, & corde intrinsecis purum; cautum undique & castitatis aque innocentie virtute munitum, hoc est intus & foris bitumine esse oblitum.

Revel. 3. 19.
The true Repentance is (Acts 20. 21.)
ἡ εἰς τὸν
Θεὸν μετάνοια.
Penitentia quæ
ad Deum bonæq; studium acceditur: and this is the Repentance to Salvation (2 Cor.
7. 10.) and unto
Life, Acts 11.
18.

5. The Fifth and last step is the Cleaving unto God with full purpose of heart, to walk before him in newness of life. All the former Degrees of Repentance were for the putting off of the Old man; this is for the putting on of the New: For ubi Emendatio nulla, Penitentia necessario vana (saith *Tertullian de Penit. c. 2.) Where there is no Reformation, there the Repentance must needs be vain and fruitless; for (as he goes on) caret fructu suo, cui eam Deus servit (i. e. hominis salutis) it hath not its fruit unto holiness, nor the end everlasting life, Rom. 6. 22.

And thus have I let you see briefly What Repentance is. Will you have me say any more to make you to affect it as earnestly, as I hope by this time you understand it clearly: Know then that this is that which opens Heaven and leads into Paradise: This is that Ladder, without which no man can climb thither: and therefore (as S. Austin saith) Mutet vitam qui vult accipere vitam: Let us change our life here, if we look for the Life of Glory hereafter: Let us leave the old way of sin for the new way of righteousness: and (to apply all to my Text) Let us change our course of Lukewarmness for a course of fervency in God's service, our dull and drowsie Devotions for a course of Zeal. Be zealous and Repent.

III.

AND thus I come to the Third thing I propounded, namely, the Connexion and dependance of these latter words [Be zealous therefore and Repent] upon the former [As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten.] Many things might be here observed, but I will name but one, which is this, That Repentance is the means to avoid and prevent God's Judgments. For (as Tertullian in his de Penitentia observes,) * Qui penam per judicium destinavit, idem & veniam per penitentiam spondit: He that hath decreed to punish by Justice, hath promised to grant pardon by Repentance. And so we read in Jeremy 18. 7. When I shall speak (saith the Lord there) concerning a Nation or Kingdom, to pluck up, to pull down, and to destroy it: If that Nation against whom I have pronounced, turn from evil, I will repent of the evil which I thought to do unto them. And in Ezekiel 18. Repent and turn from all your transgressions, for why will ye die, O ye house of Israel; namely, that death wherewith God threatned them, if they should continue in their sins, they might prevent by returning to him by repentance. And so saith God to Jeremy, in chap. 26. 2, 3. Speak all the words that I command thee to speak unto them: If so be they will hearken, and turn every man from his evil way, that I may repent me of the evil which I purpose to do unto them, because of the evil of their doings. Lo here, If we repent us of our Sins, God will also repent him of his Judgments, that is, he will not send them. Thus when the Ninevites repented in Sackcloth and ashes, it is said (Jonah 3. 10.) And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way, and God repented of (that is, he brought not upon them) the evil that he had said he would do unto them. And so if Laodicea (in my Text) should leave her Lukewarmness; God, who would have chastised her because he loved her, would yet withhold her chastisements because she repented. Would we then avoid the Judgments of God hanging over our heads? Let us not then defer our Repentance. Would we not have the flaming fire of God's wrath and vengeance to consume us? Let us repent of our Lukewarmness, and get this sacred Fire of Zeal, the only means to preserve us: Be zealous therefore and repent.

DISCOURSE LIII.

1 Ep. JOHN 2. 3.

Hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his Commandments.

AN that is born of a woman (saith Job) is of short continuance and full of trouble: Nay our days are not so few, but they are also as full of sorrow, full of unquietness and discontent; no hour is without, no estate is free; from him that sitteth upon the glorious throne unto him that is beneath in the earth and ashes, from him that is clothed in silk and wears a crown even unto him that is clothed in simple raiment. He that had attained the highest pitch of worldly felicity,

King Solomon, who was great and encreased above all that were before him in Jerusalem, whose eyes had whatsoever they desired, who withheld not his heart from any joy; yet when he had considered all, he could see no good thing under the Sun, nothing wherein he could find true hearts-content; but cried out, Vanity of vanities all is vanity and vexation of Spirit: All things are full of Labour, man cannot utter it. Yea Pleasure it self is linkt with pain and sorrow, Extrema gaudii semper occupat luctus. In vain then do mentake up their rest where they have not long to stay; in vain do they seek for comfort in those things where no true comfort can be found. There is but one thing in the world that can make this miserable life happy unto us, and that is so to demean our selves while we live here, as that we may be assured of the Life to come: This is that will make us not to feel the sorrows and troubles of this life; This is that will make us with ease to swallow the bitter pills of Death it self; when we can say with * Job, I know (or I am sure) that my Redeemer liveth, and that these eyes shall see him, though worms consume this body of mine.

But the greatest part of men think no such Assurance can be had, and therefore think it but labour lost to seek after it: Others on the contrary are too credulous, assuring themselves of God's favour and of eternal life, without any proof or trial of their Assurance whether it be true or no. That both these sorts of men may see what a dangerous Error they are in, let them peruse but this one Epistle of S. John, and out of the whole Epistle let them consider with me a while the Verse which I have read; let them hear what the Spirit saith by the beloved Apostle of the Lord, By this we do know (or come to be assured) that we know him, if we keep his Commandments.

The first part of these words tells us of an Assurance to be gotten; and lest we might deceive our selves, the other part tells us what that is whereby we come to be assured, and whereby we may prove infallibly whether our Assurance which we have conceived be good or no, viz. If we keep his Commandments. By this we do know (or we are sure; so the former Translation, and it comes all to one) that we know him, if we keep his Commandments.

In the first part of these words all is plain, and there is nothing hard to be understood, but only what is meant by this Knowing of Christ; what manner of Knowledge this should be which is here spoken of. For there are diverse kinds of knowing Christ. There is a Knowledge which the very Devils have: the Devils (saith S. James) believe also and tremble; and in Luke 4. 34. we read that the Devil said unto Christ, I know thee who thou art, the holy one of God; and in verse 41. that other Devils also came out of many whom they possessed, crying out and saying, Thou art Christ the son of God; but Christ rebuked them, and would not suffer them λαλεῖν ὅτι ᾔδεισαν τὸν Χριστὸν αὐτὸν εἶ to say that they knew him to be Christ. There is a Knowledge likewise which the wicked may have, but it is like unto the Knowledge which Devils have : For the wicked may know Christ to be the Son of God, they may know he died upon the Cross for the sins of men they may know that he is gone up into Heaven and sitteth at the right hand of his Father in glory everlasting ; but, alas ! this Knowledge, if they have no more than it, will not profit them at all, it will never stand them in stead, but rather make them more inexcusable at the Day of Judgment.

1 John 2. 3.

But the Knowledge which the Text speaks of, it is the Knowledge of the Faithful, yea it is the Knowledge of Faith, yea it is Faith it self : For this Knowledge of Christ is to know him to be our Christ, to know him to be our Redeemer, to know him to be the Propitiation for our sins as well as for the sins of other men. This you see is Faith it self, and this is the Knowledge here meant ; as you may easily see further, if you do but read the words going next before my Text, where our Apostle saith, If any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous : And he is the Propitiation for our sins ; and then come the words of my Text, And hereby we know (or we are sure) that we know him ; that is, Hereby we know him to be (as was said before) our Advocate, our Propitiation ; all this we are sure, we know, he is to us, if that we keep his Commandments.

I. If therefore Faith be a Knowledge, If to believe in Christ be to know Christ ; how then can Faith and Ignorance stand together ? how can an ignorant man be a faithful man ? or how can he have Faith who knoweth not the things of Faith ?

Here is a Lesson to be learned of those that think it needless for a man to busie his head in the knowledge of the things belonging to his Salvation ; that think it is enough if they have a good meaning, though they know nothing else. They are proud of their Ignorance, and will say they have as good Souls as the best of them all : but, alas ! they know not that Light and Darkness cannot agree together ; they know not that to walk in darkness is to walk in the shadow of death ; they remember not that Light is come into the world, and that those that love darkness rather than light should be cast into outer darkness, where there is weeping and gnashing of teeth.

* Luke 13. 27.

What will you answer at the great day of hearing, when Christ *will * not know you*, because ye knew him no better ? Will you say, as some do, That you were not Book-learned, and therefore could not read ? Will you say you had no Learning, and therefore hope to be excused ? These Fig-leaves will not serve to cover your nakedness withal.

I confess, there are many things which the Learned know, which you are not bound to know ; Those who are expert in the Scriptures know many things both concerning God and his Works, which others may be ignorant of without endangering their Souls safety ; yea matters of high Controversie, those who are simple are forbidden to meddle withal ; for so saith S. Paul, Rom. 14. 1. Him that is weak in the faith receive you, but not to doubtful disputations.

But things which concern our Faith, things which are needful to our Salvation, things which concern our Obedience unto God ; these things no man must be ignorant of that regards the safety of his Soul ; these things God will require at the hands of every one who shall be saved, whether they be learned or unlearned, whether they be of the wise or of the simple : whosoever knows not Christ and the means to come to Christ ; whosoever knows not what it is to have a Redeemer, to have God to be his Father, what it is to be reconciled to God, to have Christ to be his Advocate and Mediatour ; whosoever knows not such things as these, must hear that heavy doom of Go ye cursed into everlasting fire.

For want of this knowledge of things needful to be known God had a controversy with his people Israel, Hos. 4. 1. The Lord hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no knowledge of God in the land. For want of this knowledge it was that God saith, Esay 5. 13. My people are gone into captivity, because they wanted knowledge. And our Saviour in Luke 19. 42. wept over Jerusalem, and said, O that thou hadst known the things which belong unto thy peace, &c. As it befel the Jews, so will it fall out with every one of us that knows not the things which belong unto our peace, that is, unto our reconciliation with God in Jesus Christ ; God will have a controversy with us, he will send us into everlasting captivity, from whence we shall never return again.

Let me therefore beseech you (Brethren) in the bowels of Jesus Christ, If there be any among you that have not yet gotten this needful knowledge, that do not yet know the things belonging to their peace, that they would now look unto unto themselves, and use the means which God hath appointed. If you may have the best means, use the best: if not, yet make use of those which God hath given you; despise not the least and weakest means; despise not the bare reading of the Scriptures, for they are the Oracles of God, and God's Spirit may be in the mouth of the reader. Pray therefore unto the Lord that he would give you hearts to understand, that his Word may dwell in you plentifully in all wisdom, that he would open unto you the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, that you may relish the heavenly Manna, and that you may long after the sincere milk of the Gospel; that by this means your ways may prosper, your sorrows may be easie and your comforts many, your lives holy and your deaths comfortable.

1 John 2. 3.

And thus much I have spoken to those who are ignorant, and please themselves therein. Now let me speak a word or two also to those who covet and desire knowledge, and take delight in the understanding of rare and excellent things. Surely it is a commendable thing to be desirous of knowledge in any thing which may lawfully be known; and this desire in Solomon pleased God so well, that because he asked wisdom and knowledge, God gave him riches also, and such honour that there was no King like unto him among the Kings that were before him, neither after him ever came the like. Art thou then desirous of knowledge? wouldst thou know rare and excellent things? wouldst thou know things secret, and foreknow things which are to come? Lo here is a Knowledge the best of all knowledges, the knowledge of Faith, to know Christ to be thy Redeemer. What more secret thing wouldst thou know than to know the Mystery which was hidden from the beginning of the world? What higher knowledge than to know thy name to be written in heaven? What more gainful knowledge than that knowledge that will bring thee a Kingdom whose glory shall never have end? What better knowledge of things to come than to know that thou shalt live in the life to come? If thou knewest the tongues of Men and Angels, if thou knewest all Arts and Sciences, if thou were wiser than Solomon, and couldst discourse of Trees and Herbs, of Beasts, of Fowl, and of Fishes, and yet wantest this Knowledge of Faith; all thy wisdom is folly, and thou art not worthy to wipe the shoes of those who are truly wise indeed. Never therefore count thy self wise, before thou art wise in the Lord; never think thou knowest any thing, before thou knowest thou hast a part in Christ Jesus: For Faith is the * Wisdom of wisdoms; he that knows Christ, knows all, though he knows nothing else. So that we may say with Solomon, Prov. 3. 13, &c. Blessed is the man that findeth this wisdom, and getteth this understanding: For the merchandise thereof is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold. Length of dayes is in her right hand, and in her left hand riches and honour. Her wayes are wayes of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace. She is a Tree of life to them that lay hold upon her, and happy is every one that retaineth her.

1 Kings 3.

1 Kings 4. 33.

* Prov. 1. 20.
& ch. 9. 1. &c.
חכמה
Sapientia,
(i. e.) Sapien-tia Sapientiarum, vel Summa Sapientia.

There is yet a third sort of men to whom this which hath been spoken may give profitable instruction; I mean the nice and dainty hearers of the Word, who grow almost weary of hearing, because the Ministers sing nothing but this old song of Knowing and Believing in Christ; they always beat upon this one point, How men should get Faith, and know Christ to be their Redeemer: But they would have some new things taught them, these common things are tedious, the Minister must teach them something they never knew before: or, if they must have the old things still, their stomachs are so queasie, that they must needs have them drest and set out with delicious words and gay shews of Learning, that so they may go down the better; that is, They would have Gold to be gilded, and find want of knowledge in the noblest piece of Learning in the world.

These men are like unto the Israelites, Num. 11. who, when God gave them Manna from heaven, and fed them with the food of Angels; after they had a while been used to it, they began to murmur, and said, Our souls loath this Manna; what, nothing but Manna? what, still Manna? every day Manna, Manna? O that we had the flesh-pots of Egypt, our onions and our cucumbers! As if they had said, What though this Manna be an heavenly Manna, we had rather have that which comes from the Earth, so it be rare and geason; we regard not the goodness of the meat, but the variety of fare.

Verf. 5. 6.

But what besel these dainty-mouthed murmurers? Many they had their wish, they had flesh of the best, the flesh of Quails sent them; but while the * meat was in their mouths, the wrath of the Lord came upon them, and they died; not because it was unlawful for them to eat flesh, but because they made more account of this grotier

* Num. 11. 33.

1 John 2. 3.

food because 'twas rare, then of the Manna which fell from heaven. Take heed therefore, you that are too-too choice in hearing, and had rather hear rare and new things, than profitable things, because you hear them often.

Luke 2. 14.

The Knowledge of Christ is this Manna which came from heaven. If the Minister of God feed you with this, it is the best food he can give you. What more sovereign Diet can be unto your souls than that which makes them live for ever? What more pleasing News can you hear than Tidings that God will be at peace with men? This made the very Angels of heaven to sing for joy at the birth of Christ, Glory be to God on high, and peace amongst men. Account not that common which so few men tast of: account not that tedious which the best of you all have need of, and which if you could once but relish the sweetness of, you would think you never had enough of.

I speak not all this as quite disallowing a moderate shew of Learning in Sermons, but because I would have you know that in respect of the Manna it self they are but leeks and cucumbers, the onions and garlick of Egypt.

* So in Luke 10. 11. γινώσκετε is rendered Be ye sure and John 6. 69. ἐγνώκαμεν We are sure. And so a like word οἶδε is rendered, John 16. 30. Rom. 2. 2. & ch. 15. 29.

A N D so I come to the next thing I observe out of the First part of my Text, and that is from these words, we are sure, or we know, as in the Greek it is * γινώσκωμεν but it comes all to one, for he that knows he knoweth Christ, is sure he knows; he that knows he hath a thing, is sure he hath it.

Rom. 8. 38, 39.

Job 19. 25, &c.

Mark then from hence, That a man may be sure he shall be saved, he may be sure that the Benefits of Christ's death belong unto him. For to know Christ, I told you, was to know him to be our Redeemer, that is, to have Faith in him or to believe him to be our Christ. If every one therefore that knows him aright and believes in him truly, shall be saved; he that is sure he knows him, he that knows he believes truly in him, this man must needs know also and be assured of his Salvation. But you see the words of my Text do plainly imply that a man may be sure he knows Christ, or else in vain should the Apostle tell us of the means how to get that which was impossible to be gotten. But if the words of my Text be not sufficient to persuade you, then call to mind the firm Assurance of S. Paul, who was persuaded that neither life nor death, neither principalities nor powers, nor any thing else in the world, could sever him from the love of God. Call to mind again the words of Job, who saith he was sure that his Redeemer liveth, and that his eyes should see him.

But perhaps you will say that these were extraordinary men, Apostles and Prophets might know so much by special inspiration, but every man must not look for that which they had; All are not Apostles, all are not Prophets, and therefore all must not look to be like unto Apostles and Prophets.

* Ephes. 1. 14. —the earnest of our inheritance; and ch. 4. 30—sealed unto the day of redemption.

1 Sam. 15. 29.

But mark again the words of my Text, We are sure, or we know, that we know him: He says not, I John am or may be sure, or that the other Apostles might be sure; but we know, or we are sure, we know him: that is, I and you both; not I alone who am an Apostle, but all you also to whom I write, who have believed through the preaching of the Apostles and Disciples of the Lord Jesus; we all of us may be sure, or know, we know him, if we keep his Commandments. And surely if this be not so, why doth S. Peter 2 Ep. chap. 1. 10. bid us endeavour to make our calling and election sure? why is the Spirit of God called * the Earnest and Seal of our Salvation? The Seal, we know, confirms and makes a thing sure; and he that hath given earnest, is bound to stand to his bargain: whosoever then doth feel the Spirit of God to be within him, as every one may, and must do before they shall be saved, this man hath God's promise sealed unto him, and God hath given him the Earnest of his Salvation: and certainly God useth not to break covenants, he will not break promise with us, if we keep promise with him; for he is not as the sons of men, that he should be changed; the Lord hath sworn, and it shall not repent him; the counsel of the Lord remains for ever, and his decree from generation to generation.

Wouldest thou then have comfort in thy misery, wouldest thou have joy in all thy sorrows, wouldest thou find rest in the greatest troubles of thy life, wouldest thou entertain Death as a messenger of joy, wouldest thou welcome the Lord Jesus at his coming? O labour then to make thy election sure; never cease till thou hast gotten the seal and earnest of thy Salvation; renounce all kind of peace till thou hast found the peace of conscience; discard all joy till thou feelest the joy of the Holy Ghost. Do this, and there is no calamity so great but thou mayest undergo, no burthen so heavy but thou mayest easily bear it: Do this, and thou shalt live in the fear, dye in the favour, and rise in the power of God the Father, and help to make up the heavenly venly Consort, singing with the Saints and Angels, Hallelujah, Hallelujah, All glory and honour and praise be ascribed to the Lamb, and to him that sitteth upon the throne for evermore. 1 John 2. 3.

Rev. 5. 13.

But now lest that which hath been spoken concerning Assurance of Salvation might disquiet the weak conscience of some who cannot feel this Assurance in themselves; let them know That this Assurance doth not always continue in like measure, but is often shaken with the assaults of mis-belief, and overcast with clouds of distrust. We know that though the Sun be risen upon the earth, she doth not always shew her self in full brightness, but sometimes is overcast with clouds and shadowed from our sight; and yet she always giveth so much light as thereby we may discern the day from the night: Even so although the Sun of comfortable Assurance be risen in our hearts, yet it doth not always shine forth with brightness, or shew it self in full strength and vigour, but is sometime overcast with fear and distrust; and yet when there is least, there is so much light that a man may discern day from night, and know the children of God from the sons of Darkness. Despair not therefore, though fear sometimes disquiets thee; Distrust not the Lord thy God, though he seems sometimes to hide his Countenance from thee: but when thou feelest a combate in thy soul, pray then and say with the Father of that child in the Gospel, Lord, I believe, help thou my unbelief. Mark 9. 24.

AND thus I come unto the second part of my Text, which contains the Means whereby we come to this Certainty of knowing Christ and this Assurance of Salvation; and that is, By keeping God's Commandments; for saith my Text, Hereby we know that we do know him, if we keep his Commandments. To know Christ (I told you) is to believe in him, to be assured we know him is to be assured our Faith is a right and a true Faith; which Faith whosoever knoweth he hath, cannot chuse but know certainly he shall be saved: But hereby (saith my Text) may we know that we know Christ aright, and believe in him truly and savingly, if that we keep his Commandments.

From whence I observe First, That though it be true, That whatsoever good thing we have cometh from God, and that it is his Holy Spirit that worketh all heavenly graces in our hearts; yet he doth it not immediately, without means, but by blessing those helps and motives to us which he hath ordained for us to attain such graces and such favours by. Observat. 1.

For it is true, That Assurance of Salvation is the work of God's Spirit; and yet S. John saith here, That it is the keeping of God's Commandments whereby we are assured we know Christ to be our Redeemer: that is, The Spirit of God by this keeping of the Commandments and by obedience to the will of God doth assure us, as by an argument or evidence, that our Faith is a true Faith, a living Faith; and that therefore we may assure our selves that the Spirit of God dwelleth in us, and that we shall enjoy a Crown with Saints and Angels in the life to come. So likewise Faith is the work of the Spirit of God; and yet S. Paul saith, that Faith cometh by hearing, Rom. 10. 17. how should men believe unless they hear the Word preached? It is God that saveth us, and Christ who purchased eternal life for us; and yet the use of the Sacraments must be as means to bring us to this happiness. So saith Christ, Every one that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; and S. Peter, 1 Ep. 3. 21. calleth Baptism the figure Mark 16. 16. whereby we are saved.

And throughout the Scripture we shall find that God bestows his blessings and favours by the use of means, and to those who use the means which he hath appointed. If Abimelech will have God to heal him and to forgive his sin, he must have Abraham to pray unto God for him: so saith the Text, Gen. 20. 7. Restore the man his wife; for he is a Prophet, and he shall pray for thee, and thou shalt live. So if Job's friends will have God to forgive their sin in censuring Job so uncharitably, they must use the means which God commanded them, Job 42. 8. Take unto you (saith God) seven bullocks and seven rams, and go to my servant Job, and offer for your selves a burnt-offering; and my servant Job shall pray for you, and I will accept him. If Cornelius will have the will of God revealed to him, he must send to Joppa for Peter to preach unto him, Acts 10. 5. If Naaman the Syrian will have the God of Israel to heal him of his Leprosie, he must use the means commanded, to wash himself seven times in the River Jordan, 2 Kings 5. 10, 14. Again, Though God had promised Jacob that he would be with him, that he would do him good, when he was to return unto the land of Canaan; and though Jacob depended only upon God to deliver him from the fury of his brother Esau; yet he knew that God would require of him the using of the means, and therefore he sent a Present to his brother, and when Gen. 32. he he came unto him, he used all humble and submiss behaviour toward him. Lastly, Though Hezekiah in his sickness had received a Sign and a Promise from God that he should recover, I have heard thy prayer, (saith the Lord, 2 Kings 20. 5.) I have seen thy tears: behold I will heal thee, on the third day thou shalt go up unto the house of the Lord; yet for all this he did not neglect the means, for according to the counsel of the Prophet Esay, he took a lump of figs (saith the Text, ver. 7.) and laid it upon the boil, and he recovered. Thus then you see the manner how God bestows his graces and favours upon the sons of men: He is the chief and principal worker in all things which are done, and yet he worketh not without the means, for so he should always do Miracles; (for Miracles are nothing else but the works of God without and against the ordinary means) but he worketh by blessing of the means to those who have and use them.

1 John 2. 3.

2 Pet. 3. 16.

Here is therefore a Lesson worthy to be learned of those who, when you tell them of the perverseness and corruption of their hearts, and exhort them to seek to be at peace with God, to amend their lives, to eschew evil and do the works of righteousness; answer presently, That all the thoughts of man's heart are by nature evil, and that of our selves we are not able so much as to think one good thought, much less to do any good deed; we have no free will in these things, but are dead in sin; we cannot turn to God, unless he turns us first unto him; we cannot mend, unless God first amend us; we cannot believe, unless he give us Faith; we cannot of our selves do any good, until it pleaseth God to enable us: And after this manner (as S. Peter saith) those who are unskilful and unstable wrest the Scriptures to their own destruction. But do you not know also, that it is God that giveth us our daily bread, that he giveth us meat to eat and cloaths to put on? and yet which of you all will not use the means to get these things, because else you cannot look that God should give you his blessing? Do you not know, when you are sick of a bodily disease, that if you be healed, God must heal you, God must restore you to your former health? and yet which of you all will not seek unto the Physician, and use all means that can be gotten? Do you not know, when you are in danger, that God must deliver you? and yet would you not laugh at him that in such a case should sit still and say, God help me, and never stir his finger to help himself? Are you thus wise in these outward things, and will you not be as wise in things spiritual? It is needful you should use the means to obtain God's blessing in things concerning your Body, and is it needless in things concerning the good of your Soul?

Heb. 4. 12.

2 Sam. 10. 12.

It is true indeed that of your selves you are not able to turn from your evil ways unto the Lord your God; but you are able, I hope, to use the means whereby God's Spirit works the conversion of the heart. This Sun the Lord makes to shine both upon the evil and the good; this Rain he shewres down upon the just and unjust. What though thou canst not believe of thy self? yet thou canst use the means of believing. What though thou canst not of thy self will or do the thing which is good? yet mayest thou use the means whereby God gives the grace of willing and doing good. Wouldst thou then have God to enable thee with the grace and power of his Spirit? use the means wherein the Spirit of God is lively and mighty in operation, sharper than any two-edged sword, and entreth through even to the dividing asunder of Soul and Spirit: Meditate continually in the Law of God, be diligent to hear the Word both read and preached, attend to Exhortation, to Instruction: and as Joab said unto his army going against the Aramites, Be strong, and let us be valiant for our people and for the cities of our God, and let the Lord do that which is good in his eyes; so say thou unto thine own Soul, I will firmly resolve, and with all the power I have endeavour to use the means appointed by our God, and let the Lord do that which is good in his eyes. Nay then fear not, thou shalt see the salvation of the Lord: he will give thee a new heart, and put a new spirit within thee; he will take away thy heart of stone, and give thee an heart of flesh, that thou mayest walk in his statutes and keep his Commandments; and thou shalt be one of his people, and he will be thy God.

Observat. 2.

Christ must be received whole, not only as a Priest, but as a King.

Observe in the second place, That a true and unfeigned Faith in Christ (which is the knowing him here mentioned) brings forth obedience to his Commandments. Christ, we must know, is not only a Priest to reconcile us, but also a King to be obeyed by us. These two, as they are inseparable in him, [a Priest, but a Kingly Priest; a King, but a Priestly King;] so must the acknowledgment of them be in his servants. Whosoever therefore receives him as a Priest for atonement of his sin, must also submit unto him with loyal obedience as a King. We can never truly acknowledge him the the one, but we must also yield him the other. For Christ will not be divided by us; we must, if we will have him, take him whole; otherwise we have no share in him at all. This is that Faith we say justifies, and no other but such a Faith as this, which adheres unto Christ Jesus both as a Priest and as our Lord and King. And therefore do our Adversaries most unworthily and wrongfully charge us, That we condemn Good works, or hold a man may be in Christ or in the state of grace, though his life be never so wicked; because we hold, as S. Paul does, we are justified by Faith, and not by the works of the Law, Gal. 2. 16.

Observe, thirdly, That the Act of Faith which justifies is the Receiving or Knowing of Christ; not (as some erroneously conceive) an Assurance or Knowing we know him. For Assurance of being justified is no way a Cause or Instrument, but a Consequent of Justification. A man must be first justified before he can know or be assured he is justified. For this Assurance or Certification you may see in my Text comes in the third place, not in the first; wherein you may observe these three things to have this order, 1. Knowing or owning Christ, which is Faith: 2. Keeping his Commandments, which is the Fruit and evidence of a true Faith: then in the third place comes Assurance. For by this we are sure we do know him, if we keep his Commandments. The Object must be before it can be known; the Sun must be risen before she can be seen: So hath every one his interest in Christ before he can know he hath it. Nay he may have it long before, before he knows he hath it: For it is not only a consequent, but a separable consequent, neither presently gotten, and often interrupted. For though it be necessary the Sun should be risen before she can be seen; yet she may be long up before we see her, and often clouded after she hath shined. This I observe for the comfort of those who are troubled in mind and tempted to despair, because they see not the light of God's countenance shining in their hearts.

My fourth Observation, and the chief in the Text, is this, That he that walks in the ways of God, and makes conscience to keep his Commandments, may hereby infallibly know he knows Christ, that his Faith is a true Faith, and that he shall be saved everlastingly. This is the main and principal Scope of the Text, and so plainly therein expressed, that it needs no other confirmation. But the Reason is plain; For Good works are the fruits of Faith, and a Godly conversation is the work of God's holy Spirit. Whomsoever Christ accepts as a Servant, he gives the token of his Spirit, the Grace which enlivens and quickens the Heart and Will to his Service in a new and reformed conversation. Even as the heat of the Fire warmeth whatsoever comes near unto it; so the Spirit of Christ kindles this Grace in every Heart that Faith links unto him: the Fruit whereof is that infallible Livery whereby every one that wears it may know himself to be his Servant.

A Tree is known by its fruit, the workman is known by his work; whosoever then shews these works, and brings forth these fruits, hath an infallible argument that the Spirit of God, the earnest of his Salvation, dwells in his heart; that his Faith is a true and saving Faith; that his believing is no presumption, no false conceit, no delusion of the Devil, but the true and certain motion of God's own Spirit. The rising of the Sun is known by the shining beams, the Fire is known by its burning, the Life of the Body is known by its moving: Even so certainly is the presence of God's Spirit known by the shining light of an holy conversation; even so certainly the purging Fire of Grace is known by the burning Zeal against sin, and a fervent desire to keep God's Commandments; even so certainly the Life and liveliness of Faith is known by the good motions of the Heart, by the bestirring of all the powers both of Soul and Body, to do whatsoever God wills us to be doing as soon as we once know he would have us do it. He that hath this Evidence, hath a bulwark against Despair, and may dare the Devil to his face: He that hath this, hath the Broad Seal of Eternal life, and such a man shall live for ever.

But on the contrary, He that walks not in the ways of Obedience to God's Commandments; whatsoever conceit he hath of God's favour toward him, without all doubt he knows not Christ to be his Redeemer, he hath not nor cannot have any Assurance of Salvation; for how should a man be assured of that which is not? His Hope is Presumption, his Faith is nothing but Security, his Comfort (if he feels any) a mere imagination: His Hope, his Faith, his Comfort are all delusions of the Devil. For if we say (saith our Apostle chap. 1. ver. 6.) that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we are liars, yea and the Devil, the Father of lies, is in us.

Here therefore is a good Caveat for us all. Let us not deceive our selves; without Holiness no man shall see God. Beware of Presumption, for Presumption sends more

John 2. 3.

Observat. 3.

Observat. 4.

Heb. 12. 14.

1 John 2. 3.

more to Hell than Desperation. Let us never think we have Faith to be saved by, or acknowledge Christ throughly, till we may see and know it by keeping his Commandments. For hereby we know that we know him, &c.

But you may say, Alas ! this is an hard saying : If none have true Faith or know Christ aright but those who keep the Law of God, who then can be saved ? For what man is he who hath such a Faith ? For there is no man living which sins not ; and who can say his Heart is clean ? the best of us all hath need to pray unto God daily and hourly, Lord, forgive our trespasses.

1. I answer, It is true, that an absolute and perfect Obedience to the Law of God is not attainable in this life : For the best that are, though not in a current and constant course, yet ever and anon offend, both in doing what they ought not, and omitting what they should do ; yea some mixture of infirmity and imperfections will cleave unto the face of the fairest action. So incompatible is an uninterrupted and unstained purity with this unglorified state of mortality.

2. All this is true and cannot be denied ; For our Apostle himself saith chap. 1. 8. If we say we have no sin, we deceive our selves, and there is no truth in us. But the same Apostle in chap. 3. 8. of this Epistle saith also, That he which commits sin, is of the Devil. There is therefore some measure of holiness and obedience, and that more than ordinary, required of those who are the Sons of God. That ours may be such, we must know the requisites thereof are three, To be Cordial, Resolved, and Universal.

Matth. 21. 19.

Psal. 119. 2.

1. It must be Cordial, that is, Conscionable and Sincere : it must be internal, proceeding from the Heart, not external only, in the appearance of the outward work. God looks for fruit, and not for leaves ; therefore the Fig-tree in the Gospel which had nothing but leaves, we know, was accursed. But blessed are they (saith David) that keep his Testimonies, and seek him with their whole heart. For true Faith not only restrains the actions of the outward man, ( for that Humane laws and other respects may do ) but it purifies the Heart also from the reigning allowance of any lust or lewd course of sin. There is abhorring as well as abstaining, loathing as well as leaving ; for else a chained Lion, though he abstain from devouring, hath his Lionish nature still.

2. It must be Resolved, that is, out of a full and settled purpose to conform our selves to the Law of God ; That howsoever we often fail in the execution, yet this Root may still keep life within us. For good actions which come only by fits and occasions, are no part of true Obedience : nor where such a Resolution is, are failings and slips more a sign of a disobedient child, than the missing of a mark argues he that shot never aimed to hit it ; but only is a sign either of weakness, want of skill, or good heed, or some impediment.

3. It must be Universal ; I say not absolute and perfect, for no man can keep the Law of God absolutely and perfectly ; yet it must be Universal, that is, to one Commandment as well as to another. True Obedience knows no exception, no reservation, nor can any such stand with a true Faith and allegiance to Christ our Lord.

First therefore there must no darling, no bosome sin, no Herodias, be cherished : such a dead fly as this will marre the whole box of ointment : For how should he take himself for a faithful servant of Christ, who still holds correspondence with his Arch-enemy the Devil ? It were treason in an earthly subject to do it, how serviceable soever he might otherwise be unto his Prince. One breach in the walls of a City exposeth it to the surprise of the Enemy ; one leak in a Ship neglected will sink it at last into the bottom of the Sea ; the stab of a Pen-knife to the Heart will as well speed a man as twenty Rapiers run through him : If thou hedge thy close as high as the middle region of the Air in all other places, and leave but one gap, all thy grass will be gone : If the Fowler catch the Bird either by the head or the foot or the wing, she is sure his own. So in the present case, If Satan keep possession but by one reigning sin, it will be thine everlasting ruine. If thou live and die with allowance and delight in any one known sin, without resolution to part with it ; thou art none of Christ's servants, thou as yet carriest the Devil's brand, he hath thereby markt thee out for his own.

Secondly, An Universal obedience submits not only to Prohibitions of not doing evil, but puts in practice the Injunctions of doing good. Many think they keep the Commandments well, so they do nothing which they forbid : But the not doing good is a sin as well as the doing of evil. Dives fries in Hell, not for robbing, but for not relieving relieving Lazarus. The unprofitable servant was cast into outer darkness, not for spending, but for not bestowing his Master's talent. The five foolish Virgins were shut out of doors, not for wasting, but for not having oil in their Lamps. And the wicked shall be condemned at the last day, not for reaving the meat from the hungry, but for not feeding their poor brethren; not for stripping the naked out of his cloaths, but for not cloathing him. It will not be enough for thee that thou bringest forth no bad fruit, but thou must bring forth good fruit. Every Tree that bringeth not forth good fruit, shall be hewen down and cast into the fire. What if thou steal not from thy brother? yet if thou open not thy hand to help and succour him, thou art a Robber. What if thou dost neither lie nor swear? yet if thou makest not thy mouth a glorious organ, and thy tongue a trumpet to sound forth and proclaim the love and mercy of God, thou art a deep and a round offender. What if no man can condemn thee for any evil? yet unless God and thine own conscience shall commend thee for some good thou hast done, thou art far from any Assurance of Faith, or Knowing thou knowest Christ to be thy Redeemer.

1 John 2. 3.
Math. 25.

Math. 3. 10.

---

The End of the First Book.

---

THE SECOND BOOK
OF THE WORKS
OF

The Pious and Profoundly-Learned

Joseph Mede, B. D.

SOMETIME

Fellow of CHRIST'S Colledge in CAMBRIDGE.

---

CONTAINING SEVERAL DISCOURSES AND TREATISES OF CHURCHES.
AND
The Worship of God therein.

---

Horat. de Arte Poet.

——— *Fuit hæc Sapientia quondam,
Publica privatis secernere, sacra profanis.*

---

Corrected and Enlarged according to the Author's own Manuscripts.

---

172 173

John P. Jones

CHAS. H. JONES

CHAS. H. JONES

CHAS. H. JONES

THE CONTENTS OF THE SECOND BOOK.

Of Churches.

1 COR. II. 22.

*Have ye not Houses to eat and drink in ?
[ ἢ τῆς Ἐκκλησίας τοῦ Θεοῦ καταφρονεῖτε ; ] or despise ye the Church of God ?*

pag. 319

The Reverence of God's House.

ECCLES. 5. 1.

Look to thy foot [ or feet ] when thou comest to the House of God ; and be more ready to obey, than to offer the Sacrifice of fools.

pag. 340

The Christian Sacrifice.

MALACHI I. II.

From the rising of the Sun even unto the going down of the same, my Name shall be great among the Gentiles ; and in every place Incense shall be offered unto my Name, and a pure Offering : for my Name shall be great among the Heathen, saith the Lord of Hosts.

CHAP. I. The Text a Prophecy of the Christian Sacrifice, according to the judgment of the ancient Fathers in the Second, Third and Fourth Centuries. The difficulty of explaining the Christian Sacrifice: The Reasons of this difficulty. The Method and Order propounded for this Discourse.
pag. 355

CHAP. II. The Christian Sacrifice defined, and briefly explained. The two parts or double Object of this Sacrifice. What meant by Sacrificium Quod, what by Sacrificium Quo. pag. 356

CHAP. III. The words of the Text explained, and applied to the foregoing Definition of the Christian Sacrifice. Incense denotes the rational part of this Sacrifice, Mincha the material part thereof. What meant by Mincha purum. Two Interpretations of the Purity of the Christian Mincha given by the Fathers ; a third propounded by the Author. pag. 357

CHAP. IV. *Six Particulars contained in the Definition of the Christian Sacrifice.
The First, viz. That this Christian Service is an Oblation, proved out of Antiquity. How long the Apostles Age lasted, or when it ended. Proofs out of the Epistles of Clemens and Ignatius. Προσφορά, Θυσία and Δοχὴ how distinguished in Ignatius. The Christian Service is properly Προσφορά, but improperly Θυσία according to the strict and prime sense of the word.* pag. 360

CHAP. V. *The Second Particular, That the Christian Sacrifice is an Oblation of Thanksgiving and Prayer, proved from Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Clemens
Alexandr. &c. The Altar, or Holy Table, anciently the place of the publick Prayers of the Church. Prayer, Oblation and Sacrifice promiscuously used by the Fathers
when they speak of the Christian Sacrifice.
The Conjunction of Prayer and the Eucharist argued from Acts 2. 42. and from Ignatius ad Ephes. The three parts of which the Christian Synaxis consisted.*
pag. 362

CHAP. VI. The Third Particular, That the Christian Sacrifice is an Oblation of Thanksgiving and Prayer through Jesus Christ Commemorated in the Creatures [ E c 2 ] of

THE CONTENTS.

of Bread and Wine. Sacrifices under the Law were Rites to invoke God by. That the Eucharist is a Rite to give thanks and invoke God by, proved from several Testimonies of the Fathers and the Greek Liturgies. A passage out of Mr. Perkins agreeable to this notion. What meant by that usual expression of the Ancients speaking of the Eucharist, [Through Jesus Christ the great High Priest.] By Nomen Dei in Mal. 1. Justin M. and Irenæus understood Christ. Why in the Eucharist Prayers were to be directed to God the Father. pag. 365.

CHAP. VII. The Fourth particular, That the Commemoration of Christ in the Creatures of Bread and Wine (in the Eucharist) is a Sacrifice, according to the style of the ancient Church. How sacrifices are distinguished from all other Offerings. A Sacrifice defined. The Universal Custom of mankind to contract or confirm Covenants and Friendship by eating and drinking together: This illustrated from Testimonies of Scripture and humane Authors. Sacrifices were Federal Feasts, wherein God and men did feast together in token of amity and friendship. What was God's Mess or portion in the Sacrifices. The different Laws of Burnt-offerings, Sin-and-Trespas-offerings, and the Peace-offerings. Burnt-offerings had Meat and Drink-offerings annexed to them, and were regularly accompanied with Peace-offerings. That sacrifices were Feasts of amity between God and men, proved by four Arguments. The reason of these phrases, Secare fœdus and Icere fœdus. That in those Sacrificial Feasts (and also in the Eucharist) God is to be considered as the Convivator, and Man as the Conviva. This cleared by several passages in this (as also in the following) Chapter. pag. 369.

CHAP. VIII. The Fifth Particular, That the Body and Blood of Christ in the Eucharist was made of Bread and Wine which had first been offered to God, to agnize him the Lord of the Creature. This proved from the Testimonies of Antiquity next to the Apostles times, and from ancient Liturgies; as also from the Fathers arguing from this Oblation of the Creature in the Eucharist to God, that the Father of Christ was the Creator of the world, in confutation of some Hereticks in their days; and lastly from S. Paul's parallel of the Lord's Supper and the Sacrifices of the Gentiles. Two Questions answered. 1. Whence may it appear that our Saviour at the Institution of the Eucharist did first offer the Bread and Wine to God, to agnize him the Lord of the Creature? 2. Is not the celebration of the Eucharist in the Western Churches (whether the Reformed or the Roman) therefore defective, because no such Oblation is there in use? pag. 372.

CHAP. IX. The Sixth Particular, That Christ is offered in the Eucharist Commemoratively only, and not otherwise. This Commemorative Sacrifice, or the Commemoration in the Eucharist, explained. That Christ is offered by way of Commemoration only, was the sense of the ancient Church. This proved from ancient Liturgies and Fathers. The Conclusion, containing an elegant description of the Christian Sacrifice out of the History of S. Andrew's Martyrdom. pag. 376.

EZRA VI. X.

That they may offer Sacrifices of sweet savour unto the God of Heaven, and pray for the life of the King, and of his Sons. pag. 379.

The Name Θυσιαστήριον or Altare anciently given to the Holy Table. pag. 382.

We will go into his Tabernacle, we will worship towards his Footstool. pag. 393.

Concio ad Clerum.

Levit. 19. 30.

Sanctuarium meum reveremini. pag. 398.

CHURCHES

CHURCHES,

THAT IS,

Appropriate Places

FOR

CHRISTIAN WORSHIP.

BOTH IN, AND EVER SINCE THE APOSTLES TIMES.

---

A Discourse at first more briefly delivered in a Colledge-Chappel, and since enlarged.

---

BY

JOSEPH MEDE B. D.

AND

Sometime Fellow of Christ's Colledge in CAMBRIDGE.

---

Concil. Gangrense Anno Christi 325. can. 5.
Εἴ τις διδάσκει ἢ οἶκον τῷ Θεῷ συγκαταφθνήσκον ἐν — ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

---

---

REVERENDISSIMO IN CHRISTO
PATRI & DOMINO SUO SUMME HONORANDO, DOMINO
GUILIELMO
DIVINA PROVIDENTIA
ARCHIEPISCOPO CANTUARIENSI, METROPOLITANO.
TOTIUSQUE ANGLIÆ PRIMATI,

Hanc suam de Ecclesiarum ( hoc est, Locorum cultui Christiano dicatorum ) jam inde ab Apostolorum temporibus
Antiquitate Dissertationem,

*Antiquitatis Ecclesiasticæ propugnatori, sublatique inter sacrum & profanum discriminis assertori eximio,
In grati & officiosi animi indicium,
Eâ quâ decet submissione & favoris spe,
DICAT CONSECRATQUE
REV<sup>ma</sup> Paternitatis ipsius*

Cultor & Sacellanus observantissimus

J. M.

THE SECOND BOOK; CONTAINING SEVERAL DISCOURSES and TREATISES CONCERNING CHURCHES,
AND
The Worship of God therein.

CHURCHES.
THAT IS,
APPROPRIATE PLACES
For Christian Worship, both in and ever since the Apostles times.

I COR. II. 22.

Have ye not houses to eat and drink in ? [ ἢ τὴν Ἐκκλησίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ καταφρονεῖτε ; ] or despise ye the Church of God.

It is taken in a manner for granted by the most of our Reformed Writers, and affirmed also by *some of the other side, That in the Apostles times and in the Ages next after them ( whilst the Church lived under Pagan and persecuting Emperors ) Christians had no Oratories or Places set apart for Divine worship; but that they assembled here and there promiscuously and uncertainly, as they pleased, or the occasion served, in places of common use, and not otherwise. But that this is an error, I intend to demonstrate by good evidence; taking my rise from this passage of the Apostle, who reproving the Corinthians for using prophane banquetings and feastings in a Sacred place, Have ye not houses ( saith he ) to eat and drink in ? ἢ τὴν Ἐκκλησίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ καταφρονεῖτε ; or despise ye the Church of God ? Here I take the word Ἐκκλησία, or Church, to note, not the Assembly, but the Place appointed for Sacred duties ; and that from the opposition thereof to Οἰκίαι, their own Houses, Μὴ γὰρ οἰκίας ἔχετε ; Have ye not Houses to eat and drink in ? these are places proper for ordinary and common repast, and not the Church or House of God : which is again repeated in the last verse of that Chapter, Εἰ δέ τις πεινᾷ, ἐν Οἴκῳ ἐσθιέτω, If any man hunger, let him eat at home.

Thus most of the Fatherstook Ἐκκλησία in this passage, namely, as most of the words signifying an Assembly or Company are wont to be used also for the Place thereof ; as Ἀγορά, Βουλή, Συνέδριον, Synagoga, Collegium, &c.

* Joseph. Vita-
com. de antiquis Missa ri-tibus, Vol. 3. l. 2.
c. 21.

1 Cor. 11. 22.
Quæst. 57. sup.
Levit.

S. Austin is so plain as nothing can be more. For concerning expressions, where the Continent is called by the name of the Thing contained, he instances in this of Ecclesia;

(a) As (for Example) the Church is called the Place where the Church is assembled. For the Church are men, of whom accordingly it is said (Ephes. 5. 21.) That he might present to himself a glorious Church: But withal that the Church is called the House of Prayer, the same Apostle testifies, where he saith, Have ye not Houses to eat and drink in? or despise ye the Church of God?

(b) That we ought not to dishonour Sacred places or things by the mixture of things of common use. S. Basil confirms it from that in S. Matth. 21. 12, 13. as also from that in 1 Cor. 11. 22. Have ye not Houses to eat and drink in? or despise ye the Church of God? and verse 34. If any man hunger, let him eat at home, &c.

Templo, & mensas numulariorum, & cathedras vendentium columbas evertit, & dicit eis, Scriptum est, Domus mea domus orationis vocabitur, vos autem fecistis eam speluncam latronum. Et ad Cor. 1. Numquid domos non habetis ad manducandum & bibendum? aut Ecclesiam Dei contemnitis? Si quis esurit, domi manducet, ut non in iudicium conveniat.

(c) In answer to that Question, Whether may the Holy Oblation (or Eucharist) be celebrated in a common house, he affirms, That as the Word doth not allow that any common vessel or utensil should be brought into places that are Sacred [carried through the Temple, Mark 11. 16.] so likewise doth it forbid that the Holy Mysteries should be celebrated in a common house: For neither would the Old Testament permit any such thing to be done, nor our Lord who said, There is here one greater than the Temple, (Matth 12 6.) nor the Apostle, saying, Have ye not Houses to eat and drink in? &c. Whence we may learn, That we ought not to take our common supper in the Church, nor should we dishonour the Lord's Supper by eating it in a private house. But if one be necessitated to communicate in private, let him then chuse out the most clean and decent house or room for such a purpose, and withal see that he do it in the fittest and most seasonable time.

(d) Despise ye the Church of God?
(e) Making it a place for common feasts and banquetings.

The Author also of the Commentaries upon the Epistles, amongst the works of S. Hierome, (whosoever he were) expounding (d) Ecclesiam Dei contemnitis? by (e) Facientes eam Triclinium epularum, shews, he took Ecclesia here to signifie the Place.

The self-same words are to be found in the Commentaries of Scdulus, as many other passages of this Author verbatim; which I note by the way.

(f) Behold a fourth charge, That not the poor only, but also the Church it self is injur'd. For as hereby thou makest the Lord's Supper a private Supper; so thou dealest no better with the Place, in that thou usest the Church as a private and ordinary house.

And so it is with Theodoret, who paraphraseth the words on this manner;

(g) If ye come together to feast it, do this in your own Houses: for to do thus in the Church is a manifest contempt, a plain dishonour done to the Church. For how can it but seem a thing wholly indecorous and absurd for you to fare deliciously in the Temple of God, where the Lord

(a) "Sicut Ecclesia (saith he) dicitur locus quo Ecclesia congregatur. Nam Ecclesia homines sunt, de quibus dicitur, Ut exhiberet sibi gloriosam Ecclesiam: Hanc tamen vocari etiam ipsam Domum orationum, idem Apostolus testis est, ubi ait, Numquid domos non habetis ad manducandum & bibendum? an Ecclesiam Dei contemnitis?"

S. Basil hath the same notion in his Moralia, Reg. 30. (b) "Quid non oportet [τὰ ἁγία] loca sacra mixturâ eorum quæ ad communem usum spectant contumeliâ afficere. Which he confirms thus; Et intravit Jesus in Templum Dei, & eiciebat omnes ementes & vendentes in Again, in his Regule compendiosius explicata, Interrog. & Respons. 310. answering that Question, (c) "Numquid in communi domo sacra oblatio debeat celebrari? Quemadmodum, saith he, verbum non permittit ut vas ullum commune in sancta introferatur; eodem modo etiam vetat sancta in domo communi celebrari: quum vetus Testamentum nihil isto modo fieri permittat; Domino item dicente, Plus quam templum est hic; Apostolo item, Numquid domos non habetis ad manducandum & bibendum? &c. Ex quibus erudimur, neque communem cœnam in Ecclesia edere & bibere, neque Dominicam cœnam in privata domo contumeliâ afficere: extra quam si quis, cum necessitas poscat, locum domumve puriorum delegerit tempore opportuno —

S. Chrysostome is of the same mind; (f) "Ecce quarta accusatio, (saith he) quod non pauperes tantum, sed Ecclesia leditur. Quemadmodum enim Dominicam cœnam privatam facis; ita & Locum, tanquam Domo Ecclesiæ usus. Ecclesia therefore here with him is Locus.

(g) "Si acceditis ut lautè & opiparè epulemini, hoc facite in domibus. Hoc enim in Ecclesia est contumelia, & aperta insolentia. Quomodo enim non est absurdum, intus in Templo Dei, presente Domino, qui communem nobis mensam apponit, sicut, himself is present, who hath prepared for us a common table; when at the same time those Christians that are poor are hungry, and out of countenance by reason of their poverty?

suit, vos quidem laute vivere, eos autem qui sunt pauperes esurire, & propter paupertatem erubescere?

1 Cor. 11. 22.

Theophylact and Oecumenius follow the same track, as he that looks them shall find.

I have produced thus largely the Glosses of the Fathers upon this Text, that they might be as a preparative to my ensuing Discourse, by removing, or mitigating at the least, that prejudice which some have so deeply swallowed, of an utter unlikelihood of any such Places to have been in the Apostles times, or the times near them. For if these Glosses of the Fathers be true, then were there Places called Ecclesia or Churches, and consequently Places appointed and set apart for Christian assemblies to perform their solemn Service to God in, even in the Apostles times. Or suppose they be not true, or but doubtful, and not necessary; yet thus much will follow howsoever, That these Fathers, who were nearer to those Primitive times by above one thousand one hundred years than we are, and so had better means to know what they had or had not than we, supposed there were such Places even in the Apostles times: If in the Apostles times, then no doubt in the Ages next after them. And thus we shall gain something by this Text, whether we accept this notion of the word Ecclesia or not.

HAVING therefore gotten so good an entrance, we will now further enquire What manner of places they were, or may be supposed to have been, which were appropriated to such use; and that done, proceed to shew by such Testimonies or footsteps of Antiquity as Time hath left unto us, That there were such Places through every Age respectively from the days of the Apostles unto the reign of Constantine, that is, in every of the first three hundred years.

For the first, It is not to be imagined they were * such goodly and stately Structures as the Church had after the Empire became Christian, and we now by God's blessing enjoy; but such as the state and condition of the times would permit; at the first, some capable and convenient Room within the walls or dwelling of some pious disciple, dedicated by the religious bounty of the owner to the use of the Church, and that usually an Ἀνώγειον, or ὑπερῶν, an upper room, such as the Latines call Cænaculum, being, according to their manner of building, as the most large and capacious of any other, so likewise the most retired and freest from disturbance, and next to Heaven, as having no other room above it. For such uppermost places we find they were wont then to make choice of, even for private devotions; as may be gathered from what we read of S. Peter, Acts 10. 9. ἀνέβη ὅτι τὸ δῶμα προσευξάσαι, that he went up to the house-top to pray: for so Δῶμα signifies, ex usu Hellenistarum, and is accordingly here rendred by the vulgar Latine, in superiora.

Such an Hyperdon as we speak of, was that remembred by the name of * Cænaculum

(a) The Upper room of Sion,

(as we read in Acts 10. 13, &c.) assembled together daily for prayer and supplication; and where being thus assembled, the Holy Ghost came down upon them in Cloven tongues of fire at the Feast of Pentecost. * Concerning which there hath been a Tradition in the Church, That this was the same room wherein our Blessed Saviour the night before his Passion celebrated the Pasleover with his Disciples, and instituted the Mystical Supper of his Body and Bloud for the Sacred Rite of the Gospel: The same place where on the day of his Resurrection he came, and stood in the midst of his Disciples, the doors being shut, and having shewed them his hands and his feet, said, Peace be unto you; As my Father hath sent me, so I send you, &c. John 20. 21. John 20. 6. The place where eight days or the Sunday after, he appeared in the same manner again unto them being together, to satisfy the incredulity of Thomas, who the first time was not with the rest: The place where James the Brother of our Lord was created by the Apostles Bishop of Jerusalem: The place where the seven Deacons (whereof S. Stephen was one) were elected and ordained: The place where the Apostles and Elders of the Church at Jerusalem held that Council, and pattern of all Councils, for decision of that Question, Whether the Gentiles which believed were to be circumcised or not. And for certain, the place of this Cænaculum was afterwards enclosed with a goodly Church, known by the name of the Church of Sion, upon the * Isidorus Præstoria lib. 2. Ep. 246. ἐπὶ τοῦ ὄρους Ἰερουσαλὴμ ἐκκλησιαστικὰ ἔτος κακοσμιῶν αὐτῶν, ἐκκλησια ἡ δὲ τοῦ ὄρους ἡ ἐκκλησια ἡ ἐκκλησια. Where note that of two expressions, this in its true place, the words ἐπὶ κακοσμιῶν αὐτῶν in the Printed Copy are deficient in the first of them; but to be supplied out of this, the second, or repetition of the same thing, as the Reader that considers it will observe the Antithesis requires.

* Cænacula dicitur, ad qua sancti ascendunt. Velt. Inde Ennio, Cænacula maxima cæli. * For these Traditions see Abricominus Nicephor. &c. and Bed. infra, de locis sanctis.

Acts 6.

Acts 15.

1 Cor. 11. 22.

Epist. 27.
Plal. 87. 1, 2.

top whereof it stood : Infomuch that S. Hierome, in his Epitaphio Paula, made bold

(a) Her foundations are in the holy mountains ; the Lord loveth the gates of Sion more than all the dwellings of Jacob.

to apply that of the Psalm unto it, (a) Fundamenta ejus in montibus sanctis ; diligit Dominus portas Sion super omnia tabernacula Jacob. How soon this Erection was made I know not ; but I believe it was much more ancient than those other Churches erected in other places of that City by Constantine and his Mother ; because neither Eusebius, Socrates, Theodoret, nor Sozomen make any mention of the foundation thereof, as they do of the rest. It is called by S. Cyril, who was Bishop of the place, “ ἡ αἰωτίερα Ἐκκλησία τῶν Ἀποστόλων, the upper Church of the Apostles, “ τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον (saith he) κατήλθεν ἐπὶ τὰς Ἀποστόλους ἐν ἑδέαι πυρίνων γλωσσῶν, ἐν ταῦτα ἐν τῇ Ἱερουσαλὴμ, ἐν τῇ ἈΝΩΤΕΡΑ ΤῶΝ ἈΠΟΣΤΟΛΩΝ ἘΚΚΛΗΣΙΑ, “ The Holy Ghost descended upon the Apostles in the likeness of fiery tongues, here in Jerusalem, in the UPPER CHURCH OF THE APOSTLES. “ Cyrl. Hierosol. Cat. 16.

If this Tradition be true, it should seem by it that this Cenaculum, from the time our Blessed Saviour first hallowed it by the institution and celebration of his Mystical Supper, was thenceforth devoted to be a Place of prayer and holy assemblies. And surely no Ceremonies of dedication, no not of Solomon's Temple it self, are comparable to those sacred guests whereby this place was sanctified. This is the more ealie to be believed, if the House were the possession of some Disciple at least, if not of kindred also to our Saviour according to the flesh ; which both Reason perswades, and Tradition likewise confirmeth it to have been. And when we read of those first Believers, that such as had houses and lands sold them, and brought the prices, and laid them down at the Apostles feet ; it is nothing unlikely but some likewise might give their house unto the Apostles for the use of the Church to perform Sacred duties in. And thus perhaps should that Tradition whereof Venerable Bede tells us be understood ; viz. That this Church of Sion was founded by the Apostles : Not that they erected that Structure ; but that the Place, from the time it was a Cenaculum, was by them dedicated to be an House of Prayer. His

Acts 4. 34, 35.

(b) In the upper plain of Mount Sion there are cells of Monks encompassing that great Church, which was founded there (as they say) by the Apostles ; because that there they received the Holy Ghost : and there also is to be seen the venerable place of the institution and first celebration of the Lord's Supper.

words are these, De locis sanctis cap. 3. in Tom. 3. (b) “ In superiori Montis Sion planitie monachorum cellule Ecclesiam magnam circundant, illic, ut perhibent, ab Apostolis fundatam ; eò quòd ibi Spiritum Sanctum acceperint : In qua etiam Loccus Cene Domini venerabilis ostenditur.

And if this were so, why may not I think that this Cenaculum Sion or upper room of Sion was that Οἶκος whereof we read, concerning the first Christian society at Jerusalem, Acts 2. 46. That they continued daily in the Temple, and breaking bread [κατ' οἶκον] in the House, ate their meat with gladness and singleness of heart ; the meaning being, That when they had performed their devotions daily in the Temple at the accustomed times of prayer there, they used to resort immediately to this Cenaculum, and there having celebrated the Mystical banquet of the Holy Eucharist, afterwards took their ordinary and necessary repast with gladness and singleness of heart. For so κατ' οἶκον may be rendred for ἐν οἴκῳ, and not domatim, or per domos, house by house, as we translate it ; and so both the Syriack and Arabick render it, and the New Testament (as we shall see hereafter) elsewhere uses it. Moreover we find this Cenaculum called Οἶκος in the second verse of the same Chapter. And for the phrase of Breaking of bread, we know that the same a little before in the 42. verse is wont to be understood of the Communion of the Eucharist, and by the Syriack Interpreter is expressly rendred by the Greek word, Thapud Hierome.

(c) קצין ראוכריסטיא The breaking of the Eucharist.

(c) Fractio Eucharistiae, both there and again chap. 20. verse 7. according to that of S. Paul, The bread which we break, &c.

1 Cor. 10. 16.

why should it not then be so taken here ? If it be, then according to the Interpretation we have given this will also follow, That that custom of the Church, to participate the Eucharist fasting, and before dinner, had its beginning from the first constitution of the Christian Church. A thing not unworthy observation, if the Interpretation be maintainable ; of which let the learned judge.

It was an Ὑπερῶνον, or Cenaculum, also where the Disciples at Troas came together upon the First day of the week to break bread, or to celebrate the holy Eucharist,

Acts

Acts 20. 7. where S. Paul preached unto them, and whence Eutychus, being overcome with sleep, sitting in a window, fell down ἀπὸ τριτίου, from the third story or loft, and was taken up dead. Such a one seems also to have been the Place of the Churches assembly at Cæsarea Cappadociae, by that which is said Acts 18. 22. viz. That S. Paul sailing from Ephesus, landed at Cæsarea, where ἀναβὰς καὶ ἀσπασάμενος τὴν Ἐκκλησίαν, having gone up and saluted the Church, he went down to Antioch. Note, he went up to salute: whereby it should seem that the place where the Church was assembled was some upper place. See Ludovic. de Dieu upon this place; where he tells us,

(a) And he came down to Cæsarea, and went up into the House of the Christians, (that is, the Church) and saluted them, and departed thence to Antioch.

that the Æthiopick translator so understood it, rendring, (a) & descendit Cæsaream, & ascendit in Domum Christianorum, (i. Ecclesiam) & salutavit eos, & abiit Antiochiam. Such as these, I suppose, were the Places at first set apart for Holy meetings, much like to our private Chappels now in great mens houses, though not for so general an use.

In process of time, as the multitude of Believers encreased, some wealthy and devout Christian gave his whole House or Mansion-place, either whilest he lived, if he could spare it, or bequeathed it at his death, unto the Saints, to be set apart and accommodated for Sacred assemblies and Religious uses.

At length, as the multitude of Believers still more encreased, and the Church grew more able, they built them Structures of purpose, partly in the Cœmeteries of Martyrs, partly in other publick places: even as the Jews (whose Religion was no more the Empire's than theirs,) had, nevertheless, their Synagogues in all Cities and places where they lived among the Gentiles.

In the First Century.

THIS being premised, I proceed now (as I promised) to shew, That there were such places as I have described appointed and set apart among Christians for their Religious Assemblies and Solemn address unto the Divine Majesty, through every one of the first three Centuries particularly; and that therefore they assembled not promiscuously and at hap-hazard, but in appropriate places, unless Necessity sometimes forced them to do otherwise.

For the Times of the Apostles therefore, or First Century in particular, which ends with the death of S. John the Evangelist, I prove it, first, from the Text I premised, where is a Place mentioned by the name of Ecclesia, not to be despised or prophaned with common banquettings: at least from the authority of the Fathers, who by their so expounding it, give us to understand, they thought it not improbable that there were such Places in the Apostles times. For the further strengthening of this kind of argument, Know also that Eusebius, in that Discourse of his where he endeavours to prove that the Essenes, or Θεραπευταί, which Philo describes, were the first Christian Society of the Jewish Nation at Alexandria, converted by S. Mark, amongst other Characteristical notes (as he calls them, τα χαράκτηριστικά τῆς Ἐκκλησιαστικῆς ἀγωγῆς) or badges of Christianity, (however he were mistaken in his conclusion or inference) alledges this for one of the first, That they had sacred Houses called Σεμναῖα or

(b) Philo having described what kind of habitations they had, proceeds to speak of their Churches which were frequently to be met with in several places of their Country; How that the Sacred House was called Σεμναῖα a Worshipping-place, and Μοναστήριον a Monastery, wherein these solitary lives peromed the Mysteries of a severely-religious life; bringing in thither not meat nor drink, nor any other necessaries for the use of the Body, but the Books of the Law, the Prophets, the Psalms or Hymns, and the like things of Sacred use, whereby Divine knowledge and Piety might be encreased and advanced to great perfection.

Worshipping-Places, that is, Churches.

His words are these, "(b) Deinceps ubi eorum domicilia quænam essent descripsit, (nempe Philo) de Ecclesiis in variis locis exstructis sic loquitur: Est in quoque agro ades sacra quæ appellatur Σεμναῖον, vel Μοναστήριον, in quo illi ab aliis Μοναχοῖς, soli agentes, Σεμνὰ βίον, sanctæ religioſæque vitæ mysteria obcunt; [N. B.] nihilque eò vel cibi, vel potionis, vel aliarum rerum quæ ad corporis usum necessariae sunt, important, sed leges & oracula à pro-phetis divinitus edita, & hymnos, aliâque quibus scientia & pietas erga Deum crescat & perficiatur. Afterwards reciting some other customs and

1 Cor. 11. 22.

1.

Hist. Eccl. 2. cap. 17.

and particular observances of their Discipline, as their frequent assemblies in their 1 Cor. 11. 22. Σεμνεία to hear the Scriptures read and interpreted; the distinction of places for men and women; Their manner of singing Hymns and Psalms by a Precentor, the rest answering * τὰ ἀνροτελεύτια, the extremes of the verses; The Degrees of their Hierarchy, like those of Deacons and Bishops, and some other the like, he concludes, * Author Const. Ap. verat d. 2.
 Quod τὰ ἀρχαῖα περὶ τῶν Ἀποστόλων ἐστὶν παραδεδομμένα καὶ λαβὼν ὁ Φίλων ταῦτα ἐγέγραφε, παντὶ τῷ δῆλον, That Philo wrote these things, as one having knowledge of the customs at the beginning delivered by the Apostles, is manifest to any one. But whether that be so manifest or not, this I am sure is, That Eusebius believed the Antiquity of Churches or Oratories of Christians to have been from the Apostles times, yea, to have been an Apostolical ordinance; or else he mightily forgot himself, to bring that for an argument or badge to prove Philo's Essenes to be S. Mark's Christians; than which otherwise there could not be a stronger argument to evince the contrary to what he intended. Now who could know this better than Eusebius, who had searched into and perused all the Writings and Monuments of Christian Antiquity then extant, for the compiling of his Ecclesiastical History, and his Commentaries of the * Acts of Martyrs now perished?

* He mentions it Hist. Eccl.
 l. 5. cap. 1.

Add to this, what I a little before observed out of Bede, De locis sanctis, of a Tradition, That the Church of Sion was founded by the Apostles. And so I leave my first Argument.

2. My next Argument why may I not take from that singular Character given to some one above other in the Apostles Salutations, as their peculiar? salute such a one, καὶ τὴν καὶ οἶκον αὐτοῦ Ἐκκλησίαν, and the Church at his house. As Colos. 4. 15. of Nymphas, Ἀσπάσασθε Νυμφᾶν, καὶ τὴν καὶ οἶκον αὐτοῦ Ἐκκλησίαν, salute Nymphas, and the Church at his house. To Philemon also ver. 1, 2. To Philemon our dear brother and fellow-labourer (to Apphia our beloved, and Archippus our fellow-souldier,) καὶ τὴν καὶ οἶκον σου Ἐκκλησίαν, and to the Church at thy house. See, he forgets it not after a Parenthesis, neither attributes it to Archippus, but as proper to Philemon alone. The like he hath of Aquila and Priscilla two several times: once sending salutation to them, Rom. 16. 3, 5. Salute Priscilla and Aquila, and the Church at their house: again sending salutation from them, 1 Cor. 16. 19. Aquila and Priscilla salute you much in the Lord, with the Church at their house. Which I understand not to be spoken of their Families as it is commonly expounded, but of the Congregation of the Saints there wont to assemble for the performance of Divine duties; that is, καὶ συνερχομένη καὶ οἶκον αὐτῶν Ἐκκλησίαν. Whence (if it be granted) it will follow, First, that the Churches then used to assemble not in mutable and promiscuous, but in definite and appropriate places. Secondly, That those who are here saluted with that Appendix, were such as in their several Cities had bestowed and dedicated some part or some place within their dwellings to be an Oratory for the Church to assemble in for the performance of Divine duties according to the rule of the Gospel; Nymphas at Colosse, Philemon at Laodicea, (for there Archippus, who is saluted with him, was Bishop, saith * Author Constit. Apost. as Philemon himself was afterwards of the neighbouring City Colosse) Aquila and Priscilla first at Rome, till Claudius banished them with the rest of the Jews from thence, Acts 18. 2. afterwards at Ephesus, ver. 19. whence S.
 Paul wrote that first Epistle to the Corinthians.

* Lib. 7. c.
 penult.

I am not the first (I think) who have taken these words in such a sense. Cecumenius in two or three of these places (if I understand him) goes the same way, though he mention the other Exposition also. As to that of Aquila and Priscilla,

(a) They were so eminently religious, as that they converted their own House into a Church.
 Or else it is said [The Church at their House,] because all of their household were Believers and faithful Christians; so that their House or Family was a little Church.

(b) He was a person of great esteem, for he turned his House into a Church.

Rom. 16. his note is, (a) "Adeo virtute spectati erant, ut suam etiam domum Ecclesiam fecerint. Vel dicitur hoc, Quia omnes domestici fideles erant, ut jam Domus esset Ecclesia. He mentions as I said, both Interpretations. So upon that of Nymphas, Col. 4. his words are, (b) "Magni nominis hic vir erat, nam domum suam fecerat Ecclesiam. And unless this be the meaning, why should this appendant be so singularly mentioned in the Salutations of some, and not of others, and that not once, but again, if the same names be again remembred, as of Aquila and Priscilla?

 Had none in those Catalogues of Salutation Christian families, but some one only who is thus remembred? It is very improbable; nay, if we peruse them well, we shall shall find they had, but otherwise expressed ; as in that prolix Catalogue, Rom. 16. we find Aristobulus and Narcissus saluted with their household, v. 10, 11. Asyncretus, Phlegon, &c. with the brethren which are with them, v. 14. others, with the Saints which are with them, v. 15. 2 Tim. 4. 19. The household of Onesiphorus. This therefore so singular an Appendix must mean some singular thing, not common to them with the rest, but peculiar to them alone : And what should this be but what I have shewed ?

Now because this Exposition concludes chiefly for a Cenaculum devoted to be an House of Prayer ; let us see if out of a Pagan writer, who lived about the end of this Centurie, we can learn what manner of ones they were. For * Lucian in his Dialogue Philopatris, by way of derision (sed ridentem dicere verum quid vetat ?) brings in one Critias telling how some Christians went about to persuade him to be of their Religion ; and that they brought him to the place of their assembly, being at Hyperd-

(a) We passed through iron gates and over brazen thresholds, and by many winding ascents we came at last to the house or room, whose roof was overlaid with gold, (not unlike to what Homer makes Menelaus his house to have been :) And now I beheld and observ'd all things therein ; but I could see no Helena there, but on the contrary a company of persons with their bodies bowed down and pale countenances.

on, which he describes thus ; (a) " Pertransivimus (saith he) ferreas portas & area limina ; [ ἀναβαλὲς δὲ πολλὰς περικυκλωσάμενοι ] multisque jam superatis scalis, in Domum aurato fastigio insignem ascendimus, qualem Homerus Menelaum fingit esse : atque ipse quidem omnia contemplabar ; — video autem, non Helenam, sed mehercle [ ἀνδρας ἐπιχειροτάτας κατωχλωμένους ] viros in faciem incli-

* Or whosoever else were the Author thereof under Trajan, whose then fresh success in subduing the Parthians and Arabians (contrary to the unlucky prefiges of some) his scope seems to have been to gratulate. See Jacobus Mytilus in Argumento.

" natos, & pallescentes. So he.

My third proof is from a Tradition the Church hath had, of the Houses of some devout and pious Christians, as afterwards, so even in the Apostles time, converted into Churches or Oratories ; as the house of Theophilus, a potent man in Antioch, (the same, as is supposed, to whom S. Luke (who was also an Antiochian) inscribes both his Gospel and Acts of the Apostles) who, being converted unto the Faith by S. Peter, converted his house into a Church, where S. Peter had his first See or Episcopal Residence. This Tradition is derived out of the Recognitions of Clements, where it is first found : Which, though it be an Apocryphal writing, yet is of no small antiquity ; and this passage is of such a nature, as it cannot be well imagined to what end it should be devised or feigned.

The like is reported of the house of Pudens, a Roman Senator and Martyr, in the Acta Pudentis, That it was turned into a Church after his Martyrdom. This is that Pudens mentioned by the Apostle in the 2 Epist. to Timothy, 4. 21. and coupled with Linus ; Pudens and Linus (saith he) salute you. All this comes not of nothing ; but surely argues some such custom to have been in those times.

I will seal up all my proofs for this Centurie of the Apostles with one passage of Clements (a man of the Apostolical Age) in his genuine * Epistle ad Corinthios : * Debemus omnia rite & ordine facere quaecunque nos Dominus peragere jussit ; praestitutis temporibus oblationes & liturgias obire. Neque enim temere vel inordinate voluit ista fieri, sed statutis temporibus & horis. UBI etiam, & A QUIBUS peragi vult, ipse excelsissimam suam voluntate definivit ; ut religiose omnia secundum beneplacitum ejus adimpleta, voluntati ipsius accepta essent. Here Clements saith expressly, That the Lord had ordained (even now in the Gospel) as well appropriate Places WHERE, as appropriate Times and Persons, (that is, Priests) When and WHEREBY he would be solemnly served, that so all things might be done religiously and in order. Who then can believe that in the Apostles times (when this Clements lived) the Places were not distinct for holy Services as well as the Times and Persons were ? or that Clements would have spoken in this manner, unless he had known it so to have been ? The Corinthians, it seems, in that their notorious sedition and discord, had violated this order ; at the correction whereof this passage aimeth.

This one passage therefore makes all my former Proofs credible, and may supply their defect where they are not enough convictive. And it is the more precious, in regard of the penury of written Monuments by any Disciples of the Apostles remaining unto us of that Primitive Age.

If any man shall ask, where this Divine Ordinance which Clements here mentioneth is to be found ; I answer, in the Analogy of the Old Testament, whence this Principle is taught us, That as the Divine Majesty it self is most Sacred and Incommunicable, (the reason why the Worship and Service given unto him must be communicated with no other ; ) so is it likewise a part of that Honour we owe unto his most Sacred,

3.

4.

[ See this of Clements quoted in Greek and translated by the Author, in the next Discourse, Sect. 1. toward the end. ]

1 Cor. II. 22.

Sacred, Singular and Incommunicable Eminency, that the things wherewith he is served should not be promiscuous and common, but appropriate and set apart to that end and purpose. And thus I conclude the First seculum.

In The Second Century.

Ab Ann. 100.
ad 200.
I.

NOW for the Second, and that too for the beginning thereof, we have a witness not to be rejected, the holy Martyr Ignatius, who suffered An. 107. and wrote the most of his Epistles in his bonds. He in his confessed Epistle ad Magnesios

(a) This passage out of Ignatius is thus translated by the Author in another M.S. copy of this Discourse. All of you meet together, for prayer, in one place; let there be one prayer common to all, one mind, one hope, in love, in the immaculate faith in Jesus Christ, than whom nothing is better. All of you, as one man, run to the Temple of God, as to one Altar, to one Jesus Christ the High-Priest of the unbegotten God.

speaks thus; (a) "Omnes ad orandum in idem loci convenite, una sit communis precatio, una mens, una spes in charitate & fide inculpata in Jesum Christum, quo nihil prestantius est. Omnes velut Unus ad Templum Dei [eis ὁ Ναός ζεῖς] concurrere, quemadmodum ad UNUM Altare, ad UNUM Jesum Christum Pontificem ingenti Dei." Lo here a Temple with an Altar in it, whether the Magnesians are exhorted to gather themselves together to pray; To come together in one Place, that so they might all joyn together in one common prayer, spirited with one intention, with one and the same Hope in the Charity and Faith they have to Christ-ward: Secondly, To come thither as One, that is, in Unity of affection and brotherly love one towards another, as if all were but One, and not many; even as the Altar before which they presented themselves was but One, and the High-Priest and Mediatour between them and the Father, Jesus Christ, but One.

For it is to be observed that in those primitive times they had but One Altar in a Church, as a Symbole both that they worshipped but One God through One Mediatour Jesus Christ, and also of the Unity the Church ought to have in it self: whence Ignatius, not only here, but also in his Epistle to the Philadelphians, urges the Unity of the Altar for a monitive to the Congregation to agree together in one. For

(b) One Altar to every Church, and One Bishop with the Presbytery & Deacons my fellow-servants.

(b) "Unum Altare (saith he) omni Ecclesie, & unus Episcopus cum Presbyterio & Diaconis conservis meis." This custom of One Altar is still retained by the Greek Church. The contrary use is a transgression of the Latines, not only symbolically implying, but really introducing, (as they handle it) a πολυθεῖα, or multiplying of Gods and Mediators, in stead of that One God, and One Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus.

1 Tim. 2. 5.

Nay more than this: It should seem that in those first times (before Dioceses were divided into those lesser and subordinate Churches we now call Parishes, and Presbyters assigned to them) they had not only one Altar in one Church or Dominicum, but one Altar to a Church, taking Church for the Company or Corporation of the Faithful united under one Bishop or Pastor; and that was in the City and place where the Bishop had his See and Residence: like as the Jews had but one Altar and Temple for the whole Nation united under one High Priest. And yet, as the Jews had their Synagogues, so perhaps might they have more Oratories than one, though their Altar were

(c) On Sunday all that live in towns or in the country meet together in one place.

but one; there namely where the Bishop was. (c) "Die solis (saith Justin Martyr in Apol. 2.) omnium, qui vel in oppidis vel ruri degunt in eundem locum conventus sit; namely, as he there tells us, to celebrate and participate the holy Eucharist. Why was this, but because they had not many places to celebrate in? And unless this were so, whence came it else that a Schismatical Bishop was said (d) constituere or collocare aliud Altare; and that a Bishop and an Altar are made correlatives? See S. Cyprian Ep. 40. 72, 73. de unitate Ecclesie. And thus perhaps is Ignatius also to be understood in that forequoted passage of his,

(d) To set up another Altar.

(e) One Altar to all the Church, and One Bishop with the Presbytery and Deacons.

(e) "Εν Θυσιαστήριον πάση τῇ Ἐκκλησίᾳ, & unus Episcopus cum Presbyterio & Diaconis." Howsoever, I here determine nothing, but refer it to the judgment of those who are better skilled in Antiquity: only adding this, that if it were so, yet now that Parishes are divided into several several Presbyteries as their proper Cures, every one of them being as it were a little Diocese, the reason and signification of Unity is the same, to have but One Altar in a Parish Church. 1 Cor. 11. 22.

To this Testimony of Ignatius of the use in his time I will add another of his, in his Epistle ad Antiochenos, where in his Salutes he speaketh thus; “Ἀσπάζομαι τὰς “φύρας τῶν ἈΓΙΩΝ ΠΥΛΩΝΩΝ, τὰς ἐν Χριστῷ διακόνας, I salute the keepers “of the Holy Doors, the Deaconesses which are in Christ; that is, the Doors the women entred in at. For so we may learn from the Compiler of the Apostolical Constitutions,

(a) Let the Door-keepers stand at the entries of the men, looking well to them; the Deaconesses at the doors where the women were to enter.

Lib. 2. c. 8. al. 61. describing a Church assembly; (a) “stent ostiarii, saith he, “ad introitus virorum, illos custodientes; “Diaconisse ad introitus feminarum. But if they had in Ignatius his time Holy Doors, (or, as some render it, **sacra vestibula*.) * [Holy Porches.]

This Epistle indeed is none of the confessed ones: The title is excepted against; as that Ignatius wrote no Epistle ad Antiochenos, because Eusebius, and after him S. Hierom, when they rehearse his Epistles, make no mention of any such. Yet were the Antiochians his flock, his pastoral charge. Who would not then think it unlikely that, amongst so many Epistles written to other Churches in his going that long journey from Antioch to Rome, to receive the crown of Martyrdom, (yea to Smirna, through which he had passed) he should not remember with one farewell Epistle that Church whereof he was Bishop and Pastor, as well as the rest? Thus much I dare say, That this is as strong an Argument every whit to perswade that he wrote such an Epistle, (especially there being one extant under that Title,) as Eusebius his silence (for S. Hierom did but follow his steps) is that he did not. For why should it be thought more necessary that Eusebius should have met with all the Epistles of Ignatius in the Library of Ælia or Jerusalem, (whence he* professeth to have collected the whole matter of his History,) then he did with all the Works and Commentaries of some other Ecclesiastical men whom he mentioneth; many of those Writings, besides those he rehearseth, he confesseth not to have come to his hands or knowledg either what or how many they were? See him Hist. Lib. 5. c. 26. & Lib. 6. c. 10. This will be yet more considerable, if we remember that some Books, even of the Canon of the New Testament, were not known to some Churches at the same time with the rest, and therefore a while doubted of, after they had notice of them. Besides, it is to be noted that Eusebius in expresse terms undertakes only to recite those Epistles of Ignatius which he wrote as he passed through Asia: but after his coming into Europe (whence those Epistles are dated which he mentions not) whether any thing were written by him or not he informs us nothing. Nay, which is yet more, Vedelius grants the words and sentences of this Epistle to be the most of them, by their style and character, the words and sentences of Ignatius; but he would have them therefore to be taken out of some of his other Epistles, to wit, according to a new and a strange conceit of his, that the genuine Epistles of Ignatius have been robbed and gelded of much of their contents, to make up more Epistles under new Titles. He excepts only in this Epistle against the Salutations at the end thereof; because there were not so many or no such a Church-offices in Ignatius his time as are there mentioned. But what is this else but to beg the question? Till therefore some body shall not only affirm, but prove there were no such, no not in the Church of Antioch, (whence divers ecclesiastical customs had their first beginning, which were afterwards imitated by the rest of the Churches) I can see no just cause hitherto why I should not believe this passage, as well as the rest, and so the whole Epistle, to have had Ignatius for its Author. And so I leave it.

For the middle of this seculum, or thereabouts, there are * extant two short Epistles of Pius the first, Bishop of Rome, to one Iustus Viennensis; none of the Decretals, (for they are indeed counterfeit,) but others diverse from them, which no man hath yet, that I know of, proved to be supposititious. In the first whereof there is mention made of one Euprepia, a pious and devout Matron, who consigned the Title of her House unto the Church for the use of Sacred assemblies. “Antequam Romam exiisses, “(saith he) soror nostra Euprepia (sicut bene recordaris) titulum domus sue pauperibus assignavit; ubi nunc cum pauperibus nostris commorantes, * Missas agimus. He seems by pauperes, the poor, to note the Clergy, which in his other Epistle he calls Senatus pauperum, salutat te Senatus pauperum: Otherwise the whole Christian flock might be so called; according to that in the Gospel, Pauperes Evangelizantur. The poor have the Gospel preached to them, (Matt. 11. 5. Luke 7. 22.) and that of Esa. ch. 61. 1.

applied

a *Ἀναγνώ-σαι, ἡ δὲ
πύλας, κατανοήσας, ἐπε-κράτησε ὁ μολο-γῶντα. Vid.
Epiphani. Expo-
sit. Fidei cathol.
c. 21. De duobus
ultimis, Const.
Apol. 1. 8. c. 24,
26.
b See *Alb. 11.
26. Socr. lib.
6. c. 8. Theod.
1. 2. c. 24.

* In *Tom.
1 Biblioth. Patrum edit. Pa-risiens. ex Ar-chivo Vien-nensi.*

* The word
Missas seems to have been long used in Italy
before it was elsewhere.

applied by our Saviour, Luke 4.18. The Lord hath anointed me to preach the Gospel to the poor; and according to that in the Parable, Luke 14. 21. Introduc pauperes, Bring in hither the poor. Perhaps in those perillous times they were wont to make their Donations of this kind under such covert names.

In the second Epistle to the same Justus, he mentions certain Martyrs who had then newly (as he there speaks) triumphed over the world: amongst which he mentions one Pastor, by Office a Presbyter, who before his death had erected or created a Titulus, that is, a Church, as that name is vulgarly known to signifie: "Presbyter Pastor" (saith he) Titulum condidit, & dignè in Domino obiit. Why the Roman Church called such places by the name of Tituli, whether because of their dedication the the Name of Christ our Lord was as it were inscribed upon them, (as the manner then was to set the Names or Titles of the Owners upon their Houses and possessions,) and so it would concur in notion with those other names of Kυριακόν, & Basilica, The Lord's, and The King's; or whether because they gave a Title of Cure or denomination to the Presbyters to whom they were committed, (for the chief or Episcopal Church I doubt whether it were so called or not,) let others determine.

I shall not do amiss, I think, if I add to this testimony a passage of Theophilus Antiochenus, (who lived at the same time) which though, I grant, it be indifferent to be otherwise understood, yet seems very prone to be construed for our purpose. It is to be found in his second Book ad Autolicum, where having compared the World to the

(a) As in the Sea there are Islands to be met with, which are commodious for habitation, fruitful and well watered, and accommodated with convenient harbors and ports for those who are distressed at Sea to repair to for their safety; so is it in the world, (which is a very troubled Sea, tempestuous and tossed by reason of sin) God hath here provided Synagogues, or Holy Churches, as we call them, wherein the Truth is diligently taught, and whither they repair who are lovers of the Truth, and desire in good earnest to be saved, and to escape the judgment and wrath of God.

(a) "Quemadmodum (saith he) in Mari insule quædam prominent habitabiles, frugiferae, & quibus est aqua salubris, necnon navalia, & portus commodi, quò se naufragi reciperent; sic Deus dedit mundo, qui peccatorum tempestatibus & naufragiis jactatur, Synagogas, quas Ecclesias sanctas nominamus, [Gr. τὰς συναγωγὰς λεγομένας Ἐκκλησίας ἁγίας] in quibus veritatis doctrina fervet, ad quas confugiunt veritatis studiosi, quotquot salvari Deique judicium & iram evitare volunt. It is ambiguous what he means here by Ecclesia, Churches: but if it were probable that Synagoga were here taken, as it is usually in the New Testament, for a Place, then might we determine that Ecclesia were so taken also, and not for a Company or Assembly only.

Well, howsoever Ecclesia be taken in this passage (which I reckon not upon,) yet thus much I am sure of, That toward the end of this Century it was used for a Place of Sacred assembly; witness Clemens Alexandr. (who then lived) Lib. 7. Strom. where speaking of the Church or Ἐκκλησία, "Οὐ τὸν τόπον, saith he, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἀθροισμα τῶν ἐκλεκτῶν, Ἐκκλησίαν καλῶ, I call not now the Place, but the congregation of the Elect, Ecclesia, the Church: whereby it appears, that in his time Ecclesia was used for the Place of the assembly of the Elect, τόπος τῶν ἐκλεκτῶν, as he calls them, that is, of the Saints, and not for the Congregation only; for otherwise this Caution needed not. And so * himself uses it in that story of the young man whom S. John committed to a Bishop of Asia to be instructed and trained up in the Christian piety and discipline, and who afterwards was by ill company withdrawn to lewd and debauched courses, and became Captain of a band of robbers in the mountains: For there when S. John, after a time coming again to visit the Churches, demanded of the Bishop an account of the Charge he had committed to him; the Bishop answers, "He is become a villain and a robber, & νῦν ἀντὶ τῆς Ἐκκλησίας ὅροι κατέληψε μετ' ὁμοῖν ἑρπύωνικῶν, and now instead of the Church he hath laid hold of a Mountain with a company like himself. To conclude, if the Name were in Clemens his time, undoubtedly the Thing was. And this is my proof for the latter end of this Centurie, * Clem. Alex. in Opere, Quis sit ille dives qui salvetur, apud Euseb. Hist. Eccl. lib. 3. c. 17. Gr. κτ'. Also in this Century undoubtedly those Fabricks in the Cemeteries of S. Peter in the Vaticane, and of S. Paul in via Ostiensi (which could be no other than some Christian Oratories) whereof Gains speaks in Euseb. and calls Throphæa Apostolorum lib. 2. cap. 24.

In the Third Centurie.

NOW are we arrived at the Third Seculum, and the last under the Ethnick Ab Anno 200. ad 300. and persecuting Emperors: wherein the Testimonies of the Christians Oratories do abound, and are such as will out-face any that shall dare contradict them.

For the beginning of this Centurie, Tertullian shall give in Evidence; first, in his Book De Idololatria: Where declaiming against some Christian Artificers, who because it was their occupation and trade, thought it lawful to make Idols for the

(a) All the day long shall the zeal of Faith speak to this point; bewailing that a Christian should come from Idols into the CHURCH, that he should come into the HOUSE OF GOD from the shop of his enemy; that he should lift up to God the Father those hands which were the mothers (and makers) of Idols, and adore God with those very hands which (namely in respect of the Idols made by them) are adored without (the Church, viz. in the Heathens Temples) in opposition to God; and that he should presume to reach forth those hands to receive the Body of our Lord, which are imploy'd in making Bodies (that is, Images) for the Demons. [That according to the Gentiles Theology Images were as Bodies to be informed with Demons as with Souls, see the Treatise of the Apostasie of the latter Times, chap. 5. in Book. III.]

not, he speaks thus; (a) "Totâ die ad hanc partem zelus fidei perorabit, ingemens Christianum ab Idolis in ECCLESIAM venire, de adversaria officina in DOMUM DEI venire; attollere ad Deum patrem manus matres Idolorum; his manibus adorare quæ (nempe in operibus suis) foris (i. in Templis Gentium) adversus Deum adorantur; eas manus admoveere Corpori Domini quæ Demonibus corpora conferunt." Mark here, DOMUS DEI THE HOUSE OF GOD, & ECCLESIA THE CHURCH expounded by it; In Ecclesiam venire, id est, In Domum Dei venire; To come into the Church, that is, To come into the house of God; and both of them set in opposition to an Idol-shop.

Of this Domus Dei or House of God, in his Book adversus Valentinianos, cap. 2. he describes unto us the form and posture upon this occasion. He compares the Valentinian heresie, in respect of their affected secrecie and reservedness in hiding the mysteries of their doctrine, to the Eleusinian Holies, whose Temple had many Curtains and doors, through which those that were to be initiated were five years in passing before they could be admitted unto the Adytum or Sacrarie where the Deity was: whereas contrariwise, he proveth out of Scripture the badge and genius of the Religion of Christ to consist in a Dove-like simplicity and openness, and accordingly had its Oratories or Houses of worship, not like that of the Eleusinian Holies, concealed with multiplicity of walls, veils, turnings and windings, but agreeable to and as it were figuring its disposition. For, "Nostre Columbe domus (saith he) simplex, etiam in editis & opertis, & ad lucem." Amat figuram Spiritus sancti, Orientem

(b) The house of our Dove, that is, of our Dove-like Religion, or the Catholick flock of Christ figured by the Dove.

Christi figuram. Nihil veritas erubescit, &c. (b) Nostre Columbe domus, i. Domus religionis nostre columbine, or Catholici Christi gregis, qui Columbâ figuratur; namque, as he said a little before, Christum Columba demonstrare solita est, serpens verò tentare; meaning, as I suppose, not so much Christ personal, as Christ mystical, that is, the Disciples or Religion of Christ. For it is the conclusion of his proofs brought out of Scripture, to shew that simplicity was the Livery

(c) In short, The Dove is wont to point out Christ.

of Christ's Disciples or Religion; (c) "In summa, saith he, Christum columba demonstrare solita est, &c." And otherwise, that [solita est, is wont] would scarcely be true; since Christ personal is but once pointed out by a Dove, namely, at his Baptism. This House, saith he, is

(d) Plain, without such a multiplicity of doors and curtains.

*(d) simplex, that is, sine tot portarum & apertis, places which Doves delight in; & ad lucem, that is, toward the place whence light springeth, or the Sun rising: For Amat figuram Spiritus sancti, that is, the Dove, as also Orientem Christi figuram; wherein he alludes to that Oriens ex alto or Day-spring from on high in Zacharie's * Benedictus,*

(e) In high and open places. Ανατολή ἐκ ὧρου τοῦ ἡλίου. Cyril. Hier. * Luke 1. 78. and

1 Cor. 11. 22.

* Lib. 2. c. 57.
al. 61.

(a) Let the House be long, and built Eastward.

* Apol. c. 16.

* De Spect. c.

25. ad Oxor. l.

2. c. 9. De co-

ron. milit. cap.

3. De velandis virginibus, c.

3. & 13.

and hath reference to the word, & ad lucem, i. ad locum vel plagam lucis. For, that the Churches of Christians anciently were turned toward the East, appears by the Author of the * Apostolical Constitutions, which surely are as ancient as Tertullian: (a) "Domus sit oblonga, ad Orientem conversa, saith he. Besides, it appears out of * Tertullian himself, that Christians then worshipped towards the East, and therefore more than probable their Houses were sited and accommodated accordingly. Thus I have done my best to clear this passage, because the Author is crabbed and obscure.

There are two or three * more places in the same Father where the Christian Oratories are mentioned by the name of Ecclesia: but because the ambiguous and indifferent signification of this word, either for a Place or an Assembly, makes them not convictive, unless some circumstance be annexed which determines it, I will only produce that De corona Militis, Cap. 3. where concerning the Sacrament of Baptism he speaks thus; (b) Aquam adituri, ibidem, sed & aliquanto prius in Ecclesia, sub Antistitis manu, contestamur nos rennunciare Diabolo, & Pompe & Angelis ejus: dehinc ter mergitamur. I say, Ecclesia here signifies the Place. For the clearing whereof, know that the Baptisteries, or

(b) Coming to the Water, (to be baptized,) not only there, but also somewhat afore, in the CHURCH, under the hand of the Bishop or Priest, we take witness that we renounce the Devil, and his Pomp and Angels; and afterwards we are drenched thrice in the Water.

places of water for Baptism, in those elder times were not, as now our Fonts are, within the Church, but without, and often in places very remote from it. When therefore Tertullian here saith, That those who were to be baptized first made their Abrenunciation in the Church sub manu Antistitis, (that is, as I suppose, the Bishop or Priest laying hands upon them, either in the mean time, or as soon as they had done) and afterward again at the Water; he must needs by Ecclesia mean the Place: otherwise if it were taken for the Assembly of the faithful, the Church in that sense was present also at the Water. But Ecclesia here and the Water are supposed to be two distinct places; in both of which (according to the rite of the African Churches.) Abrenunciation was to be performed: "Aquam adituri, IBIDEM (i. apud aquam) sed & aliquanto prius in ECCLESIA, contestamur nos rennunciare Diabolo, &c. And thus much for the testimony of Tertullian.

My next witness is Hippolytus, who flourished between the twentieth and thirtieth year of this Century in the reign of Alexander Mameæ. He, in his Treatise De consummatione mundi seu de Antichristo, describing the signs and impieties which should precede the Persecution of Antichrist, (as he conceived thereof,) hath this passage concerning the irreligion and profaneness which should then reign;

(c) The Temples of God shall be as common and ordinary Houses, Churches shall be utterly demolished every where, the Scriptures shall be despised.

(d) The Sacred Edifices of Churches shall become heaps, and as a desolate lodge in an Orchard; there shall be no more Communion of the precious Body and Blood of Christ, Liturgy shall be extinguished, Singing of Psalms shall cease, Reading of the Scriptures shall no more be heard.

(e) The Christians being in possession of a certain publick place, and challenging it for theirs; and on the other side the Taverners alledging that it belong'd of right to them; the Emperor's Rescript in favour of the Christians was this, That it was better that God should be worshipt there after what way soever, than that it should be delivered and given up to the Taverners.

About the middle of this Century flourished that famous Gregorie of Neocæsarea, furnamed

(c) "Οι Ναοὶ τῶ Θεοῦ ὡς οἶκοι ἐσονται. Temppla Dei domorum communium instar erunt; ubique Ecclesiarum everisiones fi-

(d) "Τὰ Ἱερὰ τῶν Ἐκκλησιῶν ὡς ὁπωροφυλάκια γενήσονται, &c. Sacra Ecclesiarum aedex instar Pomorum custodia erunt, pretiosumq; corpus & sanguis non exstabit in diebus illis; Liturgia extinguetur, Psalmorum decantatio cessabit, Scrip- needed not: For Lampridius reports of this Alexander Mameæ, (in whose time Hippolytus lived) (e) "Quod cum Christiani quendam locum, qui publicus fuerat, occupassent; contra Popinarii dicerent, sibi eum deberi; rescripsit Imperator, Melius esse ut quomodocumque illic Deus colatur, quam Popinariis dedatur.

(e) "Quod cum Christiani quendam locum, qui publicus fuerat, occupassent; contra Popinarii dicerent, sibi eum deberi; rescripsit Imperator, Melius esse ut quomodocumque illic Deus colatur, quam Popinariis dedatur.

* Ex Psal. 79.
2. & ceteris
similibus, juxta
LXX. Hebr.
in acervos seu desolationes.

Cap. 49.

surnamed Thaumaturgus. He in his Epistola Canonica (as the Greeks call it) describing the five degrees or admissions of Penitents, according to the discipline of his time, (which he calls "Πρόκλαυσις, ἀκρόασις, ὑπόπλωσις, σύστασις & μέθεξις")

1 Cor. 11. 22.

(a) 1. Weeping (the first degree of Penance) was without the Porch of the Oratorie, where the mournful sinners stood and beg'd of all the Faithful as they went in to pray for them. 2. Hearing (the second degree) was within the Porch, in the place called Narthex, the place where these penitent Sinners (being now under the Ferula or censure of the Church) might stand near to the Catechumens and hear the Scripture read and expounded, but were to go out before them. 3. Prostration or Lying along on the Church-pavement. These Prostrate ones were admitted somewhat further into the Church, and went out with the Catechumens. 4. Standing or Staying with the people or Congregation. These Consistentes did not go out with the Catechumens, but after they and the other Penitents were gone out, stay'd and joyn'd in prayer with the Faithful. 5. Participation of the Sacraments.

"(a) 1. Πρόκλαυσις (saith he) est extra portam τῆς Ἐκκλησίας, ORATORII, ubi peccatorem stantem oportet Fideles ingredientibus orare ut pro se precentur. 2. Ἀκρόασις (i. Auditio) est intra portam, in loco qui Νάρθηξ dicitur, ubi oportet eum qui peccavit stare usque ad Catechumenos, & illinc egredi. 3. Ὑπόπλωσις (i. Substratio) ἵνα ἐσώσεν τῆς τῆς ΝΑΟΥ Πύλης ἱερέως, ut intra Templi portam consistens, cum Catechumenis egrediatur. 4. Σύστασις (i. Congregatio seu Consistentia) est ut cum Fidelibus consistat, & cum Catechumenis non egrediatur. Postremò est Μέθεξις, participatio Sacramentorum. Who sees not here that Christians in his time had Oratories or Sacred Houses to worship in, and those accommodated with distinct places of remoter and nearer admission.

Nay, further, we find in this Gregorie's life written by Gregory Nyssen, that he was himself a great Founder and erecter of these sacred Edifices; whereof the Church built by him at Neocæsarea in Pontus (where he was Bishop) was still standing in Gregorie Nyssen's time. Hear his words, where he relates the speedy and wonderful

(b) How that by becoming all things to all men, he had in a short time gained a great number of Converts through the assistance of the Divine Spirit, and that hereupon he had a strong desire to set upon the building of a Temple or Place for Sacred assemblies; wherein he was the more encouraged by the general forwardness he observed among the Converts to contribute both their moneys and their best assistances to so good a work. This is that Temple which is to be seen even at this day. This is that Temple, the erection whereof this Great person being resolved to undertake without any delay, he laid the foundation thereof (and therewithal of his Sacerdotal, i. e. Episcopal, Prefecture) in the most conspicuous place of all the City.

(c) Whereas all other Houses, whether Public or private, were overthrown by that Earthquake; this [Gregorian] Temple alone stood firm without any the least hurt.

success this Thaumaturgus had in the conversion of that City: (b) "Cum omnibus omnia fieret, saith he, tantum sibi auxilio spiritus repente populum adjunxit, ut ad Templi fabricationem animum adjiceret; (Gr. ὡς περὶ Ναὸ κατασκευὴν ἐρμῆσαι) cum omnes offerendo tam pecunias quam operas suas studium ejus adjuvarent. Hoc est Templum quod usque hodie ostenditur; quod magnus ille Vir statim aggressus, quasi fundamentum atque χρηστὸν ἱερέως dotii sui (i. Episcopatus) in maxime conspicuo urbis loco constituit. He adds besides, that whereas in his own time there had hapned a most grievous Earthquake, (c) "Quo omnia tam publica quam privata ædificia disjecta essent; solum illud Templum [Gregorianum] illæsum & inconcussum mansisse.

Nor is this all; He tells in the same place how that a little before the persecution of Decius (which was Anno Christi 252.) this Thaumaturgus, having converted not the City of Neocæsarea only, but the whole territorie adjoining, to the Faith of Christ, "Βωμῶν τε καὶ ἱερῶν καὶ εἰδώλων ἐν αὐτοῖς ἀνατετραμμένων, the Converts pulling down their Idol-Altars and Idol-Temples, and in every place erecting ἐκκλησίας ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Χριστοῦ, Oratories in the name of Christ, stirred up the fury and indignation of the Emperour.

About the same time with this Gregory lived S. Cyprian at Carthage. In him I observe the Christian Oratories twice remembred; once by the name of (d) Dominicum, i. Κυριακόν, another time of (e) Ecclesia. The first in his Book De opere & eleemosynis, speaking against communicating the holy Eucharist without an Offering; (d) The

He was made Bishop Anno 249, lived until 250.

(f) Thinkest thou, O Matron, which art rich and wealthy in the Church of Christ, that thou dost celebrate or commemorate the Lord's Sacrifice (that is, that thou dost participate the Lord's Supper worthily as thou oughtest) who dost not at all respect (but art regardless of) the Corban;

(f) "Matrona, saith he, quæ in Ecclesia Christi locuples & dives es, Dominicum (sacrificium) celebrare te credis, quæ cor bonam omnino non respicis, quæ in Dominicum sine sacrificio venis, quæ partem de sacrificio quod pauper obtulit sumis? The other

1 Cor. II. 22.
Script. an. 253.

who comest into the Lord's House without a Sacrifice or Offering, nay who takest part of the poor mans Sacrifice, feedest on what he brought for his Offering, and bringest none thy self?

theless without due penance and satisfaction

(a) What then remains but that the Church should yield to the Capitol; and that, the Priests withdrawing themselves and taking away the Altar of our Lord, Images and Idol-Gods together with their Altars should succeed and take possession of the Sacrary or place proper to the sacred and venerable Bench of our Clergy?

and Capitolium, Christ's House and Jupiter's Temple, stand in opposition one to the other; also that Capitolium by Antonomasia

(b) The Altar of our Lord and the place for the sacred and venerable Bench of the Clergy.

(c) Idol-Gods and Images together with the Altars of the Devil.

(a) might enter into the House of God.

famed Dionysius Alexandrinus, made Bishop somewhat before him, but out-lived him some five years, namely until 265. There is an Epistle of his extant (which is part of the Canon-Law of the Greek Church) to one Basilides, resolving certain Quære's of his; amongst the rest, Whether a woman, during the time of her separation, might enter into the Church or not: To which his answer is negative. This Quære he expresseth thus; De mulieribus quæ sunt in abscessu, an eas sic affectas oporteat Domum Dei ingredi, (d) Gr. eis τὸ οἶκον εἰσέλαι τὸ Θεῷ. By which, and his answer thereunto, we learn not only that the Christians had then Houses of Worship, but a religious respect also to difference them from common places.

And here, because the Time fitly presents it in our way, take notice, for some reason that we shall hear of ere we have done, That this of the Christians having such Houses for their devotions was a thing publicly known to the Gentiles themselves, together with the name whereby they called them: as appears by two Imperial Rescripts, the one of Galienus about the year 260. (recorded by Eusebius, Hist. lib. 7. c. 12. Gr. 17.) which calls them ΤΟΙΣ ΤΟΙΣ ΘΡΗΣΚΕΥΤΙΣΙΜΟΙ, Worshipping Places; which, having been a little before, in the persecution of Valerianus his Father, taken from the Christians, and then in the hands of the Gentiles, Galienus graciously restored unto them, with liberty freely to exercise their Religion. The words of the Rescript, so much of

(e) The Emperour C. P. L. Galienus to Dionysius, Pinna, Demetrius, and the rest of the Bishops, Greeting — What I have been pleased graciously to do for the Christians, I have caused to be published throughout the world, viz. That all men should quit the Worshipping-places for the Christians use, And therefore you may make use of the Copy of my Letters, to the end ye may be secured from any future attempts to disturb you herein.

uti poteritis, quo nemo deinceps vobis quicquam faceffat molestiæ, &c.

The other is of Aurelianus, De Libris Sibyllinis inspiciendis, when the Marcomanni invaded the Empire, Anno Ch. 271. recorded by Vopiscus, in these words:

(f) I wonder (sacred Fathers) that ye demur so long about opening and consulting the Sibyll's books; as if ye were treating (or debating this matter) in the Christians Church, and not in the Temple of all the Gods.

other in his 55. Ep. or 3. ad Cornelium; where declaiming against some lapsed Christians, who having in time of persecution sacrificed unto Idols, would nevertheless be admitted again into the Church; If this be once permitted, (saith he)

(a) Quid superest quàm ut Ecclesia Capitolio cedat; & recedentibus sacerdotibus ac Domini nostri Altare remonentibus, in Cleri nostri sacrum venerandumque confessum (i. in Presbyterium, seu τὸ ἅγιον Βήμα) simulacra atque Idola cum Aris suis transeant? Note that Ecclesia here is put for a Gentile Temple in general; that in the one (to wit, Ecclesia) was

(b) Altare Domini nostri & sacer venerandusq; confessus Cleri, in the other,

(c) Idola & simulacra cum Aris Diaboli.

Contemporary with S. Cyprian was that famed Dionysius Alexandrinus, made Bishop somewhat before him, but out-lived him some five years, namely until 265. There is an Epistle of his extant (which is part of the Canon-Law of the Greek Church) to one Basilides, resolving certain Quære's of his; amongst the rest, Whether a woman, during the time of her separation, might enter into the Church or not: To which his answer is negative. This Quære he expresseth thus; De mulieribus quæ sunt in abscessu, an eas sic affectas oporteat Domum Dei ingredi, (d) Gr. eis τὸ οἶκον εἰσέλαι τὸ Θεῷ. By which, and his answer thereunto, we learn not only that the Christians had then Houses of Worship, but a religious respect also to difference them from common places. And here, because the Time fitly presents it in our way, take notice, for some reason that we shall hear of ere we have done, That this of the Christians having such Houses for their devotions was a thing publicly known to the Gentiles themselves, together with the name whereby they called them: as appears by two Imperial Rescripts, the one of Galienus about the year 260. (recorded by Eusebius, Hist. lib. 7. c. 12. Gr. 17.) which calls them ΤΟΙΣ ΤΟΙΣ ΘΡΗΣΚΕΥΤΙΣΙΜΟΙ, Worshipping Places; which, having been a little before, in the persecution of Valerianus his Father, taken from the Christians, and then in the hands of the Gentiles, Galienus graciously restored unto them, with liberty freely to exercise their Religion. The words of the Rescript, so much of them as is needful to our purpose are these; (e) Imperator Cæsar Publius Licinius Galienus, &c. Dionysio, Pinna, Demetrio, & ceteris Episcopis, salutem. — Mea munificentia beneficium per universum divulgari Orbem præcepi: Ut ἀπὸ τῶν τόπων τῶν θρησκευσιμῶν, i. à locis religionis cultui dicatis discedatur. Et propterea vos mearum literarum exemplari

(f) Miror vos, Patres sancti, (he writes to the Senate) tamdiu de aperiendis Sibyllinis dubitasse libris; perinde quasi in Christianorum Ecclesia, non in Templo Deorum omnium, tractaretis; that is, in the Capitol, where the Senate used sometimes to sit.

Add to this, if you please, that which * Eusebius relates of this Emperor, to wit, that when Paulus Samosatenus, being deposed by the Council from his Bishoprick, and Dominus chosen in his room, would not yield up the possession of the Church, τῆς Ἐκκλησίας οἶκος the matter being brought before Aurelianus the Emperour, he decrees that it should be given to those of the Sect unto whom the Bishops of * Hist. Eccl. I. 7. c. 29. Gr. A.

Rome

(a) Thus was Paulus with great disgrace cast out of the Church by the Secular power.

dedecore ex Ecclesia expellitur. For that by τῆς Ἐκκλησίας οἶκος is here meant the Christians Oratorie or House of Sacred assembly at Antioch, (and not the Bishop's house, as some would have it,) appears, both because Eusebius elsewhere so uses it, as namely Lib. 8. c. ult. & Lib. 9. c. 6. as also because he expounds himself presently by Ecclesia, when he saith, "Sic Paulus summo cum dedecore à potestate seculari ex Ecclesia exigitur. For surely he meant not that he was by the secular arm cast out of the Church, as Church is taken for the Company of the Faithful, but as it signifies the Place of Sacred assembly; where this Paulus kept possession after he was deposed for Heresie by the Council.

But what need we trouble our selves thus to gather up Testimonies for the latter half of this seculum? I have one Testimony behind which will dispatch it all at once; yea and, if need be, depose for the whole also. It is that of Eusebius in his eighth Book Hist. Eccl. in the beginning; where describing those peaceful and Halcyonian days which the Church enjoyed for many years, from the time of the Martyrdom of S. Cyprian unto that most direful persecution of Diocletian, and how wonderfully the number of Christians was advanced during that time, he speaketh on this manner:

(b) How shall any one be able to express those infinite multitudes of Christians assembling in every city, those famous meetings of theirs in their Oratories or Churches? and therefore they not being content with those smaller Churches which before they had, (those their ancient Edifices not being large enough to receive so great a number) took care to erect from the very foundations fairer and more spacious ones in every city.

mentis crexerunt Ecclesias. Lo here how in those Halcyonian days Christians had not only Churches or Houses of worship, but such as might then be called τὰ πάλαι οἰκοδομήματα, ancient Edifices; which how far it may reach let others judge: Secondly, That the number of Christians being grown so great that those ancient Fabrics were no longer sufficient to contain them, they erected new and more spacious ones in every City from the foundations: And all this testified by one that himself lived and saw part of those times. These sacred Edifices Diocletian and those other surrogated Emperours (which continued that direful ten-years Persecution begun by him) commanded by their Edicts to be every where demolished, as we may read in the same Eusebius at large. The like whereunto seems never to have happened in any of the former Persecutions, in which they were only taken from the Christians, but again, when the persecution ceased, for the most part restored unto them: as in the former Persecution they were by Galienus, under the name of τόποι θρησκείσμων, Worshipping Places.

And thus I think I have proved by good and sufficient Testimonies, That Christians had Oratories or Churches, that is, appropriate Places for Christian worship, in every of the first three hundred years: I am well assured (whoever be judge) long before the days of Constantine. I will add to these Authorities two or three Reasons why they must, in all likelihood, have had such Places. First, Because it is certain that in their Sacred assemblies they used then to worship and pray towards the East: which how it could be done with any order and conveniencie, is not easie to be conceived, unless we suppose the Places wherein they worshipped to have been situated and accommodated accordingly, that is, chosen and appointed to that end. Secondly, Because of their Discipline, which required distinct and regular Places in their assemblies,

(c) The Penitents, the Hearers, the Catechumens or Learners and Probationers in Christianity, and the Believers, already fitted and accommodated for that purpose. Lastly, Because they had before their eyes an example and pattern in Prosencha's and Synagogues of the Jews, from whom their Religion had its beginning; which though as contrary to the Religion of the Empire as theirs, yet had places appropriate for the exercise thereof, wheresoever they lived dispersed among the Gentiles. Who can believe that such a pattern should not invite the Christians to an imitation of the same,

Rome and Italy should send Letters of communion: (a) Sic demum Paulus (saith

Eusebius) à seculari potestate summo cum τῆς Ἐκκλησίας οἶκος. is here meant the Chritians Oratorie or House of Sacred assembly at Antioch, (and not the Bishop's house, as some would have it,) appears, both because Eusebius elsewhere so uses it, as namely Lib.

8. c. ult. & Lib. 9. c. 6. as also because he expounds himself presently by Ecclesia, when he saith, "Sic Paulus summo cum dedecore à potestate seculari ex Ecclesia exigitur. For surely he meant not that he was by the secular arm cast out of the Church, as Church is taken for the Company of the Faithful, but as it signifies the Place of Sacred assembly; where this Paulus kept possession after he was deposed for Heresie by the Council.

But what need we trouble our selves thus to gather up Testimonies for the latter half of this seculum? I have one Testimony behind which will dispatch it all at once;

yea and, if need be, depose for the whole also. It is that of Eusebius in his eighth Book Hist. Eccl. in the beginning; where describing those peaceful and Halcyonian days which the Church enjoyed for many years, from the time of the Martyrdom of

S. Cyprian unto that most direful persecution of Diocletian, and how wonderfully the number of Christians was advanced during that time, he speaketh on this manner:

(b) "Quomodo quisquam infinita illos ho- minum turbâ frequentatos conventus, ce- tuumque in singulis urbibus congregato- *rum multitudinem, illustrésque in * Ora-* toris concursus describere valeat? Quo- *rum causa, quum in * Antiquis illis æ-* dificiis satis amplius loci non haberent, (vel, antiquis illis ædificiis haudqua- *quam amplius contenti) * amplas spati-* osâsque in omnibus urbibus ex funda-

1 Cor. 11. 22.

though we should suppose there were no other reasons to induce them but that of ordinary convenience?

1 Cor. II. 22.

Answers to the OBJECTIONS.

Object. 1.

I Come now to answer the Objections brought by such as maintain the contrary opinion, which are two. First, say they, It is not likely, no not possible, they should have any such Places, living under a Pagan and persecuting State and Empire.

Answer.

I answer, This Objection is already confuted by matter of Fact: For it is to be noted that the greatest and most cruel Persecutions, and the five last of the Ten, fall within the third or last Centurie; in which that Christians had Oratories or Houses of Christian worship, we have before proved by most indubitate and irrefragable Testimonies: But if in this, why not as well in the former Ages, wherein the Persecutions were, as no more in number, so far less bitter? For it is to be taken notice of, That these Persecutions were not continual, but as it were by fits; and those of the two first Centuries of no long durance; so as the Churches enjoyed long times of peace and quietness between them.

Besides, why should it seem to any one less credible that Christians should have their Oratories or Houses of worship under the Roman Empire, whilst the State thereof was yet Gentile and opposite to the Faith of Christ, than that they had them in the Kingdom of Persia, which never was Christian? For that they had them there as old as the days of Constantine, Sozomen testifieth, Lib. 2. c. 8. The occasion of the demolishing whereof by King Isdigerdes, and of that most barbarous persecution of the Christians of those Countries for thirty years together, about the year 400. Theodoret relates Lib. 5. c. 38. namely, that one Audas, out of an indiscreet and unseasonable zeal, (though otherwise a vertuous and godly Bishop) having demolished the Persians Pyraum or Temple where the Fire was worshipped, and refusing to build it up again as was enjoined him, the King thereupon mightily enraged, caused all the Christians Oratories or Churches in his dominions to be demolished likewise, and that horrible Persecution before mentioned to storm against them. Could the Christians find means and opportunity to erect Churches, that is, Houses for their Religion, under a Pagan government in Persia, and could they not under the Roman Empire?

Object. 2.

* No Temples, Altars, Images.

The other Objection is from the Authors of Apologies against the Gentiles, Origen against Celsus, Minutius Felix, Arnobius, and Lactantius, who when the Gentiles object Atheism to the Christians, as having no * Templa, no Ara, no Simulachra; these Authors are so far from pleading they had any such, that they answer by way of Concession, not only granting they had none, but (which is more,) affirming they ought not to have, and condemning the Gentiles which had.

* Lib. 8. contra Celsum.

(a) Celsus (saith Origen) affirms that Christians decline the building or setting up of Altars, Images and Temples.

(b) We do indeed (saith Origen) decline the building of Temples, (not for the reason which the Gentiles suppose, but) because we having learnt by the doctrine of Jesus Christ How God is to be worshipped and served, we think our selves obliged in conscience to avoid and abstain from all such things as under a pretence and colour of Piety do make men really impious, namely those who have erred and gone astray from the true way of worshipping God by Jesus Christ, who alone is the way of worshipping God aright, according to that most true saying of his, I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life.

(c) Why do the Christians keep such ado to conceal and hide that, whatsoever it be, which they worship? — Why have they no Altars, no Temples, no Images? — unless that which they worship and keep so close were either worthy of punishment, or shameful.

(a) "Celsus, saith Origen, *
"ait nos Ararum & Statuarum Templo-
"rumque fundationes fugere. Origen denies it not, but gives the reason;
(b) "Templorum fundationes fugimus, quia
"ubi per Jesu Doctrinam comperimus quem-
"admodum colendus sit Deus, ea nos evi-
"tamus quæ sub pietatis prætextu & opini-
"one quadam impios reddant qui à vero
"per Jesum cultu aberrando falluntur, qui
"utique solus est veri cultus via, verèque
"illud profatur, Ego sum Via, Veritas, &
"Vita.

Minutius Felix, when Cecilius objects,
(c) "Cur occultare & abscondere quic-
"quid illud quod colunt magnopere ni-
"tuntur? — Cur nullas Aras habent,
"Templa nulla, nulla nota Simulachra?
"— nisi illud quod colunt & interpre-
"munt aut puniendum est, aut pudendum; brings

(a) Do you think that we conceal what we worship, because we have neither Temples nor Altars? But I beseech you, What Image should I make for God, whenas (if we well consider it) Man himself is the lively Image of God? What Temple should I build for him, whenas the whole world, made by him, is not able to contain him? And whenas I who am but a man have a large habitation and room enough to be in, shall I think to enclose and confine to Great a Majesty within one little House? Tell me, Is not God better sanctified in our Mind and Heart? and where can we better prepare an habitation and consecrate a place for God than in the bottom of our Souls, in the inmost of our inward man?

(b) Herein ye are wont to charge us with most hideous impiety and irreligion, viz. That we neither build Sacred Houses or Temples to perform the Offices of religious worship in, nor make any Image or Representation of any God, nor build any kind of Altars at all.

(c) For what use of the Gods should we desire to have Temples? for what necessary purposes do we affirm these present Temples to be built, or do ye think Temples should be built anew?

(d) Why do ye not lift up your eyes to Heaven? and invoking the Gods by name, sacrifice openly and in publick? Why do ye rather look to walls and wood and stone, than look up thither where ye believe the Gods to dwell? What then can Temples mean? what do Images or Altars signify?

Christians had any Churches or Houses of worship in these Authors days?

This Objection indeed looks very big at the first sight, but it is no more but a shew, and we shall deal well enough with it. For we are to take notice, that these Authors, all four of them, lived and wrote within and after the Third seculum was begun, and the eldest of them Minutius Felix after Tertullian; Origen after him: yea, why do I say after the Third seculum was begun or within it? whenas two of them, Arnobius and Lactantius, lived and wrote rather after it was ended, and in the beginning of the Fourth; Arnobius in the time of the Persecution of Diocletian, Lactantius somewhat after him; for he was his Scholar, and dedicates his Institutions adversus Gentes to Constantine the Great.

Now then remember what Authorities and Testimonies were even now produced for the Christians Oratories all that seculum throughout, not Probabilities only, but such as are altogether irrefragable and past contradiction. This they seem not to have considered, unless they dissembled it, who so securely urge these passages, to infer a Conclusion point-blank against evidence of Fact. As for example, (I will alledge no more but what is out of possibility to be denied or eluded) Had the Christians no Oratories or Churches in Gregory Thaumaturgus his time? Had they none in S. Cyprian's? Had they none in the days of Dionysius Alexandrinus? Had they none when Galiennus released their * ΤΟ ΠΟΙ Θρησκευοίμοι? Had they none in those Halcyonian days whereof Eusebius speaks, when the multitude of Christians was grown so great, that τὰ πάλας οἰκοδομήματα, the ancient Edifices were no longer able to contain their Assemblies; but that they were fain to build new and spacious Churches in every City from the foundations? Had they none when the Edict of Diocletian came forth for demolishing them? For all these were before that either Arnobius or Lactantius wrote. Let those therefore, who put so much confidence in these passages, tell us, before they conclude, how to untie this knot, and then they shall say something.

What then, will you say, is the meaning of these passages? and how may they be satisfied, and this scruple taken off? I answer; The Gentiles in these Objections had a pecubrings in his Octavius answering thus,

(a) "Putatis autem nos occultare quod colimus, si Delubra & Aras non habemus?" <sup>1 Cor. 11. 22.</sup>

"Quod enim Simulachrum Deo fingam,"

"cum, si rectè existimes, sit Dei homo ipse"

"Simulachrum? Templum quod ei exstru-"

"am, cum totus hic mundus, ejus operâ"

"fabricatus, eum capere non possit? &"

"*cum homo * latius maneam, intra unam*"

"Aediculam vim tantæ Majestatis inclu-"

"dam? Nonne melius in nostra dedicandus"

"est mente, in nostro imo consecrandus est"

"pectore?"

* Arnobius: (b) "In hac consuectis" <sup>* Advers. Gent. l. 6.</sup>

"parte crimen nobis maximum impietatis"

"affigere, quod neque Aedes sacras venerati-"

"onis ad officia exstruamus, non Deorum"

"alicujus Simulachrum constituamus aut"

"*formam, non * Altaria fabricemus, non*"

"\ Aras.*" He denies none of this, but thus answers: (c) "Templa querimus, in"

"Deorum quos usus? aut in cujus rei neces-"

"sitatem aut dicitis esse constructa, aut esse"

"rursus edificanda censetis? &c."

* Lactantius condemns the Gentiles for having them: (d) "Cur (inquit) oculos" <sup>* Institut. ad- versus Gentes, lib. 2. cap. 2.</sup>

"in celum non tollitis? &, advocatis"

"Deorum nominibus, in aperto sacrificia"

"celebratis? Cur ad parietes & ligna &"

"lapides potissimum, quàm illò spectatis ubi"

"Deos esse creditis? Quid sibi Tempia?"

"quid Aræ volunt? quid denique ipsa Si-"

"mulachra?" Who would now think that

Answer.

* Worshipping Places.

1 Cor. 11. 22.

a peculiar notion of what they called a Temple: and these Fathers and Authors, in their disputes with them, answer them according unto it. For they defined a Temple by an Idol and the inclosure of a Deity; not of the Statue or Image only, but of the Demon himself: that is, They supposed their Gods by the power of Spells and Magical consecrations to be retained and shut up in their Temples, as Birds in a Cage, or the Devil within a circle, that so their suppliants might know where to have them when they had occasion to seek unto them; and that, for such retaining or circumscribing of them in a certain Place, an Idol was necessary, as the Centre of their collocation. Thus much Origen himself will inform us in those his disputes against Celsus, as in his 3. Book pag. 135. Editionis Græco-lat. where he describes Νεώς καὶ ἀγάλματα, Temples and Idols, to be places where Demons are ἰδρύμενοι, enthroned or seated, either having preoccupied such places of themselves, “ἢ διὰ τινῶν τελετῶν ἀχθέντες καὶ μαγισσείων ὡς περ οἰκῶσι, or brought thither by certain Ceremonies and Magical invocations, do as it were dwell there. And again, Lib. 7. pag. 385. in fin. telling us that Demons “ τοῖς οἷσδε παρακαθίζονται οἰμασί καὶ χωρίοις, sate in those kind of Forms and Places, ( viz. “ Idols and Temples ) ἢ τοὶ ὑπὸ τινῶν μαγισσείων κατακλιθέντες, ἢ καὶ ἄλλως δυνηθέντες “ προκαταλαβάν ἐν τοῖς τόποις, &c. either lodged and confined thither by Magical consecrations, or otherwise having preoccupied the places of themselves; where they are delightfully fed and refreshed ( for so the Gentiles thought ) with the nidor and savour of the sacrifices. I shall not need to produce the rest of his sayings to the same purpose; let him that will consult him further in the end of that 7. Book pag. 389. and a little before, pag. 387. in fin. To this confining of Gods in Temples ( that so those that had occasion to use their help might not be to seek, but know where to find them ) that also of Menander cited by Justin Martyr, in his De Monarchia Dei, hath reference.

Οὐδεὶς ( saith he ) μ' ἀρέσκει περιπατῶν ἔξω Θεός, Οὐδεὶς οἰκίαν παραλείπων ὅπῃ τὸ σανιδίον.
——— ἢ δίκαιον δ' εἶ Θεὸν
Οἱκοὶ μένειν σῶζοντα τὸς ἰδρυμένους.

No God pleaseth me that gads abroad,
None that leaves his house shall come in my Book.
——— A just and good God ought
To tarry at home to save those that placed him.

According to this notion of a Temple, these Authors alledged grant that Christians neither had any Temples, no nor ought to have; forasmuch as the God whom they worshipped, was such a one as filled the Heaven and the Earth, and dwelt not in Temples made with hands. And because the Gentiles appropriated the name of a Temple to this notion of encloistering a Deity by an Idol; therefore the Christians of those first Ages, for the most part, abstained therefrom, especially when they had to deal with Gentiles, calling their Houses of worship Ecclesia, or Οἶκοι τῆς Ἐκκλησίας. Κυριακά, ( whence is the Dutch and our English Kirk and Church ) in Latine Dominica; Εὐκ-τήρια & Προσευκτήρια, that is, Oratories, or Οἶκοι εὐκτήριοι, or προσευκτήριοι, or the like: seldom Ναοί, or Templa; that * appellation being grown, by the use of both sides, into a name of distinction of the Houses of Gentile Superstition from those of Christian Worship. Which that I affirm not upon bare conjecture, these Examples will make manifest. First, that of Aurelian the Emperor, before alledged, in his

Epistle to the Senate. De Libris Sibyllinis inspicendis: (a) “ Miror vos, Patres sancti, tamdiu de aperiendis Sibyllinis dubitasse libris, perinde quasi in Christianorum ECCLESIA, non in TEMPLE Deorum omnium, tractaretis. And that of Zeno Veronensis, in his Sermon de Continentia: (b) “ Proponamus itaque, ut saepe contingit, in unum sibi convenire diversæ religionis diem, quot tibi ECCLESIA, illi adenda sint TEMPLA. ( He speaks of a Christian woman married to a Gentile. ) That also of S. Hierom, in his Epistle ad Riparium, saying of Julian

Acts 7. 48.

* According to this notion of Templum, Tertull. cap. 15. de Idololatria, Si Templis renuntiasti, ne feceris Templum januam tuam. Et de Corona mil. cap. 11. Exerabit ( nempe Christianus ) pro Templis quibus renuntiasti? Et cænas ibi Apostolo non places? id est, in Idolo. 1 Cor. 8. 10.

(a) I wonder ( sacred Fathers ) that ye demur so long about opening and consulting the Sibyll's books; as if ye were treating ( or debating this matter ) in the Christians CHURCH, and not in the TEMPLE of all the Gods.

(b) Let us propound the case, and suppose ( as it often comes to pass ) that the performance of these different Religions may fall out upon one and the same day, wherein thou ( being a Christian ) must go to the CHURCH, and he ( thy Husband, a Gentile ) must at the same time repair to the TEMPLES.

(a) That he either destroyed the Churches of the Saints, or else turned them into Temples.

an the Apostate, (a) "Quod Sanctorum
"BASILICAS aut destruxerit, aut in "TEMPLA converterit. Thus they

Cor. 11. 22.

spake when they would distinguish: Otherwise, now and then, the Christian Fathers use the word Nāds or Templum for Ecclesia; but respecting the Temple of the true God at Jerusalem, not the notion of the Gentiles.

That this Answer is true and genuine, I prove, first, Because the Gentiles themselves, who objected this want to the Christians, neither were nor could be ignorant that they had Oratories where they performed their Christian service; when they were so notoriously known (as we saw before) to the Emperors Galienus and Aurelian, and a controversy about one of them referred unto the latter; when also the Emperor's Edicts flew about in every City for demolishing them. Why therefore do they object in this manner, but because, for the defect of something they thought thereto necessary, they esteemed not those Oratories for Temples?

Secondly, Because in that dispute between Origen and Celsus it is supposed by both that the Persians and Jews were, as concerning this matter, in like condition with the Christians, neither of both enduring to worship their Gods in Temples. Hear Origen

(b) Although the Scythians, the Numidians in Africk, and the irreligious or Atheistical Seres (as Celsus characterizes them) besides other Nations — yea and the Persians too cannot endure TEMPLES, ALTARS and STATUES or IMAGES; yet is not their and our averfeness from these things founded upon the same Grounds and Considerations. And a little after (saith Origen,) Among those that are averfe from worshipping the Deity in and by ALTARS, TEMPLES and IMAGES, the Scythians, Numidians, and the irreligious Seres and the Persians also go upon other Grounds and Principles, than the Christians and Jews, who hold it utterly unlawful to worship God after that manner. For none of those Nations is averfe from erecting and setting up Temples, Altars and Images upon this account, as being apprehensive of that unworthy Hypothesis and notion of the other Gentiles, who supposed that the Demons were enclosed and shut up fast in certain Places (viz.) Temples and Images, being either confined thither by Magical Spells, or else having preoccupied such places of themselves, where they did greedily feed and feast themselves with the Nidour and Savour of the Sacrifices. But now Christians, and also the Jews, are utterly averfe from such things, out of a conscientious respect to that in the Law, (Deuter. 6. 13.) Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve; as also in obedience to that in the Decalogue, Thou shalt have no other Gods but me; and again, Thou shalt not make to thy self any Image, &c.

Lib. 7. p. 385, 386. (b) "Licet
"Scythæ Afrique Numidæ, & * impii Se-
"res, ut Celsus ait, aliæque gentes, atque
"etiam Persæ * averfentur TEMPLA,
"ARAS, STATVAS; non eandem
"aversandi causam esse illis & nobis: and a little after; "Inter abhorrentes * ab
"ARARUM, TEMPLORUM,
"STATUARUM ceremoniis, Scythæ,
"Numidæ, impique Seres & Persæ aliis
"moventur rationibus quàm Christiani &
"Judæi, quibus religio est sic numen colere.
"Illarum enim gentium nemo ab his alienus
"est — quòd intelligat, Demones DE-
"VINCTOS habere CERTIS LO-
"CIS & STATUIS, sive incanta-
"tos quibusdam magicis carminibus, sive
"aliàs incubantes locis semel preoccupatis,
"ubi lurconum more se oblectant victima-
"rum nidoribus. — Ceterùm Christiani
"homines & Judæi sibi temperant ab his,
"propter illud Legis, Dominum Deum
"tuum timebis, & ipsi soli servies; item
"propter illud, Non erunt tibi alieni Dii
"præter me; & Non facies tibi ipsi si-"mulacrum, &c. Lo here, it is all one with Origen to have Templa, as to worship * other Gods: as it was a little before with Minutius Felix his Octavius (if * Σίφης (ὅς ἐστὶν ὁ Κέλσος)

ἐκείνους ὁ Κέλσος
ταῖς ἀνέρο-ται.
* παρὰ βαρύνει, καὶ βασί-ς, ὡς γὰρ ἡ μάχη
σὺν τοῖς θεοῖς
οὐκ ἐστὶν τοῖς θεοῖς
οὐκ.

* So with Tertullian, in the places before alleged in the margin, Renunciâsse Tem-plis dicitur, qui Idolis.

* Strabo li. 15.
in append. ad
Herodot.
Theodoret li. 3.
c. 38. Yea see de Isqâ Nanaam in Elymaide Persidis,
1 Mac. 6. 2.
2 Mac. 1. 13.
11. 1. Legz, not Nasi.

you mark it) to have Delubra & Simulacra.

Yet certainly neither Celsus nor Origen, whatsoever they here say of the Persians and Jews, were ignorant that the Persians had their * Pyræa or Pyræia, (Houses where the Fire was worshipped) though || without Images or Statues; also that the Jews had both then, and also formerly, their Synagogues and Proscenæ in the places and Countries where they were dispersed; and once a most glorious and magnificent Temple or Sanctuary: Ergo, by Temples they understand not Houses of prayer and religious rites in the general; but Εἰδωλεῖα, Places where Demons were incloistered by the position of an Idol or consecrated Statue. And here let me add (because it is not impertinent) what I have observed in reading the Itinerarium of Benjamin Tudensis the Jew; namely, that he expresses constantly after this manner the Oratories of Jews, Turks and Christians by differing names: those of the Jews he calls בית כנסת, i. Houses of assembly or Synagogues; the Turkish Mosques בית תפלה Houses of prayer; but the Christian Churches, because of Images, (yea that renowned Church of S. Sophie it self) he called always במות B A M O T H, the name of the Idol-Temples in the Old Testament, which we translate High-places: This I note for an example of that that proneness in Religions of a contrary Rite thus to distinguish, as other things, so their Places of worship, by diversity of names, though they communicate in the same common nature and use.

1 Cor. 11. 22.

3.

Thirdly, That the Answer I have given to these objected passages is genuine, I prove, Because some of these Authors acknowledge elsewhere that Christians had Houses of Sacred worship in their time. As namely Arnobius (whose words were as pressing as any of the rest, yet) in the self-same Books acknowledges the Christian Oratories by the name of CONVENTICULA or Meeting-places; by that name endeavouring, I suppose, to express the Greek word Ἐκκλησίαι. The place is

(a) If there were in you any zeal for your Religion, (any just indignation against what doth manifestly dishonour, it) ye ought rather to burn those Books and Writings of your Poets so full of prophane fables and fictions of your Gods, and to throw down those Theatres wherein the Gods are every day openly dishonoured by your Poets shameful tales and contumelious fictions of them. But as for our Sacred Writings (i. the Books of Scripture,) how did they deserve to be burnt? and why were our Meeting-Places so furiously demolished? wherein the most High God was prayed unto, Peace and Mercy was prayed for in the behalf of all men, Magistrates, Armies, Kings, Friends, Enemies, those that are alive, and those that are loosed from the bonds of these gross earthly Bodies, about the end of his fourth Book adversus Gentes: (a) "Quod si haberet vos (saith he) *aliqua vestris pro religionibus indignatio, has potius literas, (he means the Poets absurd and blasphemous fictions and tales of their Gods,) hos exurere debuistis olim libros; demoliri, dissolvere Theatra hæc potius, in quibus infamiae numinum propudiosis quotidie publicantur infabulis, (of this their scurrilous dishonouring of their Gods upon the Stage he had spoken much before.) Nam nostra quidem scripta cur ignibus mernerint dari? cur immaniter CONVENTICULA dirui? in quibus * summus oratur Deus, pax cunctis & venia postulat, Magistratibus, Exercitibus, Regi-*

* Liturgia Christiana descripta.

bus, Familiaribus, Inimicis, adhuc vitam degentibus, & resolutis corporum vincione, &c. He alludes unto the burning of the Books of Scripture and demolition of the Christians Oratories by Diocletian; of which see Ensebius, Lib. 8. c. 2. And know from hence when Arnobius wrote.

